Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES

OF THE

SECOND SESSION OF THE SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS

OF

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

VOLUME LIX—PART 2

JANUARY 6 TO JANUARY 28, 1920

(Pages 1081–2180)

43040

WASHINGTON
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
1920

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

LIBRARY COLLEGE OF LAW
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Congressional Record.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS SECOND SESSION.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, January 6, 1920.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, reverently we take Thy name upon our lips. Thou art the author of our being. Thou art the judge of all men. With Thee we have to do in all the plans and purposes of life, and we have no plan or purpose that is not Thine. We simply invoke Thy blessing upon us, that the will of God may be wrought out through us and that the Nation may have the touch and blessing of God upon it from day to day as we labor together with God. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Assistant Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Assistant Secretary will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fletcher	Lenroot	Pomerene
Ball	France	Lodge	Ransdell
Bankhead	Gerry	McCormick	Sheppard
Brandegee	Harris	McCumber	Sherman
Calder	Harrison	McKellar	Smith, Ga.
Capper	Henderson	McNary	Smoot
Chamberlain	Hitchcock	Nelson	Spencer
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	New	Sterling
Culberson	Jones, N. Mex.	Norris	Sutherland
Curtis	Kendrick	Nugent	Swanson
Dial	Kenyon	Overman	Thomas
Dillingham	Keyes	Page	Trammell
Edge	King	Phipps	Wadsworth
Elkins	Kirby	Pittman	Walsh, Mont.
Fernald	Knox	Poindexter	Williams

Mr. POMERENE. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. KELLOGG], and the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] are absent on business of the Senate. They are engaged in a conference on the railway legislation.

Mr. GERRY. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained by illness in his family.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is detained by illness of a member of his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GAY] are absent on official business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILROADS IN THE UNITED STATES (S. DOC. NO. 162, PT. 2).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Interstate Commerce Commission, transmitting as an appendix to the report of the commission submitted December 3, 1919, relative to the Canadian Government railroads in the United States, a copy of "An act respecting the acquisition by His Majesty of the Grand Trunk Railway System as finally assented to," which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2902) to amend section 5182, Revised Statutes of the United States.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 8661. An act to authorize the Kingsdale Lumber Corporation to construct a bridge across the Lumber River near the town of Lumberton, N. C.;

H. R. 9369. An act to revise and equalize rates of pension to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War, to certain widows, former widows, dependent parents and children of such soldiers, sailors, and marines, and to certain Army nurses, and granting pensions and increase of pensions in certain cases;

H. R. 10135. An act for the construction of a bridge across Rock River, at or near East Grand Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.;

H. R. 10331. An act to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919," approved July 9, 1918;

H. R. 10558. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Connecticut River Railroad Co., its lessees, successors, and assigns, to construct a bridge across the Connecticut River in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts;

H. R. 10746. An act to authorize the incorporated town of Wrangell, Alaska, to issue bonds for the construction, enlargement, and equipment of schools, the acquisition and construction of a water-supply system, the construction of a sewer system, the construction of a city dock and floating dock, and to levy and collect a special tax therefor;

H. R. 10873. An act to provide for the acquisition by the United States of private rights of fishery in and about Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii; and

H. R. 11025. An act to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the Tombigbee River near Iron Wood Bluff, in Itawamba County, Miss.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2999) to amend section 97 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. WALTER ALLEN WATSON, late a Representative from the State of Virginia, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I present a large number of petitions signed by members of the Women's Nonpartisan Committee for the League of Nations, urging the immediate ratification of the treaty of peace and the covenant of the league of nations. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CAPPER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Bloom, Kans., praying that admissions to Lyceum courses be exempted from the provisions of the so-called "luxury tax," which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Arkansas City, Kans., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Cummins and Esch railroad bills, and praying for a two-year extension of Government operation of railroads, which was ordered to lie on the table.

BALLOT ON PEACE TREATY.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, a correspondent of the Oregon Journal, one of the leading papers published in my city, received from the Journal by wire this morning a statement of the result of a ballot being taken by that paper on the peace treaty. I ask that it may be read and that the form of the ballot which is submitted to the readers of the paper, which is attached to the report, may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

[Telegram.]

PORTLAND, OREG., January 5, 1920.

CARL SMITH,
Correspondent Oregon Journal:

Up to noon to-day totals in the Journal's treaty poll are as follows:

For compromise and immediate ratification, 374.
For ratification with Lodge reservations, 66.
For ratification substantially as presented by Wilson, 5,333.
Opposed to ratification in any form, 133.

To-day's count showed but 2 for compromise, 735 for Wilson plan, none for Lodge plan, none against ratification. Please communicate these results to Senators CHAMBERLAIN, MCNARY, LODGE, and HITCHCOCK.

JOURNAL.

BALLOT ON PEACE TREATY.

Vote one choice. Indicate preference by X mark in square.

1 [ ] I favor compromise on reservations and immediate ratification of peace treaty and league of nations covenant.

Or, 2 [ ] I favor ratification with Lodge reservations.

Or, 3 [ ] I favor ratification of the peace treaty and league of nations covenant substantially as presented to the Senate by President Wilson.

Or, 4 [ ] I am opposed to ratification in any form.

Name.....

Address.....

Fill in and mail to the Journal. Limitation of ballot to qualified voters is requested.

CANADIAN NEWSPRINT PAPER.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I present a telegram from the Butterick Publishing Co., of Chicago, Ill. They had a contract with a newsprint paper company in Canada for a supply of newsprint paper. It is threatened now to be canceled by the Canadian authorities at the request of certain Canadian and British newspaper publishers who require all the newsprint for their purposes. In view of the fact that we are asked to loan immense credits to Europe, and especially to England as the clearing house of the Old World, I think it is material, and I ask that the telegram be printed at length without reading.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHICAGO, ILL., January 5.

Hon. LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

For the last 10 years we have purchased all our supplies of newsprint paper from Canada, the contracts having been made during the war through the Canadian Export Paper Co. (Ltd.), of Montreal. The contracts for the purchase of this paper have been made under and in accordance with the provisions of an agreement between the Attorney General of the United States as trustee and various American and Canadian manufacturers of newsprint paper, the agreement referred to bearing date November 26, 1917. We have not during the war increased our consumption of newsprint paper brought from Canada, but, on the contrary, have reduced it. We are to-day advised by the Canadian Export Paper Co. that the Canadian paper controller has directed Price Bros. & Co. (Ltd.), of Quebec, Canada, one of the largest paper manufacturers in Canada and from whom the Canadian Export Paper Co. obtains part of its supplies, to supply paper to Canadian newspapers, namely the Hamilton Spectator and the London Free Press, which papers are not by contract entitled to the paper demanded. And although to supply the paper demanded will make impossible for the Canadian Export Paper Co. (Ltd.) to furnish to us the paper contracted for by us, the Canadian paper controller threatens unless paper is furnished to the Hamilton Spectator and the London Free Press in accordance with his instructions to have passed an order in council prohibiting the export of any newsprint paper. His action is not supported by any war or other public necessity, but appears to be solely for the private benefit of the two Canadian newspapers. The effect of this action is to interfere for the private benefit of the two Canadian newspapers with existing contracts between Canadian and American firms. This threat to use the Government powers of Canada for the private benefit of Canadians seems to us an outrageous proceeding. We respectfully request you to protest in our behalf and in behalf of other American consumers similarly situated, making protest to Sir Henry Drayton, finance minister of Canada, at Ottawa.

THE BUTTERICK PUBLISHING CO.

THE BEET-SUGAR PRODUCT.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there seems to be a persistent propaganda going on through the United States to convince the American consumers of sugar that the cause of the high prices of sugar is on account of the beet-sugar producers holding back their product from the market. I have taken occasion to find out just what is the percentage of the beet-sugar production of this country disposed of by the 1st day of January, beginning with the year 1913–14 down to and including the crop of 1919–20. I am not going to take the time to read the tonnage or the pounds, but I will just call attention to the percentages of the production of beets in those years, showing the percentage of the crops sold on the 1st day of January of each of the years named.

In the year 1913–14 it was 31 per cent of the production of that year.
In 1914–15 it was 28 per cent.
In 1915–16 it was 34 per cent.
In 1916–17 it was 36 per cent.
In 1917–18 it was 48 per cent.
In 1918–19 it was only 29 per cent.
And in 1919–20 it was 65 per cent.

So, Mr. President, when anyone states that the reason for the high price that is being charged to the consumer for sugar in the United States is because the beet-sugar producers of the country are holding back their product from the market, it is an absolute falsehood. They have sold now 65 per cent of the whole production of the year 1919–20. It has been delivered, and if it is being hoarded the Attorney General of the United States ought to take action against the hoarders and profiteers and stop the unjustifiable price that is being charged to the people of the United States for sugar.

Even in the District of Columbia we are compelled, so I am told, to pay 23 cents a pound for sugar, and then only get 2 pounds at a time. There is no necessity for this condition. It ought to be handled in the most drastic way. There is plenty of law to do it, and the American people should not be compelled to pay these outrageous prices.

I ask to have inserted in the RECORD the following table giving the production, estimated deliveries, and per cent of United States beet sugar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table referred to is as follows:

	United States beet-sugar production.	Estimated deliveries.	Per cent.
	Bags.	Bags.
1919–20 (estimated)	14,432,000	9,391,000	65
1918–19 (actual)	15,248,000	4,413,000	29
1917–18 (actual)	15,276,000	7,422,000	48
1916–17 (actual)	16,403,000	5,950,000	36
1915–16 (actual)	17,453,000	5,955,000	34
1914–15 (actual)	14,578,000	4,081,000	28
1913–14 (actual)	14,544,000	4,508,000	31

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NELSON:

A bill (S. 3640) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of a forest experiment station in the State of Minnesota; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. HENDERSON:

A bill (S. 3641) making an appropriation for the construction of drainage facilities in connection with the Newlands reclamation project, in the State of Nevada; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. HARRIS:

A bill (S. 3642) to provide for the return of the dead bodies of soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces buried in France; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 3643) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a post-office building at the city of Monticello, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3644) providing for a site and public building for a post office at Sparta, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3645) for the purchase of a site for and the erection of a post-office building at Cairo, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3646) to increase the appropriation for the purchase of a site and erection of a building for a post office at Douglas, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3647) for the erection of a public building at Jesup, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3648) for the purchase of a site for and the erection of a post-office building at Camilla, Ga.;

A bill (S. 3649) for the erection of a public building at Blackshear, Ga.; and

A bill (S. 3650) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Vidalia, Toombs County, Ga.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LENROOT:

A bill (S. 3651) to provide for the commission of Kerwin C. Lubs as a first lieutenant in the United States Army and an honorable discharge therefrom; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 3652) granting a pension to Edgar E. Rich; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LENROOT:

A bill (S. 3653) for the relief of John P. Chesley; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DILLINGHAM:

A bill (S. 3654) granting a pension to Eva Fifield (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROBINSON:

A bill (S. 3655) to increase the cost of the public building at Prescott, Ark.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CALDER:

A bill (S. 3658) for the relief of the next of kin of Edgar C. Bryon; to the Committee on Claims.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to provide for the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine, to repeal certain emergency legislation, and provide for the disposition, regulation, and use of property acquired thereunder, and for other purposes. I shall make a very brief explanation of the bill.

This bill is the outgrowth of very serious consideration of the subject for a period of eight months by the National Merchant Marine Association, an organization of which I am president, formed about one year ago for the purpose of aiding in the development of a merchant marine under the American flag adequate to the needs of our country in peace and war, and including in its membership representative men from agricultural, commercial, and labor circles, and broadly representative of all classes of our citizenship. The bill provides for speedily substituting private ownership for Government ownership of vessels. The council of the association has gone on record as favoring the principles enumerated in the bill. Briefly, the bill requires, first, the repeal of certain sections of the shipping act and the transfer to the Shipping Board of property acquired by the President under resolutions passed by Congress.

Sections 3 and 4 provide that the merchant vessels now owned or controlled by the United States be placed under private ownership and operation by citizens of the United States as soon as practicable, except that such of the vessels of 6,000 dead-weight tons and less, as the Shipping Board shall decide are not required for the maintenance and development of American trade routes, and such vessels as the board shall deem unnecessary to the promotion and maintenance of an efficient merchant marine may be sold to aliens with privilege of transfer of flag.

Section 5 provides for the allocation to private operators of unsold tonnage, to be operated for Government account.

Section 6, as an encouragement to American operators, provides that the purchasers of Government tonnage shall be exempted in respect to the earnings of such vessels from excess-profits taxes for a period of 10 years.

Section 7 provides that pending the sale of the tonnage the Shipping Board shall be empowered through private operators to use such ships as may be needed to inaugurate and develop passenger and trade routes where it is deemed desirable in the national interest that such lines be established.

Section 8 deals with the terms of payment, insurance against loss or damage, and indemnity insurance.

Section 9 authorizes the board to sell miscellaneous property and vessels contracted for or under construction.

Section 10 directs the manner in which funds acquired by the board shall be disposed of.

Section 11 deals with vessels chartered to the War Department.

Section 12 suspends the building, requisition, or exchange of houses or buildings or the requisition of lands authorized by the act of March 1, 1918, and directs the disposition of property acquired thereunder.

The provisions of this bill, which have been drafted with some care, represent the conclusions I have come to after months of painstaking consideration of the question.

The subject is a complex one and it is not possible for anyone to assert with absolute confidence that the solution proposed by him is certainly correct in all particulars. While, therefore, as I have said, the provisions of this bill represent my conclusions after months of study, still I can not ignore the possibility that the ideas of my colleagues as they may be developed in conference or on the floor of the Senate or additional facts, may to some extent modify my present point of view. And I shall therefore feel myself free, in case I become convinced that some aspects of the subject have been overlooked, to advocate such modifications as may be necessary to remedy deficiencies which may thus become apparent.

I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (S. 3656) to provide for the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine, to repeal certain emergency legislation, and provide for the disposition, regulation, and use of property acquired thereunder, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON BUDGET SYSTEM.

Mr. McCORMICK submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 268), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the time for the submission of the report of the special committee of the Senate to devise a plan for a budget system is hereby extended to April 1, 1920.

COURTS IN NEW YORK.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2969) to amend section 97 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, which was, on page 1, to strike out all after line 6 down to and including line 6 on page 4 and insert:

SEC. 97. The State of New York is divided into four judicial districts, to be known as the northern, eastern, southern, and western districts of New York. The northern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Albany, Broome, Cayuga, Chenango, Clinton, Cortland, Delaware, Essex, Franklin, Fulton, Hamilton, Herkimer, Jefferson, Lewis, Madison, Montgomery, Oneida, Onondaga, Oswego, Otsego, Rensselaer, St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Schenectady, Schoharie, Tioga, Tompkins, Warren, and Washington, with the waters thereof. Terms of the district court for said district shall be held at Albany on the second Tuesday in February; at Utica on the first Tuesday in December; at Binghamton on the second Tuesday in June; at Auburn on the first Tuesday in October; at Syracuse on the first Tuesday in April; and, in the discretion of the judge of the court, one term annually at such time and place within the counties of Rensselaer, Saratoga, Onondaga, St. Lawrence, Clinton, Jefferson, Oswego, and Franklin, as he may from time to time appoint. Such appointment shall be made by notice of at least 20 days published in a newspaper published at the place where said court is to be held. The eastern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Richmond, Kings, Queens, Nassau, and Suffolk, with the waters thereof. Terms of the district court for said district shall be held at Brooklyn on the first Wednesday in every month. The southern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Columbia, Dutchess, Greene, New York, Orange, Putnam, Rockland, Sullivan, Ulster, and Westchester, with the waters thereof. Terms of the district court for said district shall be held at New York City on the first Tuesday in each month. The district courts of the southern and eastern districts shall have concurrent jurisdiction over the waters within the counties of New York, Kings, Queens, Nassau, Richmond, and Suffolk, and over all seizures made and all matters done in such waters; all processes or orders issued within either of said courts or by any judge thereof shall run and be executed in any part of said waters. The western district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Chemung, Erie, Genesee, Livingston, Monroe, Niagara, Ontario, Orleans, Schuyler, Seneca, Steuben, Wayne, Wyoming, and Yates, with the waters thereof. Terms of the district court for said district shall be held at Elmira on the second Tuesday in January; at Buffalo on the second Tuesdays in March and November; at Rochester on the second Tuesday in May; at Jamestown on the second Tuesday in July; at Lockport on the second Tuesday in October; and at Canandaigua on the second Tuesday in September. The regular sessions of the district court for the western district for the hearing of motions, and for proceedings in bankruptcy and the trial of causes in admiralty, shall be held at Buffalo at least two weeks in each month of the year, except August, unless the business is sooner disposed of. The times for holding the same and such other special sessions as the court shall deem necessary shall be fixed by rules of the court. All process in admiralty causes and proceedings shall be made returnable at Buffalo. The judge of any district in the State of New York may perform the duties of the judge of any other district in such State upon the request of any resident judge entered in the minutes of his court; and in such cases such judge shall have the same powers as are vested in the resident judge.

Mr. WADSWORTH. In making the motion that the Senate shall concur in the amendment made by the House I simply desire to say that the House amendment made to the bill which was introduced by myself is one which does not change the character of the legislation in the slightest degree. There are some very minor changes which I am sure will not arouse any objection whatsoever. It is a local bill, applicable only to certain judicial districts in the State of New York. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 8661. An act to authorize the Kingsdale Lumber Corporation to construct a bridge across the Lumber River, near the town of Lumberton, N. C.;

H. R. 10135. An act for the construction of a bridge across Rock River at or near East Grand Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.;

H. R. 10558. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Connecticut River Railroad Co., its lessees, successors, and assigns, to construct a bridge across the Connecticut River in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; and

H. R. 11025. An act to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the Tombigbee River near Iron Wood Bluff, in Itawamba County, Miss.

H. R. 9369. An act to revise and equalize rates of pension to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War, to certain widows, former widows, dependent parents, and children of such soldiers, sailors, and marines, and to certain Army nurses, and granting pensions and increase of pensions in certain cases, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

H. R. 10331. An act to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919," approved July 9, 1918, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 10746) to authorize the incorporated town of Wrangell, Alaska, to issue bonds for the construction, enlargement, and equipment of schools, the acquisition and construction of a water-supply system, the construction of a sewer system, the construction of a city dock and floating dock, and to levy and collect a special tax therefor, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Territories.

A bill (H. R. 10873) to provide for the acquisition by the United States of private rights of fishery in and about Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

THE AIR MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Postmaster General in reference to the air mail service of the Post Office Department.

Mr. SMOOT. I will ask the Senator from Tennessee to whom is the letter addressed?

Mr. McKELLAR. It is a letter addressed to me, which describes the service, and is a matter in which, I think, the Senate will be interested.

Mr. SMOOT. It is not in any wise a departmental document?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; it is a letter addressed to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NUGENT in the chair). Without objection, the request of the Senator from Tennessee is granted.

The letter referred to is as follows:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, January 6, 1920.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR MCKELLAR: In pursuance to our recent conversation and in response to your request, I beg to submit the following as a history of the air mail service, its cost of operation, the savings effected thereby, and some reasons why it should not be consolidated with an air department:

There are pending in Congress two bills—S. 3348 and H. R. 9804—designed to take from the Post Office Department the operation of the air mail service and place it in the hands of a military department of air. The bills provide that the proposed department of air shall take over the air mail service, planes, property, and appropriation and perform every function performed by the Post Office Department in connection with aviation.

The air mail has been a financial and postal success and its efficiency has elicited high praise in Europe as well as in the United States, yet the pending bills propose to take it out of the hands of a civil department of the Government and place it under the control of a department military in character and personnel, and devised not to develop commercial aviation but military proficiency in the air.

The air mail has been in continuous operation since May 15, 1918, and has covered 473,210 miles. Its performance is 91.49 per cent.

It has carried 22,254,400 letters, advancing their delivery on an average by 16 hours, or one entire business day.

Its operating cost to date, including overhead and interest on investment for three routes, is as follows:

Washington to New York	$202,558.90
New York to Cleveland	112,796.57
Cleveland to Chicago	81,865.00
	397,220.47

AIR MAIL PAYS FOR ITSELF.

It is not customary for Congress to demand that the operations of the Postal Service shall be self-sustaining, yet the operations of the air mail service paid for itself in the sale of special airplane postage and the saving of car space and cost of distribution in trains. The mail is moved so rapidly by airplane that the distribution can be done in the post offices instead of on trains. The Post Office Department found that over the principal long-distance mail routes the air mail saving on the cost of train distribution is so great that it was possible to discontinue the extra airplane postage rates, and letters are now being carried by airplane at the regular postage rate.

The revenue and savings from the air mail operations have been $194,831.50 from the sale of extra-rate airplane postage—$2,448 in car space from May 15, 1918, to June 30, 1919. The saving on train distribution from July 1 to December 31, 1919, was at the rate of $176,000 per year, and since January 1, 1920, by the use of large weight-carrying planes, the saving is at the rate of $593,000 per year.

Nobody insists that the Rural Free Delivery Service, costing annually $66,031,487, or that the Railway Mail Service, created solely for the expeditious handling of the mails through working them on trains, and costing the Government $36,984,481 annually, shall be self-sustaining. Yet here is a remarkably rapid service, doubling the speed of the fastest trains, expediting the mails on long-distance runs by 16 hours or more in delivery to the public, that can pay for itself in savings on car space and train distribution.

EFFICIENCY OF AIR MAIL SERVICE.

In the operations of the air mail every effort has been made to eliminate the spectacular. Everything has been concentrated on obtaining results. Air mail fields are not show grounds; air mail planes are not gaud and tinsel, and there are no rides in air mail planes for advertising or propaganda purposes. The greatest handicap that commercial aviation faces to-day is the spectacular phase of flying, stunting, and racing. Aviation has so long been exploited as a sport and a show that the public has not been able to visualize it as a practical instrument of commerce. A few cities, like Chicago, whose bank mail reaches New York by air mail in time for bank clearings the following morning instead of too late for that important event had the mail continued by train, realize that the air mail is more than an instrument of war or plaything for the rich or a thrill maker for fair-ground crowds. But the public in general does not yet realize the daily commercial value of the airplane as demonstrated by the air mail. It is astounding how few people know that this epoch-making facility—the air mail—has been in daily operation for 19½ months, carrying to date more than 22,000,000 letters between Chicago, Cleveland, New York, and Washington at better than twice the speed of the Congressional Limited or the Twentieth Century, and in this 19½ months the air mail has to its credit a performance of 91½ per cent, summer and winter, across the mountains and up and down the seacoast.

No man who knows anything about aviation will contend that any air service, or any other branch of the Government, can exceed that record. A performance of 91½ per cent over 19½ months operation is all that any person or organization can get out of the airplane to-day with its limitations. On the route between Cleveland and Chicago the air mail accomplished a world's record of 205 consecutive 325-mile nonstop trips without a forced landing of any kind.

ECONOMY IN AIR MAIL OPERATIONS.

In the matter of economy, no man can study the cost of the air mail as operated by the Post Office Department and say that its equal has been approached by airplane operations by any organization anywhere—here or broad. At a cost to the Government of $397,220.47, the air mail has operated 507 flying days, covering an aggregate of 473,210 miles, at a cost of 84 cents a mile. This cost includes the value of every piece of material and every minute of time entering into the repair and upkeep of the planes; the cost of every smash-up and every forced landing; every cent of loss; every penny of overhead; and 6 per cent interest on the value of the field equipment and planes in actual use and in service on the fields. This is not all cash expenditures, but a large part of it represents the war-time cost of material salvaged out of the surplus Army and Navy material at the close of the war by the Post Office Department. In the statistical reports on the cost of operating the routes this material is charged in the account at the cost price to the Government, as if it were paid for in cash out of the appropriations for the air mail.

Consider the accomplishment. Daily operation of a route 218 miles between New York and Washington for 19½ months; a route of 325 miles between Cleveland and Chicago for 7½ months; and a route of 430 miles between New York and Cleveland for 6 months; experimentation and development of a satisfactory commercial mail plane; the upkeep of seven aviation fields—all for $397,220.47; and the entire expenditure coming back to the Government in the shape of sale of special airplane postage and actual saving of car space, and thereby expediting annually more than 22,000,000 letters an entire business day. What could a militarized air service or any other organization do better than this?

FEW CASUALTIES IN AIR MAIL.

Then consider the safety of operations in the air mail as compared with any other aerial activity—military, exhibition, or aerial-passenger transport, either in America or abroad. In the daily opertions of the air mail over a period of 19½ months and covering 473,210 miles, four air mail pilots have lost their lives flying the mail, as follows: Frank S. McCusker, Cleveland, Ohio, May 25, 1919; Charles W. Lamborne, Dix Run, Pa., July 19, 1919; John P. Charlton, Long Valley, N. J., October 30, 1919; and Lyman W. Doty, Catonsville, Md., October 15, 1919. On the fields, one mechanic and one spectator have been killed by coming in contact with the whirling propellors of planes on the ground. Two pilots have been seriously injured—none permanently—and not more than half a dozen have been hurt or shaken up severely enough to lay them up for more than a few hours. And this record was achieved in the stern work of carrying the mail as a daily routine in storm, rain, sleet, and fog.

Compare with that the European military and civilian aviation death roll since the close of the war, and even the civilian and military record in the United States. It is not a reflection on our Army that its air force reports between 50 and 60 killed during the year 1919, or that 8 of these deaths occurred in the short period of the great transcontinental air race from October 8 to November 4, 1919. It simply shows that straight commercial flying as conducted by the air mail, with its pilots kept in constant practice and its mechanics trained to bring about one daily result, is a reasonably safe undertaking, considering the limitations and crudeness of the present-day airplane.

AIR SERVICE BILLS AFFECT AIR MAIL.

The development and extension of the air mail has been seriously hampered through failure of Congress to make substantial appropriations. This failure did not result from antagonism to an air-mail service, but was the result of a campaign conducted to force legislation for the creation of a department of air. The purpose of such proposed legislation clearly is to create a powerful independent military air force, instead of separate Army and naval air forces. The principal bills introduced and considered by the committees of Congress are nearly exclusively military in their character, usually with one paragraph, very general in tenor, dealing with the encouragement of commercial aeronautics. These bills, devoted almost entirely to creating a fighting air force, always seek to take from the Post Office Department the operations of its air-mail service. It is contended that money would be saved to the Government through the elimination of duplication, if the operations of the air mail were taken from the Post Office Department and merged with the operations of the independent military air service.

Everybody knows that the methods and practices obtaining the world over in military operations, and probably necessary for military efficiency, are not the practices and methods that make for commercial success, and no amount of consolidation under military practices can possibly cut the cost of operations down to the efficient economic basis of the air mail.

No one will contend that these bills, so strongly urged by military fliers, are anything but purely military in character. They are drawn for the purpose of creating an air military force, separate and distinct from land military establishment and from the Navy. It is apparently expected that the head of this proposed new department would be a civilian, but his whole organization would be military, and, in the language of two of the most strongly pressed bills, governed under the rules and regulations of the War Department in the proposed acts. These two bills even provide that the air routes shall be laid out, not to meet the needs of commerce in time of peace, but to meet the military needs in time of war.

WHY DO THEY WANT THE AIR MAIL?

What is the purpose then of attempting to take out of the hands of a civil department the efficient and economic operation of a commercial function? It is not necessary to the conduct of an efficient fighting force. In fact it would be a mere side-line activity of a military air department. It can not seriously be contended that a military air department can conduct the postal air service more economically and more efficiently than it is being conducted by the Post Office Department, as demonstrated by more than a year and a half of operation and as compared with the cost of air operations for military purposes here and abroad.

There is some other reason for this persistent desire to tie up the air mail service with a military air service. Whether it is the reason or not, it is easy to see that the proposed department of air would be likely to get larger appropriations if it transported mail from city to city than if it devoted itself to purely military work. It can not be in the interest of either economy or postal efficiency to take the air mail out of the hands of the Post Office Department and put it under a militarized air service, and certainly it can contribute nothing to military efficiency to carry mail sacks back and forth daily between certain cities; then, if it is not the hope of getting larger appropriations from Congress each year, what is behind this powerful and persistent campaign to turn over to the proposed separate military air force this mail-transporting function of the Post Office Department?

The idea that it would be a great thing if the military fliers in their air maneuvers could be put to work carrying mails instead of flying their planes empty appeals to some men.

Would those men vote to put the Infantry to work on the letter carriers' rounds, the Cavalry to patroling the cities, and the Artillery and transports to hauling street litter to the city dumps just to keep them busy at some civic function?

And what would happen if you turned the air mail over to a military department of air? Remember always that the pending bills would make it an Army and Navy consolidated separate fighting force for the expected purpose of greater military efficiency in the air.

WOULD SPEEDILY KILL AIR MAIL.

The first thing that would happen would be that while you might put the military fliers to work on some civic occupation it would cost the Government more per mile and per pound to carry the air mail than under an efficient postal administration.

The next thing that would happen would be an immediate loss of efficiency in postal service, not that the military operatives would not be capable men, but because, first, it would be an operation incidental to the main purposes of the proposed department of the air, which is sought to be created, not to jitney sacks of mail on strict daily schedules between given points but to develop and increase our military proficiency in the air; and, secondly and chiefly, because the Post Office Department could not compel a coordinate branch of the Government to render that degree of service which it could compel its own employees to render or which it could compel a bonded contractor to perform. This is not a groundless fear or imaginary eventuality. It is bitter experience in the Postal Service. The maintaining of schedules and the unfailing performance of service is the very soul of the mail transportation. Fines under the law and recovery on bonds have proven the only means of forcing that dependability of service which postal efficiency requires where the Post Office Department itself does not operate the service.

Long years of experience have taught the Post Office Department that it can not obtain the same efficient service from a coordinate branch of the Government over which it can not exercise direct authority as it can over its bonded contractors or its own employees, and in the light of that experience the Post Office Department serves notice now that Congress will kill the American air mail speedily and with certainty if it transfers its operations from the Post Office Department to the proposed department of air.

HOW THE AIR MAIL HAS PERFORMED.

The following table shows the percentage of performance and the cost of service by months from its inauguration on May 15, 1918, to November 30, 1919, a period of 18½ months:

Consolidated statement of operations of air mail service.

Month.	Miles traveled.	Per cent of performance.	Mails carried.	Cost of service.
1918.			Pounds.
May (15 days)	5,324	78.87	4,750	$3,682.11
June	10,685	94.97	13,081	9,922.71
July	11,855	97.57	16,967	10,001.46
August	11,984	99.96	16,588	9,555.67
September	10,900	100.00	15,200	9,638.74
October	11,617	98.68	16,788	9,841.76
November	11,118	98.07	16,854	10,673.68
December	8,415	77.23	17,778	13,300.46

Consolidated statement of operations of air mail service—Continued.

Month.	Miles traveled.	Per cent of performance.	Mails carried.	Cost of service.
1919.			Pounds.
January	9,653	82.00	18,105	$13,741.58
February	9,307	88.18	15,489	13,645.16
March	10,699	92.59	17,531	13,880.29
April	11,105	95.06	16,677	13,516.44
May [1]	22,578	96.92	26,626½	17,715.66
June [2]	30,835	99.65	35,647	30,891.62
July [3]	56,577	96.04	48,704	41,134.36
August	58,022	98.43	56,870	40,614.59
September	56,308	98.60	55,688	34,861.53
October	50,437	86.27	55,095	35,609.03
November	41,757	86.61	54,084	31,127.58
Average		92.93

[1] Cleveland-Chicago route inaugurated May 15, 1919.
[2] New York-Cleveland service inaugurated July 1, 1919.
[3] Flight Washington-New York prior to July reported as two trips account exchange of mails at Philadelphia, and subsequent to that date nonstop flight reported as one trip.

NOTE.—Effective November 9, 1919, Sunday service on New York-Cleveland and Cleveland-Chicago routes was discontinued.

HOW LETTERS ARE SPEEDED BY AIR MAIL.

The air mail between Washington and New York, northbound, takes from trains Nos. 82 and 92 about 16,000 letters daily, distributed to New York City carrier routes, and delivers them in New York City in time for the bulk of afternoon carrier-delivery routes. This mail, had it continued to New York by train, would have reached that city, if on time, at 4.45 p. m., too late for delivery that day, and would not have been delivered until the following morning.

Southbound, the air mail takes from train No. 109 the Boston and New England night mail to the amount of about 16,000 letters daily and delivers them in Washington generally in time for the noon carrier delivery in the business district and for the 1.40 p. m. carrier delivery over the entire city of Washington. Before the air mail took over this work the letters from these trains reached Washington in time for the afternoon delivery only when the train was on time in New York City and in Washington, and provided the transfer of mail between the Grand Central Depot and the Pennsylvania Depot in New York City was accomplished in time. The train from New York to Washington missed the carrier delivery in Washington 26 per cent of the time, resulting in delivery the following morning. The immediate result of carrying this mail by airplane was the cessation of complaints from New England commercial centers that their night mail frequently was not delivered in Washington until the second day after mailing.

The air mail between New York and Cleveland leaves New York early in the morning and reaches Cleveland in the forenoon, resulting in an afternoon delivery of that day of mail for Cleveland. The plane also carries about 12,000 letters for the Middle West, which are placed on train No. 35 at Cleveland and arrive in Chicago at 8 p. m. instead of 8 a. m. the following day, had they gone the entire way from New York to Chicago by train, thus advancing these letters 16 hours to the Middle Western States. At Cleveland mail for Chicago and Chicago western connections is taken from train No. 19 and is delivered in Chicago usually at 1 p. m. instead of 4 p. m., had the mail remained on train No. 19, thus insuring delivery in the city of Chicago in the afternoon instead of the following morning and making train connections out of Chicago that would have been missed had the mail remained on the train.

From Chicago, eastbound, mail from the West and from Chicago city is brought to Cleveland in the afternoon, when the eastern mail is placed on the eastbound Twentieth Century Limited and delivered in New York at 9.40 o'clock the following morning instead of the following afternoon. At Cleveland the air mail is taken from train No. 90, which left Chicago at 11 p. m. the night before, and is delivered by plane in New York City early that afternoon instead of the following morning, had it remained on the train.

If it were possible for the railroads to expedite the mail in any such manner—which is not possible—the service would have to be put on, no matter if it did cost the department one or two hundred thousand dollars a year additional. In the case of the air mail, however, the expedition is much greater than could be accomplished by train, and a large saving in space and clerical hire is effected.

AIR MAIL VERSUS TRAIN TIME.

Thus the air mail has been worked in to supplement the Railway Mail Service in the expediting of letter mail over long runs. The possibility of the savings of the air mail in the matter of time and in the cost of distribution on trains arises from the fact that the airplane trips are made at an average speed of 80 miles an hour or better, while the average speed of the fastest mail and passenger trains is 40 miles an hour or less.

The following comparative table of possible air mail and train service illustrates this point:

Scheduled time of mail trains in 1913 and 1919.

From—	To—	1913	1919	Possible by air mail.
		H. m.	H. m.	H. m.
Boston	Detroit	18 10	21 55	8 20
Do	Chicago	25 50	27 00	8 45
Do	New York	5 36	6 50	3 00
New York	Chicago	23 50	24 20	9 30
Do	Omaha	36 20	38 30	15 20
Do	Minneapolis	35 42	36 54	13 30
Do	St. Louis	23 55	28 45	12 05
Do	Jacksonville	27 35	29 22	11 54
Do	Seattle	83 15	90 00	31 54
Do	Portland	84 30	90 30	32 51
Do	San Francisco	86 40	90 30	35 00
Washington	Jacksonville	22 00	24 40	8 56
Do	New Orleans	33 30	36 30	12 51
Do	Chicago	21 00	22 10	8 11
Do	St. Louis	23 35	27 55	9 30
Chicago	Minneapolis	10 17	11 24	4 48
Do	Omaha	11 20	12 45	5 30
St. Louis	Kansas City	7 10	7 25	3 06
Do	Fort Worth	24 00	26 10	7 25
Do	Omaha	12 14	13 26	4 42

Every means of transportation is subject to delays by accident and weather, but the performance of the air mail compares favorably with the average annual record of the railways. The New York-Washington route from its inauguration May 15, 1918, to January 1, 1920, has scored a performance of 94.5 per cent. The Chicago-Cleveland route from its inauguration May 15, 1919, to date has scored a performance of 95 per cent, and the New York-Cleveland route across the mountains, since its inauguration July 1, 1919, has scored a performance of 89 per cent. The important thing is that by reason of the great speed of the airplane the small per cent of failures did in no instance delay the mail beyond the time it would have taken to carry it by train.

EXTENSION PROGRAM FOR AIR MAIL.

The Post Office Department, responding to the demand from commercial centers for extension of this expeditious mail service, asks for an appropriation of $3,000,000 for the ensuing year. With this money it would extend the route from Chicago to the Pacific coast, thus reducing the present westbound mail service of 90½ hours and the eastbound service of 102 hours each to 59 hours. In order to get a letter from New York to San Francisco by Friday noon, it would have to be mailed some time before 6 p. m. on the previous Monday, whereas a letter mailed any time up to midnight Monday would be delivered by air mail to San Francisco on Thursday forenoon. Again, the train scheduled to arrive in San Francisco at 12.30 p. m. daily is generally so late that delivery of the mail by carriers can not be effected until the following morning. During the month of October the train with the heavy eastern mail arrived late in San Francisco 21 out of 25 days.

A second important route on the proposed air mail extension would operate from Pittsburgh to Kansas City via Indianapolis, Cincinnati, and St. Louis. This mail would leave Pittsburgh at 7 a. m. with the mail from Pittsburgh and from the night trains out of New York and make deliveries to Indianapolis and Cincinnati in the forenoon and in St. Louis at noon and in Kansas City that afternoon, cutting the railroad time between Pittsburgh and Kansas City from 24 hours and 50 minutes to 10 hours and 40 minutes.

A third extensive route contemplated would be from Minneapolis via Chicago to St. Louis, cutting the railway time from 20 hours and 35 minutes to 7 hours and 30 minutes.

A fourth important air mail service would extend from New York to Atlanta by extending the New York-Washington route south. This line would then be 850 miles long, and the time of transit would be reduced from 26 hours and 15 minutes to 10 hours and 40 minutes by air mail.

The following table summarizes the proposed extension of the air mail during the ensuing fiscal year as presented to the House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads by the Post Office Department:

Routes.	Rail miles.	Air miles.	Rail time.	Air time.	Number letters.	Cost air mail.	Mail advanced.
New York and San Francisco	3,231	2,630	90.30	59.00	146,000,000	$1,043,363	Pacific coast, 48 hours; Ohio to Utah, from 12 to 36 hours.
New York and Atlanta	884	850	26.15	10.40	75,120,000	461,929	Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, from 12 to 24 hours.
Pittsburgh and Kansas City	903	850	24.50	10.40	87,640,000	461,929	Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, and Southwestern States, 12 to 24 hours.
Twin Cities and St. Louis (via Chicago).	703	600	20.35	7.30	73,920,000	282,452	Between Northwest and Southwest, one business day; from Chicago, 16 hours in delivery.

Operating cost of air service	$2,249,673
Reduction rail transportation	$1,726,790
Number letters all routes	382,680,000

The Post Office Department has also received a proposal to operate a hydroplane air mail line from St. Louis via Cairo, Memphis, and Vicksburg to New Orleans. Under this proposal the St. Louis and New Orleans mail would be delivered in Memphis to the public on the afternoon carrier deliveries instead of the following morning by trains, and there would be a like expedition of the mail from Memphis to New Orleans and St. Louis.

WOULD CONTRACT FOR AIR MAIL SERVICE.

There are other routes in which as great expedition of the mails could be effected, but the Post Office Department has not recommended their establishment, because it is not possible to show an important reduction in space and clerk hire on the trains in addition to the great saving of time. For some reason it is demanded of the Post Office Department that its air mail service should be self-sustaining. If you put that test to the Railway Mail Service, the City Delivery Service, or the Rural Free Delivery Service, these postal agencies, which cost millions but which do not bring sufficient new business to the Postal Service to pay any substantial part of their costs, would die instantly. Here, then, has suddenly arisen, through the epoch-making invention of the airplane, a mail transportation medium cutting in half the fastest railroad time between our commercial centers, yet so critical has Congress been of this utilization of the airplane for the mail service that the Post Office Department refrains from recommending the establishment of other important routes because it is impossible to show on them a substantial saving in the cost of railway transportation and distribution.

The Post Office Department has always taken the position that when American capital is ready to enter the aerial transport field, it will be glad to advertise for contracts for carrying mails by airplanes or airships over such routes as will greatly improve the mail service to the public and show a relatively substantial reduction in the cost of transportation and distribution on trains. The work that the Post Office Department is doing through the air mail service is the only effective aid and encouragement given to commercial aviation in this country. Its results and its records of operations are being constantly given to business men who are giving consideration to entering this transportation field.

COMMERCIAL OPERATIONS FOUNDATION FOR WAR PREPAREDNESS.

There has been a cry in the land that the United States is utterly unprepared for aerial warfare. Now, it is everywhere recognized that you can not during the long years of peace maintain a great aerial force that can instantly meet a dire national emergency. You must develop commercial aviation as the Post Office Department is doing, so that a permanent industry of magnitude may arise which in time of national emergency can rapidly expand to meet the demands of war. High military authority recognized this. In a report to the Secretary of War a board, composed of Maj. Gens. Menoher, Coe, Haan, and Snow, says:

On account of the short life of aircraft and the great cost of production and maintenance, no nation can in time of peace maintain military air fleets even approximating in size to such as will be necessary in time of war. Such military air fleets must therefore be provided after the beginning of the emergency. The nation which is prepared so that it can be the first to produce, equip, and maintain a superior air force will have an undoubted advantage.

If commercial aeronautics were a paying business large plants would be established in the United States for producing commercial aircraft without other governmental stimulation than that provided for other business affairs. These plants would develop expert aeronautical engineers, expert mechanics, and all classes of personnel necessary for aircraft production and maintenance. In time of war the Nation's producing capacity, already organized, would be diverted from the production of commercial aircraft to the production of military aircraft. This would be a comparatively simple proposition. The Nation would also have a great reservoir of commercial aviators from which, in a short period of time, military aviators could be selected and trained and a limited portion of its commercial fleet could be utilized without radical alterations for certain war purposes. Thus at the beginning of the war it would be possible to develop under military control in a most expeditious manner probably the largest and best military air force that any nation could produce.

The development of commercial aviation to the extent indicated by this Army board can be brought about in two ways—through subsidies, either direct or disguised, or by a rational development of commercial plane types and reduction of operation costs to a practical business basis, which has been a persistent policy with the air mail service.

AIR MAIL CONTRIBUTIONS TO AERONAUTICS.

Operating on a meager appropriation, the Post Office Department has already shown what commercial necessity may develop in the advancement of aviation. It was the first to demonstrate that it is possible to maintain a dependable schedule; that it is possible to fly in all kinds of weather; and at its instigations the Bureau of Standards has developed a device that will locate to the airplane in fog or rain or flying above the clouds the very center of the field in which it is to land.

As a result of its first year of operation there have been created and built in this country advanced types of two and three motored planes. One of these, which has already attracted the attention of foreign governments, is a plane no larger than our small training planes, but carrying a load of 1,500 pounds, capable of indefinite flight on one engine. It has a speed of more than 120 miles per hour and can wing its way through space at an altitude of 18,000 feet.

Another feat of the Post Office Department has been the reconstruction of the De Haviland airplane, built in large numbers for the war. The first thing the Post Office Department did with this plane was to make it a strong commercial machine, fit for rough cross-country work. The next thing it did was to convert it into a two-motored plane, capable of carrying 800 pounds of mail and capable not only of maintaining itself in the air on one motor with a full load of mail but of actually climbing on one motor with such a load. It is the only two-motored plane in this country that will climb on one motor with a full load.

Other contributions to aeronautics made by the air mail will be found enumerated in the annual report of the national advisory committee to this Congress.

UNITED STATES AIR MAIL APPLAUDED IN EUROPE.

The work of the Post Office Department in operating the air mail has not only been fully recognized by aviation experts in the United States but has been sincerely applauded in Europe and held up as a model to foreign governments. It is recognized not only that it is the only continuous and extensive air service in the world, but the dependability of its daily operations have challenged the admiration of the aviation experts abroad.

In a series of newspaper articles in the European press, Dr. Robert Paganini, of Switzerland, writes as follows of the air mail work of the Post Office Department of the United States:

Without going into particulars, in general outline the present standing of the air traffic may be held to be on a firm footing. At the head of all endeavors of this kind are the United States of North America. Beginning with the year 1911, until 1918, about 100 separate attempts at aerial post were carried out in that country. On May 15, 1918, the permanent aerial post Washington-Philadelphia-New York opened, and has been running uninterruptedly since. Other lines have been joined thereon. The great event of recent days was the flight across the ocean; with what relative good results is well known. The aviators also brought mail, to be sure only 2 pounds, and only official correspondence. The American aerial mail service is under the control of the Second Assistant Postmaster General, Otto Praeger, owing to whose zeal in the management of reports we are enabled to obtain the most minute informations and details concerning all the postal flights performed. The results were satisfactory in every respect. Above all, it was brought out that the failures feared through falls and the like have not occurred.

C. G. Grey, of London, in an article in the Illustrated London News of October 11, 1919, says:

Unlike our own casehardened officials, the American Postal Department itself took the first steps to prove the value of aerial postal lines. Some months before the end of the war an experimental postal line was tried between New York and Washington. The airplanes used were merely low-powered training machines fit only for work at elementary flying schools. In fact, according to our ideas, they were not fit even for such work, for we had turned down similar American machines a year or more before. In spite of this, the experimental service had an efficiency as great as that attributed by Mr. Illingworth (Postmaster General) to our most modern machines. The United States Postal Department, instead of being discouraged—as our officials would evidently have been—were encouraged to try something better, so when, after the armistice, better machines (built, be it noted, to British designs) and better engines became available, the service was continued, and was extended to Chicago and Cleveland; and a few weeks ago the American Post Office published its figures for a whole year's running.

The service was to be extended from Chicago to St. Louis during September of this year, and to Minneapolis and Omaha in the spring. Be it remembered that all these lines are in direct competition with America's fastest railways, on which are run the crack trains of the New World, such as the Empire State Express and the Twentieth Century Limited.

Col. Thurman H. Bane, chief of the engineering division of the air service, at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, pays this tribute to the operations of the air mail service of the Post Office Department, in a letter to the Second Assistant Postmaster General, under date of November 30, 1919:

We were all watching with interest and are now pleased to note the great success you are having. I think your operation will do much to promote general interest throughout the country.

In concluding a chapter on the air mail service, the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics in its fifth annual report to Congress says:

A statement of the work of the air mail service would be incomplete without reference to the service performance in the air. Early advices received by the Post Office Department were that there would be great difficulty in maintaining a daily schedule of mail flights, and the opinion was held that the service would be interrupted during the winter months and perhaps at other times when conditions might be considered unpropitious. However, the rapid development of aviation generally has made it possible to establish a reliable service, as is shown by the following record: During the last fiscal year only 4.4 per cent of the scheduled trips were not attempted, and out of a total of 138,310 miles possible there were flown 128,255 miles, or a performance of 92.73 per cent. During the same period there were only 37 forced landings, due to mechanical troubles during flight. It would seem, therefore, that the achievements of the air mail service may be regarded as a substantial contribution in the practical development of commercial aviation.

HISTORY OF THE AIR MAIL.

The air mail service was initiated by the Postmaster General, who directed the Second Assistant Postmaster General in 1917 to make a study of this subject with a view to establishing such a service, provided assurance could be given that the service would be practical, continuous, and efficient. As early as 1913 the Postmaster General recommended that Congress make an appropriation for an air mail service. The recommendation was frequently repeated, and in 1916 the Congress appropriated $100,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918. In the meantime a careful survey of the subject was made not only by the postal authorities but, at their request, by practical business men identified with the development of aviation, and particularly by the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, who detailed specialists on this investigation. Assurance being given the Postmaster General that such a service could be permanently maintained with efficiency, he directed the establishment of the first regular air mail route between New York and Washington, effective May 15, 1918.

Col. E. A. Deeds, chief signal officer and head of the military air service, expressed the fullest confidence in the plans of the Postmaster General, and urged that the Army be permitted to operate the line, in order to utilize the air mail operations for the final training of American flyers and mechanics in cross-country work before sending them to France. Accordingly, the operations were turned over to the Army on an agreement that the flights be made with that degree of regularity necessary for maintaining a dependable mail schedule.

About two weeks before the date set for the inauguration of the air mail service Col. Goodyear, then in charge of training and to whom was assigned the operation of the air mail, called upon the Second Assistant Postmaster General, in company with Col. Bloomfield, an English aviator, to persuade the postal authorities to recall their decision to operate the air mail, on the ground that the service could not be run in bad weather. The Post Office Department refused to recede from its position, and Col. Goodyear was informed that if the military authorities refused to carry out their part of the agreement made between the War Department and the Post Office Department, the Postmaster General would proceed with the purchase of equipment and operate the service with civilian flyers and mechanics.

The military authorities therefore proceeded with the inauguration of the work. The postal authorities, however, felt that with such antagonistic sentiment prevailing among the Army men who would be directly charged with the conduct of the air mail operations the service would be certain to fail in the end, notwithstanding the whole-hearted support given to the Post Office Department by the Secretary of War and the heads of the War Department. For that reason the Postmaster General purchased the necessary equipment for an air mail service, to be ready to relieve the Army of the air mail operations whenever the Army no longer desired to operate it, or was not in a position, by reason of the demands of the war, to operate the service in a manner to properly maintain mail schedules.

The Army placed Maj. Reuben H. Fleet in charge of the service. His tireless and efficient work gave the air mail a satisfactory start, but after the service had been in operation 10 days Maj. Fleet was detailed for other service elsewhere. The Army operated the air mail from May 15 to August 10, a period of 2 months and 25 days. In that time the service was in the hands of four different military heads, as follows:

Maj. Reuben H. Fleet until May 25; Capt. C. A. Willoughby, May 25 to July 24; Lieut. ———, July 24 to July 31; and Lieut. George J. Kinberg, July 31 to August 10. In that period—75 days—the air mail defaulted 13 trips on account of weather, failed to complete 13 trips on account of motor trouble or accidents, and had 20 forced landings. This was a record of 26 failures, or only 90.3 per cent of trips performed in summer flying. The prospects of the possible result in winter weather were very gloomy. During the month of July an agreement was reached with the War Department for the Post Office Department to take over the service and operate it with its own force of fliers and mechanics. In the entire Air Mail Service over the mountains, in the Great Lakes region, and along the Atlantic seaboard, covering a period of 16 months since August 10, 1918, when the Post Office Department took over the operations of the routes, only 30 out of 2,130 possible trips, or 3.75 per cent, were defaulted on account of weather conditions or trouble with equipment. Out of a possible mileage of 488,940, a total of 456,673 miles were flown, making a performance of 93.4 per cent, for 16 months continuous operation in all characters of country and all seasons of the year.

AIR MAIL EQUIPMENT.

The air mail operated 12 months with small Army training planes that carried 200 pounds of letters and could maintain a fairly satisfactory speed schedule of 70 miles an hour. After the close of the war, the Post Office Department obtained from the War Department and the Navy Department 100 De Haviland planes capable of carrying 400 pounds of letters and maintaining a steady speed schedule of better than 80 miles an hour. Only a portion of these planes are in actual use, the bulk of them being held as reserve for future needs. In order to insure greater certainty of operations and to make greater savings on train distribution and carriage of letters, the department has purchased 11 twin motor planes carrying 1,500 pounds or more of letters, and is converting 15 De Havilands into twin motor planes. These twin De Haviland planes will eliminate the fire risk usually present in single motor planes in which the engine and gas tanks are housed close together in one fuselage, will continue to destination with the loss of one motor, and will carry 800 pounds of mail instead of 400 now carried in a single motor De Haviland.

The air mail is operating out of its own landing fields adjoining Washington, Philadelphia, Newark, N. J., Bellefonte, Pa., Cleveland, Ohio, and Chicago.

In the service are 28 pilots and 121 field employees, including trained airplane mechanics. Pilots enter the service at $2,000 per annum, with automatic increases at the rate of $200 per year for each 30 hours of satisfactory flying, the top salary for pilots being $3,600 per year. The top salary for mechanics is $2,000 per year. All landing fields used in the Air Mail Service, except at Washington and Philadelphia, where a nominal rent is paid, have been contributed wholely or in part either by the municipalities or the business men of the communities to which the air mail is operated.

COMMUNITIES DESIRING AIR MAIL.

I beg to expressly direct your attention to the interest that is being manifested throughout the country in the development of this service as is shown by the applications transmitted to the Post Office Department by Members of Congress, city councils, and commercial organizations for the extension of the air mail to the following-named points: Alaska; Arkansas City, Kans.; Akron, Ohio; Atlanta, Ga.; Austin, Tex.; Adrian, Mich.; Albany, N. Y.; Argo, La.; Alva, Okla.; Altus, Okla.; Binghamton, N. Y.; Baltimore, Md.; Boise, Idaho; Boonville, Mo.; Bedford, Mass.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Boston, Mass.; Birmingham, Ala.; Bartlesville, Okla.; Bryan, Ohio; Buffalo, N. Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Canton, Ohio; Corning, N. Y.; Charleston, W. Va.; Corinth, Miss.; Corsicana, Tex.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Chesterfield, S. C.; Concord, N. H.; Charlotte, N. C.; Covington, Ky.; Cleveland, Tenn.; Council Bluffs, Iowa; Chickasha, Okla.; Detroit, Mich.; Denver, Colo.; Dallas, Tex.; Elizabeth, N. J.; Eldorado, Kans.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Eureka, Calif.; Enid, Okla.; El Reno, Okla.; Elmira, N. Y.; Fort Smith, Ark.; Flint, Mich.; Gastonia, N. C.; Gainesville, N. C.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Habana, Cuba; Hartford, Conn.; Haverhill, Mass.; Hobart, Okla.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Ithaca, N. Y.; Joplin, Mo.; Jefferson Barracks, Mo.; Key West, Fla.; Kendallville, Ind.; Kansas City, Mo.; Kelleys Island, Ohio; Lexington, Ky.; Lorain, Ohio; Livingston, Mont.; Ladysmith, Wis.; Little Rock, Ark.;

Lordsburg, N. Mex.; Little Falls, N. Y.; Los Angeles, Calif; Lake Charles, La.; Lawton, Okla.; La Crosse, Wis.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Madison, Wis.; Memphis, Tenn.; Millington, Tenn.; Marion, Ohio; Mangum, Okla.; Marshall, Mich.; Muskogee, Okla.; Marlin, Tex.; Mason City, Iowa; Mobile, Ala.; Montgomery, Ala.; Muskegon, Mich.; Morehead City, N. C.; Milwaukee, Wis.; New York City; New Orleans, La.; Nantucket, Mass.; Navasota, Tex.; Nashville, Tenn.; New Britain, Conn.; Omaha, Nebr.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ogden, Utah; Oakley, Kans.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Parsons, Kans.; Phœnix, Ariz.; Pensacola, Fla.; Panama Canal Zone; Pasadena, Calif.; Quincy, Ill.; Rome, Ga.; Rochester, N. Y.; Spartanburg, S. C.; Scranton, Pa.; St. Paul, Minn.; St. Louis, Mo.; Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Temple, Tex.; Toledo, Ohio; Tulsa, Okla.; Tampa, Fla.; Texarkana, Tex. Takoma, Wash.; Union City, Tenn.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Waterbury, Conn.; Worcester, Mass.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Winona, Minn.; Woodward, Okla.

In conclusion may I be permitted also to direct your attention to the fact that the Post Office Department was not invited to appear before any of the committees of Congress considering the two bills vitally affecting the air mail, with the result that what little information the committees elicited to enlighten Congress about the extension and successful operations of the air mail was obtained from military fliers and airplane manufacturers favorable to legislation which specifically provides for taking from the Post Office Department the air mail and all of its functions pertaining to aeronautics.

Sincerely, yours,

A. S. BURLESON.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial in the American Economist concerning the treaty situation, being a brief extract from an editorial of Mr. Bryan's, as well as one or two other quotations which I will furnish now, and some hereafter.

There being no objection, the editorial referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BRYAN ON THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

"We have differed from William Jennings Bryan so often that it is a pleasure to find ourselves able to agree with him on one important subject. In his paper, The Commoner, he has this to say concerning the attitude of the Senate minority anent the peace treaty and the league of nations:

"Is ratification to be defeated by a Democratic minority? Can the Democrats hope to escape responsibility if they prevent a compromise? It is mockery to talk about favoring a league of nations if we favor only such a league as is satisfactory to a minority of the Senate. We can not go before the people on such an issue. The Senate is a constitutional body, and the right of a majority to rule applies there as elsewhere. The people can change the Senate if they do not approve of its course, but a minority of the Senate can not disregard the will of the majority."

Mr. GORE. Demosthenes said more than 2,000 years ago:

Law and justice require that you hear both sides alike.

Let only truth accuse. Let only justice judge.

Speak truth to the people in the presence of the king, and speak truth to the king in the presence of the people.

He who saves his country saves all things, and all things saved will bless him. He who lets his country die lets all things die, and all things dead curse him.

American first. Seniority counts.

STREET RAILWAY CONDITIONS IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, we have been talking a good deal here about bettering conditions in the world. This is a new year, and I think it is a good time to make new resolutions to improve conditions in the District of Columbia, in which we are all so much interested. I have in mind more particularly improvement with reference to the street railway situation in the District. I do not believe especially in complaining, but as we are starting out on a new year I think the situation referred to ought to be remedied. I have been a passenger on the street car lines here recently, I think, seven times, and as I recall six out of the seven times the cars stalled, and the passengers did not get to their destinations on time.

There is no reason in the world why we should not have a magnificent system of railways in the District of Columbia. If any city in the world ought to have one, the city of Washington ought to have it. I am sorry for anybody who has to operate machinery. I was once engaged in that business to some extent myself and it is a pretty difficult proposition. You can not make machinery perfect, but there is no excuse whatever for the manner in which the street railway systems are operated here. The other night, going home, I counted 13 cars which were stalled on the track.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, does not the Senator know that these companies are carrying a tremendous overload of water and have to stall sometimes?

Mr. DIAL. The cars to which I refer were stalled empty; 13 of them were on the tracks standing still. The companies can not make money for the stockholders in that way, and they can not serve the public in that way. Yesterday morning on one of the cars sitting in front of me were a lady and a little child trying to reach the depot. They would have had plenty of time if the car had gone on, but they had to get out and hire a taxi, and thus spend some extra money in the District. In front of them was a gentleman with his bag. He said he had been all the way to New Orleans and was trying to get back on time to Philadelphia. He could not see a taxi in sight, so he said he would have to miss his train and miss his engagement in Philadelphia.

Mr. President, the street railway systems here want more money; they say they can not run the cars under the present rate of fare and that they ought to have an increase. I do not care whether it is much or little; they ought to be paid a reasonable compensation; but some authority ought to see that they are doing their duty. They have the tracks; they have the current; they have the cars; but, due to some mismanagement or something of that sort, the systems do not seem to function properly. In saying this I do not claim to be an expert. I do know, however, that when a company gets a franchise it ought to use that franchise for the interest of the people, and if the street railways of Washington can not do that on the present rate of fare the rate should be increased.

It is a very serious matter. We can not get to our engagements on time. Some of us ride in automobiles, but I myself usually walk or ride on the street cars, and I would like to be able to get to my destination on time. Frequently, however, that is impossible on account of delays. One man's time is worth as much to him as is the time of another, and therefore we ought to be prompt in our engagements. I think that the District of Columbia Committee ought to take up the matter, and if the railroad companies of the District can not be properly operated, put them into the hands of receivers or put them out of business, or take some steps which will make them render better service.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if he does not think it would be a good idea to guarantee them a certain rate of return on their capital as well as watered stock, as we have done in the case of the railroads under the bill recently passed?

Mr. DIAL. I do not know about that; that is a different question; but if the street railway companies do not render better service some drastic action should be taken.

WAR RISK INSURANCE BUREAU.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to make a statement in connection with a bill I am about to introduce to abolish the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. If that consent is given, I should like very much to have Senators listen to what I have to say in relation to this important measure.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if it will be a lengthy statement?

Mr. SMOOT. No; it will not be very long; I have condensed it as much as I could.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the request of the Senator from Utah? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I introduce the bill at this time.

The bill (S. 3657) to abolish the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and to confer the jurisdiction of allotments and family allowances, of compensation for death or disability, and of war-risk insurance upon other establishments, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in presenting this bill it may not be inappropriate to review the considerations which have prompted me in introducing the bill and to outline with more definiteness than is apparent in the bill what savings and economies of administration may reasonably be expected to result therefrom.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I suggest the Senator suspend until private conversations are ended in the Chamber.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have the attention of the Senate. I know it is not very often the case that a proposition is presented to the Senate for the purpose not only of improving the work done by a Government agency but of saving millions of dollars by so doing, and if I can not convince the Senate that that will be the result of the bill introduced by me I want every Senator to vote against the bill.

The act of October 6, 1917, known as the war-risk insurance act, resulted in placing upon the Director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance the responsibility for administering four almost entirely distinct functions of the Government, necessitated by our participation in the war with Germany. They were: (a) The payment of allotments and family allowances to dependents of the enlisted personnel of the Army and Navy; (b) the payment of compensation to officers and enlisted men, or their dependents, for disability or death resulting from service with the armed forces of the country; (c) the insurance of officers and enlisted men against death or total permanent disability; and (d) the insurance of American vessels against loss or damage by the risks of war.

It has been said that the war-risk insurance act was enacted in haste and with inadequate deliberation, under the stress of the war emergency, which, Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to say is the fact, as Senators interested in that legislation well know.

At any rate the combination under a single administration of these quite unrelated functions, necessitating the admittedly unwieldy organization of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, has not been satisfactory, although it is believed that in the main the functions entrusted to this bureau have been as effectively performed as was possible under the system established by law.

I have no feeling whatever against any officer of the bureau, nor have I any feeling against any employee, but all must admit that the work the bureau is doing to-day and which it has been doing in the past is not what Congress intended should be done, nor have the results been what the soldiers had a reason and a right to expect.

In the light of experience there now seems to be no question but that these functions should have been entrusted so far as possible to existing agencies of the Government already experienced in the performance of similar duties. The War and Navy Departments have for many years maintained allotment offices for the purpose of paying allotments to dependents of soldiers and sailors. The Bureau of Pensions has for generations paid compensation to soldiers and their dependents, although under a different name and under different regulations than prescribed in the compensation provisions of the war-risk insurance act. Much experimentation and confusion would certainly have been avoided had the responsibility for administering the allotment and allowance and compensation features of the war-risk legislation been placed upon these agencies. Only in the case of insurance was there any necessity for the establishment of new machinery. Moreover, the creation of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance not only resulted in a needless duplication of existing agencies but its establishment as an organization entirely separate from the War and Navy Departments, although practically dependent upon those departments for the information upon which its actions were taken, inevitably resulted in countless errors, delays, and misunderstandings.

While the war was in progress it would undoubtedly have been unwise to distribute to other agencies the functions being performed by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. But for practical purposes the war is over, and it now becomes appropriate to give consideration to the program which the Government should follow with a view to obtaining the most economical and effective administration possible in the discharge of the obligations which it has incurred under the war-risk insurance act and its amendments.

Moreover, as a result of the termination of the war and the consequent demobilization of our armed forces, changes in the nature of the duties of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance have occurred, of such consequence that, without regard to the degree of effectiveness of that bureau during the war period, it is doubtful whether it is now or can be under existing law organized to perform effectively certain of the new duties imposed upon it.

To all intents and purposes war-risk allotments and allowances have been terminated. There remains in force at this time but an insignificant proportion of the millions of awards upon which payments were made during the course of the war. The Bureau of War Risk Insurance is now principally concerned in the review, adjudication, and settlement of cases involving accounting differences between the Government and allotters or their dependents, work which of necessity involves constant contact with and reference to the records of the military branches of the service.

The most radical change in the character of the work of the War Risk Insurance Bureau is to be noted, however, in the transformation of the conditions affecting military and naval insurance. During the period of the war the operations of the bureau with respect to this class of insurance were, practically speaking, restricted to receiving and recording applications for insurance and issuing certificates therefor. Premiums were collected by the War and Navy Departments. These agencies furnished the sole means of contact between the War Risk Bureau and insured persons or persons desiring insurance. Few individuals paid premiums direct to the bureau. Thus relieved of the necessity of carrying on the two principal activities essential in the conduct of private life insurance business—that is, solicitation of prospects and the collection of and accounting for premiums—the insurance branch of the War Risk Bureau became in reality merely a record division, and it was organized as such. With the termination of the war, however, and the return of insured men to private life the War Risk Bureau was abruptly confronted with the necessity of taking up the real work of life insurance, and, since it had suddenly been stripped of its collecting and contact agencies, to take up itself the problems relating to the collection of and accounting for insurance premiums and to the conservation of the insurance on its books. How far short of success in the conduct of these matters the bureau fell may perhaps be accurately gauged by a consideration of the relatively small amount of insurance which remains in force at this time. It is not to be presumed, of course, that this condition is wholly traceable to faulty organization. Under the most favorable conditions the lapse rate would have been high, for it must be remembered that the taking of insurance by the enlisted personnel of the Army and Navy was practically compulsory. And yet there is no doubt but that in the inadequate provision made to insured persons of facilities for the payment of premiums after their separation from the military service and for the reinstatement of lapsed insurance is found a principal cause for the wholesale abandonment of Government insurance by discharged soldiers and sailors. It may be conceded that during the period of the war the Bureau of War Risk Insurance functioned effectively as a records branch for insurance policies written upon the lives of soldiers and sailors. But it seems equally certain that that bureau, lacking, as it does, instrumentalities to facilitate generally a personal contact with insured persons and specifically the payment of insurance premiums by such persons, can not hope to achieve success in the administration of a real insurance business, especially since its clientele is largely composed of persons coming within the class usually insuring themselves under so-called industrial policies.

The following summary of the proposed bill is submitted to facilitate an understanding of its provisions:

Section 1 provides that the Bureau of War Risk Insurance shall cease to have the jurisdiction, powers, and duties conferred upon it by previous legislation.

Section 2 provides that allotments and allowances shall be administered by the War Department, the Navy Department, and the Coast Guard, respectively.

Section 3 transfers jurisdiction over the adjudication and payment of claims for compensation to the Commissioner of Pensions.

Section 4 transfers the administration of the military and naval insurance features to the Post Office Department.

Section 5 transfers to the Shipping Board the administration of the marine insurance functions.

Section 6 authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to apportion the appropriations made for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance among the several departments to which the functions of the bureau are assigned.

Section 7 provides for the creation of a committee of five members, representing the Treasury, War, Navy, Interior, and Post Office Departments to supervise the distribution of the files, records, papers, furniture, and personnel of the bureau among the several departments.

Section 8 establishes the effective date of the proposed changes.

Section 9 repeals all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this legislation.

The following tabulation shows the status of the allotment and allowance business of the War Risk Bureau as it stood on December 15, 1919:

Item. (Figures given are approximate.)	Army, Marine Corps, etc.	Navy.	Total.
Awards in force	23,000	34,000	57,000
Awards in suspense or in process of adjustment.	68,000	15,000	83,000
Awards closed	1,757,000	171,000	1,928,000
Total awards made	1,848,000	220,000	2,068,000

The proposed bill contemplates that this feature of the work of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance shall be transferred to the War Department, the Navy Department, and the Coast Guard. By way of illustration, the transfer to the War Department will result as follows: Approximately 23,000 active war-risk allotments and allowances will be merged with some 25,000 ordinary allotments, which is about the number now running in the Army, and thereafter both classes of allotments will be administered by the same agency; about 68,000 of the war-risk cases above described as in suspense or in process of adjustment will be merged with the cases of ordinary allotments having similar status, and the two classes will be adjudicated and settled together; the files relating to approximately one and three-quarters millions closed war-risk cases will be merged with the files in about 1,200,000 closed cases of ordinary allotments, a procedure which will automatically result in lodging in the same file jacket the entire allotment history of each enlisted man serving in the Army during the late war; and finally there will be placed in this file all application forms filled out by enlisted men of the Army who had no dependents and who consequently made no war-risk allotments. The transfer to the Navy Department and to the Coast Guard would be similar but, of course, on a smaller scale.

No more convincing evidence can be found concerning the impropriety of intrusting the payment of war-risk allotments and allowances for both Army and Navy to a single agency, separate from the military services, than exists in the organization set up by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance itself to administer allotments and allowances. It might be imagined from a consideration of the arguments presented for the perpetuation of that bureau that Army allotments and allowances and Navy allotments and allowances must now pass through the same hands, follow the same channels, be administered together by the same personnel; in other words, that this independent agency has been able effectually to separate the war risk allotment and allowance business from the two branches of the military service and administer it in a single unit of organization entirely independent of the War and Navy Departments. However, such is not the case. We find to-day in the allotment and allowance division of the War Risk Bureau what is in reality an Army section, which deals only with Army cases, with application-files units, award-card-files units, a correspondence branch, a stenographic branch, a special service branch, a reviewing branch, and so on; and we find also a Navy section, which deals only with Navy cases and which in organization is the practical counterpart of the Army section. These are, practically speaking, unrelated sections, without common ground except for the fact that a single index has been set up for the application files of both sections, and both are served by the same supply and personnel sections.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Without intending to offer any criticism, but for the purpose of having the subject more definitely elucidated, I want to ask the Senator if, instead of abolishing this particular part of the work, as his bill contemplates, it could not be perfected by doing what the Senator says the ordinary person would suppose was being done—having the work of the Navy and the Army combined under one head instead of separated as it is now?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that the only way in which that can be done is to have the allotment and allowance division transferred to the War and Navy Departments, as all the information as to the soldier and the sailor and the marine has to come to the Army and the Navy Departments in the first place and must be transferred as at present, and would be unless the transfer is made in the future to whatever agency is created for the purpose of taking care of these allotments and allowances. It is therefore a duplication of work, and in that duplication the mistakes have been made that have caused so much suffering among the dependents of the soldiers during the whole period of the war.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that; but the Senator himself, in starting out on that particular branch of the matter, said that the ordinary person would suppose that the cases from the Army and the Navy would be handled by one head, and then he proceeded to show that under existing conditions they are not so handled. Now, why can they not be so handled, and why should they not be?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that it is impossible to handle them without duplicate work unless the work is transferred to the War and Navy Departments. To-day they handle the allotments and allowances of the Regular Army, and they have a complete organization, not only in the War Department but in the Navy Department, and all of these allotments and allowances should now be handled by those two departments.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not think the Senator gets the point I am trying to make. I realize that what the Senator says is also true, and again I want to say that I am not making these suggestions in any critical spirit.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I understand.

Mr. NORRIS. But the Senator started out by saying that it would be supposed that the allowances and allotments of the Navy and the allowances and allotments of the Army would be under the War Risk Insurance Bureau, handled by the same division, so that it would all be under one head, and he says they are not so handled now.

Mr. SMOOT. I said, "However, such is not the case."

Mr. NORRIS. I understand. The Senator said that was not the case. But would not the criticism which the Senator makes under present conditions be answered by having them so handled that it would be the case?

Mr. SMOOT. I can not see how it would be possible, without duplication, under the requirements made under existing law; or, in other words, there is no soldier but is under the direct charge of the officers in the field, and all reports of the soldier's condition is first made to the War Department before any allotment and allowance is made.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me see if I can make myself plain. Under existing conditions in the War Risk Bureau there is one division that handles allotments from the Army.

Mr. SMOOT. Allotments and allowances.

Mr. NORRIS. Allotments and allowances from the Army; and another division that handles allotments and allowances from the Navy.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. NORRIS. Why could they not both be handled by the same division?

Mr. SMOOT. Within the War Risk?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. That could be done.

Mr. NORRIS. At least that would be one way of avoiding the difficulty.

Mr. SMOOT. That is, avoiding a part of the difficulty.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; a part of it.

Mr. SMOOT. But it is only a part of it, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. I think myself it is not all of it.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not want to take the time of the Senate to go into the details as to the number of employees that would be required if these changes were made, as compared with the number of employees that the War Risk Bureau has to-day. But I will assure the Senator I will put the figures in the RECORD.

This organization, as I have just outlined, Mr. President, is logical and necessary and must be perpetuated so long as the War Risk Bureau functions. This is an important consideration in connection with the proposal to transfer the allotment and allowance work to the military service, inasmuch as the existing arrangement lends itself perfectly to the transfer. Except for the insignificant number of Coast Guard and Marine Corps cases, the Army section and the Navy section may be transferred in toto to the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively. Since the transfer would result in the permanent consolidation of the records, which under the existing arrangements are constantly required to be brought together for comparison in specific cases, material economy in the pay roll, in addition to the obvious saving of overhead, would be effected.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. How does the Senator know that the men and women who are working in the War Risk Insurance Bureau would not be transferred to these several departments at the same time the records were transferred? The Senator knows that each one of these departments that are now functioning claims every session of Congress that they need more help.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that I have here a list of the employees that the officials of these departments have stated they would require in case the activities outlined in the bill were transferred to their departments; and Senators know there is not one of them but what would give an estimate calling for the highest number. Just in passing I will say that on December 15, 1919, there were employed in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance 13,111 employees, and with the transfers made as outlined in the bill, all that would be necessary would be 6,962 employees, according to the statements made by officials of the departments as to the number of employees they want in case the transfers are made. I will assure every Senator that the work will be done better after the transfers are made than it is being done to-day, and the reasons are obvious. What I want to do is to get a service that will be acceptable to the soldier, to his dependents, and to those beneficiaries in case of his death who are entitled to reasonable service on the part of the Government.

A conservative estimate of the saving in personnel which would immediately result is 800 on the basis of the present total force of 2,654 in the allotment and allowance division, and 306 in other divisions who are engaged, directly or indirectly, in allotment or allowance work.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I would like to have the Senator make a little more plain just what the War Department, for instance, is doing in this same line; and why, under the law, it is necessary for the War Department or the Navy Department each to keep up separate organizations for this work that is in part being done by the War Risk. The Senator has said that these transfers would go to bureaus in these several departments where they are already kept up, and have been. Why have they been kept up, and why has it been necessary in the past to have separate bureaus independent of the War Risk doing the same kind of work?

Mr. SMOOT. The reason for that was, Mr. President, that all reports of a soldier in the Army, no matter where he may be, must be made to the War Department, and the soldier's record is there found complete. The history of the soldier from the day he enlists to the day that he dies, is released, or leaves the Army is found in one place, and allowances under certain conditions were made to soldiers by the War Department before the passage of the act of October 6, 1917. But when we passed the war-risk insurance act on October 6, 1917, different provisions for the payment of allotments and allowances to the soldiers were made. It was six months after America had entered the war, and it was to take care of the soldiers who joined the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps. The law provided, first, a family allowance and allotment; second, an insurance feature; and, third, a compensation, or, in other words, a pension.

Mr. NORRIS. The War Department did not do anything about the insurance feature.

Mr. SMOOT. It had nothing to do with the insurance feature, as that was a new undertaking on the part of the Government.

Mr. NORRIS. When the War Risk Bureau wanted to get information in regard to a soldier, for instance, in the Army, it had to get it from that bureau in the War Department.

Mr. SMOOT. They would have to get it from the War Department. They received the information they based their decision for allotments upon from the War Department. They had to go to the War Department for the evidence upon which to base any claim made by a soldier.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's bill proposes that the War Department itself shall attend to all that?

Mr. SMOOT. That the War Department, as to the allotment and allowance, shall attend to every case; and I will say to the Senator now that there are only something like 23,000 cases of awards in force to-day. The family allotment and allowance is virtually through with, and therefore I want to see it transferred to the War Department, where the agencies are in existence to take care of soldiers in the regular way.

It will be borne in mind that the provisions of war-risk insurance legislation relating to compensation are extremely complicated and difficult of administration, by comparison with the provisions of existing pension laws. Pending the coordination of compensation provisions with those now governing the payment of pensions, no material saving in personnel, except for overhead, may be expected to result from the transfer to the Pension Bureau of that portion of the work of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance which appertains to the adjudication and payment of claims for compensation. The following table shows the status of that feature on December 5, 1919:

Item.	Death claims.	Disability claims.	Total.
Awards made	37,552	102,761	140,316
Cases closed	1,167	22,578	23,745
Awards in force	36,385	80,186	116,571
Claims disallowed	73,285	23,153	96,438
Claims pending			88,238
Total claims received			321,992

Under the proposed bill the 116,571 awards in force and the 88,238 pending claims will be transferred to the Bureau of Pensions, which is now making payment in more than 600,000 cases.

The life insurance functions of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, including the collection of and accounting for premiums, the adjudication and payment of claims, and the conversion of policies, it is proposed to transfer to the Post Office Department, which maintains agents in all sections of the country, however remote. The considerations which have prompted this proposal have been outlined above. It should, however, be said that the installation by the Post Office Department of a proper plan for the collection of insurance premiums would not merely aid in the restoration and conservation of the insurance; it would in addition eliminate the principal difficulties now attending the accounting for premiums collected and so simplify that task as to result in substantial pay-roll economies.

The proposal to transfer the marine and seamen's division of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance to the Shipping Board is of relatively small importance, since the work of that division, which now has a pay roll of but 12 employees, has practically ceased.

Attention is invited to the following table, which indicates the number of employees on the pay roll of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance at the time our investigations were undertaken on October 23, 1919, the number on the pay roll on December 15, 1919, and the annual cost of that pay roll.

I am going to ask that this table shall be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish the Senator would give his totals from it. I would like to ask a few questions touching it.

Mr. SMOOT. This is the pay-roll summary, and the table shows that the employees on October 23, 1919, were 15,419.

Mr. NORRIS. That is just the insurance?

Mr. SMOOT. No; that is the whole bureau. I will say to the Senator that it was some time in September when I first called attention to the great number of employees at the bureau and the work that was being done, based upon the complaints by thousands and thousands of soldiers throughout the United States. At that time the bureau had 15,419 employees.

I want to say in passing that the director of the bureau promised me about the 10th day of December that on the 1st day of January—this month—the employees would have been decreased from 15,419 as of October 23, 1919, to 10,000 employees. I have not heard as to whether the number has been decreased to 10,000 or not. But I understand it is nearly down to that figure. I want to say in passing, however, that that is not a sufficient reduction. There is no doubt that if the bureau were reorganized better work could be done and the soldiers of the country better served if they had but 7,000 efficient employees in that bureau, but I make that statement based upon the requirement of a complete reorganization of the bureau.

Mr. THOMAS. I think that is unquestionably true, but does the Senator really believe that it will be possible to affect such a reduction?

Mr. SMOOT. If I did, I will say to the Senator frankly that I would not be undertaking to abolish the bureau, but I do not believe it is going to be done unless by new legislation.

Mr. THOMAS. I am in hearty sympathy with the Senator's purposes. In so far as I am able to judge, his argument is convincing; but the large number of employees who will be thrown out of a job in the event his bill is passed, to my mind, constitutes an insuperable obstacle to its success.

We know that every Member of the Senate and every Member of the House will be besieged by individual employees from their respective States and districts urging them to take care of their particular people, and it is a pretty hard appeal to resist. We have had some evidences of it. As a consequence, the chances are that instead of affecting a reduction to 7,000 employees, the 15,000 will, in all probability, be increased to 17,500, and perhaps more, and of course with every increase there is a decrease in the efficiency of the service rendered. It is one of the unfortunate obstacles to economy under our form of Government.

I hope the Senator will succeed, but I am not at all hopeful of doing anything in view of that condition.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that only two weeks ago, while they were discharging employees from the War Risk Bureau as agreed to by the director, there was printed in all parts of the United States a call for 3,000 employees to come to Washington to secure positions in the Census Bureau. There was not a paper in my State that did not have an announcement in it calling attention to the fact that the Census Bureau wanted at least 3,000 additional clerks here in Washington.

Mr. NORRIS. The employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau were not selected as carefully as they probably would have been selected had there been more time. I can see how we ought to excuse a good many faults in the system. Now, the probabilities are that a great many of those employees would not be suitable, if the Senator is thinking about transferring them to the Census Bureau. As I understand it, the census employees will be selected under the civil-service rules, while these employees, or a great many of them, were not so selected. Is not that true?

Mr. SMOOT. It is true; but I am sorry to say, from information I have received, that some of the employees in the War Risk Bureau who are the least efficient remain there and some of the very best employees in that department have been discharged. The efficient ones did not have "the pull," as the Senator from Colorado says.

Mr. NORRIS. Is not that always the result where we go outside of the civil-service law and allow heads of departments to select the army of employees without regard to the civil-service law? We must expect those to stay in who have "the pull," and that does not always mean that the efficient ones stay in.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is correct in that.

Referring again to the question propounded by the Senator from Nebraska as to a summary of the pay roll, from October 23, 1919, the employees were reduced from 15,419 down to 13,111 on December 15, 1919. The monthly pay roll, including the field force, amounts to $1,380,653.96. The yearly rate was $16,567,847.52. The average annual salary of the field force was $1,857. The grand total—that is, of those in Washington and the field force—shows an average salary of $1,264 in the bureau.

Mr. President, I also have a comparison of the number of employees on the pay roll of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance December 15, 1919, with the estimated number of employees required to carry on the same work under the plan of the bill which I have just introduced. I will just give the totals again, but I want to have it incorporated in the RECORD, as it gives each division and under those divisions the functions of each of the divisions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The tables referred to are as follows:

Pay-roll summary.

Division.	Employees Oct. 23, 1919.	Employees Dec. 15, 1919.			Average annual salary.
		Number.	Monthly pay roll.	Yearly rate.
1. Actuarial	541	512	$54,074.06	$648,888.72	$1,267
2. Administration	382	363	38,472.82	461,673.84	1,272
3. Allotment and allowance	3,716	2,654	296,968.36	3,563,620.32	1,343
4. Chief clerk	359	365	26,488.12	317,857.44	$71
5. Compensation	1,960	1,575	180,416.12	2,164,993.44	1,375
6. Detail	71	60	6,148.60	73,783.20	1,230
7. Director	46	40	6,851.10	82,213.20	2,055
8. Finance	130	132	14,993.96	179,927.52	1,363
9. Insurance	5,363	4,434	466,164.90	5,593,978.80	1,262
10. Legal	387	336	42,327.26	507,927.12	1,512
11. Liaison	16	68	8,080.60	96,967.20	1,426
12. Marine	9	12	1,346.32	16,155.84	1,346
13. Medical	438	403	42,370.06	508,440.72	1,262
14. Personnel	217	218	24,936.88	299,242.56	1,373
15. Receipts and disbursements	1,679	1,821	152,758.10	1,833,097.20	1,007
Total	15,314	12,993	1,362,397.26	16,348,767.12	1,258
Field force	105	118	18,256.70	219,080.40	1,857
Grand total	15,419	13,111	1,380,653.96	16,567,847.52	1,264

Comparison of number of employees on pay roll of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance Dec. 15, 1919, with the estimated number of employees required to carry on the same work under the plan proposed.

Bureau of War Risk Insurance Dec. 15, 1919.		Estimated.
Division.[1]	Employees.	Function.[1]	Employees.
1. Actuarial	512	1. Allotment and allowance (to be divided among the War Department, Navy Department, and Coast Guard)	2,150
2. Administration	363
3. Allotment and allowance	2,654
4. Chief clerk	365
5. Compensation	1,575
6. Detail	60	2. Compensation (to be transferred to the Bureau of Pensions)	1,600
7. Director	40
8. Finance	132
9. Insurance	4,434	3. Life Insurance (to be transferred to the Post Office Department)	3,200
10. Legal	336
11. Liaison	68
12. Marine	12	4. Marine and Seamen's Insurance (to be transferred to the Shipping Board)	12
13. Medical	403
14. Personnel	218
15. Receipts and disbursements	1,821
Field force	118
Total	13,111	Total	6,962

[1] The distinction between the words "Division" and "Function" should be noted, the four functions included in the second column comprehending all the duties of the 15 divisions listed in the first column.

Mr. SMOOT. As it appears by the table, on December 15, 1919, there were 13,111 employees. Under the bill proposed by me, the total—and it is all that is asked by the departments—is 6,962 employees.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether, in the making of these transfers, it will be necessary to create new divisions in the War Department, the Navy Department, the Shipping Board, and these other boards?

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all. The divisions are made in those departments to-day and doing similar work.

Mr. OVERMAN. Does the Senator think they can do the same work under the present organization with the divisions they now have?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no question about it. There will be no new division at all. Go into the War Department, I suggest to the Senator, and ask Gen. Lord. As the Senator knows, he is one of the men in the Government service who are capable of organizing help and who aim to conserve the public funds.

Mr. OVERMAN. I agree with the Senator, and I think there is something in what the Senator says.

Mr. SMOOT. In the Navy Department it will be the same.

Mr. OVERMAN. Is it the plan to take all these records over and do the same work without having to create a new division for this particular work?

Mr. SMOOT. Absolutely. Many of the records are there at present. The original records are sent there.

Mr. OVERMAN. But the War Risk records are not there. I know the record of the soldier is there, but the records of the War Risk Bureau will necessarily have to be transferred somewhere.

Mr. SMOOT. They will be transferred as the bill provides.

Mr. OVERMAN. To what division of the War Department will they be transferred?

Mr. SMOOT. To the War Department and to the Navy Department, allotments and allowances; to the Interior Department, compensation; and to the Post Office Department, insurance.

Mr. OVERMAN. Does the Senator think there will be no new chief of division? Does he think they will just be transferred there with the different employees?

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will take the time to read my remarks in the RECORD to-morrow morning and notice the table which I have just had incorporated in the RECORD he will see just the number of extra employees which the departments have asked for to take care of this very work.

Mr. OVERMAN. In view of the transfer?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; in view of the transfer.

Mr. NORRIS. I wonder if the Senator from Utah will not have to modify a statement made in answer to the Senator from North Carolina as to whether it will not be necessary to have any new chief of division. I can see that the Senator will be correct as to the War Department and the Navy Department and the Pension Bureau probably; but take the Post Office Department, does not the Senator think that when the transfer is made there will have to be a division in the Post Office Department to look after the insurance?

Mr. SMOOT. No, I will say to the Senator; not at all.

Mr. NORRIS. They have not any division of that kind now.

Mr. SMOOT. What they will do will be to take a receipt for the monthly premium upon the insurance at the post office at which the soldier lives or at which he gets his mail. All the department will have to do will be to require that the allotment to every soldier shall be sent to the post office at which he resides and the amount of the monthly payment made, and that is reported to the Government by the postmaster just the same as if he sold so many stamps, but herein——

Mr. OVERMAN. To what department will they be sent?

Mr. SMOOT. To the Post Office Department.

Mr. OVERMAN. But they will have to go somewhere in the Post Office Department. As the Senator from Nebraska says, there is no work of this kind being done there, and therefore you will either have to establish a division for that particular work or take it under some division that already exists. What division exists in that department which can take care of this work?

Mr. SMOOT. I should perhaps modify the statement made to the Senator in this respect. There may be not a new division, but that work may be placed in a division already in the Post Office Department, with some specially qualified man who would be an employee from the number I have already stated that would be required.

Mr. NORRIS. There will be a great many of these, of course. They will handle all the insurance, and there will have to be somebody in the Post Office Department in Washington who will have charge of all the money that is coming in and to look after the details from all the post offices in the United States. I presume in some of the post offices in the large cities it will probably require the employment of some particular employee to look after it.

I think the Senator, while he will probably make a great saving, has exaggerated just a little by his statement that no new division or bureau in the Post Office Department will be necessary. I should think that the business accumulating here in Washington in the Post Office Department, if it amounts to what we all want it to amount to, would require the employment of quite a good many people, and a division or bureau in the Post Office Department would have to be established to look after it and do it properly.

Mr. SMOOT. The Postmaster General estimates for 3,200 additional employees to do the work. That is one-half of all the employees that is estimated for that will do the work that is being done now by the War Risk Bureau.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, I merely wish to ask the Senator whether he understands that under the provisions of the bill all the insurance of the soldiers all over the United States will be attended to by the local post offices?

Mr. SMOOT. That is, the premium payments can be made to the local post offices. Just for the information of the Senator I want to say that in the survey that has been made as to whether there would have to be an extra employee in every post office in the United States, the fact developed that the soldiers were distributed equally in every section of the country. Strangely, too, it developed that the deaths were almost equally distributed.

Another thing which it developed was that the allotments were about equally distributed according to numbers in all sections of the country. It developed that in many of the post offices, in a great number of them, there would be not more than eight or nine soldiers that would have to make payment of the premium monthly, and that work can be done by the employees they already have in the post office, without a question of doubt.

Why have 77 per cent of the soldiers allowed their insurance to lapse? There are some five or six reasons, but the one great reason is that soldiers have never had the experience of writing letters or doing business other than in person, and many of them that did write letters to the bureau never could get an answer.

Mr. NORRIS. That is true.

Mr. SMOOT. I had a case come into my office this morning. A soldier not only paid his insurance for the months past, but because he was going to leave his home he paid it up until June 30, 1920, but the War Risk Bureau has been after that man every month trying to get out of him the monthly payments of his premium that had already been paid.

I have copies of the letters which he has written to the bureau giving them exact copies of the receipts that they had given him, stating that the premium was paid until June 30, 1920; and yet they never ceased reminding him of his delinquencies. I have letters in which the bureau insists that men are dead when they are alive.

Mr. NORRIS. They will not believe the man is alive when he comes in person and tells them he is not dead.

Mr. SMOOT. A young Mr. Orem came into my office on his way home, and I have copies of letters which have been written to his wife insisting that he is dead.

However, Mr. President, the reason of all this is because of the plan of organization of the bureau. What can be expected when it is found that it is absolutely necessary in order to obtain the record of any soldier for any purpose to go to six jackets, traveling from one building to another, in order to get the record of the soldier? That is one reason why we have had nearly 20,000 employees at times in the bureau, tumbling over one another and making it impossible for even efficient clerks to do the proper kind of work.

Mr. President, what we need, unless this bureau is abolished, is for some one to make a complete reorganization of it from top to bottom. I know the director of the bureau; he is an honest man; he is doing the very best he can; but he has never had the experience which is necessary to organize an agency of the Government of that kind.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, does the Senator from Utah think that this remarkable deficiency could have occurred if use had been made of the so-called Overman bill, which gave the President the power to transfer and consolidate the various bureaus and departments?

Mr. SMOOT. I must say that the President had nothing to do with the War Risk Insurance Bureau. It was Congress which provided for it.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; Congress passed that law.

Mr. SMOOT. Congress passed the law creating the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, and Congress made the mistake at the time. Perhaps, I may say to the Senator, it was the best we could do then. We were embarking upon a new line of activity, and we, of course, thought the work would have to be put under one bureau. Therefore we created that bureau, and I want to take my share of the blame.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me ask the Senator if it is not true that under existing law everything which the Senator contemplates by his bill can be done?

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, there is no doubt about that at all. The President has the power. I repeat to the Senator, I want to take my share of the responsibility, for I was a member of the subcommittee that had that legislation in charge. To tell the truth, I did not know at that time that we had the agencies in the Government to do the work, or I should have insisted that the work be done by agencies which already existed.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I desire to inquire of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], if the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] will permit, whether that is one of the virtues of the Overman bill?

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I was inquiring about.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Perhaps the Senator from Nebraska did not understand me. The Senator from Nebraska inquired whether the distribution contemplated by the bill under consideration could not be accomplished under existing law; and I wanted to know from the Senator if the existing law to which he referred is the Overman bill.

Mr. NORRIS. No; I was not thinking at that time about the Overman bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Utah a question?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Under the terms of the Overman bill could not the powers and duties and functions of the War Risk Insurance Bureau be transferred to any department to which the President desires to transfer them?

Mr. SMOOT. That is true; but I do not know that the President's attention has ever been called to the matter. However, Congress, in the first place, made the mistake, and I am willing to let Congress rectify it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, as reference has been made to the Overman bill, I desire to say that I think there ought to be some such general authority granted to the President, as was recommended by Mr. Taft, to carry out just such policies as now proposed without passing a law every time some such deficiency is made manifest as that which the Senator now proposes to remedy. The President ought to have such authority, to be exercised when it is patent that money can thereby be saved and efficiency promoted.

The Overman bill expires in a few months, and I think the Senator will agree with me that there ought to be a law passed by Congress giving general authority to the President, as is proposed in this case and as was recommended by Mr. Taft and also by Mr. Roosevelt, who appreciated the difficulties confronting the Government.

Mr. NORRIS. But such authority exists now.

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes, sir; it does exist now under the Overman bill, but that will shortly expire.

If this matter had been called to the attention of the President and patent facts had been shown to him, as the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] is to-day showing them to the Senate, probably action would have been taken along this line, because it would have been evident that something of the kind ought to have been done, and he, having the authority, would probably have exercised it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as I was saying, the tables which I have asked to have printed in the RECORD without reading indicate that the proposed changes of organization would result in the elimination of practically 6,000 employees from the Government pay roll, with an annual saving in clerk hire alone of approximately seven and one-half million dollars. Not only that, but one of the best office buildings in the District of Columbia is occupied to-day by the employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. We are paying exorbitant rentals for office space in the District for other agencies of the Government. If we could get rid of this number of employees and utilize that space for other employees of the Government, while I have not figured as yet what the saving would be, it would be an immense amount of money.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I concede that, and yet if the work now done by the War Risk Insurance Bureau is transferred to the War Department, as is proposed by the bill, they will have to have three or four thousand more employees. Is there room in the War Department for those clerks?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that both the War Department and the Navy Department would require an additional number of employees to the extent of 2,150. That is their estimate.

Mr. OVERMAN. I was mistaken in the figures.

Mr. SMOOT. I predict now that before the appropriation bills are framed for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, there will be as many employees eliminated from those departments because of the lack of appropriations to pay them as will equal at least the number that they have asked for to perform this extra work.

Mr. OVERMAN. So that the Senator thinks there will be plenty of room in the War Department for the additional employees and also in the Navy Department?

Mr. SMOOT. I have not any doubt of it.

No reference has been made in this connection to any subjects not directly related to the proposal to discontinue the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. There are, however, a number of matters which bear indirectly on the same problem which doubtless should have attention when the proposed bill is under consideration by the Senate. These include the transfer of the Public Health Service to the Interior Department, a change which is contemplated by pending legislation—Senate bill 3476—and the transfer of the functions of the Federal Board for Vocational Education to the same department, where they may be coordinated with the administration of compensation and pension legislation and with the activities of the Bureau of Education.

I thank the Senate for giving me its attention.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before the Senator concludes I wish to ask him about one feature of the proposed legislation which he has not discussed, a feature in which I think we all have a very deep interest. I refer to the transfer of the insurance part of the work of the War Risk Insurance Bureau to the Post Office Department. The Senator mentioned the fact that there has been a large number of lapses in insurance policies. I think that is regretted by everybody who has given it any consideration. It seems to me almost unthinkable that soldiers who were given the opportunity of taking out Government insurance have permitted it to lapse. After talking with many of them, I believe it is the fault to a great extent of the Government that that is the case. I know that neither the Senator from Utah nor the Senate nor the House would want to take any steps that would have a tendency to increase the number of such lapses; in fact, if we can do anything to prevent their increase we should do so.

Mr. SMOOT. And we should provide for the reinstatement of lapsed policies.

Mr. NORRIS. And as the Senator suggests, where lapses have taken place we ought to provide for their reinstatement, if possible, so that the insurance policies may be continued to the soldiers. Does the bill contemplate anything along that line?

Mr. SMOOT. The specific appropriations which have been made and which will be transferred to the Post Office Department in case the bill should become a law take care of all the necessary advertisement work, and of all the field work that would be required to look after the soldiers and endeavor to get them to reinstate their insurance. Not only that, but most liberal provisions are offered to the soldiers for the reinstatement of their insurance.

It is often said that it is the soldier only who is being looked after, but I wish to say that it is a mighty good thing for the Government as well, for every soldier who came back from the war came back in perfect health; they are all young men, and they are the best insurance risks in the world.

Mr. NORRIS. I think that is right.

Mr. SMOOT. And I think, if they all hold their insurance, say three or four million of them, that that branch of the work will be self-sustaining from now on.

Mr. NORRIS. There is no reason why it should not be.

Mr. SMOOT. No; and I will say to the Senator that we have provided ample means to take care of that feature.

Mr. NORRIS. Will there be any means provided by which the field work may be prosecuted so that the question may be taken up with each individual soldier with a view of inducing him to reinstate and carry his insurance?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. NORRIS. I think one of the reasons—and there are a good many, perhaps—why soldiers have permitted their policies to lapse is inefficiency on the part of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. For instance, the Senator has referred to letters never having been answered; to soldiers who have paid their premiums in advance and yet are being dunned for premiums which they had already paid. Of course they become disgusted with such a proceeding and cease their connection with it. All that probably would be avoided by the Senator's bill—it would be by any efficient method that was invoked—but there ought to be something done, some sort of a campaign inaugurated, it may be, to induce the soldiers who have permitted their policies to lapse to reinstate them, and then the law ought to provide favorable means for their reinstatement.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, could not that be done by circularizing the soldiers?

Mr. NORRIS. I think that would help a great deal.

Mr. OVERMAN. I was once insured in a company, which I think is one of the most successful insurance companies in the world—and the reason the Senator's bill commends itself to me so strongly is because of the plan proposed for collecting the insurance—which can and does write insurance because they have no agents. They do it all by printed matter. It is a very strong company and is conducting a great business in this country. It is known as the Postal Insurance Co. Instead of employing special agents at $5 a day and expenses or $1,600 or $2,000 or $2,400 a year, they use the mails and printed matter. So by issuing circulars and sending them to each soldier and explaining the matter to him we could save a great deal of expense and call the matter to his attention in that manner.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want it distinctly understood that my interest in this legislation is not only for the benefit of the Government, but is primarily for the benefit of the soldier who served the Government during the recent war.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill introduced by the Senator from Utah will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

RECLASSIFICATION OF SALARIES.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, on yesterday I called attention to Senate joint resolution 135, and I believe it was understood that it would be taken up to-day during the morning hour. If there is no objection, I should like to have it taken up now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Mexico asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate joint resolution 135. Is there any objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 135) extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public, No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the time for filing of the final report to Congress of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public, No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, be, and the same is hereby, extended to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I will state that I am calling up this joint resolution at the request of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. He is not present, and will not be here during the day; but before leaving the city he requested me to bring this matter to the attention of the Senate when an opportunity should be presented.

This joint resolution was considered by the Committee on Appropriations. There was a full attendance of the committee, and while I do not know that I should make any disclosure as to the attitude of the committee, I think I am safe in saying that only one member of the committee made any objection to the passage of the joint resolution.

The purpose of the joint resolution is simply to extend the time for filing the final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification and Adjustment of Salaries in the District of Columbia. It does not require any additional appropriation, but simply extends the time for filing the report. It is the unanimous opinion of the commission that the time should be extended, and in my judgment it will be of very great service to the Committees on Appropriations of both the Senate and the House if the time is extended so that the commission may submit a rounded-out report.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if he believes that the work can be finished in the time that is asked for?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Oh, I think in even less time.

Mr. GRONNA. I am asking the question, because I believe an extension was granted last year.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. No; the Senator must have something else in mind. This commission was only created on the 4th of last March, and was organized on the next day, and has been proceeding with its work all during the summer and up to the present moment. The commission is in the active discharge of its duties at the present time, and has quite a detailed force engaged in this work.

Mr. GRONNA. I am quite sure that an additional appropriation was asked. I think it was an appropriation of $50,000, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator is right about that; but there was no extension of time granted when that additional appropriation was asked.

Mr. GRONNA. I have no objection, as the Senator knows, to extending the time. I simply wanted to know if, in the judgment of the Senator, the time specified in the joint resolution is sufficient?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have not the slightest doubt about it. On the contrary, I am quite sure that the final report will come in before the expiration of the 60 days requested in this joint resolution.

Mr. GRONNA. Then I have no objection.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I hope that the final report will be submitted in not exceeding 30 days from the present time.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on March 1, 1919, the joint resolution creating a Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries was enacted into law, and approved on the same date. The result of that legislation is not apparent to Senators or Congressmen unless they have followed its history from the time it was passed and the organization begun down to and including to-day.

I knew at the time that it would bring a great deal of trouble to the Government and dissatisfaction among the employees, and I had an idea just how the law would work out. This whole question has virtually been handled by one Keating, a former Congressman from Colorado, and Luther Steward, the head of the National Federation of Government Employees. I still am going to hope that the Members of the Senate who are on that commission will pay little attention to the reports that have been made through the two gentlemen I have mentioned, and so widely published through the press of the country. I have upon my desk the clippings of statements made through them, published in Washington papers and some outside papers; and I want to say that if there ever was a scheme or propaganda started here with the avowed purpose of bringing every employee of the Government into a labor organization and making them dissatisfied with the salaries they are receiving from the Government, it has been under the joint resolution of March 1, 1919.

On Saturday afternoon I wanted to get my home over the telephone. I tried to get the telephone operator here at the Capitol, and as I picked up the telephone receiver no one answered, but there were two parties talking on the phone. I put up the phone, thinking they would be through in a few minutes. I waited about five minutes, and took up the phone again, and the same two parties were talking. I tried the third time, and as I put the receiver to my ear I heard at one end the voice of a woman, and at the other end the voice of an employee of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, and I heard the young lady say: "Well, are you going to take care of me? I want at least $1,200." The answer was: "My dear, you need not worry about $1,200. We are going to see that every employee of the Government gets $1,320."

There was a colored woman up at my house calling on our colored cook not so very long ago, and after she left we were informed that every charwoman in the United States was going to receive $1,320 per year from now on, and they were going to join the union, and the union was going to see that the lowest salary paid by the Government of the United States, no matter if it was a charwoman, and worked only four hours a day, should be $1,320. She asked the cook, "Why do you work for $50 a month? Why don't you get in with the union, and get employment with the Government at a salary of $1,320, with two months' leave of absence?"

The other day there was published in every newspaper in Washington, at least—and I noticed the same thing in the New York papers—an article headed, "United States clerks pay raised 72 cents from 1823 to 1916." Let me read what is said by these officials, if they can be so termed:

Average salaries of the Government clerical force increased from $1,137.28 in 1823 to $1,138 in 1916, an increase of 72 cents, according to figures presented to the Joint Congressional Commission on Reclassification of Salaries in the District to-day by the Government examiners.

While the pay of Congressmen has been increased more than 700 per cent since 1833 and the pay of Justices of the Supreme Court more than 300 per cent, examiners in the Government service to-day feel that they are "left at the post," U. J. Biller of the Pension Office told the commission at the hearing.

"Some of the examiners in the older bureaus are still working at approximately the same wage received by their predecessors for similar or less complicated work back in 1833, or even as early as 1822," declared the brief presented by Mr. Biller on behalf of the examiners.

Then they go on with a long story, which was printed throughout the United States.

I do not doubt, Mr. President, but what the people of the United States, seeing that bold statement, believe that it is true. Well, it is not true, and I want to make the statement now of the facts which examinations will show.

The Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries in the District of Columbia has released for publication the statement that "the average salaries of the Government clerical force increased from $1,137.28 in 1823 to $1,138 in 1916, an increase of 72 cents." This statement is thoroughly misleading and, in fact, involves actual distortion of the truth.

The number of employees in the Federal service in Washington in 1823, and for several decades afterwards, was very small. Twenty-eight years later, in 1851, according to a writer in the Saturday Evening Post, issue of December 13, 1919, there were in the whole Treasury Department only 437 employees. In the Department of the Interior there were 413 workers. In the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, in the War Department, there were 13 employees; in the Engineering Department, 6 employees; and in the Ordnance Department, 9. In the Navy Department there was a total of 54 employees. In the Department of State there were 27. The Postmaster General had a force of 80 persons, including himself. The force of the Department of Justice consisted of 4. Taken altogether, the entire departmental service in Washington amounted to about 1,100 people. This was in 1851. Eleven hundred employees is only 20 per cent of the number now working in only one division of one of the bureaus of the Treasury Department. The total number of Federal employees now working in Washington is about 100,000. It should be noticed, however, that the Reclassification Commission has compared the salaries of the whole Government service at different dates, not merely those of employees working in the District of Columbia. The figure for 1916, $1,138, "of all employees within the retirement group in all departments," is an average salary for a quarter of a million of Government workers, including postal carriers and clerks and all other Federal employees scattered throughout the country.

In 1851, and at earlier periods, the nature of the work performed by the handful of employees then engaged in the Government's business was very different from the work done at present. At that time, with only from six to a dozen employees in most bureaus or departments, every man had to be highly trained and had to perform duties equivalent to supervisory tasks. Now, one or two supervisors oversee the work of hundreds of clerks whose jobs have been reduced to routine by an elaborate subdivision of labor. In the Government as well as in commercial concerns introduction of labor-saving devices of many kinds has diluted the labor force by making it possible to utilize low-paid clerical labor, where formerly highly skilled workers were necessary. For example, the Treasury Department a number of years ago was still balancing its books and clearing its checks by laborious hand methods. A clerk could scarcely learn to do the work effectively within three or four years. After a more modern system was installed in the Treasurer's office the bulk of the work could be done more rapidly and economically by clerks operating calculating machines who were able to master their tasks in a week or two. Naturally this lower grade of clerical help does not need to be paid so much as the highly skilled office force of a generation or two generations ago.

The Reclassification Commission has compared the total pay roll as it stood in 1823 with the total pay roll in 1916, without knowing the kind of duties performed by the persons whose salaries are compared. In other words, an investigating body whose primary business is to classify salaries according to the nature of the work done is making an absurd attempt to contrast the pay of total groups without discrimination. No one can gather the faintest idea whether the kinds of work performed by a majority of the men and women on the Federal pay roll in 1823 is comparable with the kinds of work performed by those on the pay roll at present, for the reason that no information as to the nature of the work performed is available for more than a very few years previous to the present time.

The information, however, which is available indicates that the statements sponsored by the Reclassification Commission are false. It is possible to secure precise figures for the salaries paid on statutory rolls to the clerical force in a number of Government departments in the year 1893. These are the earliest figures that I have before me. A comparison reveals that in those offices where the nature of the work performed then and now is of the same grade there has been an actual increase in average annual pay. The figures further reveal when compared how easy it would be, taking offices where the nature and kind of task performed have radically altered, to show an apparent decrease. The figures of 1893 and 1920 that have been compared have been taken of necessity from statutory rolls. If the statutory salaries have increased, certainly the salaries of persons paid from lump-sum appropriations have increased far more. No one familiar with departmental conditions would challenge this statement.

The following examples reveal the trend of salaries in the 27 years between 1893 and 1920. The 1893 figures are taken from compilations made by the Dockery Commission. The 1920 figures are taken from the current digest of appropriations. These figures are for the clerical forces in the Land Office, the Bureau of Pensions, and the Division of Loans and Currency. The Land Office and the Bureau of Pensions were chosen as examples because they were specifically mentioned in the statement given out by the Reclassification Commission. In each case the positions compared are purely clerical; that is to say, those below supervisory positions. In 1893 there were in the Land Office 316 employees whose average pay was $1,251 a year. In 1920 there are 449 employees in the Land Office receiving an average salary, including bonus, of $1,444 a year, an increase of 15 per cent in the average pay, and the increase in the average pay tells a Senator or a Congressman but little. Anyone who has been in the service of the Government and passing upon appropriations for the payment of the employees of the Government of the United States knows that the amount of salary which a man receives when he first enters the Government service does not remain at that figure long. It is one eternal advance from class 1 to class 2, from class 2 to class 3, and from class 3 to class 4, and then further increases in salary by advancements that are made by every head of every bureau of this Government.

In the Bureau of Pensions there were, in 1893, 1,613 employees whose average salary was $1,229 a year. In 1920 there are in the Bureau of Pensions 829 employees whose average basic pay is $1,315, and whose average pay including the bonus is $1,555 a year, showing an increase of 7 per cent in basic pay and 27 per cent in actual pay.

In the Division of Loans and Currency the statutory rolls carried, in 1893, 65 employees, whose average salary was $919. In 1920 there are in the Division of Loans and Currency 690 employees, whose average basic pay is $1,127, and whose compensation including bonus is $1,365 a year, showing an increase, within 27 years, of 23 per cent in basic pay and 49 per cent in total pay.

The foregoing examples show that, within the last quarter century there has undoubtedly been an increase of compensation to clerical employees where the work performed has remained comparable. On the other hand, it is possible, by selecting offices where great expansion has occurred and the work now is of a different nature from that of an earlier period, to reveal an apparent decrease in average pay. For example, in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, in 1893, there were altogether only 11 employees on the statutory roll.

These 11 employees include a director at $4,500 a year, an assistant director at $2,250 a year——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUTHERLAND in the chair). The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Senator will suspend for a moment while the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is House bill 3184.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] is very anxious that the joint resolution shall pass to-day, and if the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] does not object I should like to ask unanimous consent to lay aside the unfinished business until I can conclude my statement.

Mr. NELSON. How long does the Senator expect to take?

Mr. SMOOT. I think I can get through in half an hour. I am not going into all the details. I could talk, I will say to the Senator, for the next week, and defeat the joint resolution entirely, but I do not intend to do that. I do not want to have it said that I was responsible after this whole proposition comes to the Senate and proves to be an absolute failure and every employee of the Government is dissatisfied with Congress because it does not follow a report that has been virtually prepared by Mr. Keating and Mr. Luther Stewart, that, if additional time had been granted, the commissioners would have been able to have made a more exhaustive study of the work of these gentlemen and might have come to a different conclusion if the salaries of the employees had been continued two months longer.

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator will assure me that he will not take more than half an hour I will consent to have the unfinished business temporarily laid aside.

Mr. SMOOT. If at the end of half an hour the Senator wants to go on, I will suspend.

Mr. NELSON. Will the Senator let us have a vote then on the joint resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. I am perfectly willing to have a vote on it then.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I thank the Senator from Utah for making the request which he has made, and I beg to assure the Senator in charge of the unfinished business that we will not consume any great length of time in the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. NELSON. Then I ask unanimous consent, in view of what has been said, that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside that the Senate may consider the pending joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, with the understanding that no other business will be transacted except the disposal of the joint resolution, I shall not object.

Mr. NELSON. That is my request.

Mr. SMOOT. I will assure the Senator that nothing else will be transacted.

Mr. NELSON. Is the request granted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Minnesota to temporarily lay aside the unfinished business is granted.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, when the hour of 2 o'clock arrived I was calling attention to the example in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and had stated that there were altogether only 11 employees on the statutory roll working in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in 1893.

Those 11 employees included a director, at $4,500 a year; an assistant director, at $2,250 a year; a cost accountant at $2,000 a year; and a number of high-priced clerks. The average pay of those employees in 1893 was $1,586 a year.

At present, in 1920, there are 420 statutory employees in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The average pay of those employees is only $688 a year, whereas the average employee on the statutory roll of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in the year 1893 received $1,586. The $688 a year is less than half the average pay of the 11 employees on the rolls in 1893. That is due to the fact, however, that while the number of higher-paid positions has expanded only slightly, there has been a vast increase in the number of lower-grade clerks and helpers.

In the figures for 1920, for example, there are included 94 charwomen at $300 a year, 85 laborers at $540 a year, and 80 watchmen at $720 a year. The great expansion in the number of the low-grade positions accounts for the low average pay of the group. Obviously such an example can not be held up to the public as a fair indication of the trend of Government salaries.

The figures that I have given cover the last 25 years of Government service. It is interesting to notice, however, that the Reclassification Commission, going back to 1823, released the statement that the average salary paid in the Pension Bureau, then a division of the War Department, amounted to $1,146.67 a year. The average salary of the clerical force of the Pension Bureau in 1920, taking the basic salary alone, amounts to $1,316 a year. Assuming that the Reclassification Commission is correct in its figures for 1823, there has been in the Pension Bureau an increase between 1823 and 1920 of $186 in the basic pay. Adding to this the bonus, the increase becomes $408 a year. The increase of $408 in the average pay occurred in the 100 years when in the Pension Bureau, as in every other governmental office, there was a steady decline in the degree of skill and special training needed to qualify for a position with the Government.

Any comparison between the salaries of other years and the present time must, to be statistically balanced, be based on pay for similar or identical work. A striking piece of evidence may be found in the figures which have been collected for the years 1914 and 1918. The figures which are given in an accompanying table show the compensation given to employees working on specific jobs, such as typing, stenography, correspondence, indexing and filing, the operation of calculating machines, and so on.

The table shows that in 1914 a group of 9,899 employees was receiving an average pay of $968 a year. Four years later, in 1919, a group of 17,853 employees, performing precisely the same tasks, received an average pay of $1,041 a year. These figures do not take into account the bonus which has been added. It is fair to assume that if the average pay of these employees was $1,041 in 1918, it is not less and it is probably more in 1920. If we should add the bonus allowed in 1920 to the average salary paid these various groups of employees, the total pay now would be $1,267 a year, an increase of $299 a year over the average pay of 1914. This disposes effectively of any claim that work of a given grade is to-day paid less than in former times.

These statistics show conclusively that the statement given publicity by the Reclassification Commission does not accord with the facts. It is based on most hasty and sloppy statistical methods and is only serving to mislead Government employees and the public.

Here I want to pause, Mr. President, to say that I know they have never been put out to the public as a result of an investigation made by the commissioners themselves, because I know the Senators who are members of that commission too well to believe that if they had gone into the details of this subject they ever would have allowed such a statement to be made.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am sure the Senator from Utah is making what he believes to be a very fair statement, and I would not interrupt him except for the fact that I feel quite sure he has not been fully informed as to the statement to which he has been referring.

The published statement which the Senator presented in his opening remarks was not issued by the Reclassification Commission. It went out by no authority from that commission. My recollection is that the statement only purports to be a statement gotten up by one group of employees who were seeking to have their salaries readjusted and it was only presented to the commission. The commission itself has never given any consideration to the statement which was presented to it further than to understand its contents and put the matter on file for future consideration and verification.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will allow me, I will say that I have 200, at least, of the clippings, and I know from what source they come just as well as the Senator knows. It has been persistently given out to the public through the press that these are the figures and the results after investigation made by the Reclassification Commission. I know that the members of that commission have not given them consideration, as I have already stated.

Mr. KING. Will my colleague yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to his colleague?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I have heard the criticism made—and I have felt there was some little justice in it—that certain persons were taking the work out of the hands of Senators and some of the other responsible members of the commission and carrying on a propaganda looking toward securing certain benefits for the employees of the Government that perhaps might be in excess of what justice demands. At any rate, the columns of the press for weeks, and I was about to say for months, have teemed with statements from some persons or individuals with respect to reclassification and the work of this commission.

Mr. SMOOT. I dare say that there are nine hundred and ninety-nine employees of the Government out of every one thousand who believe that the statements which have been made through the press have been sanctioned and issued by the commission. Mr. President, I do not know what will be the effect of the dissatisfaction which is going to result amongst the employees of the Government when the final conclusions are made known. I know that no good effect can follow.

I know another thing, that the commissioners will never report to Congress the recommendations that have been made as recorded in the press for the last few months. I have sufficient confidence in them to say that no such recommendations will ever be made to Congress.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. I have only 10 minutes, if the Senator will pardon me.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am sure the distinguished Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] will not limit the Senator from Utah to half an hour.

Mr. SMOOT. I think the Senator will do so. We are acting under a unanimous-consent agreement, and I do not want to trench upon the time.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I think it advisable at this time, Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah will permit, to make a statement that the commission itself has never authorized the giving out of any report which has been the foundation for the newspaper articles which have appeared. Those articles themselves, upon close examination, will absolve the commission from having taken any such action; but I must confess that a great many of them are so prepared that the casual reader would conclude that the commission is responsible for the statements made. I think it only fair, however, to the Senate and the country that they should understand that the commission is in no wise responsible for any of these statements.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator from New Mexico that no ordinary citizen and no employee of the Government will read the statements as published in the newspapers without coming to the conclusion that the commission did authorize them, for many of them so state.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I think the Senator from Utah is quite right about that.

Mr. SMOOT. And I have thought many a time had I been a member of the commission I would have made a public announcement to the effect that such statements were not authorized by the commission.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. And the purpose of my rising at this moment is to make precisely that statement.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have here a statement showing the average salary paid to Government employees in 1914 and 1918 for certain classes of work; also the amount and percentages of salary increases between 1914 and 1918; and I ask unanimous consent that the table be published in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table referred to is as follows:

Statement showing average salaries paid in 1914 and 1918 for certain classes of work and the amount and percentage of salary increases between 1914 and 1918.

Description of duties performed.	1914			1918
	Number of employees.	Average salary.	Total.	Number of employees.	Average salary.	Total.
1. Preparing schedules or registers of accounting documents or transactions	69	$1,244	$85,824	124	$1,235	$153,131
2. Posting and balancing detail ledgers	378	1,273	481,405	488	1,322	645,111
3. Journalizing routine transactions	91	1,309	119,093	163	1,314	214,165
4. Searching for errors, making trial balances	106	1,409	149,374	181	1,393	252,212
5. Plain copying on the typewriter	415	1,014	420,715	1,755	1,142	2,005,185
6. Taking and transcribing routine dictation	1,698	1,070	1,816,581	3,434	1,134	3,894,504
7. Expert stenography	89	1,292	114,988	563	1,311	737,874
8. Composing and typing routine correspondence	280	1,303	364,894	538	1,361	732,184
9. Composing and dictating correspondence	797	1,452	1,157,458	1,025	1,537	1,574,868
10. Secretaries to administrative officers	172	1,590	273,412	294	1,665	489,538
11. Plain copying—filling forms	377	1,076	405,285	588	1,121	658,992
12. Indexing and filing, comparing, verifying	1,454	1,156	1,681,147	2,120	1,145	2,428,035
13. Operating tabulating or calculating machines	140	998	139,662	209	1,096	229,085
14. Operating addressing and duplicating machines	97	870	84,424	265	994	263,410
15. Preparing and verifying pay rolls	125	1,251	156,315	807	1,161	937,104
16. Messengers	1,055	625	659,656	1,979	634	1,254,401
17. Unskilled laborers	2,135	550	1,174,635	2,502	615	1,537,931
18. Elevator operators	55	686	37,730	158	705	111,390
19. Watchmen	366	696	254,826	660	717	473,220
	9,899	968	9,577,423	17,853	1,041	18,592,400

Actual increase over 1914 salary (excluding bonus)	$73
Percentage increase over 1914 salary (excluding bonus)	per cent.. 8
Actual increase over 1914 salary if 1920 bonus were added	$299
Percentage increase over 1914 salary if 1920 bonus were added	per cent.. 31

Mr. SMOOT. In this connection I wish to say that the figures which are here presented do not in any way, shape, or form indicate what the individual employees have received by way of increase of salary or, as I stated a little while ago, the promotions of such employees.

Go into any department or bureau of the Government, particularly one created in the last four years, and see how many employees you can find who are drawing the same salary which they drew when they originally entered the service. I can not say what the average increase in salary has been, but I can say that the employees who have had the favor of the head of a division or of a bureau, no matter how incompetent or competent they may be, have been the ones who have received the increases.

I desire to say to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] that ever since I have been a member of the Committee on Appropriations I have stated upon this floor time and time again that there were employees in the Government service who are underpaid, and that they ought to have received increases of compensation long ago; but for one that is underpaid there are ten who could not make as much money anywhere else on the earth as they are making here in the District of Columbia under Government employment. In making that statement I do not take into consideration the 30 days' leave of absence that is given to them all; I do not take into consideration the sick leave that is given them; and if the commission follows the report and adopts the recommendations of Mr. Keating and Mr. Steward every one of those employees will take the full 00 days' allowance. That would mean that the Government employees are to work but 10 months instead of 12 as in private institutions and industries.

I have time and time again stated that there ought to be an investigation into every bureau and every department of the Government as to the salaries that were being paid. Any Senator who is familiar with the workings of the departments, anyone who goes to the departments for information, soon becomes familiar with the employees who do the work. It is seldom the head of the department; it is not the man who gets the largest salary; but it is the man or the woman who has been there for years and years and who knows the workings of the department from A to Z.

In other words, in my opinion those employees were most unfortunate when they landed in positions in the departments of our Government. They ought to have entered into affairs of everyday life and business to battle for positions with their fellow men; but they came here and entered one of the departments, thinking that the Government was at least a safe and sure paymaster and would be as long as they remained. A man is not in the Government service for many years, however, before he becomes an absolute machine; he loses confidence in himself; he is fearful that if he loses his job in Washington he can not make a living for himself or his family elsewhere. It would be a godsend to every young man who has accepted a position under the Government with a view of remaining here and making Government service his life vocation if he were forcibly separated from the Government service and compelled to use his energy and talents in battling with the outside world. Any man who stands at the head of a bureau or department of the Government who will kick a young man out of the Government service and force him into the active business life of this country, unless he is here for the purpose of acquiring an education, will confer upon the employee the greatest favor that he could possibly render him.

The trouble is, Mr. President, that the employees of the Government soon learn that it is not the policy of the Government to keep work current; the policy is never to finish a job until it is absolutely necessary to do so; and they have always unfinished work as a basis every year for demands for larger appropriations. I wish to say to Senators now that if we do not call a halt, and if we do not exercise more care in spending the taxes of the American people than we have in the past, there is going to be more Bolshevism in the United States than there ever has been. There is extravagance on every hand; there is waste everywhere; and about the only bills concerning which there is any quibble in the Senate are bills carrying appropriations of less than $100. It is understood that if they carry $1,000,000 or more there will be no objection to them at all. I remember the time when a bill that carried $500,000 or $1,000,000 was scrutinized most closely by Congress, but now little attention is paid to a measure appropriating money unless the sum is less than $100,000.

Mr. President, I am going to allow the resolution to pass before the 12th of the present month; I am not going to occupy the time of the Senate further, but I wish to say that in looking up the record I find that there is just about money enough left from the appropriation to pay the salaries for the next 60 days, the extension asked for in the pending resolution. Why should we save that money? It would be a disgrace to Congress to save a dollar of an appropriation already made, but it would go back into the Treasury, and would relieve the taxpayers of this country just that much.

Mr. THOMAS. It would establish a bad precedent.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, as the Senator from Colorado suggests, it would establish a bad precedent.

Mr. President, the hour of half past 2 o'clock has arrived, and I can not start upon another branch of this subject in the time allotted to me. I wish to thank the Senator from Minnesota for allowing the unfinished business to be temporarily laid aside until half past 2. We will just have time, I will say to the Senator from New Mexico, to pass the resolution now, and then take up the unfinished business.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Utah for his courtesy in permitting the resolution to come up at this time, and I also thank the Senator from Minnesota. I do not believe that it is necessary to make any statement further than has been made. I wish to assure the Senator from Utah, however, that I hope the decisions which he reached when this commission was first organized will not be proven to be erroneous. The Senator from Utah was a member of the committee which created this commission and knew what its personnel would be before the appropriation was made. The commission has rather looked upon the Senator from Utah as one of its patriarchs, one of the fathers of the movement, and we have been looking to the Senator from Utah for that hearty support for the work of the commission which the commission will hope to receive from the Senate. I still believe that when the result comes in the Senator from Utah will find that some of his apprehensions have proven to be misapprehensions.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that I am going to hope so.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am sure the Senator will; and with all goodness of grace I again thank the Senator from Utah for his kindness in permitting this matter to come to a vote at this time.

Mr. President, I wish to say that a similar joint resolution has passed the House, and has come over to the Senate, and is in the hands of the Committee on Appropriations. The Committee on Appropriations considered the pending joint resolution and reported it out, and, of course, there is no reason why the Committee on Appropriations should further consider the joint resolution which came from the House. I therefore move that the Committee on Appropriations be discharged from the further consideration of House joint resolution 263, and that it be substituted for Senate joint resolution 135, now under consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 263) extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senate joint resolution 135 will be postponed indefinitely.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] desires to address the Senate on the pending bill. I will ask him if we can not first take up and dispose of the amendments over which there is no controversy; or does the Senator prefer to go on now?

Mr. LENROOT. I should prefer to go on now, because I have only been intending to discuss in this general debate some of the principal amendments, and I should not care to say offhand that there would be no controversy about some of those that I have not discussed.

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator prefers to go on, very well.

Mr. LENROOT. I should like simply to conclude my speech.

Mr. President, yesterday when I yielded the floor I had been discussing the amendments proposed by the Senate committee that change the license that may be granted under this bill from a 50-year franchise or license to a perpetual license. I shall not discuss that matter further, because in conversation between the Senator from Minnesota and myself I think we will have no difficulty in coming to an agreement upon it.

The next matter to which I wish to call attention is the one relating to contracts extending beyond the life of the license. Under the terms of the House bill it is provided that the licensee may, with the joint approval of the State commission having authority and the commission created by this bill, approve contracts extending beyond the life of the franchise. That is to say, at the end of 45 years, we will say, it is proposed to make a new contract for 20 years for the power created by the dam licensed, and under the House bill that is permitted, provided both the Federal and State agencies approve; but I am very much surprised to find that the committee has proposed an amendment striking out the Federal approval of such a contract and permitting the State authority alone to approve a contract made by the licensee that may extend for any time. It might extend for 50 years beyond the term of the license.

That being so, of course, the argument that this is a 50-year franchise, and that the Government is free at the end of that term to take it over and utilize the power created by the dam as it sees fit, is absolutely fallacious, because the State authority might approve a contract running for 50 years, and the Government, if it took over the dam, would be compelled to carry out that contract, irrespective of whether it was a remunerative one or not. Of course, one can see that if the Government were to take it over, if the Government had given the two-year notice that it would take it over, the licensees would not be concerned with what the rates were. They perhaps would be perfectly willing, if the Government took it over, to agree with the State regulating commission for a rate that would be absurdly low, in order to punish the Government for taking over the property.

I hope, therefore, that that amendment proposed by the committee will not be adopted, and that the language found in the original House bill will stand.

This brings me to the only other proposition that I wish to discuss at this time, the one that was discussed at length yesterday by the Senator from Minnesota, and that relates to the compensation that may be charged under the license.

This proposition with reference to compensation and the duration of the license has been the stumblingblock for all these years between the House and the Senate.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, will the Senator please call attention to the section he is discussing?

Mr. LENROOT. Section 10, on pages 18 and 19.

The House has always insisted upon two things: First, that the franchise or license should be for a definite term, and that at the end of that term the Government should be free to deal with the subject matter; secondly, that the power that has authority under the legislation to grant the license should have the discretion—not a mandatory duty, but should have the discretion—to exact a charge for the consent or the privilege that is granted.

It has been contended, and was contended, I think, by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] yesterday, that the Federal Government had no constitutional authority to exact anything more than such compensation as was necessary to reimburse it for the administrative expenses that were incurred; but no one has ever been able to furnish to either House of Congress any authority from any court limiting the power of Congress in any such respect.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. LENROOT. I do.

Mr. CURTIS. I should like to call the attention of the Senator also to the fact that this bill covers water-power sites on Indian reservations, where the property clearly belongs to the Indians, and they are entitled to payment for whatever is taken.

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. NELSON. That is left in the bill. Provision is made for that.

Mr. CURTIS. That is under the license clause only.

Mr. NELSON. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. I might as well come to that now. Here is a power site on tribal lands belonging to Indians on a reservation. Under the language of the bill as it comes to us from the House this commission would have the authority and it would be its duty in protecting the rights of the Indians to make an annual charge based upon the value of that power site; but in the proposed Senate amendment striking out all of the House provision we find this language:

> That the licensee shall pay for the license herein granted such reasonable annual charges as may be fixed by the commission, for the purpose of reimbursing the United States for the cost of administration of the act in relation to water powers developed under its jurisdiction, in the proportion that the water power developed by the project covered by said license bears to the total water power developed by all projects licensed under the act, and for that purpose such charges may be readjusted from time to time, not oftener than once in two years; the licensee shall also pay for the use and occupation of any public lands and lands in reservations, except tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations, necessary for the development of the project covered by the license such reasonable annual charges based upon the actual value of the Government lands used as may be fixed by the commission; but in no event shall the annual charge for the foregoing exceed 25 cents per developed horsepower: Provided, That when licenses are issued involving the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States or tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations the commission shall fix a reasonable annual charge for the use thereof, and such charges may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter in a manner to be described in each license.

It will be observed that the policy of Congress, if this is adopted, will be that there shall be a maximum of 25 cents per horsepower upon public land, and while there is no limitation upon the amount that may be charged upon Indian land, the rule or standard is laid down that would undoubtedly be followed in the case of the Indian land.

But, Mr. President, to get back to the legal contention that is made that the Federal Government has no power or authority to exact a charge upon navigable streams over and beyond the reasonable cost of the administration of the law, the Senator from Minnesota yesterday very frankly admitted that wherever the United States itself erects the dam it may sell or utilize the surplus water, may itself create electric power and may sell that power; and when the Senator admits that it necessarily follows, it seems to me, that he must also admit that when we choose an agent to do that which the Government itself might do we may give to the agent the whole or any portion of that which the Government itself might take. That has been well established in numberless decisions. I have some of them upon my desk, but I am not going to take the time to read them. However, it is well settled that wherever the Government, State or Federal, either itself erects the dam or grants authority to some private individual to do so it may reserve to itself the surplus water power created by that dam and may dispose of it.

What is the theory of granting these licenses? So far as navigable streams are concerned, it is based wholly upon the theory that the erection of these dams will aid navigation. Otherwise it is admitted that we have no jurisdiction to authorize the obstruction of a navigable stream. All will admit that the Congress of the United States has no authority to authorize the creation of a dam on a navigable stream for the production of water power alone.

Unless navigation is connected with it in the legislation and is the primary purpose of it we are wholly without power. So whenever we grant a license under this bill to an individual or a corporation for the erection of a dam across a navigable stream it is upon the theory that that obstruction of the navigable stream will be an aid to navigation, that we delegate to an agency of the Government, which the licensee becomes, the right to do that which the Government itself might directly do if it saw fit. Conceded, as it is, that if the Government did it directly we could utilize all of the water power created and sell it on such terms as we saw fit, or refuse to sell it at all, it clearly follows that in selecting an agency to do that which the Government itself might do we may say to that agent, "As a reward for thus aiding in navigation by the creation of this dam you may retain for yourself 10 per cent, 15 per cent, or 75 per cent of the surplus water or the power created by the use of the surplus water." We may say to that agent, "In consideration of our delegating to you this authority, instead of doing it ourselves, you shall pay to us 10 per cent, or 25 per cent, as the case may be, of either your revenues, or a given sum, measured by the horsepower created." It seems so clear to me, Mr. President, that as a legal proposition I do not believe there can be any possible question concerning the right of the Congress to enact this legislation.

But it is said that it would be most inequitable to take compensation for the privilege thus granted. Let us see. I do not contend for a moment that the water powers of this country should be utilized for the purpose of securing revenue for the Government. I fully agree with those who contend that the consumer should have the benefit of the low-priced water powers of this country, and just in so far as the consumer does or will get the benefit of a nominal charge, I am in full agreement with those who so contend.

But, Mr. President, there are many, many cases where, under this amendment proposed by the Senate committee, the consumer will not get the benefit, but it is a clear gift to the water-power corporations who become licensees under this bill, enabling them to make vast profits and to cover up those profits so that under the terms of the bill relating to an investment and the right of the Government to take it over the Government itself at no time can secure any benefit from this great concession. The result would be, under the Senate committee amendment, that we would hand this great resource belonging to the people of this country over to these water-power companies, with the opportunity to make vast and exorbitant returns for themselves, with no power upon the part of either State or Federal Government to give to the consumer the benefit of this cheap utility, but merely make it possible for it to be used to enrich the licensees.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. KING. The Senator concedes, does he not, that if the utility to which he refers, the power plant or the electric-power establishment, develops power which is consumed in one State only the public utilities commission of that State would have the authority to regulate the price at which the power should be sold?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator think, in that instance, the prices would be exorbitant? The public utilities commission, of course, would be jealous, as we know all State public utility commissions are, to see that the interests of the people are subserved and that extortionate prices are not charged by those engaged in activities of that character.

If I may be permitted another inquiry, assume that the product of the plant is utilized in various States, so that perhaps a State utilities commission did not have full jurisdiction over the plant and the output of the plant, so that it would have to come under Federal cognizance, does not the Senator believe that an organization, if one does not already exist, would speedily be created by Congress to fix a limit on prices charged by these power plants, so that extortionate prices would not be exacted from the public?

Mr. LENROOT. In reply to the Senator, the Senator from Wisconsin does not believe that either of those two things will follow, and that is why he takes the position he does; and I think I will be able to convince the Senator from Utah of the correctness of my position.

Let us first take the illustration that the Senator gives, or where the power is created and consumed wholly within a State. There are two classes of cases where regulation can not possibly give the consumer the benefit of the low-cost water power that will be provided by this bill. Let us suppose that there is a city in the Senator's own State that utilizes 15,000 horsepower. Five thousand of that horsepower is produced from a dam licensed under this act, and that is all the water power that can be produced tributary to that city. The other 10,000 horsepower is produced by steam. We will say that steam power actually costs $20 per horsepower to produce. A public utility gets a license under this bill. The demand in that city has increased and they secure 5,000 horsepower under the bill and propose to meet that increased demand in that city with this horsepower, developed by water power, which costs them only $10 per horsepower, or one-half of the cost of that which is produced by steam.

Now, does the Senator from Utah believe that this utility, having this 10,000 horsepower, will be held down to a rate one-half of that which is produced by the utility creating power by steam, where the water-power utility furnishes power to consumers upon one side of the street and the steam utility furnishes power to consumers upon the other side of the street? Does the Senator think there would be two different rates for that power? Of course not. The result would be, as it always has been, that the low cost water power utility would be permitted to charge the same rate that the steam utility charges, in order that there might not be discrimination and favoritism between individuals; exactly the same situation that we have, Mr. President, with reference to the railroads. What is our great trouble with the railroad situation to-day? We have discussed this so much that I just want to point to it.

Here is the Pennsylvania road, a great, strong road, with immense traffic upon its lines. Here is the Baltimore & Ohio road, paralleling it, which is a weak line. We do not have one rate for the Baltimore & Ohio and another rate for the Pennsylvania. Of course we do not. We have such a rate as will enable the Baltimore & Ohio to come somewhere near paying a fair return upon its investment; and the inevitable result is that the Pennsylvania, under those rates, is permitted to make an exorbitant return. That is the condition which is attempted to be remedied by the bill that has passed the Senate and has gone to conference.

But exactly the same situation will exist with reference to these water powers. Where one is created by steam and the other by water power, the rate that will be permitted to the water-power utility will be such rate as will enable the steam-power utility to exist and pay a fair return.

It is idle to talk about the utility commissions of the States so regulating that that the consumer will get the benefit of that low-priced power. It can not be done; it would not be done; and the result would be that you would have enormous earnings upon the part of the water-power utility, and under the committee amendment neither the consumer nor the Government, representing all the people of this country, would get any benefit from this privilege.

Now, I want to give another illustration. Suppose there is a great power development creating 100,000 horsepower, and there will be some, Niagara River, for instance, which I shall discuss a little later on. Niagara Falls comes under the terms of this bill; but that I will discuss later. That comes under the terms of this bill, and will some one tell me what good it would do the public to have the Public Utilities Commission of New York, where the same people may own the power plant who own the factories, the cyanide factory, or the fixed-nitrogen factory, where fertilizer is produced from these Falls, regulate the price that the power company of New York should charge to the manufacturing company when they own them both? There, again, is a case, Mr. President, where, under the terms of the committee amendment, neither the consumer nor the public can get any benefit from it, but it is a gift to these great water-power corporations.

Oh, but the Senator from Utah says when that time comes Congress itself would not be slow to create a body or enact legislation that would regulate the price of the product. Yet, if I understand the general position of the Senator from Utah, and I followed it very closely, he would fight to the last against any power of Congress to regulate the price of the product of any manufacturing industry in the country.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON. I understood the Senator to say that the Niagara Falls proposition is included in the terms of the bill.

Mr. LENROOT. It is.

Mr. HARRISON. Was that the suggestion of the committee?

Mr. LENROOT. It was.

Mr. HARRISON. Did the committee give any special consideration to the Niagara Falls projects?

Mr. LENROOT. I do not know how far I am justified in stating what occurred in the committee. I think I am justified in stating that I offered an amendment in the committee excluding Niagara Falls, and it was rejected.

Mr. HARRISON. The reason why I asked the Senator is because he is quite as familiar with it as I am and knows that when the bill was up in the House in the last Congress, practically the same bill, I understand, it was provided by a rule offered in the House that the Niagara Falls proposition was not to be included in any general water-power legislation.

Mr. LENROOT. That is true.

Mr. HARRISON. For that reason the special committee at that time, to which was referred all the bills touching water-power development, did not give any consideration to the development at Niagara Falls, but left that exclusively to another committee which was then and had been for many years giving special consideration to the development at Niagara Falls.

I am a little surprised to hear the Senator say, therefore, that the Niagara Falls project is included in the present bill, because, as he knows, there is quite a different development there from that involved in any other project within the United States.

Mr. LENROOT. That is true. The Senator from Mississippi was then a Member of the House, as I was, and we were both upon the Committee on Rules. The Senator correctly states the situation with reference to the creation of the special committee about which the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] spoke on yesterday. Niagara Falls and all boundary waters were expressly excluded from the jurisdiction of that committee.

Nevertheless, under the all-inclusive language of the pending bill, both as it came from the House and as it is before the Senate to-day, not because there was any special consideration given to the Niagara Falls project, because there was none, I am satisfied, in either House, it is included only because the language is so all embracing that if it is not amended the Niagara Falls and St. Lawrence River will be included within the terms of the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator a question? I have not given the bill the degree of consideration that the Senator has, but from a casual reading of it I conclude that there is no provision in it that would touch this state of facts which exists at Niagara Falls, for instance. There is a plant up there which under contract could be utilized to develop so much water power. It is an antiquated institution. It does not develop the water power to its highest efficiency. There is another plant there that is developing water power to a high efficiency.

Is there anything in the bill, in the opinion of the Senator, that would allow the commission to compel the remodeling of that plant so that it migh develop water power there to its very highest efficiency?

Mr. LENROOT. I do not think they could do it, and yet I would not undertake to say absolutely what the power of the commission might be under such circumstances.

Mr. HARRISON. Is there anything in the bill which would give jurisdiction to the commission to allow them to levy higher charges for water-power development at Niagara Falls than at other places in view of the fact that it is more easily developed there than at any other place, and in view of the fact that power companies which have existed there for a long, long time have made thousands and thousands of dollars? Is there anything in the bill that would allow a heavier charge there than at other places?

Mr. LENROOT. Not only is there nothing in the bill that would allow it, but the bill with the Senate committee amendment would absolutely prohibit it. In other words, if the bill goes through in its present form, knowing what I do about the Niagara Falls power project, in my judgment it would be a gift of a clear million dollars a year to the Niagara Falls company.

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator that unless he or some other Senator offers an amendment to exclude the Niagara Falls development from the bill and the jurisdiction of the commission, I shall offer it at the proper time?

Mr. LENROOT. I sincerely hope the Senator from Mississippi will do so, because the Senator from Mississippi, I think, is more familiar with the Niagara Falls project, perhaps, than any other Member of the Senate, unless it be the Senators from New York, because the Senator from Mississippi while a Member of the House was a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, which always had jurisdiction of the subject. I think that the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate has always had jurisdiction of the subject.

While we have reached this question, I might as well say now what I had intended to say upon the proposition at Niagara Falls.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I know the Senator desires to be and is a fair expositor of a proposition and is fair to those who differ from him and that he does not desire to put me in any improper light. I have expressed no particular views with respect to the bill or the theory upon which it is drawn other than in the question which I propounded yesterday to the distinguished Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON].

The Senator from Wisconsin has just stated that he has no doubt the Senator from Utah, referring to myself, will be found opposing the creation of any Federal instrumentality for the purpose of fixing rates, or words to that effect.

Mr. LENROOT. No; I said fixing prices on the products of an industrial factory.

Mr. KING. I am not so sure what my position would be in a given case. It would be impossible for me to indicate in advance what position I should assume in the face of any given exigency, but I will say frankly to the Senator that I am not much of a believer in price fixing and I am not much of a believer in the right of the Federal Government to go into a State and attempt to fix the prices of industrial or other products.

I am jealous, I frankly confess, of the rights of the States, and I have looked with a great deal of apprehension upon the encroachments by the Federal Government upon the reserved rights of the people and upon the rights and powers of the States. It does occur to me that the States are becoming atrophied and that the people more and more are relinquishing rights which belong to them and to the States, and more and more to devolve upon the Federal Government a power which it does not possess.

But I recognize that there is a broad field for the active assertion of power by the Federal Government. I recognize with reference to railroads that the Federal Government has the right to and should create, as it has done, an Interstate Commerce Commission to see that fair and just freight and passenger rates are promulgated and enforced. I can conceive that there might be a power organization of such magnitude with such national ramifications as to call for the interposition of the Federal Government and the establishment of some board for the purpose of fixing rates, or at any rate for the purpose of prohibiting the imposition upon the people of unfair and unreasonable rates.

I did not want the broad statement of the Senator which was made a moment ago to go into the RECORD without some little word of explanation upon my part, and I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. LENROOT. I am glad to accept the Senator's qualifications, and while I did not wish to be unfair to the Senator at all, yet I did infer from his general attitude exactly as I stated. I do think from the Senator's very emphatic position that he has taken upon many occasions that we really would expect him to be about one of the last, at least, to sanction any kind of price fixing upon the part of the Government. That being so, I did suggest to him that I did not believe that we could very well rely upon that as a remedy for an evil condition that might arise in the future.

But I want to follow up the Niagara Falls proposition for just a moment. There is just one reason for the creation of a commission with the broad powers that are given in the bill to grant license to public utilities for the development of navigation and the creation of water power, and that is that in the great multitude of cases it would be impossible for the Congress to act upon each one of them separately with any degree of speed or with any assurance that within any reasonable time legislation would be enacted.

But that is the only reason, and wherever a case exists where the water power is of such magnitude that it ought to have the attention of Congress, then the Congress would be justified in devoting its time to the consideration of it and acting directly upon it. I say, in such case no authority should ever be delegated to any commission to handle it and dispose of it under general rules.

The Niagara Falls project and the St. Lawrence River boundary waters are of exactly that character. In addition to the magnitude of the project it is an international waterway. We have to depend upon agreements with the Dominion of Canada for the utilization of that water. A matter of that magnitude and involving international relations ought not to be delegated to this board of three secretaries. So I sincerely hope that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] will offer an amendment excluding Niagara Falls and the boundary waters of the St. Lawrence River from the provisions of the bill so that it may be treated separately.

Let me say in this connection, and I think it is well known to Senators, that for years there has been legislation pending, sometimes passed by one House of Congress and sometimes the other, for the administration of the Niagara Falls project, and, while I have no evidence of the truth of what I am about to say, I have been convinced for a long time that it is this power company itself that has prevented legislation disposing of or regulating the project, because there have been times when the Senate and the House have been willing to have gotten together and agreed upon the legislation, as I think the Senator from Mississippi well knows.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. In this connection I might say—the Senator is familiar with the fact—that there is a treaty between this country and Canada appointing a joint commission to look after the Niagara Falls proposition.

Mr. LENROOT. There is, and in addition to that the international joint commission is now at work, I understand, upon a survey of the St. Lawrence River and the development of navigation upon it. I understand that there is 2,000,000 horsepower, equal to one-third of all the water power now developed in the entire United States, capable of development at Niagara Falls and in the St. Lawrence River to-day. That is a matter of such magnitude and of such importance to the Nation that we ought not to delegate to three men the disposition of that under the terms of the bill.

Now, Mr. President, to get back to the matter of charges, the right of the commission to exact compensation, taking, for example, the case of the Niagara Power Co., which, if I recollect the testimony aright, is developing power for between $10 and $15 per horsepower per year—about one-half of what other power costs—which power enters into manufacturing and into the production of cyanamide and fertilizer, a monopoly in this country, except for the nitrates from Chile, charging what they pleased to the consumer, will any one tell me how the public is going to get any benefit from this gift, or from exacting only a nominal charge? I have said upon occasions in the past years that if these people would permit the incorporation in legislation of this character of the right upon the part of the Government to fix the price of the product created by water power, I would never ask for the imposition of the charge of a single penny; but they have repeatedly stated that, as between the right of the Government to fix the price and to exact a charge, they preferred the charge.

Mr. President, we have no right, as I see it, in dealing with this great subject, these water powers of so much importance to all the people of the United States, to give away to private individuals one thing further than is necessary in order to secure development. It is a betrayal of trust upon the part of the Congress of the United States if we go one step further than that. We are here representing the public interests; we are here representing the people of the United States. We ought not to stand here inquiring what the water-power people want and then get all we can for them. I have no quarrel with the water-power people; I do not blame the water-power people for trying to get everything they can in this legislation; that is human nature. They will not be the ones to blame if they get it; but we will be the ones to blame, that we have been considering their interests instead of the public interest if we give it to them.

So, Mr. President, the Senate committee amendment with reference to the nominal charge ought not to be agreed to, but the House provision should remain as it is, as it was agreed upon by Secretary Daniels, Secretary Lane, and Secretary Baker. That will not mean the imposition of a charge in every case; it will not mean the imposition of anything but a nominal charge where the power is distributed to the general public; but it will mean, or it should mean, the imposition of a charge in all cases where the public can not get the benefit of the low cost of the water power compared with the high cost of steam power. That is all there is to the proposition.

In the case of a water-power company developing a great power and the same stockholders erecting a factory alongside of it, using the developed power by themselves, where no regulating authority can give relief to the public, it would mean that the commission would exact a charge, so that the only way in which the public can secure any benefit from the granting of this enormously valuable privilege shall come to the public in the way of a reduction of taxation to the people of the United States.

Mr. President, these are the general observations which I have desired to make with reference to the pending bill. I shall have occasion to discuss some of the amendments as they come up. I do believe in the general theory of the bill as it passed the other House; I believe in the development of our water power; I believe it can be better developed under private ownership, in the first instance, than by the Government itself. For the Government itself to undertake to develop all the water power in this country would, I am afraid, mean criticism of the Congress of the United States compared to which criticism of the river and harbor bill would be regarded as infinitesimal. That is no reflection upon Congress. If Congress undertook to develop all of these water powers, we all know what would happen. Water powers would not be developed according to the market needs, according to the actual necessities of the case, but they would be developed in different parts of the country in the hope and the prospect that they would draw to them manufactures; they would be nothing but experiments. If private capital, however, goes in and develops, in the first instance, it is safe to say that only such water powers will be developed as there is a commercial need for. In doing that we ought not to go one step further than to give such inducements to private capital as will result in the investment of private capital, the development of power, and the production of electric current. Anything beyond that is giving to them something that belongs not to us to give, but for which we are merely trustees for the people of this great country. Because the Senate committee amendments go further than is necessary to secure this development, go further than the water-power people themselves have asked Congress to go less than a year since, I say the amendments which I have been discussing ought not to be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NUGENT in the chair). The Secretary will read the bill for committee amendments.

The Assistant Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 2, on page 2, line 6, after the words "salary of," to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$6,000"; at the beginning of line 8 to strike out "in so far as practicable"; and in line 10, after the word "personnel," to insert "except as may be otherwise provided by law"; in line 16, after the word "by," to strike out "the commissioners or by their" and insert "its"; and in line 17, after the word "under," to strike out "their" and insert "its," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That the commission shall appoint an executive secretary, who shall receive a salary of $6,000 a year, and prescribe his duties. The work of the commission shall be performed by and through the Departments of War, Interior, and Agriculture, and their engineering, technical, clerical, and other personnel except as may be otherwise provided by law.

All of the expenses of the commission, including rent in the District of Columbia, all necessary expenses for transportation and subsistence, including, in the discretion of the commission, a per diem of not exceeding $4 in lieu of subsistence incurred by its employees under its orders in making any investigation, or conducting field work, or upon official business outside of the District of Columbia and away from their designated points of duty, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by a member or officer of the commission duly authorized for that purpose; and in order to defray the expenses made necessary by the provisions of this act there is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as Congress may hereafter determine, and the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, available until expended, to be paid out upon warrants drawn on the Secretary of the Treasury upon order of the commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, page 3, line 6, after the word "meaning," to strike out "when found in" and insert "for the purposes of," and, after line 11, to strike out:

"'Reservations' means lands and interest in lands owned by the United States and withdrawn, reserved, or withheld from private appropriation and disposal under the public-land laws, and lands and interest in lands acquired and held for any public purpose."

And insert:

"'Reservations' means national monuments, national parks, national forests, tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations, military reservations, and other lands and interests in lands owned by the United States, and withdrawn, reserved, or withheld from private appropriation and disposal under the public-land laws; also lands and interests in lands acquired and held for any public purpose."

So as to read:

SEC. 3. That the words defined in this section shall have the following meaning for the purposes of this act, to wit:

"'Public lands' means such lands and interest in lands owned by the United States as are subject to private appropriation and disposal under public-land laws. It shall not include 'reservations,' as hereinafter defined.

"'Reservations' means national monuments, national parks, national forests, tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations, military reservations, and other lands and interests in lands owned by the United States, and withdrawn, reserved, or withheld from private appropriation and disposal under the public-land laws; also lands and interests in lands acquired and held for any public purpose."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 14, to strike out:

That the term "navigable waters" as used in this act and as applied to streams shall be construed to include only such streams or parts of streams as are in their ordinary natural condition used for the transportation of persons or property in interstate or foreign commerce, or which through improvement heretofore or hereafter made have been or shall become usable in such commerce.

And insert:

"Navigable waters" means those parts of streams or other bodies of water over which Congress has jurisdiction under its authority to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and which either in their natural or improved condition, notwithstanding interruptions by falls, shallows, or rapids compelling land carriage, are used or suitable for use for the transportation of persons or property in interstate or foreign commerce, including therein all such interrupting falls, shallows, or rapids, together with such other parts of streams as shall have been authorized by Congress for improvement by the United States or shall have been recommended to Congress for such improvement after investigation under its authority.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Minnesota if he considers the last four lines of the amendment, being lines 6, 7, 8, and 9, on page 5, to be necessary to perfect the bill. The words to which I am directing the Senator's attention are the following:

Together with such other parts of streams as shall have been authorized by Congress for improvement by the United States or shall have been recommended to Congress for such improvement after investigation under its authority.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I deem the words quoted by the Senator from Utah important and essential. There may be a stream that is navigable for a certain distance; there may be interruptions by waterfalls or other obstructions and then another reach of the river may be navigable, and Congress may conclude that it will improve that river and extend navigation on it. This is to permit the Government to do that. That is the object of it:

Together with such other parts of streams as shall have been authorized by Congress for improvement by the United States or shall have been recommended to Congress for such improvement after investigation under its authority.

This is to leave subject to Federal control in reference to water-power development those streams which the Federal Government has improved for purposes of navigation or has recommended and is about to improve.

I want to say in illustration of this that it is customary at the time of the consideration of each river and harbor bill for Senators desiring some river or stream in their States to be improved or made navigable to secure the insertion in the river and harbor bill of a provision for a preliminary examination and survey; and if after such preliminary examination and survey by the War Department they regard the stream as worthy of improvement they go on and make a further examination and an estimate; they go on and formulate the plans for the improvement and make an estimate of the cost, and after those preliminary steps are taken it is ripe for the action of Congress.

There are many places in the country where they are still expecting to improve streams; and this is to put those streams on which the Government has made or recommended improvements in the same list with other navigable waters.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will pardon me, I am afraid that the definition of "navigable waters" as found in lines 22 to 25, on page 4, and also lines 1 to 9, on page 5, will include practically every little rivulet and stream and creek that can be found within the limits of most of the States of the United States; and I am afraid that under this bill and under the definitions to which I have called the Senator's attention it will be asserted by those having the administration of the bill that every little stream or rivulet that finds its way directly or indirectly into a larger stream which may become navigable is under the jurisdiction of this commission, so that no man may go upon these little streams and utilize the waters therein flowing for power or other purposes contemplated by this bill, or within the scope of this bill, without obtaining permission from the commission which is created by the bill. It looks to me as though you are putting into the hands of this commission too much power to superimpose itself upon the States, and to control every little stream within the confines of the States.

Mr. NELSON. I think the apprehensions of the Senator from Utah are not warranted. If the whole paragraph be read and considered as an entirety, it will appear that it relates only to navigable streams. It starts out here with the phrase "over which Congress has jurisdiction." The authority of Congress over streams relates to utilizing them for navigation for commercial purposes under the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution. This covers streams either in their natural condition or streams that Congress by appropriation has improved and made navigable. They are all subject to the provisions of this bill.

I want to call the attention of the Senator in this connection to another provision of the bill, in section 23, which relates to the construction of dams over portions of streams that are not navigable. The commission in that case is authorized to investigate, and if it finds that they are local streams, not navigable, not used for interstate commerce, it can grant authority for the improvement of the streams, subject to State laws. I will read the concluding paragraph of that part of the section.

Mr. KING. What section is the Senator referring to?

Mr. NELSON. Section 23. It is an amendment of the Senate committee. It commences in line 21, near the bottom of page 36, and reads as follows:

That any person, association, corporation, State, or municipality intending to construct a dam or other project works across, along, over, or in any stream or part thereof, other than those defined herein as navigable waters, and over which Congress has jurisdiction under its authority to regulate commerce between foreign nations and among the several States, may in its discretion file declaration of such intention with the commission, whereupon the commission shall cause immediate investigation of such proposed construction to be made, and if upon investigation it shall find that the interests of interstate or foreign commerce would be affected by such proposed construction, such person, association, corporation, State, or municipality shall not proceed with such construction until it shall have applied for and shall have received a license under the provisions of this act.

And I call the Senator's attention particularly to this part of the amendment:

If the commission shall not so find, and if no public lands or reservations are affected, permission is hereby granted to construct such dam or other project works in such stream upon compliance with State laws.

It remits them in that case to the jurisdiction of the States; and I do not think there is any danger to be apprehended under the provision that we are now considering on pages 4 and 5. It only relates to navigable streams that are either navigable in their natural condition or that have been made navigable by an act of Congress, or that have been recommended for improvement; and there are many such streams in the country.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the definition of navigability by the courts has not always been clear; and I assert now that under the definition which is given here, particularly in view of the language "parts of streams" which are to come within the jurisdiction of this organization, the Federal Government will assert control over every little rivulet, creek, and brook in every part of the United States that may be traced to some stream which, later on in its progress to the sea, becomes navigable at some point and somewhere; and it will assert this jurisdiction to the extent of denying to a man, where this little rivulet or brook or stream flows through his own farm, the right to utilize it for power purposes, even though he may develop only one or two horsepower, until and unless he comes to Washington and throws himself upon the mercy of the big autocracy or bureaucracy that is set up by this bill.

I call attention to this, and I warn the Senator that his constituents and the constituents of other Senators will find the galling chains of the Federal Government around their necks, and they will find interference upon the part of the Federal Government with their assertion of rights with respect to streams, small in character, that are contiguous to their own properties and within their own States.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] seems to think that this amendment enlarges the jurisdiction of Congress and this commission over navigable streams. Exactly the contrary is true. This definition unquestionably restricts the technical jurisdiction which Congress would have if this language, instead of attempting to define navigable streams, should merely be the term "navigable streams." Under some of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States it may be that they would go to the very spring at the top of a mountain; but this definition very greatly restricts it, and, instead of this being a dangerous definition, the Senator from Utah upon the very ground that he urges his objection ought to favor it, because it certainly is true that the jurisdiction of this commission over the granting of licenses for dams will not be as great under this bill as if merely and only the term "navigable streams" had been used.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator from Wisconsin in his construction of this paragraph. Certainly it is limited to those waters over which Congress has jurisdiction, and then it goes on to define in what way that jurisdiction is evidenced, by the actual improvement of the stream itself. So it is not left to the broad general definition of navigable waters. It is specified what we mean by navigable waters, in that they are such waters as come within the commerce clause, and also where the streams have actually been taken over by Congress to the extent that they have been improved, or where Congress has in due process actually gone to work to improve them. It leaves out of consideration altogether, I think, such streams as the Senator from Utah has in mind, and confines the definition of navigable waters to those which are unquestionably and actually navigable waters.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I perhaps was unfortunate in my expression if I conveyed the idea that I was quarreling with this definition in preference to some of the decisions which have been announced by the courts. I appreciate what the Senator from Wisconsin has said and agree entirely with him. I think that the decisions of some of the courts as to what are navigable streams press the limit of reason and common sense. I appreciate that this is somewhat of a limitation upon the definitions which have been prescribed by some of the nisi prius courts, if not some of the appellate Federal courts. But what I had in mind was a greater narrowing of the proposition, and if I had my way I should restrict the interpretations placed by the courts still further than what has been done by the language to which attention was called.

I referred a moment ago to the words "parts of streams," and I asserted that I was apprehensive that under those words, as well as the following words within this amendment, the instrumentality created by the bill would extend its power and its authority to little streams and rivulets and brooks within the States, upon the ground that they were a part of a stream which in some part of its progress toward the ocean became navigable.

I would like to see this definition of navigability very much narrowed, so that the power of this organization set up, this Federal machinery, might be restricted, and that it might confine its activities to the large streams, which, in fact, are navigable—streams like the Missouri and the Mississippi, the broad waterways of our country—so that it would be clear that they should not attempt to take jurisdiction over the little streams and rivulets within the States which minister so much to the welfare of the people, and which could be utilized by the people in a small way for the development of a limited amount of electric energy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAPPER in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 3, page 5, line 15, after the word "others," to strike out the words "from which flows surplus water not needed for Government purposes that may be disposed of under the provisions of this act," so as to make the paragraph read:

"Government dam" means a dam or other work constructed or owned by the United States for Government purposes, with or without contribution from others.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 22, after the words "additions or betterments," to insert the words "or used for the purposes for which such reserves were created," so as to make the paragraph read:

"Net investment" in a project means the actual legitimate original cost thereof as defined and interpreted in the "classification of investment in road and equipment of steam roads, issue of 1914, Interstate Commerce Commission," plus similar costs of additions thereto and betterments thereof, minus the sum of the following items properly allocated thereto, if and to the extent that such items have been accumulated during the period of the license from earnings in excess of a fair return on such investment: (a) Unappropriated surplus, (b) aggregate credit balances of current depreciation accounts, and (c) aggregate appropriations of surplus or income held in amortization, sinking fund, or similar reserves, or expended for additions or betterments or used for the purposes for which such reserves were created.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 2, after the words "or others," to insert the words "and said classification of investment of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall, in so far as applicable, be published and promulgated as a part of the commission's rules and regulations," so as to read:

The term "cost" shall include, in so far as applicable, the elements thereof prescribed in said classification, but shall not include expenditures from funds obtained through donations by States, municipalities, individuals, or others, and said classification of investment of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall, in so far as applicable, be published and promulgated as a part of the commission's rules and regulations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, page 7, line 9, after the word "concerning," to insert the words "the utilization of the water resources of any region to be developed"; in line 10, after the word "the," to insert the word "water"; and, in line 16, after the word "extent," to strike out the word "it" and insert the words "the commission," so as to make the paragraph read:

(a) To make investigations and to collect and record data concerning the utilization of the water resources of any region to be developed, the water-power industry and its relation to other industries and to interstate or foreign commerce, and concerning the location, capacity, development costs, and relation to markets of power sites, and whether the power from Government dams can be advantageously used by the United States for its public purposes, and what is a fair value of such power, to the extent the commission may deem necessary or useful for the purposes of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, line 2, after the word "act," to add the following additional proviso:

And provided further, That upon the filing of any application for a license which has not been preceded by a preliminary permit under subsection (e) of this section, notice shall be given and published as required by the proviso of said subsection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 21, after the words "with the," to strike out the words "issuance of" and to insert the words "application for"; and, on page 12, line 10, after the word "commission," to insert the words "or by its executive officer," so as to read:

(g) To hold hearings and to order testimony to be taken by deposition at any designated place in connection with the application for any permit or license, or the regulation of rates, service, or securities, or the making of any investigation, as provided in this act; and to require by subpœna, signed by any member of the commission, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence from any place in the United States, and in case of disobedience to a subpœna the commission may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence. Any member, expert, or examiner of the commission may, when duly designated by the commission for such purposes, administer oaths and affirmations, examine witnesses and receive evidence. Depositions may be taken before any person designated by the commission or by its executive officer and empowered to administer oaths, shall be reduced to writing by such person or under his direction, and subscribed by the deponent.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, page 13, line 18, after the words "may be altered," to insert the words "or surrendered," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 6. That licenses under this act shall be issued for a period not exceeding 50 years. Each such license shall be conditioned upon acceptance by the licensee of all the terms and conditions of this act and such further conditions, if any, as the commission shall prescribe in conformity with this act, which said terms and conditions and the acceptance thereof shall be expressed in said license. Licenses may be revoked only for the reasons and in the manner prescribed under the provisions of this act, and may be altered or surrendered only upon mutual agreement between the licensee and the commission after 90 days' public notice.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 7, page 13, line 23, after the word "issued," to insert the words "and in issuing licenses to new licensees under section 15 hereof"; and, on page 14, line 2, after the word "shall," to insert the words "within a reasonable time to be fixed by the commission"; and, in line 9, after the word "region," to insert the words "if it is satisfied as to the ability of the applicant to carry out such plans," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 7. That in issuing preliminary permits hereunder or licenses where no preliminary permit has been issued and in issuing licenses to new licensees under section 15 hereof the commission shall give preference to applications therefor by States and municipalities, provided the plans for the same are deemed by the commission equally well adapted, or shall within a reasonable time to be fixed by the commission be made equally well adapted, to conserve and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region; and as between other applicants, the commission may give preference to the applicant the plans of which it finds and determines are best adapted to develop, conserve, and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region, if it is satisfied as to the ability of the applicant to carry out such plans.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the bottom of page 14.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Permit me to ask the Senator from Minnesota if the word "assign" ought not to be "assignee" on page 14, the first word in line 25, "any successor or assign of the rights"?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I observe that the same form of language is used throughout the bill, and I think the expression is quite proper. It is very common to speak of heirs and assigns.

Mr. NELSON. "Assign" is proper and also the word "assignee."

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I do not insist upon it. It appears to me as though it ought to be assignee.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, on page 15, in line 6, after the words "trust deed or," to insert the word "judicial," so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That a mortgage or trust deed or judicial sales made thereunder or under tax sales shall not be deemed voluntary transfers within the meaning of this section.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think that the word "judicial" ought not to be in. I think the amendment ought to be disagreed to.

Mr. LENROOT. I will state to the Senator from Montana that the reason for putting the word "judicial" in there is to prevent a fraud under the terms of the bill against assignment or transfer unless it is a judicial sale. It might be used as a subterfuge for making a sale that the commission would not otherwise permit, but if it is a judicial sale the courts, of course, would see that it was a bona fide transaction.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But the provision is that the sale must be made under a mortgage or trust deed. That, of course, shuts out a sale under a power and absolutely forbids the foreclosure of a mortgage through the usual power of sale given by the mortgagor.

Mr. LENROOT. It would be very easy, if for any reason the commission should decline to submit to a transfer that was sought by a licensee, to place a mortgage upon the property and then through connivance secure a transfer under that language, but if it is confined to a judicial sale the court would protect in all cases the bona fides of the proposition. I think the word "judicial" ought to stay.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I scarcely think that there is any justification for that. It is a procedure that is authorized by the express statutes of many States and for the purpose of reducing the cost of a foreclosure. There would be no advantage whatever secured by requiring the disposition to be made through a judicial sale. A mortgage is put upon the property, default made, and there is a foreclosure decree and the sale is made. The only thing the court inquires into is whether the default has been made in the payment. If the court finds default has been made in the payment, it does not even——

Mr. LENROOT. If it is a bona fide transaction. It might be a mere moot transaction as between the parties for this purpose alone, but the court would have to be satisfied that there was in fact a default before the court would order a foreclosure.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The difficulty is just the same in one case as it is in the other. If the thing was in fact moot, if there was really no default, the party would be in a worse situation under the power of sale, because under the power of sale everything must be straightforward and perfectly in accordance with the statute. The slightest departure from it would invalidate the sale.

Mr. LENROOT. Not as between the parties if they were all agreed, of course.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of course not, if they were all agreed.

Mr. LENROOT. It then becomes a mere formality.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then we should assume that they are all agreed in the other case too.

Mr. LENROOT. No.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Here is the situation: The licensee applies for leave to sell and the commission denies it. That is the case the Senator puts. Thereupon the licensee puts a mortgage upon the property. Default occurs in the mortgage. The Senator assumes that the default is collusive. Accordingly the public, or some one representing the public, goes into court and represents as a friend of the court that the proceedings are entirely collusive and the court dismisses the suit. That is what the Senator might expect.

In exactly the same way if the whole proceeding was collusive and the foreclosure attempted through exercise of the power of sale and not through a decree of foreclosure, the commission would equally declare the whole proceeding fraudulent and void, and would be authorized to go on and issue a license to some one else who would contest the right of foreclosure under the power, and charge, and very properly charge, that the whole thing was an evasion of the statute.

So there would not be any better opportunity to get a transfer of the property through the one proceeding than through the other, and you shut out the right to have a foreclosure under the power of sale which is authorized by the statutes of many States, because it has been found less expensive than the other method of procedure.

Mr. LENROOT. The mere matter of a little expense in a matter of this kind it seems to me ought not to have the slightest weight. The public has an interest in these transfers, and where the public has an interest it ought to be of sufficient importance that a judicial sale or a judicial sanction is required, because we prohibit exactly those things to be done voluntarily, and in so far as language can do it we ought to guard against the thing being done surreptitiously that the bill itself will directly prohibit.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. As a matter of course if any good is accomplished by it at all, I am not complaining about the expense. The point I am making is that you do not accomplish anything by it and you prohibit the less expensive method of making the sale.

Mr. NELSON. Will the Senator from Montana allow me to make a suggestion? It is that after the words "Provided, That a mortgage or trust deed" there be inserted the words "or obtaining a sale judicially," or you could make it more definite by providing for a sale under a mortgage or trust deed containing a power of sale. Would not that cover it?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It would, but, of course, that would meet with exactly the objection that the Senator from Wisconsin urges to the language of the bill originally. I do not attach enough importance to it to press the objection I made. I am simply calling attention to the fact that you do not accomplish anything by the amendment and you force the adoption of the more expensive method of foreclosure.

Mr. NELSON. I want to call the Senator's attention to another matter. "Judicial sale" might apply to the enforcement of a mechanic's or a material man's lien. Suppose a mechanic or material man had acquired a statutory lien against the property and he should proceed to enforce that lien and there was a sale under it, that would be a judicial sale and would be covered by a mortgage or trust deed.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But I call the Senator's attention to the fact that the words "judicial sales" are qualified by the language which follows, namely, "made thereunder"—that is, under a mortgage or trust deed. It must be a judicial sale made under a mortgage or trust deed and would not include a judicial sale made under a mechanic's lien.

Mr. NELSON. What amendment does the Senator suggest?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. My suggestion was that the committee amendment inserting the word "judicial" should be disagreed to, leaving it as it was, but, as I said, I do not care to press the point at all.

Mr. NELSON. I think the word ought to be in because of the cases I referred to a moment ago. They are not covered by a mortgage or trust deed. I refer to the enforcement of a mechanic's lien, a laborer's lien, or a material-man's lien. He may proceed in an action, acquire judgment, and have a sale under the judgment, and there is no reason why his judgment or a sale under that judgment should not have the same protection as a mortgage or trust deed.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator is quite right about that.

Mr. NELSON. That is the way I feel and that is why I think the word is proper.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was on page 17, in line 2, after the word "shall," to insert the words "establish and," and, in line 9 and line 10, to strike out the word "dam" and the word "reservoir," and insert in lieu thereof the words "project works," so as to make the paragraph read:

(c) That the licensee shall maintain the project works in a condition of repair adequate for the purposes of navigation and for the efficient operation of said works in the development and transmission of power, shall make all necessary renewals and replacements, shall establish and maintain adequate depreciation reserves for such purposes, shall so maintain and operate said works as not to impair navigation, and shall conform to such rules and regulations as the commission may from time to time prescribe for the protection of life, health, and property. Each licensee hereunder shall be liable for all damages occasioned to the property of others by the construction, maintenance, or operation of the project works or of the works appurtenant or accessory thereto, constructed under the license, and in no event shall the United States be liable therefor.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 15, before the word "rate," to insert the word "reasonable," so as to read:

(d) That after the first 20 years of operation out of surplus earned thereafter, if any, accumulated in excess of a specified reasonable rate of return upon the investment of a licensee in any project or projects under license the licensee shall establish and maintain amortization reserves, which reserves shall, in the discretion of the commission, be held until the termination of the license or be applied from time to time in reduction of the net investment. Such specified rate of return and the proportion of such surplus earnings to be paid into and held in such reserves shall be set forth in the license.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 23, to strike out:

(e) That the licensee shall pay to the United States reasonable annual charges in an amount to be fixed by the commission. When licenses are issued that contemplate the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States, in the discretion of the commission the charges to be paid by the licensee may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter, in a manner to be described in each license.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

That the licensee shall pay for the license herein granted such reasonable annual charges as may be fixed by the commission, for the purpose of reimbursing the United States for the cost of administration of the act in relation to water powers developed under its jurisdiction, in the proportion that the water power developed by the project covered by said license bears to the total water power developed by all projects licensed under the act, and for that purpose such charges may be readjusted from time to time, not oftener than once in two years; the licensee shall also pay for the use and occupation of any public lands and lands in reservations, except tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations, necessary for the development of the project covered by the license such reasonable annual charges based upon the actual value of the Government lands used as may be fixed by the commission; but in no event shall the annual charge for the foregoing exceed 25 cents per developed horsepower: Provided, That when licenses are issued involving the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States or tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations the commission shall fix a reasonable annual charge for the use thereof, and such charges may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter in a manner to be described in each license.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, the amendment which has just been stated being in controversy, let it be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, it is quite agreeable to me that this amendment should be passed over, but I express the hope that when we come back to the consideration of it the Senate will conclude not again to precipitate this basic controversy concerning the matter of the charge that should be made or whether any charge should be made. That is the rock upon which all of this legislation has split for 10 years, and I had hoped that we had passed that difficulty. It was the main bone of contention, as is well known, in the conference committee that last considered this legislation. They finally worked out a provision which I think would have been entirely satisfactory to both Houses if the conference report had ever come before them for consideration. By "satisfactory" I mean that the two Houses would have adopted it without very much serious debate. That provision is found on page 7 of the report of the conference committee and reads as the original bill read, with a proviso. The committee saw fit again to introduce the contention that has brought us to grief in this legislation up to the present time. The conference report reads:

(e) That the licensee shall pay to the United States reasonable annual charges in an amount to be fixed by the commission. When licenses are issued that contemplate the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States, in the discretion of the commission the charges to be paid by the licensee may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter, in a manner to be described in each license.

Then follows this proviso, which is not in the bill as it comes to us from the other House, but I think is taken care of in another section:

Provided, That licenses for the development, transmission, or distribution of power by States or municipalities shall be issued and enjoyed without charge to the extent such power is used by such State or municipality for State or municipal purposes; and that licenses for the development, transmission, or distribution of power for domestic, mining, or other beneficial use in projects of not more than 50 horsepower capacity, may be issued without charge; but in no case shall a license be issued free of charge for the development and utilization of power created by any Government dam and that the amount charged therefor in any license shall be such as determined by the commission.

Mr. President, I do not desire to enter into any discussion at this time of the merits of the plan proposed by the committee, but we all recognize that it is exactly the plan that has blocked all water-power legislation during all of these years. The Senate, when similar legislation was last before it, concluded to recede from the position and adopt the contention thus far insisted upon by the other House and which will again be insisted upon by the House. Why now go through the formality of throwing this into the committee of conference again?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LENROOT. I merely wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the proviso he has read is substantially in the bill now.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I so understood, but it is in another place.

I merely desire to say another word, Mr. President. There has always been a great deal of apprehension that the board in fixing the charge would fix it so high as to make development impossible. Of course, however, the charge will be fixed in the original license, and the man who invests his money will know in advance just exactly what his charge is going to be. I can not believe that a board constituted of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Interior will be any less desirous of having this development go on than any of us here, who are vitally concerned in seeing these great natural resources developed for the use of the people. I can not believe that at least more than one of the three will be an obstructionist. I accordingly anticipate that there will be nothing unreasonable about the charges; indeed, I think they will be so graduated as to encourage construction.

I might here say that we could with profit utilize the lesson that we have learned in connection with the forest reserves. When those reserves were first established and the policy was inaugurated of charging stock growers a fee for the privilege of grazing their stock upon the forest reserves—an exaction which had never theretofore been made, perfect freedom having been given to everybody to utilize whatever forage there was upon the reserve without expense at all—a perfect uproar was raised all through our country; and I may say that I myself contributed somewhat to the general complaint against the system. But I stand here to assert that all of that opposition has practically gone; there is no longer in the West any complaint about the system in general, nor, as a rule, about the burden of the charge. I believe that the system has demonstrated, in a general way at least, its wisdom; and I believe that the officers charged with the administration of it now enjoy the confidence of the people of the West. So I have not myself the slightest fear that if we leave the matter entirely in the discretion of the board to fix such charges as they think reasonable and right and fair anybody will have any cause to complain about their action.

I recognize that there are some who contend that there is no right in the Government of the United States to make a charge in these matters; but that, as I say, precipitates the old controversy, which I had hoped we had passed. I entertain a very ardent hope that we shall leave the bill in that respect as it came to us from the other House.

Mr. SMOOT. I rise now simply to say that I can not agree with what the Senator from Montana has said. This is a very vital question to the future development of the water powers in the United States. I am not going to take the time of the Senate now to discuss the merit of the question; but I think that the position of the Senate in the past has been the proper one to take, and I certainly do not want, in the absence of the chairman of the committee, any change made in the amendment reported by the committee. I know that he is deeply interested in the question, and I know that other Senators are equally interested.

I simply wish to refer briefly to the suggestion made by the Senator from Montana.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, I have asked that the amendment may go over.

Mr. SMOOT. I understand; but I simply wish a moment or two to answer the Senator from Montana. I am quite sure the Senator from Montana has not of late received protests similar to those that I have received from the men who hold permits to graze upon the forest reserves. There has been a determined effort in the last two months not to raise the grazing fees 10 per cent or 20 per cent or 25 per cent, but the demand has been to raise them 100 per cent; and if 100 per cent increase is agreed to now, there can not be any question at all that another 100 per cent will be demanded later on.

The whole theory of controlling the forest reserves, of controlling the water powers, and controlling the oil and mineral production from all of the public lands has been changed in the last few years. When it was first formulated it was not designed that the Government should receive any appreciable amount of money on the production of oil or the grazing of cattle upon the hills of the intermountain country; all it was ever thought of charging was enough to care for the expenses of administration.

Now, particularly at the other end of the Capitol, the idea is that the Government ought to get every dollar out of such use that it is possible to get; to make the people of the West pay every cent that can be gotten out of them, the claim being that the natural resources of those States belong to the people as a whole, and therefore the Government ought to get out of them every cent that it can possibly wring out of the people who use them.

I wish to say that only last week Mr. Potter was in my office and we discussed the question of the doubling of the grazing fee for sheep and cattle upon the forest reserves. He himself stated to me that pressure was being brought upon the administration from all sources in order that they might secure more money out of the grazing privileges of the West, to be expended in other avenues of governmental endeavor.

There is a principle attached to this matter. I think the committee amendment is right, and I think that the Senate ought to stand by the committee in the amendment which it reported. I think also that if the Senate will do that there will be no failure of the bill again because of the House not acceding to the Senate amendment.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, let the amendment be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment has already gone over.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and the Assistant Secretary read to the end of subsection (g), line 16, page 20.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, would the Senator in charge of the bill mind letting the next amendment go over? The vote on the amendment on pages 17 and 18 may result in an amendment being offered to the next amendment, and yet that amendment may not be offered if the language on pages 17 and 18 is stricken out. I think it will not delay the matter, but will really save time.

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator desires, it can be passed over.

Mr. CURTIS. I think it will save time to have it go over.

Mr. NELSON. What about subsection (i)? Does the Senator desire to have both (h) and (i) go over?

Mr. CURTIS. Down to (i), yes.

Mr. NELSON. Subsections (h) and (i), on pages 20 and 21, may be passed over, then.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I ask the attention of the Senator having the bill in charge. It occurs to me that the division here is not proper. It seems to me that subdivision (h) should be a separate section. It does not appear to be appropriate to the commencement of that section, which stipulates the conditions upon which the license is issued. It seems to me it would be appropriate if that were made a separate section, and the word "That" stricken out, and the subdivision read, as a separate section:

Combinations, agreements, arrangements, or understandings, express or implied, to limit the output of electrical energy * * * are hereby prohibited.

It does not seem to me that that is appropriate in a section which purports to give the conditions upon which the license is issued.

Mr. NELSON. It might, of course, be put in a new section, but I can not see why it can not stay in the place it now occupies. Perhaps it would be more logical to have a separate section for it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Simply because it is not a condition upon which the license is issued.

Mr. NELSON. But, at any rate, this goes over at the request of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS].

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I merely suggest that for the consideration of the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with line 10 on page 21.

The next amendment was, in section 12, page 22, line 21, after the word "commission," to strike out "may, before taking action upon such application," and insert "shall take no action but," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 12. That whenever application is filed for a project hereunder involving navigable waters of the United States, and the commission shall find upon investigation that the needs of navigation require the construction of a lock or locks or other navigation structures, and that such structures can not, consistent with a reasonable investment cost to the applicant, be provided in the manner specified in section 11, subsection (a) hereof, the commission shall take no action, but cause a report upon such project to be prepared, with estimates of cost of the power development and of the navigation structures, and shall submit such report to Congress with such recommendations as it deems appropriate concerning the participation of the United States in the cost of construction of such navigation structures.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 15, page 26, line 14, after the word "amount," to strike out "for the property taken," so as to read:

That if the United States does not, at the expiration of the original license, exercise its right to take over, maintain, and operate any project or projects of the licensee, as provided in section 14 hereof, the commission is authorized to issue a new license to the original licensee upon such terms and conditions as may be authorized or required under the then existing laws and regulations, or to issue a new license under said terms and conditions to a new licensee, which license may cover any project or projects covered by the original license, and shall be issued on the condition that the new licensee shall, before taking possession of such project or projects, pay such amount and assume such contracts as the United States is required to do, in the manner specified in section 14 hereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 15, page 26, line 18, after the word "over," to strike out "and" and insert "or"; in the same line, after the word "not," to strike out "issue" and insert "tender"; in line 19, after the word "license," to insert "on reasonable terms"; and in line 20, after the word "license," to insert "which is accepted," so as to read:

Provided, That in the event the United States does not exercise the right to take over or does not tender a new license on reasonable terms to the original or a new license which is accepted, then the commission shall issue from year to year an annual license—

And so forth.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Montana has an amendment there, on page 26, lines 18 and 19, where the word "issue" is stricken out and the word "tender" inserted. Does the Senator from Montana desire to offer an amendment there?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I shall be very glad to submit the amendment, in accordance with some remarks made yesterday.

In lieu of the word "tender," in line 19, page 26, I move to insert "a license to a new licensee, or tender a new license"; or, rather, strike out the words "tender a new license on reasonable terms," in line 19, and substitute——

Mr. NELSON. How would it read then?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. "A license to a new licensee, or tender a new license."

Mr. LENROOT. In that case the word "issue" should remain, the last word on line 18.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes; that part of the committee amendment should be rejected. Then I move to strike out the words "or a new," at the end of line 19 and the beginning of line 20, so that it will read:

Or does not issue a license to a new licensee, or tender a new license to the original licensee.

Mr. NELSON. I have no objection to that, Mr. President.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That contemplates, as I understand, some further change, which perhaps the Senator from Minnesota will explain.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I should like to ask my colleague if that amendment would strike out and do away with the words in italics, "on reasonable terms," on line 19? Would it do away with that altogether?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It does not affect that expression.

Mr. MYERS. It leaves those words in?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That expression still remains in. That, however, would be taken care of, as I understand, by the amendment that will be proposed by the Senator from Minnesota.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let us see if the Secretary can state the amendment to the satisfaction of the Senator from Montana.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the words "tender a new license on reasonable terms to the original or a new licensee," and to insert "issue a license to a new licensee or tender a new license to the original licensee," so that, if amended, the proviso will read:

Provided, That in the event the United States does not exercise the right to take over or does not issue a license to a new licensee or tender a new license to the original licensee which is accepted—

And so forth.

Mr. NELSON. I will ask the Secretary to stop at that. That is as far as this amendment goes. If that amendment is agreed to, I have another amendment to follow it. I agree to that amendment, Mr. President.

Mr. MYERS. As read it proposes to strike out the words "on reasonable terms."

Mr. NELSON. I have another amendment to offer there, if the Senator from Montana will wait. This amendment has been agreed to?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Montana to the amendment is agreed to, and the amendment as amended is agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. Now I offer the following amendment:

After the word "license," in line 19, insert the following words:

Upon the terms and conditions aforesaid.

Mr. SMOOT. That is an amendment to section 15?

Mr. NELSON. It is.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask the Senator to let that go over.

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator wants the amendment to go over, we had better have the section go over.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I would like to have the whole section go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Montana was agreed to, and it goes over now.

Mr. SMOOT. What was the amendment?

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. To amend section 15 so that the proviso will read:

Provided, That in the event the United States does not exercise the right to take over or does not issue a license to a new licensee, or tender a new license to the original licensee which is accepted on the terms and conditions as aforesaid, then the commission shall issue from year to year an annual license to the then licensee under the terms and conditions of the original license—

And so forth.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have not a copy of the amendment, but I may ask to-morrow morning that the amendment be reconsidered. I ask now that the section may go over, with the understanding that if I desire to-morrow to ask that the amendment be reconsidered the request will be granted.

Mr. NELSON. Does the Senator insist upon having the section go over?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I want to have it go over.

Mr. NELSON. All right, Mr. President. Section 16 is the next section.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 22, to strike out section 17 in the following words:

SEC. 17. That the charges arising from licenses hereunder shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States. Fifty per cent of the charges arising from licenses hereunder for the occupancy and use of national forests is hereby reserved and appropriated as a special fund in the Treasury to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture in the survey, construction, and maintenance of roads and trails within such national forests. Fifty per cent of the charges arising from licenses hereunder for the occupancy and use of national parks is hereby reserved and appropriated as a special fund in the Treasury, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the improvement and development of such parks. Fifty per cent of the charges arising from licenses hereunder for the occupancy and use of public lands, and of national monuments, and power site or other reserves outside of national forests, shall be paid into, reserved, and appropriated as a part of the reclamation fund created by the act of Congress approved June 17, 1902, known as the reclamation act. All proceeds from any Indian reservation shall be placed to the credit of the Indians of such reservation. Fifty per cent of the charges arising from all other licenses hereunder is hereby reserved and appropriated as a special fund in the Treasury to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in the maintenance and operation of dams and other navigation structures owned by the United States, or in the construction, maintenance, or operation of headwater or other improvements of navigable waters of the United States.

And to insert in lieu the following:

SEC. 17. That the charges arising from licenses hereunder shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and shall be reserved as a special fund therein. Such part of said fund as Congress may from time to time direct shall be appropriated toward paying the costs of administration of this act and of conducting the investigations authorized by this act. The remainder of said fund, if any, shall be expendable under the direction of the commission in the maintenance and operation of dams or other navigation structures owned by the United States or in the construction, maintenance, and operation of headwater or other improvements of streams upon which the commission is authorized to issue licenses under this act: Provided, That all proceeds from any Indian reservation shall be placed to the credit of the Indians of such reservation.

Mr. LENROOT. I ask that that section may go over. It is dependent upon the action that may be taken on section 10.

Mr. NELSON. The Senator is correct. Let that section go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be passed over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 7, 1920, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 6, 1920.

RENT COMMISSION OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

James F. Oyster, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Rent Commission of the District of Columbia.

A. Leftwich Sinclair, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Rent Commission of the District of Columbia.

Guy Mason, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Rent Commission of the District of Columbia.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Carl A. Hatch, of Clovis, N. Mex., to be collector of internal revenue, district of New Mexico. New appointment.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

CAVALRY ARM.

Second Lieut. James C. Styron, Coast Artillery Corps, to be second lieutenant of Cavalry, with rank from November 1, 1918.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

Second Lieut. Auston M. Wilson, jr., Cavalry, to be second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps, with rank from November 1, 1918.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 6, 1920.

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

To be lieutenant commanders.

Stuart E. Bray.
Leonard R. Agrell.

To be lieutenants.

Clarence A. Hawkins.
Horatio S. Ford.
Otto H. H. Strack.
John E. Warris.

To be lieutenants (junior grade).

Richard Monks.
Clarence E. Young.
Arthur H. Daniels.
Richard B. Fuller.
John H. Wolters.
Raymond C. Hunt.
William H. Ryan, jr.
Martin J. Jukick.

To be assistant surgeons in the Naval Reserve, with rank of lieutenant (junior grade).

William E. Smith.
Alfred L. Gaither.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 6, 1920.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in heaven, true to Thyself and ever constant in the obligations Thou hast assumed toward Thy children, give us the strength, the courage, the fortitude, to accept life with all its complications, in full faith and confidence in the overruling of Thy providence to the good of all souls; that we may think right, do right, as it is given us to see the right as we journey on toward that bourne from whence no traveler ever returns; and thus confirm our highest conceptions and be well pleasing in Thy sight. Under the spiritual leadership of the world's Great Exemplar. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. MOON (at the request of Mr. SIMS), indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. THOMPSON (at the request of Mr. STEPHENS of Ohio), for 10 days, on account of sickness in family.

To Mr. CULLEN, until further notice, on account of serious illness of his mother.

To Mr. BROWNING (at the request of Mr. ACKERMAN), for one week, on account of illness.

To Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. TAGUE, for three days, on account of illness.

To Mr. CANDLER (at the request of Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi), on account of illness of his wife.

To Mr. MCKEOWN, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. BRAND, for three days, on account of illness in family.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 25. An act for the relief of Benjamin O. Kerlee;

S. 2207. An act admitting civilian employees of the United States Government stricken with tuberculosis to Army and Navy and Public Health Service hospitals;

S. 413. An act for the relief of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. (Ltd.); and

S. 2189. An act to provide for agricultural entries on coal lands in Alaska.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 25. An act for the relief of Benjamin O. Kerlee; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2189. An act to provide for agricultural entries on coal lands in Alaska; to the Committee on the Territories.

S. 413. An act for the relief of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. (Ltd.); to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2207. An act admitting civilian employees of the United States Government stricken with tuberculosis to Army and Navy and Public Health Service hospitals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill; and pending that motion, I desire to see if we can not arrange for a definite period for general debate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. CARTER. May I ask the gentleman from New York how much time he contemplates for general debate?

Mr. SNYDER. I think we will need two hours and a half on this side.

Mr. CARTER. I have not requests for quite that much time over here, Mr. Speaker, but I will agree to that, and if we can get through before——

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to have it understood that when the general debate does close this afternoon that that will end the general debate on the bill.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman wants the general debate to close to-day?

Mr. SNYDER. To close to-day.

Mr. CARTER. That is perfectly agreeable to me.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that unanimous consent is asked that general debate be limited to five hours, half of the time to be controlled by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] and half by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER].

Mr. CARTER. And general debate to be closed this afternoon, as I understand it.

The SPEAKER. Five hours of general debate?

Mr. SNYDER. Five hours.

Mr. CARTER. The chairman gives notice that he intends to complete it to-day.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman to mean that should the House not stay in session five hours to-day, but sees fit to quit work, then general debate would, ipso facto, close?

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that I did not quite mean that. What I meant was that we desire to finish general debate to-day and take up the reading of the bill to-morrow or the day following.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object for the purpose of asking one other question, in view of the fact that there is to be much legislation to be considered by the House between now and the 1st of June, at least, why not on these appropriation bills limit the general debate to the consideration of the measure before the House?

Mr. SNYDER. I am willing to agree with the gentleman on the other side that general debate shall close at 5 o'clock, and that the time between now and then shall be equally divided between each side.

Mr. CARTER. That will be satisfactory.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from New York why he wants the four hours of general debate?

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman from Missouri that there has been a tremendous amount of investigation, and this bill needs a great deal of debate. There are many questions that will come up.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the speeches are going to be confined to the bill, I have no sort of objection, but I am tired of hearing political harangues in this House from either side.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman from Missouri that I have no requests for time other than for speeches that will be practically to the bill itself and to matters of economy. So far as I know, I have had no requests for any political debate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There are times for political debate, but I want to get away from here some time next summer.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I again ask the chairman why not limit the general debate to the consideration of this measure?

Mr SNYDER. You can not do that.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman allots the time, and he can control the Members to whom he allots it.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that there is nobody who desires to move more rapidly than myself in these matters, but there must be a reasonable time for now and then an occasional remark in reference to something else, and I would not want to agree to limit the debate entirely to the measure.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CARTER. Do I understand the request of the gentleman from New York now to be that general debate close not later than 5 o'clock and the time to be equally divided between the wo sides?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. Suppose the debate is closed at 5 o'clock, is it the purpose to begin the reading of the bill this afternoon or to-morrow?

Mr. SNYDER. It was not my intention to do that; but, so far as I am concerned, I am willing to go on with it.

Mr. CARTER. I suggest that we read the first paragraph this afternoon.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I renew the request that general debate close at not later than 5 o'clock this afternoon, the time to be equally divided between the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] and myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that general debate close not later than 5 o'clock this afternoon, the time to be divided equally, half to be controlled by himself and half by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER]. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 11368, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921.

Mr. SNYDER. I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to myself. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, in presenting this appropriation bill at this time, and in order later on to be able, perhaps, to answer certain questions which may arise, I think it proper to read into the RECORD the authority for the investigation which the committee made of Indian affairs previous to the framing of the bill now before the House. In the current act, section 28, it was provided:

That during this Congress those members of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, not less than five in number, who are Members of the Sixty-fifth Congress, are authorized to conduct hearings and investigate the conduct of the Indian Service, at Washington, D. C., and elsewhere, and the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available, is hereby appropriated for expenses incident thereto. The said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to examine into the conduct and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and all its branches and agencies, their organization and administration, to examine all books, documents, and papers in the said Bureau of Indian Affairs, its branches or agencies, relating to the administration of the business of said bureau, and shall have and is hereby granted authority to subpœna witnesses, compel their attendance, administer oaths, and to demand any and all books, documents, and papers of whatever nature relating to the affairs of Indians as conducted by said bureau, its branches and agencies. Said committee is hereby authorized to employ such clerical and other assistance, including stenographers, as said committee may deem necessary in the proper prosecution of its work: Provided, That stenographers so employed shall not receive for their services exceeding $1 per printed page.

Pursuant to that order, the prosecution of this investigation was immediately taken up on the part of the chairman, and later on, with the assistance of the committee, a tentative plan of investigation was brought about, and the committee was divided under three headings, known as committee No. 1, committee No. 2, and committee No. 3. Committee No. 1 was to investigate the bureau and administration. That committee was composed of Messrs. ELSTON, KELLY of Pennsylvania, and HASTINGS. Committee No. 2 was to investigate reimbursables, tribal and Treasury funds, and it was composed of Messrs. RHODES, HERNANDEZ, and HAYDEN. Committee No. 3 was to investigate consolidation of boarding schools in order to increase the advantages of pupils and decrease the cost to the Government, and that committee was composed of Messrs. REBER, SINCLAIR, and CARTER. It was authorized to develop the savings which could be made in reducing the number of schools by utilizing the capacity of the schools now in operation and by providing them with scholars from adjoining schools. That committee was also authorized to develop the saving and to show the increased efficiency and advantage to the people by further consolidation of schools from not less than 500 pupils.

This would contemplate additions and enlargements of school property and the consideration of the environment and proximity of the number of scholars who could be gathered at one point, the theory being that a child attending boarding school is just as well off 500 miles as he would be 100 miles from home. The committee was also authorized to ascertain what additional day schools are necessary to provide the various Indian tribes with schools promised in treaties or agreements.

The chairman wants to avail himself of the opportunity at this time to say that during all this long period of investigation, which ran nearly all the latter part of the summer and during the late fall, practically all the members of the committee and the members of the subcommittees gave every aid and assistance possible in bringing about a complete and careful investigation of all of these matters. Anyone who has had the time to look over the vast amount of information thus brought to light will readily see that a great amount of work was done. I believe that if we can write into the law the suggestions that were made and which are now contained in the bill many of the difficulties we have been struggling under in that department for years will be eliminated and great benefits will accrue not only to the older Indians but to the Indian children, and the saving of the money of the Indians and the funds of the people of the United States will be tremendously conserved. I repeat, I want to take this opportunity to thank my colleagues on the committee on both sides for their efforts in assisting to bring about this result.

In taking up the work of this investigation we endeavored to carry it on in sequence, beginning with the bureau here in Washington. In that investigation we developed the fact that certain appropriations had been carried for years as reimbursables that should have been carried as gratuities. We also found in the reimbursable items for irrigation purposes that the same state of affairs existed. Money in large amounts for many years, dating back as far as 1884, had been appropriated for reimbursable irrigation projects as gratuities, down to August 1, 1914, when, by some wave of imagination, some Member of this body or somebody outside conceived the idea that the law should be changed by adding the words "theretofore" or "thereafter" in such a way that nearly $7,000,000 which had been given to the Indians during these previous years should be changed into a liability and made a charge upon the Indians' property.

Your committee went into those matters very carefully and at great length, and it has concluded to bring the bill in here with language in it which will correct those matters and straighten up the books of the bureau, which up to the time of this investigation, in my judgment, have never been in shape so that any correct information could be obtained from them. I doubt very much now whether in this great mass of information we have here in the report there is anything of particularly great value, as it has seemed to me, at least, as one member of the committee. We had but one man before us out of a great number from the Secretary of the Interior down to the second and third assistants in the various departments who was able to give us any but a very small amount of information from his actual knowledge. That one man, however, the First Assistant Commissioner, was able at all times to give information from statistics which had been compiled by other members of the bureau, either in the field or here in Washington, which seemed to be nearly correct.

For instance, the first witness we had on the stand was the commissioner himself. When we got to the point of discussing the reimbursable irrigation items he made a speech, in which he stated that probably 50 per cent of those projects were defendable; that many of them were of a doubtful character, and that some should be eliminated entirely. Mind you, gentlemen, we already have $20,000,000 in those projects, and the estimates for the completion of the same run into much more than $20,000,000.

Later on in the investigation, when the chairman insisted that the information he desired to have from the commissioner should be of his own knowledge and not from members of his staff who sat around him with information from books, he was practically helpless, and when the question was put to him as to whether or not the work under these projects was being done by force account or by contract, he was able to state that he thought there was some done each way, but he could not tell whether any part of the work was being done by contract on any particular project, or any part of it was being done by force account, or whether any of the work that was being done by the Reclamation Service under his supervision was being done by contract or by force account. Neither could he give the name of one single contractor, although he admitted that much of the work was being done by contract; and, finally, after having made the statement which I have quoted, that probably 50 per cent of these projects were defendable, that some of them were of a doubtful character, and that some should be eliminated entirely, he left the stand with the agreement with the chairman that he did not know anything about any particular one of these projects, in particular or general.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Are these projects solely for the benefit of the Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. I am glad the gentleman asked that. It will take me some time to answer that question, but I will say that 90 per cent of the land which is being cultivated or used under these projects is being cultivated and used by white men. We have traced back the original policy laid out by the bureau, as far as 1789, and it was to create irrigation schemes for the purpose of making the Indian an agriculturist; but in the last few years it has been found that the Indian will not make an agriculturist. He will not be a farmer except to a very limited degree. So since these vast schemes have been inaugurated and so much money has been spent on them the department, as you will note if you look at the testimony of Secretary Lane in answer to questions by myself, practically admits that while they have not stated that the policy has been changed, the course of events has so changed the situation that now they are irrigating the Indian's land for the use of the white man for the indirect benefit of the Indian. So we find that in the larger projects, where there are 30,000 acres being cultivated, 25,000 or 26,000 acres are being cultivated by white men and only 3,000 or 4,000 by the Indians.

Mr. LAZARO. Will the gentleman yield in that connection?

Mr. SNYDER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. LAZARO. The gentleman said for the indirect benefit of the Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. LAZARO. What does the Indian get out of it and what does the white man get?

Mr. SNYDER. I will tell you just what the Indian gets. If, after the white man has taken over this property, he is able to pay, and if the final amount that will be assessed against the acreage when the scheme is finished is less than the amount that the Indian Bureau agreed to sell the property to the white man for, the Indian gets the difference. That is in cases where the title passes. In many of these projects the Indian leases the land that has been allotted to him for so much a month or so much per annum. That, of course, goes into a tribal fund. Eventually some part of it may find its way back to the Indians. I hope that answers the gentleman's question.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield further.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Was it expected originally that all of these amounts that have been paid on these various schemes would be paid back to the Treasury? Is that the reason why they were called reimbursable?

Mr. SNYDER. I stated here in the beginning that we have discovered that practically all the appropriations made previous to August 4, 1914, for Indian projects were appropriated as gratuities; but on that date, in an appropriation bill which was passed by this House, some one wrote into the law the language that all moneys "theretofore or thereafter" expended upon these projects should become a charge against the land and collected from the people who owned the lands. I maintain that that was illegal, that it was an injustice, that it is not collectible, and that it is impossible to collect moneys which were advanced from 1888 down to this time.

The same thing applies to $2,500,000 that has been appropriated since that date for the purpose of helping to survey the land. There is a charge on the books of the bureau against unknown Indians of $2,500,000, that is absolutely uncollectible, that, in the judgment of the committee, would cost $10 to collect every $1 that might be collected upon any one of those lands. So I say that on August 4, 1914, in order that a liability should be turned into an asset to make a showing, some one wrote into the law that all of the moneys expended for this purpose "theretofore and thereafter" should be a charge against the land.

We have all the record on the subject that can be found. It is impossible to trace the man who made that suggestion. We have been through all the records. Some remarks were made about it on the floor here, but only as to one minor point. The original bill contained the words "heretofore, herein, and hereafter." The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asked whether there was any space of time between "heretofore" and "hereafter," and on his suggestion the word "herein" was stricken out. So nearly $8,000,000 has been appropriated under the guise of reimbursable, of which we believe no single dollar can ever be collected. On the other hand, to answer the gentleman's question more definitely, as to moneys which have been expended since that time on projects where the law definitely said how the money should be returned, there have been nearly $20,000,000 expended on those projects, not one penny of which has ever been returned; and until this investigation was started nobody on earth had ever suggested that there would ever be a time when any part of it should be returned or any arrangement made to have it returned. But it was found by the committee that men have been operating farms on projects where great profits were being made, and they were getting the same value from the water by the use of it as if the project was completed 50 years hence. So we have written language into the bill that will make it necessary for the Secretary of the Interior to make an arrangement that every user of water shall recompense the Government for a reasonable amount per annum, or no money appropriated in the bill for the purpose of further development of the scheme can be used.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. In other words, everybody using the water will have to pay for it?

Mr. SNYDER. They will.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I congratulate the gentleman and the committee for having put it on a business basis.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will yield, there is a difference between the payments for irrigation purposes. One is for the water use and the other for the improvements made. I do not think the gentleman made it quite clear that they are to pay for the water and for the improvements that have been made.

Mr. SNYDER. I think what the gentleman from Oklahoma has in mind is that in every one of these projects in addition to the capital amount there is a charge for maintenance and operation. That is supposed to be collected from the users of the water. After they have spent three millions and a half for maintenance during all these years they have succeeded in collecting $800,000.

Now, in speaking about the commissioner, he is a splendid gentleman and undoubtedly has a general knowledge of Indian affairs, but as a business proposition he is impossible. We have had to go ahead and establish regulations and new methods for operating the Indian Bureau. Why, gentlemen, the Indian Bureau is a government within itself as it is now managed. There is not a single activity carried on in the Government itself that is not carried on under the Indian Bureau, except that of the Army and the Navy.

Originally it was the plan to develop that bureau in the interest of the Indian, to educate him and to encourage him to become a citizen. But every single activity which could be dragged into it under the guise of some benefit to the Indian has been injected, until it would take not only the three months we have spent in the investigation but it would take double that time to make a comprehensive report of the things which are wrong in the bureau and which ought to be corrected. I will say to you that you may take five of the best men in the House, let them work on it a year, and they could not thrash it out. There are treaties which ought to be wiped out. There is not one but which ought to be modified and brought back to a basis which would compare with the period we are now in. Treaties made 75 and 80 years ago are still in existence, and no modification has been made in the meantime. They bring in estimates under the treaty for the benefit of the Navajo Indians of $100,000 to buy land for the Navajos. The Navajos now have from 13,000,000 to 27,000,000 acres of land, and yet they want to buy more land. It seems that some have grown too big for the reservation, and having got them on the public land they do not want to move them, and so they want $100,000 to buy them more land on the public domain. I do not believe we ought to go into that thing.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Is it not true that the commissioner stated to the committee that it was the true theory that finally this would be eliminated after all the work was done, and still they are all the time trying to increase it?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; I am glad the gentleman asked that question. In the seven years that the commissioner has had charge of the bureau the cost of operating it has increased a million dollars per annum. During that period the number of Indians have been reduced from 21,000 or 70,000, God knows which, and notwithstanding that the annual expense of that bureau has increased $6,000,000 per annum. When the present commissioner took it over the expenditures of the bureau were about nine million three or four hundred thousand dollars. In the estimates for this bill they asked us to legislate into the bill $17,400,000. During that period the number of statutory employees on the rolls of the bureau have increased by thousands, until to-day it is over 6,000. Think of it, in that one little bureau! My opinion is, and I state it without fear of contradiction by the commissioner or anybody else, that this present commissioner has cost the Government of the United States in the neighborhood of $40,000,000. Think of an increase of $6,000,000 a year and the number of restricted Indians reduced from 21,000 or 71,000! It has been believed by myself and everybody else that the Indian Bureau was a diminishing bureau, but, gentlemen, it only diminishes in this way: It diminished the number of Indians over which it has restriction, but the expenses of operating for the smaller number is appreciating all the time.

Gentlemen, let me tell you something. They have run up against a stone wall, and these expenditures are going to be stopped right now to the extent that this committee can go. [Applause.]

I want to congratulate the members of the committee on the Democratic side, because during this discussion and investigation they have been just as anxious to get to the bottom of the situation and cut off the expense and get down to business as we have been on our side.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The Indian Commissioner happens to be from my State and is a friend of mine. I wish the gentleman would explain how he has cost this country $40,000,000.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will take the record he can readily see for himself. The appropriations are calculated for 10 years and are inserted in the report. They are figures which were obtained from the commissioner's own office, from his own ledger, and in the seven years he has been in charge of the bureau the annual expense of operating it has increased $6,000,000 per annum.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. I will answer my colleague from Texas. Three words will explain the declaration made by the gentleman from New York. The three words are "partisan Republican politics."

Mr. SNYDER. Oh, very well. I will state to the gentleman that that is the first bit of politics that has entered into the discussion of this measure, and we have been deliberating over it for more than three months, and I can see now that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has not looked at the record; he has made no study of the question and does not know what he is talking about.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, the gentleman from Texas is more discerning than the gentleman from New York would realize.

Mr. SNYDER. Oh, I appreciate the great ability of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] and I also appreciate other things about him, as I think does everyone else.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I understood the gentleman from New York to say $40,000,000. The gentleman now says $6,000,000.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will take the appropriations for the 10 years and take the increases for the 7 years that he has been in, he will see that I am conservative.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Does the gentleman state now $40,000,000 or $6,000,000?

Mr. SNYDER. I say this, that the expenditures have increased $6,000,000 per annum and that during his period in office the increase for seven years is more than $40,000,000.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Will the gentleman back that up?

Mr. SNYDER. Certainly.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I wish the gentleman would.

Mr. SNYDER. I will show it to the gentleman right in this report. Here are the figures, the appropriations for the last 10 years. Mr. Chairman, I want now to close my remarks by reading the report of the committee.

Approximately 350,000 Indians were under the supervision of the Indian Bureau. The number of restricted Indians under the supervision of the Indian Service at this time amounts to 229,000, of which 23,000 are located in the Five Civilized Tribes. There are approximately 150 Indian reservations in the United States, located largely west of the Mississippi River and scattered among 22 States of the Union, 36 of which comprise reservations opened, 14 partly opened, 60 reservations not opened but containing surplus area, and 46 reservations closed, which means that there are no other lands to allot in the last-mentioned class. Outside of the Five Civilized Tribes, there have been about 130,000 allotments made to Indians, the aggregate area of which is 20,000,000 acres.

From May 8, 1906, the date of the first congressional act authorizing fee patents, 20,844 fee patents have been issued to Indians, involving an area of 2,500,000 acres. Competency commissions actively began their work in the early part of 1916 and have visited 44 Indian reservations, and on their recommendations 3,114 fee patents have been issued, involving an area of 413,639 acres.

Under the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 312), the restrictions have been removed from 12,294 tracts by the Secretary of the Interior, the area of which aggregates 858,000 acres. Under that part of the act of May 27, 1908, and other congressional acts removing restrictions on the land of allottees of one-half or less Indian blood in the Five Civilized Tribes, the restrictions have been removed from 71,198 Indians, involving an area of 12,252,615 acres.

All allotted Indians in the Five Civilized Tribes are citizens of the United States. It is estimated that in other parts of the country containing Indian population approximately 75,000 Indians have been made citizens. Restrictions removed in the Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, on recommendation of competency commissions, total 1,816 cases.

It will be noted that the estimate this year was by far the largest ever presented by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. It will be noted, also, that the total amount of the estimate has been reduced approximately $4,235,750, or about 25 per cent. Every item of reduction can be justified. These conclusions have been brought about by reason of the authority given your committee in the current Indian appropriation bill, for a thorough investigation of the bureau and the service. Your committee sat at intervals for something over two months during the late summer and early fall, in the Indian Affairs Committee room, and had before it the Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Director of the Reclamation Service, the Director of the Health Service, the Director of the Forestry Service, the Chief Engineer of the Irrigation Service of the Indian Bureau, the assistant commissioner, and other witnesses from each of these departments, both from the bureaus, and in some cases from the field. The result of this investigation can be found in volumes 1 to 17, inclusive, with index, which are accessible to the membership of the House.

It will be noted that there are several radical changes in legislation in this bill. It was found that several branches of the service were being handled either gratuitously in the interest of the Indian and the white man or under the guise of "reimbursables," which mean, in most cases, the same thing, which ought, for years, to have been self-sustaining. We have attempted in this bill to put into the law language which will make those sections of the department self-supporting in the future.

Indian schools.

Type of school.	Total capacity.	Average attendance.
Nonreservation	7,842	6,203
Reservation, boarding	10,511	7,493
Day	19,883	12,109
Total capacity, all schools		38,236
Average attendance		25,824
Apparent unused capacity		12,412

In the hearings it was disclosed that there is a very large surplus capacity in all branches of the schools. Therefore it was determined certain eliminations should be immediately made, both in the interest of the education of the Indian himself and of the Treasury of the United States, and a comprehensive plan of reduction of the schools, until such time as by justified efforts the capacity of the various schools is more nearly occupied, was laid out. This change will bring about no hardship to the pupils, and will insure larger savings to the Government, as practically all of these schools are maintained by gratuitous appropriations.

Under the heading of "Reimbursables for irrigation and for industrial purposes," the hearings disclosed that for many years prior to August 1, 1914, a very large per cent of the moneys appropriated for irrigation was appropriated as gratuities. We found this amount to be something over two and one-half million dollars. On the date mentioned, under an appropriation act of that date covering the Indian Service, a provision was inserted in the bill to the effect that all moneys theretofore or hereafter expended upon these projects should become reimbursable and chargeable against the land. We are asking to have that legislation repealed, as your committee does not believe that character of legislation is fair or constitutional. The amount involved, in the judgment of the committee, is impossible of collection. In another item, namely, "Surveying of Indian lands," we find this item has always been carried as a reimbursable, and that nearly $3,000,000 has been spent under the guise of reimbursables which all concede is impossible of collection. We are asking in this bill for the repeal of the acts which have made this item reimbursable, thereby in both mentioned cases clearing up and straightening up the books of the Indian Bureau, taking from them an item of nearly $6,000,000, which appears as an asset to the United States, but which is more of a liability, due to the fact that, in the judgment of your committee, it would cost more to attempt to collect these items than the Government would recover, and therefore we believe it is good business judgment to strike from the books these items which were unfairly and illegally charged against the Indian.

In the larger amounts expended by the Government for irrigation schemes under the guise of "reimbursables" we find that upward of $20,000,000 has been laid out, all to be reimbursed, but to the present time no part of which has been paid back to the Treasury. Our investigation shows that in nearly every instance where the Government in the so-called interest of the Indian has installed an irrigation project the development is far ahead of the requirement of the Indian, in some cases to the extent of 60,000 to 70,000 acres; so your committee has seen fit to adopt what may seem radical legislation, and is endeavoring to enact into law a provision which will force the Secretary of the Interior to make an arrangement with the users of the water supplied by these irrigation schemes which will pay back, in many cases, immediately into the Treasury the pro rata amount per acre to liquidate amounts already advanced and which are to be advanced in the future. In the meantime we have seen fit to reduce the appropriation for these activities in all cases to the amount we believe reasonable for maintenance and operation and for the prevention of undue depreciation until such time as the land already irrigated is more nearly under cultivation.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. I want to ask the gentleman about the reductions which have been made, because it will probably come up in the debate on the bill. The principal reductions which have been made have been made possible on account of curtailing the irrigation projects, have they not?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; that and the elimination of schools. I have not gone into the school question very deeply, but the figures which are stated above will give some general idea of how the matter has been handled under the splendid, efficient management of the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs. As those figures show, we have a total capacity of nonreservation boarding schools of 7,842 pupils and an average attendance of 6,203. There are 23 nonreservation boarding schools and 87 reservation boarding schools which have a total capacity of 10,511, with an average attendance of 7,493. We have 197 reservation day schools, as near as we can get the figures, with a total capacity of 19,883 and an average attendance of 12,128. The total capacity of all schools is 38,236 and the average attendance 25,824, leaving an apparent unused capacity of 12,412.

In corroboration of our judgment in this particular, we have the following statement of the Secretary of the Interior:

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask you a final question on this proposition to get your idea. Do you think, where an irrigation project is 10,000 acres ahead of the amount actually being cultivated, that more money except a sufficient amount to keep in practical working order that part which has been made ready for irrigation purposes should be expended? I have set the figure at 10,000 acres because I think that is too much, but I want to see whether you agree with me on that or not.

Secretary LANE. I should say as a matter of original policy, and you know we are not dealing now with matters of original policy, because these things are done and they were not done in my time, but as a matter of original policy you ought to develop very little ahead of the use that is made of the land. But if you have a group of men, white men or Indians, that are far on one side and whose lands can not be used unless they have water, I believe in spending the money to let these men have the water, so that they can come in and produce crops. I suppose the same condition exists as to Indians that exists as to white men, that some will use the water and use it profitably and others will not use it.

The CHAIRMAN. Then, it is safe for this committee to consider these propositions along the suggestion that you have made in answer to this question?

Secretary LANE. I think so. That is the way I would look at it if I was on the committee.

By this means your committee believes, so far as the future is concerned, that by the time it will be necessary to furnish further capital amounts for the enlargement of these projects a sufficient sum of money will be returned on that which has already been loaned to carry on the projects, and that no large amounts can then possibly be called from the Treasury of the United States.

It seems to the committee that there is very little understanding among the people, and perhaps among the membership of the House, of the very many ramifications and activities embodied in the Indian Service. The investigation has disclosed that practically every activity carried on by every other branch of the Government is also carried on within the Indian Bureau, except, possibly, the Army and Navy. In fact, the bureau seems to the committee to be almost a government within a government, and so little attention has been paid to it that the appropriations during the last six years have increased from nine millions plus to approximately sixteen millions. The statutory list of employees in the service at the present time is something over 6,000. Your committee, for want of time, did not take up the question of reclassification or revision of the employees of the bureau, but it expects, in the spring, when its investigation is carried to the field, to be able to make a showing in its efforts to increase the efficiency of the service, and at the same time reduce the expenditures in proportion to the amount it has been able to reduce the items which it has thoroughly investigated, and which, it will be noted as stated in the beginning of the report, aggregate approximately 25 per cent of the estimate asked for; and your committee feels certain that with the amount of money allowed in this bill the service will in no way be detrimentally affected.

For the purpose of comparison and for the benefit of our Texas friends, I append at this point a table showing the total amounts appropriated per annum for the Indian Service for the last 10 years. [Applause.]

1910	$9,731,427.86
1911	8,948,638.08
1912	9,163,933.63
1913	9,470,270.51
1914	10,037,694.74
1915	11,214,653.91
1916	11,214,653.91
1917	12,214,927.44
1918	12,036,874.05
1919	15,482,266.13
1920	15,273,608.84

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920.

GENERAL ITEMS.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Reimbursable:
Allotting reservations	6	$10,000.00	(1)		[1] $10,000.00
Irrigation reservations	14	253,750.00	$224,185.00		29,565.00
Determining heirs	122	100,000.00	100,000.00
Industry among Indians	129	100,000.00	100,000.00
		463,750.00	424,185.00		39,565.00
Gratuities:
Allotting reservations	6	(2)	10,000.00	[2] $10,000.00
Suppressing liquor traffic	14	100,000.00	75,000.00		25,000.00
Relieving distress, etc	41	375,000.00	375,000.00
Support of Indian schools	45	1,750,000.00	1,600,000.00		150,000.00
School and agency buildings	52	335,000.00	335,000.00
School transportation	56	72,000.00	70,000.00		2,000.00
Industrial work and timber	64	475,000.00	465,000.00		10,000.00
Purchase and transportation of supplies	81	300,000.00	300,000.00
Telegraph and telephone	97	8,000.00	8,000.00
Court costs and fees	99	1,000.00	1,000.00
Expense Indian commissioners	100	10,000.00	10,000.00
Pay Indian police	103	200,000.00	200,000.00
Pay Indian judges	104	8,000.00	8,000.00
General expenses	105	135,000.00	135,000.00
Indian Service inspectors	121	25,000.00	25,000.00
Suppressing live-stock disease	135	50,000.00	50,000.00
Developing water supply	135	50,000.00	50,000.00
Reimbursement, A. R. Snyder		27.20			27.20
Advertising sale of lands	143		6,000.00	6,000.00
		3,894,027.20	3,723,000.00	16,000.00	187,027.20
Total general items		4,357,777.20	4,147,185.00	16,000.00	226,592.20

[1] Gratuity in 1921 bill.

[2] Reimbursable in 1920 act.

ARIZONA.

Reimbursable:
Irrigation—
Pima lands	208	$15,000.00	$15,000.00
Colorado River	210	188,000.00	89,400.00		$98,600.00
Navajo and Hopi water supply	217	30,000.00	40,000.00	$10,000.00
Ganado irrigation	222	3,000.00	3,500.00	500.00
Pumping plant, San Xavier	225	16,500.00	18,500.00	2,000.00
Gila River diversion dam	228		150,000.00	150,000.00
Florence diversion dam	229		75,000.00	75,000.00
		252,500.00	391,400.00	237,500.00	98,600.00
Treaties: With Navajos		100,000.00	100,000.00
Tribal funds:
Pumping plant, San Carlos	226	17,500.00	38,500.00	21,000.00
Power plant, Fort Apache	227	17,600.00	7,750.00		9,850.00
		35,100.00	46,250.00	21,000.00	9,850.00
Gratuities:
Support of Indians	194	330,000.00	200,000.00		130,000.00
Fort Mohave School	194	38,850.00	68,850.00	30,000.00
Phoenix School	199	155,000.00	162,500.00	7,500.00
Truxton Canyon School	206	27,000.00	29,300.00	2,300.00
Papago water supply	213	52,000.00	52,000.00
Laguna Reservoir, New Mexico	223	5,000.00	(1)		[2] 5,000.00
Water, Salt River allottees		15,000.00			15,000.00
Yuma County officers' expenses		167.75			167.75
John Flanigan, expenses		300.00			300.00
Salt River bridge investigation		1,000.00			1,000.00
		624,317.75	512,650.00	39,800.00	151,467.75
Total, Arizona		1,011,917.75	1,150,300.00	398,300.00	259,917.75

[1] Increased to $10,000 and shown under "New Mexico" in 1921 bill.

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920—Continued.

CALIFORNIA.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Reimbursable:
Yuma irrigation	255	$131,564.94	$70,365.07		$61,199.87
Road from Hoopa	260	10,000.00	10,500.00	$500.00
		141,564.94	80,865.07	500.00	61,199.87
Tribal funds:
Riverside School	252	[1] 20,000.00			20,000.00
Klamath River Trail			3,215.12	3,215.12
		20,000.00	3,215.12	3,215.12	20,000.00
Gratuities:
Support of Indians	246	42,000.00	42,000.00
Land for homeless Indians	248	20,000.00	10,000.00		10,000.00
Riverside School	252	153,600.00	157,600.00	4,000.00
Fort Bidwell School	256	31,000.00	29,000.00		2,000.00
Greenville School	258	35,200.00	29,100.00		6,100.00
Volcan Cemetery tract	262		600.00	600.00
		281,800.00	268,300.00	4,600.00	18,100.00
Total California		443,364.94	352,380.19	8,315.12	99,299.87

[1] Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Sherman Institute.

FLORIDA.

Gratuities: Support of Seminoles	267	$20,000.00	$15,000.00		$5,000.00

IDAHO.

Reimbursable: Fort Hall irrigation	271	$50,000.00	$55,700.00	$5,700.00
Treaties:
Support of Bannocks	274	5,000.00	5,000.00
Support of Coeur d'Alenes	274	3,000.00	3,000.00
		8,000.00	8,000.00
Gratuities: Support Fort Hall Indians	271	30,000.00	30,000.00
Total Idaho		88,000.00	93,700.00	5,700.00

KANSAS.

Gratuities:
Haskell Institute, Lawrence	275	$187,600.00	$207,600.00	$20,000.00
Kickapoo School—
Support		23,400.00			$23,400.00
Two new plants	275		10,000.00	10,000.00
Total Kansas		211,000.00	217,600.00	30,000.00	23,400.00

MICHIGAN.

Gratuities: Mount Pleasant School	278	$90,750.00	$120,750.00	$30,000.00

MINNESOTA.

Reimbursable: Drainage assessments		$60,000.00			$60,000.00
Treaties: Support of Chippewa schools	219	4,000.00	$4,000.00
Tribal funds:
White Earth celebration	283	1,000.00	1,000.00
Logging, Red Lake forest		10,000.00			10,000.00
Bridge, Red Lake River		3,000.00			3,000.00
Chippewa Council expense		10,000.00			10,000.00
Constructing Chippewa homes		60,000.00			60,000.00
Roads, Chippewas	285	20,000.00	20,000.00
Road and bridge, Red Lake Reservation	285	10,000.00	10,000.00
Road work, Fond du Lac Reservation		2,000.00			2,000.00
Support Chippewas	286	100,000.00	100,000.00
		216,000.00	131,000.00		85,000.00
Gratuities:
Pipestone School	281	54,650.00	54,650.00
White Earth enrollment	284	2,000.00	1,000.00		1,000.00
Hattie A. McKusick claim	287		645.00	$645.00
		56,650.00	56,295.00	645.00	1,000.00
Total Minnesota		336,650.00	191,295.00	645.00	146,000.00

MISSISSIPPI.

Reimbursables: Choctaws, industry	287		[1] $7,500.00	[1] $7,500.00
Gratuities: Relief of Choctaws	287		[1] 22,500.00	[1] 22,500.00
Total Mississippi			30,000.00	30,000.00

[1] Reappropriation.

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920—Continued.

MONTANA.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Reimbursable:
Fort Belknap irrigation	294	$30,000.00	$30,000.00
Flathead irrigation	299	375,000.00	100,000.00		$275,000.00
Fort Peck irrigation	302	100,000.00	40,000.00		60,000.00
Blackfeet irrigation	302	50,000.00	25,000.00		25,000.00
		555,000 00	195,000.00		360,000.00
Treaties:
With Crows	295	5,500.00	5,500.00
Support Cheyenne and Arapahoes	296	80,000.00	80,000.00
		85,500.00	85,500.00
Tribal funds: Crow irrigation	302	150,000.00	150,000.00
Gratuities:
Support of Indians—
Blackfeet	293	50,000.00	50,000.00
Fort Belknap	291	20,000.00	20,000.00
Flathead	292	20,000.00	20,000.00
Fort Peck	293	30,000.00	30,000.00
North Cheyenne line riders	298	1,500.00	1,500.00
Support Rocky Boy Band	299	10,000.00	10,000.00
Blackfeet public school	303		15,000.00	$15,000.00
		131,500.00	143,500.00	15,000.00
Total Montana		922,000.00	577,000.00	15,000.00	360,000.00

NEBRASKA.

Gratuities: Genoa School	347	$92,000.00	$96,500.00	$4,500.00

NEVADA.

Reimbursable: Pyramid Lake irrigation	353	$5,400.00	$3,500.00		$1,900.00
Gratuities:
Support of Indians	350	18,500.00	18,500.00
Carson City School	351	98,750.00	94,000.00		4,750.00
		117,250.00	112,500.00		4,750.00
Total Navada		122,650.00	116,000.00		6,650.00

NEW MEXICO.

Reimbursable:
Mesa Verde Park-Gallup highway	362	$25,000.00	$11,000.00		$14,000.00
Road and bridge, Mescalero Reservation	363	25,000.00	25,000.00
San Juan River Bridge		4,226.14			4,226.14
Drainage Pueblo lands	364		6,500.00	$6,500.00
		54,226.14	42,500.00	6,500.00	18,226.14
Gratuities:
Land for Navajos			100,000.00	100,000.00
Albuquerque School	354	102,250.00	129,250.00	27,000.00
Santa Fe School	358	92,600.00	102,600.00	10,000.00
Attorney for Pueblos	361	5,000.00	5,000.00
Jemez and Zia Pueblo irrigation	362	31,000.00			31,000.00
Support of Indians			[1] 130,000.00	[1] 130,000.00
Laguna Reservoir	367		[2] 10,000.00	[2] 10,000.00
Wells on Pueblo lands	363		[3] 15,000.00	[3] 15,000.00
		230,850.00	491,850.00	292,000.00	31,000.00
Total New Mexico		285,076.14	534,350.00	298,500.00	49,226.14

[1] Included under "Arizona" in 1920 act. [2] $5,000 in 1920 act shown under "Arizona." [3] Included in "Jemez and Zia Pueblo irrigation" in 1920 act.

NEW YORK.

Treaties:
With Senecas	368	$6,000.00	$6,000.00
With Six Nations	369	4,500.00	4,500.00
Total New York		10,500.00	10,500.00

NORTH CAROLINA.

Gratuities: Cherokee School	369	$43,800.00	$47,800.00	$4,000.00

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920—Continued.

NORTH DAKOTA.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Tribal funds: Roads, etc., Standing Rock Reservation	379	$25,000.00	$25,000.00
Gratuities:
Support of—
Sioux, Devils Lake	372	5,000.00	5,000.00
Indians, Fort Berthold	372	30,000.00	15,000.00		$15,000.00
Turtle Mountain Band	373	13,000.00	13,000.00
Bismarck School	374	35,725.00	35,725.00
Fort Totten School	375	89,000.00	90,000.00	$1,000.00
Wahpeton School	377	55,800.00	53,800.00		2,000.00
Care insane Indians		676.00			676.00
Payment Fort Berthold land	380		1,265.20	1,265.20
		229,201.00	213,790.20	2,265.20	17,676.00
Total North Dakota		254,201.00	238,790.20	2,265.20	17,676.00

OKLAHOMA.

Treaties:
With Pawnees	389	$47,100.00	$47,100.00
Support of Quapaws	391	1,500.00	1,500.00
		48,600.00	48,600.00
Tribal funds:
Support of—
Kiowa Agency	383	30,000.00	30,000.00
Kiowa, Comanche, Apache	384	250,000.00	250,000.00
Osage School	392	40,000.00	45,000.00	$5,000.00
Support Osage Agency	392	65,000.00	65,000.00
Osage oil and gas production	392	35,000.00	45,000.00	10,000.00
Office building, Osage		[1] 10,000.00			10,000.00
Victor M. Locke, salary, expenses		1,290.26			1,290.26
		431,290.26	435,000.00	15,000.00	11,290.26
Gratuities:
Support of—
Wichitas	382	5,000.00	5,000.00
Cheyennes and Arapahoes	385	35,000.00	35,000.00
Kansas Indians	385	1,500.00	1,500.00
Kickapoo Indians	386	2,000.00	2,000.00
Poncas	386	8,000.00	8,000.00
Chilocco School	387	121,600.00	109,600.00		12,000.00
		173,100.00	161,100.00		12,000.00
Total Oklahoma		652,990.26	644,700.00	15,000.80	23,290.26

[1] $25,000 heretofore appropriated.

FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES.

Treaties: With Choctaws	409	$10,520.00	$10,520.00
Tribal funds:
Choctaw-Chickasaw per capita	398	8,000.00	8,000.00
Expense land sales	407	10,000.00	7,500.00		$2,500.00
Stuart, Lewis, Gorden, Rutherford		7,000.00			7,000.00
Wm. R. McIntosh claim		1,666.65			1,666.65
Jacob B. Moore claim		392.60			392.60
Cherokee interest		27,500.00			27,500.00
Geo. D. Rodgers, reimbursement		367.30			367.30
		54,926.55	15,500.00		39,426.55
Gratuities:
Administration	394	205,000.00	200,000.00		5,000.00
Probate attorneys	401	85,000.00	75,000.00		10,000.00
Cherokee Orphan School	404	43,000.00	71,500.00	$28,500.00
Indian schools	406	225,000.00	200,000.00		25,000.00
		558,000.00	546,500.00	28,500.00	40,000.00
Total, Five Tribes		623,446.55	572,520.00	28,500.00	79,426.55

OREGON.

Reimbursable:
Modoc Point irrigation	415	$5,000.00	$5,000.00
Gratuities:
Klamath Agency, support	411	6,000.00	6,000.00
Warm Springs Agency, support	411	4,000.00	4,000.00
Umatilla Agency, support	412	3,000.00	3,000.00
Salem school	412	150,000.00	162,000.00	$12,000.00
Grande Ronde-Siletz, support	415	3,000.00	3,000.00
		166,000.00	178,000.00	12,000.00
Total Oregon		171,000.00	183,000.00	12,000.00

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920—Continued.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Treaties:
Support Sioux Tribes	423	$307,000.00	$307,000.00
Education, Sioux Nation	424	200,000.00	200,000.00
		507,000.00	507,000.00
Tribal funds:
Support of Sioux	425	185,000.00	185,000.00
Purchase cattle, Rosebud	428	165,000.00			$165,000.00
Pine Ridge roads			25,000.00	$25,000.00
Cheyenne River roads			10,000.00	10,000.00
Cheyenne River Bridge			40,000.00	40,000.00
		350,000.00	260,000.00	75,000.00	165,000.00
Gratuities:
Flandreau School	416	92,750.00	90,750.00		2,000.00
Pierre School	419	74,250.00	64,250.00		10,000.00
Rapid City School	420	71,875.00	71,875.00
Yankton Sioux, support	425	12,000.00	9,000.00		3,000.00
Canton Insane Asylum	426	45,000.00	45,000.00
		295,875.00	280,875.00		15,000.00
Total South Dakota		1,152,875.00	1,047,875.00	75,000.00	180,000.00

UTAH.

Treaties: Support of Utes	428	$53,740.00	$53,740.00
Tribal funds:
Confederated bands	430	350,000.00	350,000.00
Uintah irrigation	433	100,000.00	127,200.00	$27,200.00
		450,000.00	477,200.00	27,200.00
Gratuities:
Support Indians in Utah	428	10,000.00	10,000.00
School aid, Duchesne and Uintah	435	12,000.00			$12,000.00
		22,000.00	10,000.00		12,000.00
Total Utah		525,740.00	540,940.00	27,200.00	12,000.00

WASHINGTON.

Reimbursable:
Yakima irrigation system		$15,000.00			$15,000.00
Wapato irrigation project	464	500,000.00	$300,000.00		200,000.00
Toppenish-Simcoe irrigation	474	75,000.00	125,000.00	$50,000.00
		590,000.00	425,000.00	50,000.00	215,000.00
Treaties: Support, Spokanes	444	1,000.00	1,000.00
Gratuities:
Support of—
D'Wamish Tribe et al	440	7,000.00	7,000.00
Makahs	441	2,000.00	2,000.00
Quinaielts, etc	441	1,000.00	1,000.00
Yakima Agency	442	3,000.00	3,000.00
Colville	443	13,000.00	13,000.00
Water, Yakima Reservation	445	100,000.00	35,000.00		65,000.00
Cushman School		65,000.00			65,000.00
		191,000.00	61,000.00		130,000.00
Total Washington		782,000.00	487,000.00	50,000.00	345,000.00

WISCONSIN.

Reimbursable:
Support of Pottawatomies	483	$15,500.00	$6,899.00		$8,601.00
Road, Red River Reservation		20,000.00			20,000.00
		35,500.00	6,899.00		28,601.00
Gratuities:
Hayward School	477	61,350.00	61,350.00
Tomah School	479	74,375.00	77,475.00	$3,100.00
Support of—
Chippewas	481	7,000.00	7,000.00
Pottawatomies	482	7,000.00	7,000.00
Relief St. Croix	485	1,000.00	1,000.00
		150,725.00	153,825.00	3,100.00
Total Wisconsin		186,225.00	160,724.00	3,100.00	28,601.00

Comparison of Indian appropriation bill ending July 1, 1921, with act ending July 1, 1920—Continued.

WYOMING.

	Page of hearing.	Act, 1920.	Bill, 1921.	Increase, 1921.	Decrease, 1921.
Reimbursable:
Big Wind River irrigation	503	$100,000.00	$75,000.00		$25,000.00
Riverton irrigation	505	200,000.00	50,000.00		150,000.00
Wind River diversion dam	507	50,000.00	22,000.00		28,000.00
Shoshone roads and bridges	509	25,000.00	15,000.00		10,000.00
		375,000.00	162,000.00		213,000.00
Treaties: Support, Shoshones	503	6,000.00	6,000.00
Gratuities:
Support of Shoshones	486	15,000.00	15,000.00
Shoshone School	487	41,250.00	32,500.00		8,750.00
		56,250.00	47,500.00		8,750.00
Total Wyoming		437,250.00	215,500.00		221,750.00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Tribal funds: For school purposes	511	$2,509,895.00	$1,436,604.00		$1,073,291.00
Gratuity: Investigation Indian affairs		15,000.00			15,000.00
Total miscellaneous		2,524,895.00	1,436,604.00		1,088,291.00

Mr. CARTER rose.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will not recognize the gentleman for that purpose. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. Is not a motion to rise in order at all times?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not recognized for that purpose. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. BLANTON. I merely made the motion so as to be able to check up and tally, hoping thereby to see how many Members we have present now in the consideration of this first appropriation bill.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER].

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, we are about to take up for consideration the first of the regular annual appropriation bills for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and it occurs to me that it is quite appropriate in connection with the consideration of this bill to discuss the general policy of appropriations for the fiscal year for which we are now about to make provision.

I have heretofore discussed the question of appropriations for the fiscal year 1921 from the standpoint of available revenue. I have called attention to the fact that during the next fiscal year we must reckon with a total of estimates and obligations now in sight of over $9,000,000,000; that as against this we have an estimate of receipts slightly in excess of $6,000,000,000, leaving a balance of estimated obligations and expenditures, in excess of estimated receipts, of more than $3,000,000,000. In this state of affairs there is but one real helpful, effectual record we can make, and that is a record of economy. [Applause.]

I have suggested that there must be a reduction in the appropriations below the estimates in excess of a billion dollars, if we hope to avoid serious financial difficulties.

I am glad to be able to say that the bill before us sets a very excellent example of what should be done by way of reducing the estimates. The estimates as presented in the Book of Estimates total $4,865,000,000. Of that sum a little over a billion and seventeen million dollars is for interest on the public debt, $475,000,000 of which is due us from foreign nations, none of which we will secure this year, according to the arrangements which have been made by the Treasury Department. Subtract this billion and seventeen million from the total of the estimate submitted in the Book of Estimates and we have about $3,850,000,000 as the sum in which we must find all of the savings below the estimate we can make this year. In order to save a billion dollars below these estimates there must be a reduction of 28 per cent in the estimates all along the line. The reduction below the estimates made in this bill is 25 per cent, and that is as much as I think we could reasonably expect because of the many items in the Indian appropriation bill, such as educational items, which are of a class that can not be reduced without failure to fulfill the Government's obligation toward its wards. The other items in the bill, those of development and extension of work of improvement that we would be very glad to carry on if we were in funds, have been reduced on the average about 50 per cent.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MONDELL. I will.

Mr. BUTLER. If the Congress succeeds in making the saving which the gentleman now speaking impresses upon us, what hope have we that we can escape borrowing three billions of dollars to float us along?

Mr. MONDELL. Well, my view of it is—and I am not an expert on matters of finance—my opinion is that if we can keep the appropriations a billion or a billion and a quarter below the present estimates we can carry the balance of the war overhang reasonably safely, as we are carrying it now, in short-time certificates; but if we indulge in expenditures which not only do not reduce the war overhang, but actually add to it, we will find ourselves in the position of an individual or a firm or corporation that is constantly straining its credits without immediate hope or expectation of being able to meet its obligations. Governments are no different from individuals or corporations in the matter of the effect of such operations on their credit, as is evidenced by the present condition of the credit of European States. People must know that obligations are certain to be promptly met, if the Government expects to maintain its credit at a high standard.

Mr. BUTLER. If the gentleman will yield again, as I am greatly interested in what he is saying, did I understand the gentleman to say that if Congress will reduce these expenditures by $1,200,000,900 or $1,500,000,000 we may escape the necessity of borrowing, and that we can float along until the next fiscal year?

Mr. MONDELL. In my opinion——

Mr. BUTLER. Which I value.

Mr. MONDELL. Though I am not posing as a financial expert——

Mr. BUTLER. But the gentleman has consulted with them——

Mr. MONDELL. In my humble opinion it would be a crime for the Government to attempt to borrow any more money during the next fiscal year. [Applause.] I do not believe it could be done without injury to the present holders of Government obligations. I do not believe it could be done without again starting in motion those causes that are constantly advancing the cost of living. We can not further increase Government obligations, thus expanding credits and to a certain extent actually increasing the circulating medium, without nullifying every effort that the Congress has made, that the administration has made, to combat the greatest evil of the time, the constanly mounting cost of commodities.

Mr. BUTLER. Now, let me ask the gentleman another question. Do I understand him to say—and his reasoning is very good—that in his judgment if the Congress can succeed in making these reductions in the estimates to the extent of twelve hundred or fifteen hundred millions of dollars we may escape the necessity of borrowing?

Mr. MONDELL. I do, unless—and I am about to discuss the "unless," if the gentleman will allow me——

Mr. BUTLER. I will be very glad to hear you.

Mr. MONDELL. I have tried to emphasize the fact that even with a reduction of a billion—it ought to be a billion and a quarter—in the appropriations as compared with the estimates presented in the Book of Estimates, we shall have accomplished little or nothing if, having effected these economies, we make appropriations for a variety of new items, enlargements, extensions, and pay increases in the public service.

But this does not state the entire case. It simply deals with the financial—the Treasury—view of the matter. It is our duty to also consider the matter of Government expenditure from the standpoint of its effect on the paramount problem of the day—the high and advancing cost of living.

We have, as legislators, tried to do what we could to reduce living costs by strengthening and extending the arm of the Federal Government for that purpose with legislation and appropriations. But all that we have done and all that we can hope to do in solving this problem will be nullified if we embark upon a program of liberal Federal expenditure; if we meet every demand or any considerable portion of the demands for increased compensation, for increased and extended Federal activities.

Let me quote from the very able report of the Secretary of the Treasury with regard to this subject:

> Government expenditure is, I need scarcely say, the most vital fundamental factor in increasing the cost of living. * * *
>
> What increases the general cost of living imposes an indirect tax on the whole people of the United States which, in the nature of things, bears more heavily upon the poor than upon the rich, and upon the needy than upon the poor, because expenditures for the necessities of life absorb practically the whole income of the poor and needy and a negligible portion of the income of the rich.
>
> Measures for governmental expenditures for the benefit of a portion of the community at the expense of the whole by adding to the cost of living, and to the burden it imposes upon the community as a whole, will only aggravate evils which the sentimental supporters of those measures think to mitigate, and the burdens thus imposed invariably fall most heavily upon those least able to bear them.

No stronger statement of the case than this can be made, and I quote it to emphasize the importance of keeping down Federal expenditures, not only because it is necessary to do so in order to keep our outlay within our income and to maintain a sound condition of the Treasury, but even more from the standpoint of its effect upon what is the paramount evil of the time—the mounting cost of commodities.

ECONOMY AND THE BUDGET.

There has been, and is, a very general and widespread public demand for the adoption by Congress of a budget system. Responding to that demand, the House has passed a comprehensive bill providing for such a system, and we anticipate the adoption of a budget system by the Congress at a reasonably early date. But we do not have to wait for the adoption of a budget system to practice the economies which such a system is intended to promote. We have now before us the facts and factors of a budget. It is true it has not been presented in a budgetary form, but it is here nevertheless. It is represented by the three enormous and rather appalling figures I have just quoted—nine billions of estimated obligations and expenditures, six billions of estimated income, three billions of estmated expenditures in excess of income—three billions of estimated deficit at the end of the fiscal year.

What are we going to do about it? Cut the estimates—trim them; lop them off; reduce them by a billion or a billion and a quarter. Yes; this we must do; but what profit shall it be if we do this and then proceed to meet every demand for new projects and enterprises—for extensions and enlargements of Federal activities; for the continuation of unnecessary activities now being carried on; for increase in salary, pay, and compensation to those in the Military and Civil Establishments of the Government? If we do these things, I can not promise the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] that we can escape the necessity of borrowing.

NOT INCLUDED IN THE ESTIMATES.

Let us not forget that in the nine billion and more of estimated obligations and expenditures for the next fiscal year not a penny was estimated for increased compensation for the employees in the civil establishments of the Government above what they are now receiving. Let us remember that in the enormous estimate of more than a billion dollars for the Military Establishment, more than the total annual cost of the Government at the outbreak of the World War, not a penny is estimated for increased pay to the officers and men of the Military Establishment. Furthermore, in that vast sum not a penny is estimated for general military training, the cost of which has been placed at varying sums from half a billion upward. In the naval estimates not a dollar is provided for increased pay or allowance for men or officers. We can not afford to forget that the sums of these estimates, stupendous as they are, contain no provision for these and a wide variety of purposes and enterprises, more or less meritorious, which are being urged and pressed upon the attention of Congress.

And having kept all of these things in mind, let me appeal to the gentlemen who voted for the budget to live up to their budget record, to prove true to the principles that they approved in their vote for the budget. A budget system carries no compulsion to vote the full sum of the estimates, but any budget system worth while is either persuasive or prohibitory against great increases and appropriations in excess of, beyond, and outside of the estimates, and if Congress is ever to operate under the restraints of a budget system, this is the time to begin. [Applause.]

ONLY ESSENTIAL AND IMPERATIVE EXPENDITURES SHOULD BE MADE.

I shall enter into no controversy with gentlemen who insist that proposals of increased expenditures which they advocate have merit; they must prove that they are imperative. I shall not quarrel with gentlemen who insist that certain river and harbor improvements are wise, useful, and of a character that will eventually be essential if we are to care for our growing and expanding commerce. The conclusive answer is that unless the matter is absolutely imperative it can not be undertaken, because we have not the funds.

I sympathize with the gentlemen who want a revival of public-building projects throughout the country. I think there is something in their argument that in addition to the needs of the public service the Government owes something to its communities to start enterprises that have heretofore been provided for and to inaugurate new projects that are found worthy, but all of these arguments find their answer in the fact that unless we increase taxes or sell bonds we have no funds for such purposes except where the need of the public service is imperative.

I do not pretend to deny that there is some logic, some reason in the insistent demand for increased pay for the officers of the Army and the Navy. I do regret the widespread propaganda on behalf of such increases, some of which seems to me scarcely in keeping with the ethics of the services, but I do feel justified in suggesting to the gentlemen who are pressing that demand that they point out to us where we are to obtain the funds with which to meet these proposed increases.

It is claimed that as recently presented these proposals for increased compensation amount to but $60,000,000 for the two services as compared with about three times that amount as first suggested several months ago, but even $60,000,000 is no trifling sum, though some seem to think it is, now that we are dealing with billions. The entire cost of the Military Establishment as recently as the fiscal year 1916 was only $117,000,000 as compared with estimates of over a billion for the next fiscal year, and no one knows what an increase of $60,000,000 proposed in the House might grow to be by the time the provision became a law.

ONE INCREASE LEADS TO ANOTHER.

I take it for granted that no one will claim that we could logically increase by any considerable sum the pay or allowances of officers of the Army and the Navy without including the Public Health Service, the Coast Guard—and what about the employees of the civil establishment of the Government? So far the maximum bonus of $240 per year to persons serving in the civilian branches of the Government service has not applied to anyone receiving upward of $2,500.

All of that very considerable body of people serving the Government in many lines, and faithful in the main, at salaries above $2,500 are certainly entitled to consideration the moment we begin any general increases of compensation at this time. Gentleman may have in mind what they consider comparatively small sums of increases in certain branches of the Government service, which they feel confident ought to be granted, but I imagine few of them have taken the trouble to figure out the sum total of increases that would be perfectly logical once we begin any considerable increase in any branch.

The president of the Federal Reserve Board, in a statement made the other day, called attention to the effect that increasing compensation had upon the cost of commodities, and expressed the opinion that increasing compensation had been the most potent factor in the constant increase of living costs and had defeated the very purpose of the increases. The president, a short time since, in connection with certain demands for increased wages, called attention to the vicious circle which had been developed under which increases of compensation had lost their value through a corresponding or even greater increase in living costs, and again I quote the Secretary of the Treasury in his statement that Government expenditure is the most vital fundamental factor in increasing the cost of living.

Let me suggest to gentlemen on either side of the House who think the case for the next campaign is made up, and that it is all over but the shouting, and that victory is bound to rest on one banner or the other, that we still have a good many things to think of and to reckon with, for the judgment of the American people will be registered on what occurs right up to the eve of election. The judgment will not depend on what somebody has done in the past, or wholly on what we have done in the past, but on what we do in the living present, with our problems before us, which we must meet with courage and efficiency.

I wish we were in funds so that we might meet every reasonable demand for the proper extension of legitimate lines of Government activity, for active development in every line of work in which the Federal Government is properly engaged. I wish we were in position where we might meet liberally the demands and requests for increased compensation, but I do not see how these things can be done unless some one shall tell us how to tap new sources of revenue. Even were we in a position to do all this with a liberal hand, should we indulge in such liberality at a time when the men best qualified to judge call our attention to the fact that every dollar we add to the present unavoidable enormous total of Federal expenditure increases the prices of commodities, reduces the purchasing power of wages, and delays the coming of the day when we may hope for a normal adjustment of income and outlay.

It may be that before the session closes we shall have effected such economies and conditions may have so changed that we may be justified in viewing with a more liberal eye some of the demands and requests that have and will be presented to the Congress and which do appeal to us. Let us wait on that event, and then consider these matters in the light of the situation as it then presents itself.

THREE COMPELLING REASONS.

There are at least three compelling reasons why we must economize, why we must reduce our appropriations in excess of a billion below the estimates, and why, having done that, we must decline to appropriate for objects and purposes not included in the estimates unless they are absolutely imperative. First, we can not do otherwise without doing violence to a budget policy which, as Members of the House, we have approved; second, we can not follow any other course without nullifying all of our professions and our efforts to reduce the high cost of living; third, we must follow this course or we face a deficit at the end of the fiscal year at least three times as great as our yearly total of expenditures prior to the beginning of the World War. We can not increase taxes; we should not issue bonds; there is no course open to us but to economize, and to economize to the limit. In other and future days we may have a choice and variety of opportunity before us, but now the only record we can make that will be really effective and highly useful, and that will be of real service to our country and to our countrymen, is a record of economy. We owe it to ourselves to make such a record in order to prove that we are faithful to our pledge to a system of budget economy. We owe it to our countrymen to make that record in order that by so doing we may be really helpful and effective in combating the tendency to a constantly increased cost of living and a constantly decreased value in the wage which men receive. We owe it to our country and to our people to economize that we may set an example of frugality and care in expenditure, an example now greatly needed throughout the land. We must economize in order that we may preserve a sound condition of the Treasury and move forward to those days we hope are coming when we shall have a normal state of affairs and a fair adjustment between income and outlay, individual and governmental. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has again expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] desire to use some time?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask the Clerk at the desk to read in my time a short resolution that has been pending before the Rules Committee for some time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read the resolution referred to.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 333.

Whereas one year has elapsed since the signing of the armistice; and
Whereas of an Army and Navy of 4,800,000 men approximately 4,200,000 men have been discharged; and
Whereas Congress has in anticipation the passage of legislation to be of substantial help to the returned soldiers in aiding them to procure homes; and
Whereas a number of bills and resolutions have been pending, the only one reported being H. R. 487, known as the Mondell land colonization bill, which apparently is not acceptable to Congress or the soldiers; and
Whereas a new committee, representative in character, representing each section of the country, should be appointed and given jurisdiction over this matter to give immediate and uninterrupted attention until it is finally disposed of: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint a special committee of 21 members—12 of the majority and 9 of the minority—to whom shall be referred all bills and resolutions hereafter introduced during the Sixty-sixth Congress, pertaining to the following subjects, namely: The civil reestablishment of all honorably discharged officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines of the present World War, including all bills, resolutions, or communications relating to their vocational rehabilitation, to their educational facilities of any kind, to their employment, providing credits for the acquirement of homes, for the appropriation of the public lands for their benefit, or providing additional compensation of whatsoever kind or in whatever form, including the bonus, hospital and sanatorium facilities, or homes, or allotting lands; also subjects relating to war-risk insurance and compensation for disabilities incurred in the service, including allotments, and any and all other subjects principally and directly relating to or affecting the status or interests of the officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines aforementioned.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, in the few moments I shall engage your attention I shall make no selfish or bombastic plea for the American soldier. He neither deserves nor desires it. He will not appreciate it.

I repeat, in the few moments I consume on the soldiers' land legislation, its status, its handling, its progress, I shall not indulge in high-sounding phrases, fulsome flattery, or any vote-getting overtures to the soldiery. Such an effort would neither deceive nor be of benefit to the soldier. It would not beget his friendship. His valiant service in the World War entitles him to better treatment than to be cajoled, flattered, misled, or held up as a political screen between the Congressmen or the Congress and the approaching election.

The armistice was signed November 11, 1918—14 months ago. Of the 4,800,000 soldiers, sailors, and marines that were then engaged in the service 4,350,000 of them have been demobilized, brought home, and returned to the roll of private citizens.

Each and every man who has been honorably discharged has received or will receive a $60 bonus paid to him by his Government in addition to his regular salary and emoluments. That was provided for as an amendment to the last revenue bill, which became the law prior to March 4, 1919. Other than this the ex-service man has received no homestead legislation, no land-settlement legislation, no soldier-loan legislation, to enable him to acquire a home and reestablish himself in a home after his absence in the service of the United States.

EFFORTS MADE TO SECURE HOMESTEAD LEGISLATION.

The Mondell bill, it being House bill 487, was introduced on May 19, 1919, by the Republican floor leader of the House, Hon. FRANK MONDELL. That was seven and one-half months ago. The Mondell bill was reported August 1, 1919, and has been on the calendar for five full months.

Numerous other soldiers' land bills have been introduced by different Members of Congress, none of which have received any consideration by committees or the Congress.

The Mondell bill is what might well be termed a colonization bill. It contemplates the acquirement of large tracts of land to be improved by the Government and parceled out to the soldiers after it is improved. It contemplates improvement by the Government and an assembling of the soldiers where large acreages and quantities of land can be acquired.

I do not say the Mondell bill is without merit, but I do say that it is not acceptable to the soldiers, that it is not acceptable to the Congress, that it can not pass, that it is not going to pass, and that it is standing there as a buffer and a hindrance to legislation that is desired by the soldiers and legislation that can pass.

I repeat, I do not say the bill is not well intended; I do not say the bill is without merit; I do not say in some sections of the country, particularly the far West, where large areas are available at low prices, it would not be feasible and workable; but what I do say is that where land is high and already well improved it is not feasible, it is not workable, and is not acceptable to the soldiers.

I do not say that some of the soldiers are not in favor of the Mondell land bill, but I do say that the great bulk of the soldiers, both in massed convention and individually, are strongly and vigorously opposed to it; they do not desire any colonization scheme for the development of the West; they do not desire to remove from their native States and their localities or be forced to do so in order to avail themselves of this Government land legislation.

I feel perfectly sure in saying, after having read their resolutions and after having talked with thousands of them in person, that what they want is not something for nothing, but they want the right to have a loan from their Government, long tenure, low rate of interest, under proper restrictions and regulations, so the Government will not lose the money, for the soldier does not want something for nothing. He wants the right to buy a home of his choice in the town or in the country and be given an opportunity to pay for it—work out his own salvation and be an independent, self-reliant home owner of a home that he picks out himself, desirable for his uses and purposes, in the community of his choice among his friends, where he can succeed and where it will be free from the speculative features incident to any colonization scheme or venture along the line of the Mondell bill.

REMEDY TO BE APPLIED.

The Mondell bill, which is now on the calendar and has been for five full months without action, should be taken up and amended by embodying the features just enumerated, so that it will be acceptable to the soldiers and to the Congress expected to enact it. If this course is not feasible it should be recommitted to the committee from which it came, gotten out of the way, the track cleared, and a new committee formed that will be more representative in character, more free from sectionalism, and can devote its entire energies and time to the enactment of soldiers' legislation.

With this in mind, on October 13, 1919, I introduced House resolution 333, Sixty-sixth Congress, first session.

A REMEDY THAT WILL ACHIEVE.

It was referred to the Rules Committee, and has been slumbering there. It ought to be reported out—ought to be passed. Speaker GILLETTE ought to appoint a committee; the committee ought to begin hearings; the committee ought to report a bill; they ought to pass a bill; they ought to give the 4,350,000 soldiers the relief and the opportunity to acquire the homes that they very much desire and have been led to believe they have the right to expect.

To do less than this is to subject this Congress to criticism; to do less than this is to neglect the soldier, and I submit no country can well afford to neglect its soldiery; to do less than this is to scatter disappointment throughout the length and breadth of the country; to do less than this is failing to do in office the things men promised to do while secure in office, a thing no party should tolerate, a thing no Congressman should endure.

Mr. WALSH. Will this bill take care of each one of the 4,000,000 soldiers?

Mr. FERRIS. I do not think so. I do not think any bill that we could get up would take care of all of them; but I do think an opportunity should be afforded by this great Government, to the soldiers who are homeless and who desire to acquire homes, to let them do so, and that they should be given the opportunity to acquire them on reasonable terms—long tenure, low interest—for, in the last analysis, the Government would be reimbursed. The soldier would feel his services had been appreciated by a grateful Republic; many—yea, thousands—of them would become home owners instead of wanderers; America would have a clear conscience that it had been true to the soldiery, and good results would follow on all sides.

Mr. LITTLE. Is the gentleman going to inject into his remarks some plan of his own?

Mr. FERRIS. I have done that. My first suggestion was for the appointment of a new committee, to take some members from New York or New England, some from the South, some from the West, some from the North, and from the intermediate States—a committee of 21; a committee representative in character, that would serve every section of the Republic.

Mr. LITTLE. Is that all the gentleman has to offer?

Mr. FERRIS. No; if the gentleman will wait patiently, I am coming to that. I think that would be a proper start. I do not think it is a mooted question at all as to what the soldiers really want. I will give the gentleman exactly what I do think they want. It is not a complicated matter. It is not a thing that Congress can not do. It is a thing that Congress ought to do, and I will state it directly.

I think an opportunity ought to be afforded to the soldier to borrow a sum of money sufficient to buy an adequate home for him on long-time payments at a low rate of interest, he to pay back to the Government every cent that he borrows. I want the soldier to have the right to select the community in which he desires to live, to select the State in which he desires to live, to select the tract on which he desires to live, either in town or country, instead of the Government selecting it for him.

Mr. LITTLE. Is the gentleman in favor of the Morgan bill?

Mr. FERRIS. Much of the Morgan bill I am in favor of. I am more in favor of the Morgan bill than I am of the Mondell bill. The trouble is the Morgan bill is slumbering in committee. The Republicans will not let us have it reported, so we can vote on it.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. I have introduced a bill embodying most of the provisions which the gentleman has stated.

Mr. FERRIS. Yes; I have read the Hastings bill, and I appreciate it very much. I would gladly vote for it and help pass it if the committee would but report it. I have introduced a bill myself which embodies these provisions. I also offered amendments to the Mondell bill, trying to carry out the soldiers' wishes and needs. They were rejected, and the Morgan bill has been rejected. No bill can receive any attention until we get a new committee or get the Mondell bill out of the way. The Morgan bill is favored by a great many soldiers and a great many want the Hastings bill. Other soldiers are in favor of other bills; but, above all the rest, they do not want the Mondell bill.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Certainly.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Has not Canada passed legislation along the line that the gentleman suggests?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes; I think Canada has passed some good legislation, but I do not have sufficient data before me to elaborate on that now.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. The statement of the gentleman that they do not want the Mondell bill illustrates a condition in this House as to misrepresentations of what the people interested want. I remember in this House when it appeared that the entire Congress, or at least 80 per cent, wanted the Mondell bill—a good many on the Republican side and a good many over here on the Democratic side—but I told you at the time that we did not want the bill. The gentleman from Oklahoma and I hope the gentleman from Wyoming will realize that the Mondell bill and all bills of this nature are a hallucination to the soldier and not a benefit to him.

Mr. FERRIS. Well, I do not agree that all bills are deceptive to the soldier and am perfectly sure that is not the case. Whatever the prior controversy has been or may be, the facts are now in the possession of Congress, and it is now time to do something. The 10 or 11 months which have been frittered away in the past—let it be a debating society, let it be a divergence of opinion or an honest mistake, let it be what you will, there are three things that stand out foremost now, and that is that the Mondell bill is not acceptable to Congress, it is not acceptable to the soldiers, it is the only bill on the calendar and must be disposed of, gotten out of the way, and some real legislation passed.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. MORGAN. I am glad to see my colleague take the lead in agitating this question before the House. I approve of his resolution to have a special committee appointed. But I want to know, in view of the very able speech made by the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] in regard to the financial condition of our country, if the gentleman thinks that any large appropriation could be made in justice to the taxpayers and the public generally in the interest of soldier legislation?

Mr. FERRIS. That does not embarrass me in the least. Perhaps my lack of knowledge fails to embarrass me, but a Nation that was spending $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 a day when the war closed, a Nation that could loan $10,000,000,000 to the Allies, a Nation that could loan $1,250,000,000 to the railroads in a year and a half, can well afford to do justice to the soldiers of the Nation. A Nation that does not do justice to the soldiers can not long and should not long endure. The battle cry of economy that is ever with us when some real deserving service is necessary and ever absent when some large scheme comes in here does not appeal to me. What I would ask this Congress to do is either by bonds or a tax levy to do full justice to these 4,800,000 men, and I would do it as quickly as possible had I the power. But not having the power, my side of the House not having the power, I suggest it to that side of the House that does have the power, and I submit it is their move.

Mr. MORGAN. I think with the gentleman that we ought not to begin to economize with the soldiers the first thing; that we ought to economize in some other direction.

Mr. HERSEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. HERSEY. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma remember that when the draft law was passed in this House to send the boys over the seas the gentleman from Oklahoma voted for $15 instead of $30?

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman from Oklahoma did not; the gentleman from Maine is entirely mistaken. The gentleman from Maine was never more mistaken in his life.

Mr. HERSEY. Did not the gentleman vote against $30 for the soldiers?

Mr. FERRIS. I did not; the gentleman has been receiving some Republican literature that is incorrect.

Mr. KNUTSON. The RECORD of May 16, 1917, shows that the gentleman from Oklahoma voted against the motion to recommit with instructions.

Mr. FERRIS. I will give the gentleman the exact facts. This House has been misled long enough on that proposition. I will state the facts, so that not only the gentleman will know it but all will know it.

On April 28, 1917, while the draft bill was pending in the House of Representatives—it being H. R. 3545—providing for the organization of an army, Mr. Austin, of Tennessee, offered an amendment to the draft bill increasing the soldier's salary from $15 to $30 per month; 257 Members voted "yes," not a single Member voting "no." I was present and voted "yes." The amendment was agreed to; it became a part of the draft bill, and not a single Republican or Democrat in the House failed to stand up and be counted for the amendment. Here I quote verbatim from page 1550 of the permanent CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of April 28, 1917, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session:

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Austin].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were 257 ayes and no noes.

So the substitute was agreed to.

Hence it will be observed that not only did I vote for the $30 a month increase for the soldier but every Member of Congress voted that way.

This was the first time this salary question had appeared after we had declared war against Germany. We will now come to the second time that it appeared.

On April 28, 1917, later in the day, the draft bill carrying the Austin amendment providing $30 a month salary for the soldiers was voted upon by a roll call; 397 Members voted "yes," 24 Members voting "no." I was present and voted "yes."

Here I set forth the roll call on the passage of the draft bill, as shown on page 1557 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of April 28, 1917, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session:

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 397, nays 24, answered "present" 1, not voting 10, as follows:

YEAS—397.

Adamson	Cannon	Denison	Flynn
Alexander	Cantrill	Dent	Focht
Almon	Carraway	Denton	Fordney
Anderson	Carew	Dewalt	Foss
Anthony	Carlin	Dickinson	Foster
Ashbrook	Carter, Mass	Dillon	Francis
Aswell	Carter, Okla.	Dixon	Freer
Austin	Carey	Dooling	Freeman
Ayres	Chandler, N. Y.	Doolittle	French
Bacharach	Chandler, Okla.	Doremus	Fuller, Ill.
Bankhead	Clark, Pa.	Doughton	Fuller, Mass.
Barkley	Classon	Dowell	Gallagher
Barnhart	Coady	Drane	Gallivan
Bathrick	Collier	Drukker	Gandy
Bell	Comstock	Dunn	Gard
Black	Connally, Tex.	Dupré	Gardner
Bland	Connelly, Kans.	Dyer	Garland
Blanton	Cooper, Ohio	Eagan	Garner
Booher	Cooper, W. Va.	Eagle	Garrett, Tenn.
Borland	Cooper, Wis.	Edmonds	Garrett, Tex.
Bowers	Copley	Ellsworth	Gillett
Brand	Costello	Elston	Glass
Britten	Cox	Emerson	Glynn
Brodbeck	Crago	Esch	Godwin, N. C.
Browne	Cramton	Estopinal	Good
Browning	Crisp	Evans	Goodall
Bruckner	Currie, Mich.	Fairchild, B. L.	Goodwin, Ark.
Brumbaugh	Curry, Calif.	Fairchild, G. W.	Gould
Buchanan	Dale, N. Y.	Fairfield	Graham, Ill.
Butler	Dale, Vt.	Farr	Graham, Pa.
Byrnes, S. C.	Dallinger	Ferris	Gray, Ala.
Byrns, Tenn.	Darrow	Fess	Gray, N. J.
Caldwell	Davidson	Fields	Green, Iowa
Campbell, Kans.	Davis	Fisher	Greene, Mass.
Campbell, Pa.	Decker	Fitzgerald	Greene, Vt.
Candler, Miss.	Dempsey	Flood	Gregg
Griest	Lea, Calif.	Polk	Stephens, Nebr.
Griffin	Lee, Ga.	Porter	Sterling, Ill.
Hadley	Lehlbach	Pou	Stevenson
Hamill	Lenroot	Pratt	Stiness
Hamilton, Mich.	Lesher	Price	Strong
Hamilton, N. Y.	Lever	Purnell	Sullivan
Hamlin	Linthicum	Quin	Sumners
Hardy	Little	Ragsdale	Sweet
Harrison, Miss.	Littlepage	Rainey	Swift
Harrison, Va.	Lobeck	Raker	Switzer
Haskell	Lonergan	Ramsey	Tague
Hastings	Longworth	Ramseyer	Talbott
Haugen	Lunn	Rankin	Taylor, Ark.
Hawley	McAndrews	Rayburn	Temple
Hayden	McArthur	Reavis	Templeton
Heaton	McClintic	Reed	Thomas
Heflin	McCormick	Riordan	Thompson
Heintz	McCulloch	Robbins	Tillman
Helm	McFadden	Roberts	Tilson
Helvering	McKenzie	Robinson	Timberlake
Hensley	McKeown	Rodenberg	Tinkham
Hersey	McKinley	Rogers	Towner
Hicks	McLaughlin, Mich.	Romjue	Treadway
Hill	McLaughlin, Pa.	Rose	Van Dyke
Holland	McLemore	Rouse	Vare
Hood	Madden	Rowe	Venable
Houston	Magee	Rowland	Vestal
Howard	Maher	Rubey	Vinson
Hulbert	Mann	Rucker	Voigt
Hull, Iowa	Mansfield	Russell	Volstead
Hull, Tenn.	Mapes	Sabath	Waldow
Humphreys	Martin, La.	Sanders, Ind.	Walker
Husted	Mays	Sanders, La.	Walsh
Hutchinson	Meeker	Sanders, N. Y.	Walton
Igoe	Miller, Minn.	Sanford	Ward
Ireland	Miller, Wash.	Saunders, Va.	Wason
Jacoway	Mondell	Schall	Watkins
James	Montague	Scott, Iowa	Watson, Pa.
Johnson, Ky.	Moore, Pa.	Scott, Mich.	Watson, Va.
Johnson, S. Dak.	Moores, Ind.	Scott, Pa.	Weaver
Johnson, Wash.	Morgan	Scully	Webb
Jones, Tex.	Morin	Sells	Welling
Jones, Va.	Mott	Shallenberger	Welty
Juul	Mudd	Sherley	Whaley
Kahn	Neely	Shouse	Wheeler
Kearns	Nicholls, S. C.	Siegel	White, Me.
Kehoe	Nichols, Mich.	Sims	White, Ohio
Kelley, Mich.	Norton	Sinnott	Williams
Kelly, Pa.	Oldfield	Slayden	Wilson, Ill.
Kennedy, Iowa	Oliver, Ala.	Slemp	Wilson, La.
Kennedy, R. I.	Oliver, N. Y.	Sloan	Wilson, Tex.
Kettner	Olney	Small	Wingo
Key, Ohio	Osborne	Smith, Mich.	Winslow
Kiess, Pa.	O'Shaunessy	Smith, C. B.	Wise
Kincheloe	Overmyer	Smith, T. F.	Wood, Ind.
Kinkaid	Overstreet	Snell	Woods, Iowa
Kitchin	Padgett	Snook	Woodyard
Knutson	Paige	Snyder	Young, N. Dak.
Kraus	Park	Stafford	Young, Tex.
Kreider	Parker, N. J.	Steagall	Zihlman
LaGuardia	Parker, N. Y.	Stedman	The Speaker
Langley	Peters	Steele
Larsen	Phelan	Steenerson
Larzaro	Platt	Stephens, Miss.

NAYS—24.

Bacon	Dill	Keating	Nolan
Burnett	Dominick	King	Powers
Church	Gordon	La Follette	Randall
Clark, Fla.	Hays	London	Sears
Claypool	Hilliard	Lundeen	Sherwood
Crosser	Huddleston	Mason	Sisson

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Hollingsworth

NOT VOTING—10.

Blackmon	Martin, Ill.	Shackleford	Taylor, Colo.
Capstick	Moon	Smith, Idaho
Dies	Nelson	Sterling, Pa.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. CLARK of Missouri and he answered "Yea."

So the bill was passed.

Hence it will be observed that the second time when the salary item was voted on I not only voted for it a second time but did all I could to help it pass. It did pass, and it was agreed to, and it is only fair to say that the 24 Members that voted against the draft bill carrying this amendment were not really opposed to the increase in salary but were opposed to the draft law. No one was opposed to the salary increase—everyone was in favor of it. The gentleman who sought to embarrass me by asking this question has really helped me, for it has made it possible to explain once and for all to the House the untruthfulness of the report that has been circulated regarding the 178 Members of the House who later voted against recommitting the draft bill.

On May 1, 1917, the draft bill passed the Senate providing for a soldier's salary at the rate of $29 per month; the bill immediately went to conference; the conferees on recommendation of the War Department cut the salary down to $25 per month, with a 20 per cent increase for foreign service, which would make $30 a month for those who crossed the sea and $25 per month for those who fought on this side.

On May 12, 1917, the bill was sent back to conference by the House on the Roosevelt item, as shown on page 2215, permanent CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session.

On May 16, 1917, the draft bill was again brought into the House still carrying the salary item of $25 per month. A motion was made by Congressman GOOD, of Iowa, to recommit and send back to the committee the entire draft bill, thereby delaying the organization of an army, thereby obstructing the progress of the war. On that motion to recommit 178 Members of the House felt that the organization of an army should not be delayed; that the war had been in progress 40 days; that the enemy was at our gates; and that we could not afford to allow the entire draft bill to be sent back to committee, further feeling that the salary item could be adjusted any day and that the entire matter could be worked out without delaying the organization of an army long before any man was even inducted into the service.

Here I set forth the roll call on the motion to recommit, as shown on pages 2396–2397 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 16, 1917, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session:

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 199, nays 178, answered "present" 1, not voting 52, as follows:

YEAS—199.

Almon	Esch	LaGuardia	Rowe
Austin	Evans	Langley	Rowland
Ayres	Fairchild, B. L.	Lenroot	Sanders, Ind.
Bacon	Fairfield	Linthicum	Sanders, N. Y.
Barnhart	Farr	Little	Saunders, Va.
Bell	Fess	Lobeck	Schall
Bland	Focht	Lundeen	Scott, Iowa
Bowers	Fordney	McArthur	Scott, Mich.
Brand	Foss	McCormick	Scully
Britten	Francis	McKenzie	Sells
Browne	Frear	McKinley	Sherwood
Bruckner	French	McLaughlin, Pa.	Siegel
Brumbaugh	Fuller, Ill.	Madden	Sinnott
Campbell, Kans.	Garland	Martin, La.	Slemp
Cannon	Good	Mason	Sloan
Carew	Goodall	Mays	Smith, Mich.
Carlin	Graham, Ill.	Meeker	Smith, T. F.
Carter, Mass.	Green, Iowa	Miller, Minn.	Steenerson
Cary	Greene, Mass.	Miller, Wash.	Sterling, Ill.
Chandler, N. Y.	Griffin	Mondell	Stiness
Chandler, Okla.	Hadley	Moore, Pa.	Strong
Clark, Pa.	Hamill	Moores, Ind.	Sullivan
Classon	Hamilton, Mich.	Morgan	Sweet
Claypool	Harrison, Va.	Morin	Swift
Cooper, Ohio	Hastings	Mott	Switzer
Cooper, W. Va.	Haugen	Mudd	Tague
Cooper, Wis.	Heaton	Neely	Temple
Costello	Heintz	Nichols, Mich.	Thomas
Cramton	Hersey	Nolan	Thompson
Crisp	Hicks	Norton	Tillman
Crosser	Hilliard	Oliver, N. Y.	Timberlake
Curry, Calif.	Hollingsworth	Osborne	Tinkham
Dale, N. Y.	Huddleston	Paige	Towner
Dale, Vt.	Hull, Iowa	Peters	Van Dyke
Dallinger	Hutchinson	Phelan	Vestal
Darrow	Ireland	Porter	Voigt
Davidson	Johnson, Wash.	Powers	Volstead
Davis	Juul	Purnell	Waldow
Dempsey	Kearns	Ragsdale	Walsh
Denison	Keating	Raker	Wason
Dill	Kelley, Mich.	Ramseyer	Watson, Pa.
Dillon	Kelly, Pa.	Randall	Wheeler
Dixon	Kennedy, Iowa	Reavis	White, Me.
Dominick	Kennedy, R. I.	Reed	Williams
Dooling	King	Robbins	Wilson, Ill.
Dowell	Kinkaid	Roberts	Wood, Ind.
Dyer	Knutson	Robinson	Woods, Iowa
Eagan	Kraus	Rodenberg	Young, N. Dak.
Ellsworth	Kreider	Rogers	Zihlman
Emerson	La Follette	Rose

NAYS—178.

Adamson	Dewalt	Hardy	Lunn
Alexander	Dickinson	Harrison, Miss.	McClintic
Anthony	Dies	Haskell	McFadden
Ashbrook	Doolittle	Hayden	McKeown
Aswell	Doughton	Heflin	McLaughlin, Mich.
Bankhead	Drane	Helm	McLemore
Barkley	Drukker	Helvering	Magee
Bathrick	Eagle	Hensley	Mann
Black	Edmonds	Hill	Mansfield
Blackmon	Elston	Holland	Mapes
Blanton	Ferris	Hood	Montague
Booher	Fields	Houston	Moon
Borland	Fisher	Howard	Nicholls, S. C.
Brodbeck	Fitzgerald	Hull, Tenn.	Oldfield
Browning	Flood	Humphreys	Oliver, Ala.
Buchanan	Foster	Husted	Olney
Burnett	Freeman	Igoe	O'Shaunessy
Butler	Gard	Jacoway	Overmyer
Byrnes, S. C.	Garner	James	Overstreet
Byrns, Tenn.	Garrett, Tenn.	Johnson, Ky.	Padgett
Caldwell	Garrett, Tex.	Jones, Tex.	Park
Campbell, Pa.	Gillett	Jones, Va.	Parker, N. J.
Cantrill	Glass	Kahn	Parker, N. Y.
Caraway	Glynn	Kincheloe	Platt
Clark, Fla.	Godwin, N. C.	Kitchin	Polk
Coady	Goodwin, Ark.	Larsen	Pou
Collier	Gordon	Lazaro	Quinn
Connally, Tex.	Graham, Pa.	Lea, Calif.	Rainey
Connelly, Kans.	Gray, Ala.	Lehlbach	Ramsey
Crago	Gray, N. J.	Lesher	Rayburn
Currie, Mich.	Greene, Vt.	Lever	Romjue
Decker	Gregg	Littlepage	Rouse
Dent	Griest	Lonergan	Russell
Denton	Hamlin	Longworth	Sabath
Sanders, La.	Snook	Taylor, Ark.	Welling
Sanford	Snyder	Tilson	Welty
Sears	Stafford	Treadway	Whaley
Shackleford	Steagall	Venable	White, Ohio
Shallenberger	Stedman	Vinson	Wilson, La.
Sherley	Steele	Walker	Wilson, Tex.
Sims	Stephens, Nebr.	Ward	Wingo
Sisson	Sterling, Pa.	Watkins	Wise
Slayden	Stevenson	Watson, Va.	Young, Tex.
Small	Summers	Weaver
Snell	Talbott	Webb

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

London

NOT VOTING—52.

Anderson	Fairchild, G. W.	Kettner	Rubey
Bacharach	Flynn	Key, Ohio	Rucker
Candler, Miss.	Fuller, Mass.	Kiess, Pa.	Scott, Pa.
Capstick	Gallagher	Lee, Ga.	Shouse
Carter, Okla.	Gallivan	McAndrews	Smith, Idaho
Church	Gandy	McCulloch	Smith, C. B.
Comstock	Gould	Maher	Stephens, Miss.
Copley	Hamilton, N. Y.	Martin, Ill.	Taylor, Colo.
Cox	Hawley	Nelson	Templeton
Doremus	Hayes	Pratt	Vare
Dunn	Hulbert	Price	Walton
Dupré	Johnson, S. Dak.	Rankin	Winslow
Estopinal	Kehoe	Riordan	Woodyard

So the motion to recommit was agreed to.

I assert here and now that not a single one of the 178 Members who voted against that motion to recommit was against the salary increase. I assert that every one of the 178 was really in favor of the increase. I call on them now to stand in their places and make denial of the truth of this statement. I have reason for this statement because on a previous occasion every Member of the House present had voted for this increase and not a single man had voted against it.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], Republican floor leader, voted as I voted. Does any man in this House or elsewhere think he was opposed to the increase? Of course not.

The gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN], the present chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, then the ranking member of the Military Affairs Committee, voted as I voted. Does any member think he was opposed to the increase? Of course not.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH], son-in-law of the late lamented President Roosevelt, to-day presiding over this historic body, voted as I voted. Does anyone here or elsewhere think that he was opposed to increasing the salary of soldiers? Of course not.

Speaker FREDERICK H. GILLETT, present Speaker of the House of Representatives, voted as I voted, against recommitment. Does anyone here or elsewhere think he was opposed to the increase in salary? Of course not.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. STEDMAN], the only Confederate soldier in the House, faithful, patriotic, and true, voted as I voted. Does anyone here or elsewhere think that that white-haired old Confederate veteran of the South would oppose an adequate salary for American soldiery? Of course not.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], chairman of the great Ways and Means Committee, then Democratic floor leader, voted as I voted, against the motion to recommit. Does anyone think that he was opposed to the increase in salary? Of course not.

The chairman of every leading committee in the House of Representatives present on that day voted exactly as I voted, against the motion to delay the organization of an army—against the motion to send back to the committee the draft bill which made possible the organization of an army to crush the German hordes.

Mr. SNYDER. And I also.

Mr. FERRIS. Yes; and the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Carter Glass, then chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, now Secretary of the Treasury, voted exactly as I voted. Does anyone think that he was opposed to the increase in the soldier's salary? Of course not.

William C. Adamson, of Georgia, father of the Adamson railroad law, then chairman of the great Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, voted as I voted. Does anyone here or elsewhere think that he was opposed to the increase in salary? Of course not.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK], chairman of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, voted precisely as I voted. Does anyone think that he was opposed to an increase in the soldiers' salary? Of course not.

John J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the great Committee on Appropriations, voted precisely as I voted. Does anyone here or elsewhere feel that he would oppose an increase in the soldier's salary? Of course not.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLOOD], chairman of the great Committee on Foreign Affairs, voted precisely as I voted, feeling it a miserable mistake to send back to the committee the draft law, which would delay the organization of an army, and, of course, would not have opposed an increase in salary.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM], the greatest Republican lawyer in the House of Representatives, voted exactly as I voted. He, of course, was not opposed to the increase in salary, but was opposed to the delay in organizing an army.

PAT HARRISON, of Mississippi, brilliant, able, and patriotic, who defeated Vardaman for the Senate, voted as I voted. Does anyone think that he was opposed to an increase in the soldier's salary?

William C. Houston, of Tennessee, chairman of the Committee on the Territories, voted as I voted—always loyal to the soldier, always faithful to him. Does anyone think that he would oppose an increase in the soldier's salary? Of course not.

A. F. Lever, of South Carolina, then chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, now a member of the Federal Farm Loan Board, voted precisely as I voted—always true to the soldier, always standing for his interest.

Not a single dissenting vote—not a single Republican or Democrat failed to keep the faith. I was present and, with the rest, voted for the conference report on its final passage. The $30 a month amendment was finally agreed to; it was signed by President Wilson; it became the law, and the soldier boy received the $30 a month throughout the entire war.

Here I quote from page 2423 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 16, 1917, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session:

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the report.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves the previous question on the conference report.
The previous question was ordered.
The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.
The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. HERSEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. HERSEY. The only question on recommitment was the amount.

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, yes; but the amount was not the major thing to do there. The major thing to do for the American people was to organize the Army, to organize it quickly, and that was a mere amendment to this, to the raising of an Army which was to the country most necessary, and the salary could be settled any day. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HERSEY. The recommitment would not delay the House 25 minutes.

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, we never know how much a recommitment delays the House. A recommitment sends the bill back to the committee, which may take a day, a month, or a year. One hundred and seventy-eight of us thought the risk of a recommitment too great; we were for the increase; there was no opposition to it anywhere; it could be adjusted any day. I am very much indebted to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HERSEY] for bringing out this controversy, so that the matter can be cleared up. I know the gentleman did not intend to do me any wrong. He simply had been misled by information that never was accurate and never should have been disseminated. It was not a question of $15 a month or $30 at all. The amount in the conference report was $25, and the amount of $30 per month we had voted for once, yea, twice, thrice, and every man, Democrat or Republican, voted that way.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. The Good amendment was simply a matter proposing to recommit the bill with instructions to increase the amount to $30 a month, and the gentleman voted "no."

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, yes; I voted not to recommit the draft bill and delay the raising of an army. No one was opposed to the salary amendment to the draft bill; every Member had voted for it twice.

Mr. KNUTSON. But the instructions were to increase the amount. The RECORD speaks for itself.

Mr. FERRIS. Does the gentleman say that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] voted for $15 a month as against $30? He voted just as I voted.

Mr. KNUTSON. I have not looked up the RECORD to see how he voted.

Mr. FERRIS. He voted just as I did. Does the gentleman say that JULIUS KAHN, who voted just as I voted, was against the $30 per month? Of course not.

Does the gentleman say that JULIUS KAHN, the chairman of the committee, who voted as I did, voted wrong? Does the gentleman say that the chairman of this present committee, Mr. LONGWORTH, voted wrong? Does the gentleman say that the other leaders on the Republican side voted wrong? Why, the Speaker of the House, Mr. GILLETT, voted just as I did, and even the chairman of the Military Committee voted just as I did. No; the real truth about it is that no one in this House was against raising the soldiers' pay. Every single man here was in favor of it. The trouble was that there was a difference of opinion as to whether or not the bill ought to be recommitted. I would like to have the gentleman from Minnesota rise in his place and tell me just what he thinks about the vote of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the other gentlemen, 178 in number, who voted as I did, and I yield the time to him. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. KNUTSON. I will say to the gentleman that I am not sitting in judgment on anyone.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman is merely trying to sit in judgment on me when he is without the facts. The facts never do anyone harm.

PEACE-TIME SALARY OF $30 A MONTH—SAME AS IN WAR.

I did not stop at giving the soldier $30 a month in war times—I voted for the Decker amendment on February 18, 1919, giving the soldier in peace, as well as in war, $30 per month salary. This vote was taken on February 18, 1919. It was an amendment to Senate bill 5279. It was unanimously agreed to—not a single Member voted against it. It finally passed the Senate; it was signed by President Wilson; it became the law; and the soldier boy who now serves in peace gets $30 a month as well as in war.

Here I quote from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 18, 1919, Sixty-fifth Congress, third session, page 3885:

Mr. DECKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.
The Clerk read as follows:
"Amendment by Mr. Decker: At the end of the amendment insert the following: 'That the pay of the men so enlisted shall be the same as that now provided by law.'"
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Decker].
The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

BONUSES FOR DEPENDENT FAMILIES.

Since the gentleman has raised the question of my friendship for the soldier, I am glad to tell the gentleman that my friendship for the soldier did not begin with the German war but was clearly shown in my support of the bill granting $50 a month to the dependent families of those who served on the Mexican border.

Congressman James Hay, then chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, introduced in the House bill 16734 for appropriating $2,000,000 for the purpose of paying dependent families $50 a month while the soldier boys fought at the front. I not only voted for this bill, but I made the closing speech and helped to bring about its passage, and when the vote was taken there were—yeas 299, nays 2. I set forth, page 10356 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 1, 1916, Sixty-fourth Congress, first session:

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing this bill.
Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of suspending the rules and passing this bill will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."
The question was taken; and there were—yeas 299, nays 2, answered "present" 5, not voting 120, as follows:

YEAS—299.

Abercrombie	Buchanan, Tex.	Danforth	Finley
Adamson	Burgess	Davenport	Focht
Aiken	Burke	Davis, Minn.	Fordney
Alexander	Campbell	Decker	Foss
Allen	Candler, Miss.	Dempsey	Foster
Almon	Cannon	Denison	Frear
Anderson	Cantrill	Dent	Freeman
Anthony	Caraway	Dickinson	Gallagher
Aswell	Carew	Dies	Gallivan
Austin	Carter, Mass.	Dill	Gard
Ayres	Carter, Okla.	Dillon	Gardner
Bailey	Cary	Dixon	Garrett
Barkley	Casey	Doolittle	Glass
Beakes	Cline	Doremus	Glynn
Bell	Coady	Doughton	Godwin, N. C.
Bennet	Coleman	Dowell	Good
Blackmon	Collier	Dunn	Goodwin, Ark.
Booher	Connelly	Dupré	Gordon
Borland	Conry	Dyer	Gray, Ala.
Bowers	Cooper, W. Va.	Edwards	Gray, Ind.
Britt	Cooper, Wis.	Ellsworth	Green, Iowa
Britten	Crago	Elston	Greene, Vt.
Browne	Cramton	Emerson	Hadley
Brumbaugh	Crisp	Esch	Hamill
Burnett	Cullop	Estopinal	Hamilton, Mich.
Byrnes, S. C.	Curry	Evans	Hamilton, N. Y.
Byrns, Tenn.	Dale, Vt.	Farr	Hamlin
Buchanan, Ill.	Dallinger	Ferris	Hardy

Haskell	Lenroot	Parker, N. Y.	Stephens, Calif.
Hastings	Lesher	Peters	Stephens, Miss.
Hawley	Lever	Price	Stephens, Nebr.
Hay	Lewis	Quin	Stephens, Tex.
Hayden	Lieb	Ragsdale	Sterling
Hayes	Liebel	Rainey	Stiness
Heflin	Lindbergh	Raker	Stone
Helgesen	Lloyd	Ramseyer	Stout
Helm	Lobeck	Randall	Sullowav
Helvering	Longworth	Rauch	Sweet
Hensley	McAndrews	Rayburn	Switzer
Hernandez	McArthur	Reavis	Taggart
Hicks	McClintic	Reilly	Tague
Hill	McCracken	Ricketts	Talbott
Hilliard	McCulloch	Roberts, Nev.	Tavenner
Hinds	McDermott	Rodenberg	Taylor, Ark.
Holland	McGillicuddy	Rogers	Taylor, Colo.
Hollingsworth	McKellar	Rouse	Temple
Hood	McKenzie	Rubey	Thomas
Howard	McKinley	Rucker	Thompson
Howell	McLaughlin	Russell, Mo.	Tillman
Huddleston	McLemore	Russell, Ohio	Timberlake
Hughes	Madden	Saunders	Towner
Hull, Iowa	Magee	Schall	Van Dyke
Hull, Tenn.	Mann	Scott, Mich.	Venable
Humphrey, Wash.	Mapes	Sells	Vinson
Humphreys, Miss.	Matthews	Shackleford	Volstead
Igoe	Mays	Shallenberger	Walker
Johnson, S. Dak.	Meeker	Sherley	Walsh
Johnson, Wash.	Miller, Del.	Shouse	Wason
Jones	Miller, Minn.	Siegel	Whaley
Kearns	Mondell	Sims	Wheeler
Keating	Moon	Sinnott	Williams, T. S.
Kelley	Mooney	Sisson	Williams, W. E.
Kennedy, Iowa	Morgan, Okla.	Slemp	Williams, Ohio
Kennedy, R. I.	Mudd	Sloan	Wilson, Ill.
Kent	Nelson	Smith, Idaho	Wilson, La.
Kettner	Nicholls, S. C.	Smith, Mich.	Wingo
Key, Ohio	Nichols, Mich.	Smith, Minn.	Winslow
Kinkaid	Nolan	Smith, N. Y.	Wise
Kitchin	Norton	Snell	Wood, Ind.
Konop	Oakey	Sparkman	Woods, Iowa
La Follette	Oldfield	Stafford	Young, N. Dak.
Langley	Oliver	Steagall	Young, Tex.
Lazaro	Padgett	Stedman	The Speaker
Lee	Page, N. C.	Steele, Iowa
Lehlbach	Park	Steenerson

NAYS—2.

James	Small

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—5.

Clark, Fla.	London	Platt	Scars
Garner

NOT VOTING—129.

Adair	Farley	Kincheloe	Pou
Ashbrook	Fess	King	Powers
Bacharach	Fields	Kreider	Pratt
Barchfeld	Fitzgerald	Lafean	Riordan
Beales	Flynn	Littlepage	Rowe
Barnhart	Flood	Linthicum	Roberts, Mass.
Black	Fuller	Loft	Rowland
Browning	Gandy	Loud	Sabath
Bruckner	Garland	McFadden	Sanford
Butler	Gillett	Maher	Scott, Pa.
Caldwell	Gould	Martin	Scully
Callaway	Graham	Miller, Pa.	Sherwood
Capstick	Gray, N. J.	Montague	Slayden
Carlin	Greene, Mass.	Moore, Pa.	Smith, Tex.
Chandler, N. Y.	Gregg	Moores, Ind.	Snyder
Charles	Griest	Morgan, La.	Steele, Pa.
Chiperfield	Griffin	Morin	Summers
Church	Guernsey	Morrison	Sutherland
Cooper, Ohio	Harrison	Moss, Ind.	Swift
Copley	Hart	Moss, W. Va.	Tilson
Costello	Haugen	Mott	Tinkham
Crosser	Heaton	Murray	Treadway
Dale, N. Y.	Henry	Neely	Tribble
Darrow	Hopwood	North	Vare
Davis, Tex.	Houston	Oglesby	Ward
Dewalt	Hulbert	Olney	Watkins
Docling	Husted	O'Shaunessy	Watson, Pa.
Driscoll	Hutchinson	Overmyer	Watson, Va.
Drukker	Jacoway	Paige, Mass.	Webb
Eagan	Johnson, Ky.	Parker, N. J.	Wilson, Pa.
Eagle	Kahn	Patten
Edmonds	Keister	Phelan
Fairchild	Kiess, Pa.	Porter

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. CLARK of Missouri, and he answered in the affirmative.

So, two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The truth is, this whole controversy has been a tempest in a teapot—it has been unjust criticism against the 178 Members, every one of whom was for the increase and no one of whom was against the increase. Most of them had voted for it two or three times and all of them had favored it. The Senate and the conferees had modified the amendment—had reduced it—and 178 of us felt that the draft bill should not be longer delayed.

UNBROKEN RECORD OF VOTING FOR EVERY INCREASE AND AGAINST EVERY DECREASE OF SOLDIERS' SALARY THROUGHOUT THE WAR.

I have an unbroken record of voting for every increase of salary and emoluments for the soldier, his family, and his dependents, and fought against every decrease of them. I will continue that course to the end, for it is my belief that for a great, rich Republic like this one there is no danger of paying the soldier too much for the hazardous duty which he performs in defending his country in time of peril. Courts, Congresses, and Cabinets are apt to give the soldier too little rather than too much. I am so much indebted to my friend from Maine [Mr. HERSEY], who has offered me this opportunity to give the facts as they are, citing the pages in the RECORD, the names, and the data that I am sure the House is entitled to have.

The fourth time the matter came up was when the conference report on the draft bill came in again, this time carrying the $30 a month. The vote was had—the bill was passed. Not a single member of the House failed to vote for the conference report carrying the $30 item.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. FESS having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment joint resolution (H. J. Res. 263) extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2999) to amend section 97 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 5818) for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman from Arizona desire to yield some time?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. EVANS].

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent at this time to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, in the discussion of the Indian bill it appears to me there has arisen an erroneous idea about the reclamation of certain Indian lands in the State of Montana. The bill as brought into the House cuts the so-called Flathead Indian reclamation work from $1,000,000 to $100,000. I think the committee had an entirely erroneous conception of the situation there, and if the committee will give me its attention for a few moments I shall try to explain it.

I have here two maps representing the area known as the Flathead Indian Reservation. That reservation has been a reservation since about 1853. It has an area in the western part of the State of Montana of approximately 50 miles north and south and 35 miles east and west. In 1904 the Congress of the United States, during the administration of Mr. Roosevelt, passed a law opening the so-called Flathead Reservation with the idea of disposing of the land. There were in this territory probably 2,500 or 3,000 Indians and approximately a million or a million and a quarter acres of land. A large portion of the land was mountainous, but in the center of the reservation was a large territory of irrigable agricultural land. The law provided that this area should be surveyed, should then be classified into agricultural lands, timber lands, grazing lands, mineral lands, and perhaps others, and it should be appraised in value. The law fixed the price between $1.50 and $7 per acre and the land was classified accordingly. The law also provided, I think it was another enactment, but it provided that this land should be disposed of to homestead settlers, the homestead settler complying with the homestead law in addition to paying the appraised price of the land of from $1.50 to $7 per acre. In addition it provided that the Government would reclaim a large area of irrigable land in the center of this reservation, and that any man taking land within that irrigable area should pay the Government the proportionate price for the reclamation of that land. It was estimated that this irrigation project would cost about six and a half million dollars. About $4,000,000 have been expended on the project now. The land is situated in a basin, and along the east side of the reservation here [illustrating] there is a high range of mountains down which numerous streams run feeding numerous lakes. On the map which I show you here appear white lines, which indicate the ditches and canals which have been constructed for the reclamation of that land. There are now about 1,800 homesteaders on this territory. One thousand eight hundred men under the law, which I deem to be equivalent to a contract with the Government of the United States, have gone upon this reservation, have taken up tracts of land, have complied with the homestead law, and they have paid on an average from four to five dollars per acre for the land.

They are now waiting for the Government to complete the irrigation project and give them title. The title to this land is in the Government of the United States. This land can not be patented to the individual until he has discharged all the liens; the so-called irrigation proposition is a lien upon the land, and it is estimated that they will reclaim about 130,000 to 135,000 acres of land on this reservation. They have built about 735 miles of ditches and canals preparatory to irrigating this area. It was assumed by the people of that country and I think by the people generally, when the law was passed and this reservation was opened, that within a reasonable time this irrigation work would be completed. I think a reasonable time would have been five years, probably, on the expenditure of six and a half million dollars. But for 12 years now these people have sat out there, after having complied with the homestead law and paid the price for the land, and are now still waiting for the Government to fix a price upon the irrigation project and furnish them water. They were entitled under all the laws of justice and equity to have that project completed within a reasonable time, say, five or six years, yet 12 years have expired, and to-day they are probably as far away as they were when we started on the proposition. I say as far, because the Indian Committee has now in its judgment recommended to this House that no further appropriation be made upon the project except $100,000, which will maintain the ditches that are now constructed. Questions will naturally arise in the minds of gentlemen here as to what has been done. Well, the title of the land is in the Government. The land properly belongs to the Indians, and the Government holds the title as trustee for the Indians. The Government is developing the project for the Indians because the Indian is considered incompetent to conduct this sort of affairs. Now, I am speaking more largely for the white man than for the Indian——

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. If the gentleman will yield, how many of these 1,800 homesteaders are Indians?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. None of the 1,800 homesteaders are Indians. Those 1,800 homesteaders are white men. Perhaps I have not made myself clear——

Mr. RHODES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I will be pleased to do so.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman has stated that none of the 1,800 homesteaders are Indians?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. That is correct.

Mr. RHODES. Whose money has been used in the construction of this irrigation project?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. The money used in the construction of the irrigation project has been the money of the people of the United States. Now, I will explain that. When this area was opened or before it was opened, under the law each Indian on the reservation was enrolled by the Secretary of the Interior, and he had the right to go and select what they call an allotment of 160 acres—I am not sure about the acreage, but each Indian took his own land in severalty. The 2,500 therefore got 2,500 allotments.

The remaining land was opened to homestead settlement under the terms which I have suggested to you of complying with the law and paying the appraised price. Then the Government went to work to reclaim the land not alone for the white man but for the Indian as well. The land in that country was probably worth $2 to $5 or $10 an acre without water; with water it is probably worth $75 to $100 an acre. The estimate was that it would cost about $45 an acre to reclaim the irrigable land, estimating 125,000 acres of land for that purpose. Four million five hundred thousand dollars has been expended on the project. It is suggested that you are only irrigating 32,000 or 35,000 acres of land at the present time. I think those figures are reasonably correct. I think the exact figure is probably about 40,000 acres. You say that you have expended about $4,500,000 on 40,000 acres of land, and then how will you irrigate 125,000 acres of land when you have spent $6,500,000?

Well, anyone who knows anything about irrigation knows that the area irrigated can not exactly keep pace with the expenditure of money when you are building big ditches, and dams, and reservoirs, and storage supplies. So for some years complaint was made on the floor of the House that they did not get the ditches down to more land, so that the lands might be irrigated. I think in 1918 we were irrigating probably 25,000 acres; in 1917 probably 20,000 acres, or something like that. So the Reclamation Service—which, by the way, is only the agent of the Indian Office, this work being under the supervision of the Indian Office, because it is Indian land, and it is actually done by the reclamation people, just as the general reclamation work is done by them—undertook to satisfy Congress and those who complained about the matter by extending their ditches more rapidly than before.

You will observe on this map that these ditches have been extended down. They have got them down now to a point where they should irrigate about 90,000 acres of land, but they found out last summer, after having put the most of the money for a year or two in extending these laterals down to the land, that the reservoir supply was not sufficient to supply the water to the land. They have a storage supply of about 51,000 acre-feet. An acre-foot of water is water a foot deep over an acre of land, and it takes approximately an acre-foot of water to irrigate land in that country. There are instances where it will take a little more. The storage supply is limited, and about three or four hundred thousand dollars of the million, and perhaps more, that was asked for in the estimate this year was to be used in the development of more storage.

The gentlemen will observe on this map that there are large lakes in mountains on the east side of the reservation which contain considerable quantities of water, and they go to work to build up the mouth of these lakes, and, if necessary, they tunnel under. Those lakes are sometimes 100 feet deep, and they are tunneling under the lake to bring the water down to the bottom of the lake.

I have confidence in the qualifications of the engineering department of the Reclamation Service as to what they can do in the premises. They say in the estimate they made in the beginning that they can irrigate 125,000 acres of land. Last year they were unable to irrigate more than about 43,000, the storage supply being insufficient.

In October this year at Lake McDonald they raised the dam about 20 feet. They estimated they would get about 5,000 acre-feet more there. The Tabor Reservoir, which may be indicated at this point here [indicating], they purpose to increase from 12,500 acre-feet to 17,500 acre-feet. From the Hubbard Reservoir, which is over here [indicating], which has not been constructed at all, though they have built their ditches to the land, they expect to get about 12,000 acre-feet. The Kicking Horse Reservoir, which is at a point about here [indicating], they expect to get about 6,000 acre-feet from. In other words, they are prepared to increase their storage capacity from about 51,000 acre-feet, which they now have, to 90,000 acre-feet.

Mr. LAZARO. Will the gentleman yield for information?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I will be pleased to do so.

Mr. LAZARO. What is the committee's reason for cutting down this appropriation? Is it because they ran the ditches ahead of the reservoirs or because they are not according to law?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I think the running of the ditches so far ahead of the reservoirs had so much influence with the committee on that proposition that they felt the project was not keeping up its pace; that the people were not irrigating all the land they should irrigate. I think that impression exists in the committee.

Mr. LAZARO. That they were endeavoring to deceive Congress?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Not perhaps to deceive Congress, but I think the impression is with the committee that the people could irrigate the land. The ditches are there and they are not irrigating; that if they are not irrigating it why not irrigate it; and if they are not going to irrigate it why appropriate more money? I think the committee has the idea that the irrigation of the land itself has not kept pace with the actual facilities that are furnished the people. You irrigated about 40,000 acres of land this year. You irrigated 32,000 acres up to July, 1919. The irrigation season runs from then on pretty well, and so I think they irrigated about 40,000 acres of land this year.

You will observe here a large number of little squares [indicating]. Those are 80 and 160 acre tracts of land. You will see large tracts of land where there is not a single ditch. Those people could not get any water. You will find here that there are ditches, but this year they did not have the water to supply.

Again, if you have irrigated 32,000 acres of land or 40,000 acres, as I am sure the Government has up to date, you have made a very good showing, although you had ditches reaching to practically 90,000 acres of land.

Anybody who has had experience in irrigating land must recognize the fact that one can not take water and put it upon all of a 40-acre or an 80-acre tract of land the first year; that is, the average man can not. It takes time to develop his local system on that land. If he has 40 acres and irrigates 10 acres or 20 acres of it the first year, he does well, indeed.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. What does it cost to put in his local system on that 40 acres?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. The land has got to be leveled and the fields bridged and flumed. It costs from $5 to $10 an acre to do that. In some cases it would cost more, and in some it would cost less.

Again, the irrigating of land the first season will utilize probably twice the amount of water that will be necessitated in the second season or in later seasons. Land irrigated the first season is porous. It has just been disturbed. Your ditches are not properly puddled. The ditches are new and placed in the wrong places in some instances, and in that event they will break in the low places, and the water will flood and run to waste. After you have constructed your laterals over the ground just right, you can probably irrigate with one-half or one-third of the amount of water that it takes to irrigate a piece of land the first time. That is the case when we irrigate with alfalfa as a crop. Therefore with the quantity of water they had this year they could normally have irrigated 50,000 acres of land. The reason they did not is simply because they did not have the available water. Of that I am perfectly sure.

I was on the work in the early part of August. I left here on the 1st of August, and I put in some days out there on the reservation. There were scores of people who had been sitting out there two or three or five years, who were begging me to ask the reclamation people for water. I went to the reclamation people, and they said, "We simply do not have the water. The ditches are there. Members of Congress have insisted on the ditches. Now we have the ditches, but we have not the storage."

I want to say in fairness that the last year was an exceptionally dry year. Everybody who knows anything about that country knows that the drought has prevailed there for two years, and as a consequence the ditches did not fill as they would in normal years. There was less water than there had been for 40 or 50 normal years for those people out there.

But aside from that the situation is this: One thousand eight hundred homesteaders out there have complied with the homestead law and have paid their money to the Government. The Government bargained with them and said, "If you pay this money, you may have title to the land. We will take a lien on it for the expense of the water." If Congress is not going to complete the project is it not fair to abandon the project and say to these people who have been sitting out there, "You paid your $5, as the law provided, and you have lived your three years there, and here is your title." To do so, of course, would be to abandon the project on which you have expended $4,000,000 when $2,500,000 would complete the project. It is manifestly a hardship upon those people to let that matter rest another year, because they have got to pay for this irrigation system.

Gentlemen are under the apprehension that these so-called reimbursable moneys are not reimbursable. I do not know about other projects, but I do know about this one. There are 1,800 homestead people out there, and a lot of other lands owned by the Indians pledged for that money. The homesteaders can not pay the money now, because nobody knows how much money they will have to pay. The law provides that it shall be paid in 20 annual payments after the project is completed.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I will be pleased to yield; yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will recall that when Mr. Davis was before our committee the chairman asked him a question. It will be found on page 17 of volume 14. The question was asked by Mr. RHODES instead of the chairman, I should say. The question was propounded by Mr. RHODES to Mr. Davis, who, as the gentleman knows, is the Chief of the Reclamation Service, under whose supervision this work is being constructed. It was, "What is the irrigated area under that project?" and Mr. Davis replied, "The irrigated area in 1919 was 35,750 acres, but we were in a position to deliver water to more than twice that—nearly three times."

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes. My reply, I think, will be found recorded in the record. Will the gentleman read that?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman can reply in his own way. It is a pretty long statement.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Briefly, the situation is this: I think Mr. Davis made the statement, "We were prepared to furnish water to twice or three times as much," but what I think Mr. Davis meant to say was, "The ditches are constructed for that much." I know that is what Mr. Davis meant to say, because I asked at the time this testimony was taken that Mr. Davis be recalled there to be questioned. The committee said, "We do not want Mr. Davis here." I have a letter in my pocket from Mr. Davis in which he says that is what he meant.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes; I shall be glad to.

Mr. SNYDER. In reply to that statement I may say that the reason why Mr. Davis was not recalled was that he had spent nearly two days before the committee, and each of these projects had been gone into with him to the fullest extent, and the final thought of the committee after the hearing was that under the position we had taken, that where a project had 91,000 acres irrigated and only 31,000 in use, it was absolutely senseless to put any more into the development of that project until the land was ready for water, or had water, and was more nearly taken up; and that was afterwards stated by the Secretary of the Interior himself.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Well, I dispute the statement of the gentleman in both instances. In the first place, Secretary Lane, according to the testimony the gentleman read from, does not say that; and, in the next place, the gentleman's committee had before it Mr. Davis on an investigation of the Indian Bureau. It took in this project, among other things, but he did not give that testimony on the question of the estimate for this particular work at the time they had this project under consideration. I do not know that it makes any particular difference when he was there, but I know that, possibly in an unguarded statement or in an inaccurate statement, with no intention to deceive anybody, he said, "We are prepared to furnish water to 90,000 acres of land." What he meant was that the ditches are built. He did not say they had the water there, because his report shows that they have had only 51,000 acres of storage and that they used 51,000 acres of land this year and irrigated 35,000 acres of land. They now want to increase that storage to 95,000 acres, and if you will give them the money they will increase it and the project will be completed in a couple of years.

Mr. RHODES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman has stated that there are 1,800 homesteaders on this reservation?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. Do those 1,800 homesteaders reside on the irrigated area?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Does the gentleman mean on the irrigated area or on the irrigable area? We have to be very particular in this committee to find out what gentlemen mean.

Mr. RHODES. I mean on the irrigated area, for the reason that if they do reside on that area there could be no justification for an increased appropriation for the extension of the water.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. No; the 1,800 homesteaders do not all reside on the irrigated area, because that is all the homesteaders there are there, and if they all resided on the irrigated area the project would be completed. They live on the irrigable area, and about 1,000 of them used water this year.

Mr. RHODES. Will the gentleman permit one further question?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. Who does live on the irrigated area?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. A lot of homesteaders, about 1,000 of them, and some Indians.

Mr. RHODES. One other question, Mr. Chairman. How do the number of Indian settlers compare with the number of white settlers on that reservation?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Of course, again we have to be particular. What does the gentleman mean by Indian settlers?

Mr. RHODES. I mean those residing on the reservation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Will the gentleman yield me five minutes more?

Mr. HAYDEN. The time is all promised, but I will yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. RHODES. I mean those who reside on the reservation.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. There are about 2,500 Indians there. You can call them settlers or whatever you please to call them. There are that many on the reservation, and there are 200 or 300 farming Indians there.

Mr. RHODES. Who predominate on that reservation—Indians or the white people?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. There are 10,000 white people there and about 2,500 Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield for one more question?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman has just observed that we have had to be very particular about this. Now, I desire to say to the gentleman that that is exactly what this committee has endeavored to do in the drafting of this measure. We have endeavored to be very particular to believe that men meant what they said; and when Mr. Davis said that the irrigated area on this project in 1919 was 37,550 acres, but that he was in a position to deliver water to more than twice and nearly three times that acreage, we believed that he meant what he said.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. If a man had a railroad and somebody asked him, "How much freight can you deliver from here to Chicago?" he might say, "Why, I can deliver 100,000 tons," but it would not necessarily follow that he would have that much freight to deliver. It is evident that the director meant that he had ditches dug there. The whole testimony shows that the ditches are constructed. Ditches were constructed ahead of the reservoir capacity, because Congress was insisting that the ditches be dug there so that they might irrigate the land. They utilized all the water they had last year. If anyone has any doubt about this project, let Congress send somebody out there to look it over and get whatever information is necessary. But I submit to this House is it fair to these settlers to take their money and yet hold title to their land for 12 long years and say, "We do not know until next year whether we will give you title or not"? These people have waited there for 12 years, waited for the Government to comply with this portion of the law, and it is manifestly unjust to continue in this way.

The discontinuance of this work for even a year means added expense and hardship to these people which in the end they must pay. I have no doubt that the actual additional expense will be more than $100,000. It means that the whole working force and organization must be broken up, moved, and disintegrated, the engineers and office force discharged or sent to some other point, the steam shovels and similar equipment shipped to some other point or disposed of, the horses and mules used in this construction to be sold at a sacrifice only to be repurchased or replaced at some future time at an additional price. The lumber, cement, and other necessary supplies for carrying on a project costing $7,000,000 will deteriorate or disappear, so I think I am well within the mark when I suggest the actual loss by a year's delay will be $100,000. The potential loss in crops and produce will be twice as much more. It is a manifest injustice that should not be imposed by this Congress upon any body of American citizens, and I appeal to the sense of justice of the Members of this House to make a reasonably adequate appropriation to continue this work. I thank you.

Mr. SNYDER. I yield 15 minutes to my colleague on the Committee on Indian Affairs [Mr. RHODES].

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I rise to speak in support of the bill under consideration. On the 19th day of December I received a telegram calling me to Missouri on account of the serious illness of my mother, and I returned only yesterday. For that reason I have not had an opportunity to read the report of the commitee or to go over the printed hearings. But, Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I did attend all the hearings and desire to call the attention of the Members of the House to a few of the important facts taken into consideration by the committee in the preparation of this bill.

I desire to congratulate the able chairman of this committee on his constructive statesmanship. I emphasize the word "able," because he has pointed out in a practical, discriminating manner certain necessary reforms as well as the impractical way in which the affairs of the Indian Office are being at present administered.

While I was not present at the final meeting of the committee, when the bill was reported out, yet I do know the reasons which actuated the chairman and the other members of this committee in framing the bill.

I live in a State in which there are but 300 Indians, and they are all of mixed blood, and have only a general interest in the bill. I would remind gentlemen of the House that we have to-day something like 150 Indian reservations in the United States, numbering about 336,000 Indians. These are widely scattered throughout the country from the State of New York to the State of Washington and from Michigan on the north to Florida on the south.

While the Indian question is one of the old questions with which the American Congress has had to deal, I call attention to the fact that it is yet a big question, calling for estimates by the department for the next fiscal year for the administration of Indian affairs approximating over $17,000,000.

I am here reminded that the Committee on Indian Affairs has come more nearly up to that standard of economy laid down by the distinguished majority leader [Mr. MONDELL], wherein he stated a few moments ago that of the total estimates arising from the different departments of the Government they must be cut at least 28 per cent, than any other committee, because the Committee on Indian Affairs has been able to construct a measure which we think will not impair any activities of the Indian Service but at the same time will save the Public Treasury $4,000,000, or 25 per cent, according to the estimates.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RHODES. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The gentleman thinks that the service will not be impaired, but I would like to ask the gentleman if he does not think that cutting off the Indian schools, beginning at the top, is a mistake?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, the committee took into consideration the necessity of maintaining every Indian school, and I do not concede that the gentleman's question rests upon a sound hypothesis. The question is not predicated on the facts of the case because the facts are that no Indian school has been eliminated the necessity for which was fully justified by the hearings. I say further, in response to the question of the gentleman from Washington, that one of the purposes of the inquiry was to eliminate all the schools which had outlived their usefulness, those where the daily attendance had fallen below 7, 8, or 10——

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. How does the gentleman justify the elimination of the schools where the attendance was 250, where the parents had been obliged under a recent regulation to pay $20 a month for tuition?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, the justification of what I said lies in the statement already made that this committee eliminated no school the further continuation of which had been justified, and that all schools eliminated have either outlived their usefulness or consolidated with other schools. I understand the reason prompting the inquiry by the gentleman from Washington. He makes reference to a certain school in his own State, but I want to assure the gentleman that I have no interest, directly or indirectly, in the maintenance of any Indian school, but I do have a general interest in the cause of education, which I think should be generously extended to the Indian wards of this Government.

Within the brief time allotted to me I can not speak more at length on the educational phase of this subject, but I desire to call the attention of the House to the so-called question of reimbursement legislation, because it was with that particular subject that the subcommittee of which I was chairman had to deal.

I desire to call attention to the remarks made by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. EVANS], who has just preceded me, wherein he makes reference to the Flathead Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, and in answer to a question propounded by myself a few moments ago, wherein I asked him whose money had been used in the construction of this great irrigation project, where $4,000,000 have already been expended on the construction of that project, and he said the people's money. I say, Mr. Chairman, that every dollar of the money that has been expended was the money of the Indians. I say, furthermore, that there was from the day I became a member of this committee until this hour a very serious question in my mind as to whether or not the Congress of the United States has ever been justified in hypothecating the money of the American Indians in the construction of the white man's project.

I want to remind the gentleman from Montana and the Members of this House that, according to the testimony of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; of Mr. Reed, the chief engineer; according to the testimony of Mr. Davis, at the head of the Reclamation Service, it was not the intention of this committee to cripple or impair any of these useful projects, but it was our intention to protect the Public Treasury against the future useless, unnecessary, and wholly indefensible appropriations. I assert, gentlemen, with due regard to the statement by the gentleman who has just taken his seat, that the proposition which he set out to defend is not an Indian project. I assert that it is a white man's project. I assert that the reason actuating this committee in the reduction of these estimates in the sum of a hundred million dollars was based upon the fact that the irrigation project has been carried far in excess of the interest of the Indians on the reservations.

I want to remind the gentleman from Montana [Mr. EVANS] that it was not the purpose of this committee to strike down or destroy a meritorious enterprise. I want to say that it is practical to hold appropriations down to this point without impairing the usefulness of the projects. I want to remind Members of this House that these great projects are made up of such parts and of such units that certain units can be used to accomplish the purpose for which they were originally designed, and further appropriations temporarily discontinued, as we have done in this case, without impairing the projects.

I fear that the argument by the gentleman has been misleading in its character, and I invite the attention of every Member of the House to the volumes beginning with No. 7 and ending with No. 14 of the hearings before this committee, wherein testimony was given by the most competent men in all this country on the proposition. It involves the testimony of the chief of engineers of the Reclamation Service, Mr. Davis, an admirable and most efficient public servant, involving the testimony of a large number of field men, involving the testimony of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs himself and his able assistant, Mr. Meritt, and Secretary Lane.

I want to say in conclusion upon this point, aside from the doubt that exists in my mind as to the lack of justification for these reclamation enterprises, there is in my mind a serious legal question as to the right of this Government to enforce many of these demands against our Indian wards. I herewith call attention to a part of the hearings on this particular subject and some related questions.

STATEMENT OF HON. CATO SELLS, COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS, RELATING TO REIMBURSABLE APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Commissioner, the subcommittee of which I have the honor to be chairman, in accordance with the plan agreed upon, is expected to conduct an inquiry into the character and kind of activities for which moneys have been advanced through the so-called reimbursable appropriations. State in your own way the policy of the department with regard to the use of those funds obtained through reimbursable appropriations, if you will.

Mr. SELLS. Running over a considerable period of years, Congress has made what we call reimbursable appropriations. During the earlier period very largely appropriations were made by Congress for specific purposes in the nature of irrigation projects, roads, and bridges, and betterments of that character. More recently, covering a period of perhaps 10 years, there have been appropriations made for industrial advancement of Indians, altogether something like $23,000,000, I think, about $2,500,000 of which was for industrial purposes. Of the $23,000,000, something like $17,000,000 remains payable to the Government. Of the $2,500,000 for industrial purposes, the amount has been reduced about a half of a million.

The specific appropriations are supposed to be secured by property of the Indians in the way of lands and timber and property of various kinds belonging to the respective tribes for which appropriations are advanced. The money appropriated for industrial purposes is used by way of advancement to individual interests in sums not to exceed $600 to an Indian. These amounts are advanced to a class of Indians that are found to be, through the superintendents, of a progressive type, industrious and dependable, and where, after an acquaintance with them and a knowledge of what they have done, it is a fair presumption that they will repay it. The property bought with the money is held under contract with each individual as a guarantee of repayment. Of the property purchased under supervision there have been something in excess of 50,000 of that type of contracts made with perhaps 30,000 families. The use of that money is widely distributed. It is primarily for the purpose of encouraging industry and production among those who have allotments.

When an Indian is declared competent, if he has not repaid his reimbursable advancement, a bond is given to further secure his payment. If there are tribal funds in which he has an interest, the amount due is deducted.

Altogether, it is my general information that the use of these reimbursable funds has been very gratifying. Losses up to this time indicate in the neighborhood of 5 per cent. The idea underlying the industrial appropriation, the advancement by way of reimbursable money to the Indian is to give him an industrial opportunity. The fact that an Indian has an allotment with no money to buy him a team or implements or seed makes his progress impossible.

The use of funds along these lines has been his chief means of progress and the Indian has utilized it in a wonderfully gratifying way. He has been able to farm his own land and make for himself a home and progress as he could never have done otherwise. Outside of education of the Indian, I look upon this reimbursable industrial fund as the greatest help that he has had.

Mr. RHODES. I infer, Mr. Sells, from what you have said, that the plan involving the industrial feature of the matter was not a part of the original scheme of advancement under this method of reimbursable appropriations?

Mr. SELLS. Reimbursable appropriations for industrial purposes to the individual Indian have been only within the last 10 years, while specific congressional appropriations for other purposes antedate it by a number of years.

Mr. RHODES. Are you able to state when the first reimbursable appropriation act for industrial purposes was passed?

Mr. SELLS. I think it was 1908. I am not sure about it.

Mr. RHODES. Do you recall when the first act was passed involving a reimbursable appropriation for any purpose?

Mr. SELLS. I can not be definite about that, but I would say it was back something like 25 or 30 years, as I recall now; perhaps 1872.

Mr. RHODES. Have you had occasion to review the results of those first activities resulting from the earlier appropriations?

Mr. SELLS. Those specific congressional appropriations—not in detail; I have not.

Mr. RHODES. But you have such a knowledge of the subject that enables you to draw the conclusion that the plan is a success upon the whole, have you?

Mr. SELLS. You are speaking now, I take it, more especially of the industrial appropriations?

Mr. RHODES. First as to the other, and then as to the industrial, or you may speak of it altogether.

Mr. SELLS. I have no hesitation about the industrial appropriation to say it has been both desirable and successful. Generally speaking, I would say that the other was permissible in some instances, more or less of an experiment, and some of the appropriations doubtful.

Mr. RHODES. What particular enterprises would you regard as of a doubtful sort?

Mr. SELLS. A large number of these appropriations have been for irrigation purposes. The large appropriations have been for that purpose. I have entertained some doubt as to the wisdom, for example, of the Fort Peck irrigation reimbursable appropriation, and of the Blackfeet.

Mr. RHODES. Upon what ground do you base that question of doubt with regard to the feasibility of the Fort Peck and Blackfeet irrigation projects?

Mr. SELLS. I have never been fully convinced that the agricultural conditions in those localities justified it.

Mr. SINCLAIR. How much do you recall was expended on the Fort Peck irrigation project?

Mr. SELLS. I do not recall the amounts.

Mr. RHODES. We have tables, I think, that will cover all that later. Which of those projects do you regard as permissible? You classified them as doubtful and as permissible in character.

Mr. SELLS. I think many of the irrigation projects that have been developed through reimbursable funds are entirely permissible and defensible.

Mr. RHODES. Will you mention a few of those you regard as defensible?

Mr. SELLS. I should say the Flathead.

Mr. RHODES. In what respect does the Flathead enterprise differ from the Fort Peck and Blackfeet enterprises?

Mr. SELLS. The agricultural possibilities are quite different. The seasons are longer on the Flathead. The whole environment there is conducive to better results. The climatic conditions of the Fort Peck and the Blackfeet are not so promising. Both of those reservations are essentially grazing localities. Some desirable results have been secured in an agricultural way.

Mr. RHODES. Do you remember about when those projects were originated?

Mr. SELLS. I could not fix the time, but a number of years ago.

Mr. RHODES. Which came first, chronologically speaking, the Fort Peck, the Flathead, or the Blackfeet enterprises?

Mr. SELLS. The Flathead was first.

Mr. RHODES. I believe you stated that the Flathead enterprise was permissible and is defensible.

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. The fact that it came first in the order of the governmental venture, would that have anything to do with having determined its success as against the failure of other enterprises.

Mr. SELLS. I presume a good outlook there was more or less of an incentive to the making of appropriations for the other two reservations.

Mr. RHODES. One question, Mr. Commissioner, with regard to the theory on which this whole matter rests. You are conversant with the principles involved in this class of legislation, of course. Are you prepared to tell the committee from what source the demands originally came for those appropriations? I mean to say, did the demands arise among the Indians who were to be the supposed beneficiaries or did it come from other sources?

Mr. SELLS. Frankness compels me to say that it was largely from other sources, as far as those particular projects are concerned.

Mr. RHODES. Then, in so far as the demand may have arisen from sources other than Indian in character, could the enterprise be defended upon these grounds, and are they justified?

Mr. SELLS. It is very doubtful.

Mr. RHODES. What per cent of these enterprises that have been made possible under the so-called reimbursable appropriations of this character do you regard as of the doubtful kind?

Mr. SELLS. I would not be able to give an intelligent answer to that question at this time.

Mr. RHODES. Do you assume that 50 per cent of these enterprises could be defended upon the grounds of resulting beneficially to the Indians?

Mr. SELLS. I expect so; possibly more; yes. In many instances, very desirable and with splendid results. I believe in irrigation. I believe in reimbursable appropriations under proper circumstances for that purpose.

Mr. RHODES. Is it a fact that the demand for this class of legislation arose anywhere among the Indians?

Mr. SELLS. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. Among what particular tribes?

Mr. SELLS. I do not know at this time, but I could name tribes where it originated from them and it would be entirely justifiable if it should have arisen among the Indians, more particularly in the Southwest.

Mr. RHODES. Returning to the Fort Peck Reservation, is that one of the doubtful kind and which you could hardly defend?

Mr. SELLS. From white people interested in the development of the lands.

Mr. RHODES. How were they situated so as to become beneficiaries under the plan?

Mr. SELLS. The development of the country, largely.

Mr. RHODES. Do you mean that they were living among the Indians on the Indian reservations?

Mr. SELLS. From those who own lands of that character and from those who were interested in bringing the land under cultivation by the use of the water, anticipating that they might come into white hands and increase production and develop the country.

Mr. RHODES. I assume, then, that a large number of white people are living in those reservations and have leaseholds or have acquired title in fee to property and have special property rights.

Mr. SELLS. There are more or less who have fee ownership and there are more who have leases, and then there is a general interest among the white people in those localities to develop those lands.

Mr. RHODES. Could you make a more concrete statement, showing what particular interests may have been responsible for this legislation?

Mr. SELLS. No; I think not, Mr. RHODES. The interests involved were of various character and come from different sources, the exact source I am not familiar with.

Mr. RHODES. Is Mr. Meritt perhaps better prepared to go into the detail of the enterprises now existing and which originally have existed on these reservations?

Mr. SELLS. Perhaps so.

Mr. RHODES. In case he is not, who in your bureau would be qualified to simply state the contract side of the proposition as it is to-day under these reclamation projects?

Mr. SELLS. I did not get your question. I thought you were seeking to get information as to the source of the activities looking toward the original development of the projects.

Mr. RHODES. In the absence of your answer upon that phase of the question, I thought we might get at the results and then proceed from the effect back to the cause.

Mr. SELLS. As to the present situation, Mr. Meritt is more or less familiar with it and our chief engineer of irrigation, Mr. W. M. Reed, who is present, is especially familiar with these matters.

Mr. RHODES. May we have the benefit of Mr. Reed's information later on?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir. In addition to the gentleman named, Mr. Govern, of the Finance Division of my office, will be able to give you considerable information.

Mr. RHODES. Then what you have said applies to the Fort Peck and the Blackfeet enterprises alike and to the others of the same character?

Mr. SELLS. I hardly think the others are in that class. I would be inclined to distinguish those two from the rest.

Mr. RHODES. Well, is there an intermediate class between these two extreme classes of enterprises which you have seen fit to designate as defensible and those of a questionable character?

Mr. SELLS. There may be some which are more desirable than others, concerning which Mr. Reed can give you the best information. Mr. Meritt can give you information also.

Mr. RHODES. That might be mentioned as exceptional cases?

Mr. SELLS. I would rather say so; yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. A legal question has been bothering my mind for two or three days, and I might see what the commissioner thinks about it. Based upon the statement made by Mr. Meritt and by one or two other gentlemen, there might be a question about the legal right of the Government to enforce its claim for any unpaid balance that might turn up against any Indian in the future to whom these advancements have been made. I am not an Indian lawyer, and that may account for the fact that I fail to comprehend the liability on the part of the Indian to have enforced against him a demand that might arise in the future over an unpaid balance at any time under this contract. Now, the question I want to ask you is this: Is there any doubt about the right of the Government to enforce its demands in case it becomes necessary under a default by any Indian to whom such advancements for industrial purposes have been made?

Mr. SELLS. I presume you predicate your question upon the fact that there are some reimbursable appropriations that have been made without the consent of the Indian and that there are others to which he is party, and you are asking the question as it affects those advancements where there is no contract, no voluntary act on his part? Am I correct in that?

Mr. CARTER. Get them both ways.

Mr. RHODES. I thought it had been made clear that no advancement had been made to anybody except under a contract.

Mr. SELLS. The industrial appropriations have been disbursed almost entirely under contract with the Indians.

Mr. RHODES. Almost entirely?

Mr. SELLS. Practically; I do not know of any exception. We have something like 50,000 contracts with the Indians for industrial advancements.

Mr. RHODES. Well, in the advancements that have been made in the absence of contract, then, the inference, I assume, can reasonably be drawn that if the Indian should dissipate his property, or if he does not turn out to be a good farmer, in such event the Government would be unable to recover the advancement?

Mr. SELLS. I know of no such instances. Our industrial reimbursable funds are always advanced under contract with the Indian.

Mr. RHODES. Then, I will return to the question and let it apply to those with whom the Government has contracts. Is there any question in your mind as to the right of the Government to enforce its demands against the Indian with whom it has a contract?

Mr. SELLS. No, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Are these Indians under restrictions to whom these advancements have been made for industrial purposes?

Mr. SELLS. Almost entirely. However, this is true, Mr. Congressman, that where we make advancements of funds, we supervise the purchase of the property and we hold the title to the property that is bought with reimbursable funds, and that property never passes to the Indian until it is paid for.

Mr. RHODES. Then the Indian has such a legal status that a contract could be enforced against him, made between him and the Government?

Mr. SELLS. I am inclined to think it could be enforced without a contract.

Mr. RHODES. But you are certain it can be enforced in all cases where there are contracts?

Mr. SELLS. I have no question about the collection of those sums where they have been advanced as I have been speaking.

Mr. RHODES. I think it rather a curious thing if there is that sort of relation existing between the Government of the United States and the Indian resembling that of guardian and ward, or the relation between an adult person and a minor, that the Government has the right to enforce such a contract.

Mr. SELLS. As to whether or not he could make a legal contract?

Mr. RHODES. Yes.

Mr. SELLS. The contract, to my mind, is largely a moral obligation, enforcible from the fact alone, if for no other reason, that they are trust funds, and brought under supervision, and the title remains in the Government. He never acquires absolute title until he has paid for the property.

Mr. RHODES. I would like to have for the record a copy of this industrial contract.

Mr. SELLS. Very well; we will insert that.

The CHAIRMAN. It is so ordered.

(The contract is as follows:)

Purchase authority_____, 19__ Agreement No_____
(Number.) (Yr.)

Preceding agreement No_____

AGREEMENT TO REIMBURSE.

Agreement entered into this _____ day of _____, 191__, between _____ of the _____ tribe of Indians, party (parties) of the first part, and the superintendent or other officer in charge of said Indians, for and on behalf of the United States of America, party of the second part, covering property, stock, or equipment purchased under the provisions of the regulations governing the use of reimbursable funds from _____ (Names of funds and amounts chargeable to each.)

_____
(Agency or school.)

It is hereby agreed that the said party (parties) of the first part, his (their) heirs, executors, and administrators will pay to the said party of the second part, or his successors in office, the sums hereinafter shown as due, on the dates mentioned, which payments are to be in full consideration for the property, stock, or equipment listed below, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged by said party (parties) of the first part.

Item.	Amount.	Brand and description of stock.
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
_____	$_____	_____
Total _____	$_____

Payments to be made by said party (parties) of the first part to the said party of the second part, or his successors in office, as follows:

Date due.	Amount.
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
_____, 191__,	$_____
Total_____	$_____

It is stipulated and agreed that houses or other buildings and fences constructed hereunder, if any, shall not be considered a part of the realty; that the title to the above-described property, stock, or equipment shall remain in the United States of America until payment in full has been made, and that in default of payment, or in case of failure to properly care for, or have cared for, or use the same, the said superintendent, or his successors in office, shall take possession of said property and remove it from the land or dispose of it in any other manner deemed feasible and proper, as set forth in regulations approved by the Secretary of the Interior to govern transactions of this character. In the event there is a depreciation in value or loss of property in any manner after its receipt by said party (parties) of the first part, or the property can not be recovered or disposed of by the party of the second part, it is agreed that the said party (parties) of the first part, his (their) heirs, executors, or administrators will make payment of such amount as may be necessary to fully reimburse the Government on account of such depreciation or loss.

It is further stipulated and agreed that any trust funds which said party (parties) of the first part may now have to his (their) credit in the Treasury of the United States, or in local banks, or may hereafter acquire, or any other personal property, including crops, shall be liable to application by said party of the second part toward the settlement of this agreement until full payment has been made.

It is still further stipulated and agreed that upon payment in full by said party (parties) of the first part, or his (their) heirs, executors, or administrators from any funds except those held in trust by the Government of the amount of the consideration named herein, that the title, free and unincumbered, to the articles mentioned shall pass to him (them). Where funds held in trust by the Government are used in payment, it is agreed that, in event the party of the second part shall deem it for the best interests of the party (parties) of the first part, the property shall not be sold or otherwise disposed of without the consent in writing of said party of the second part.

_____ [L. S.]
Allottee No_____
_____
(Address.)
_____ [L. S.]
(Superintendent.)

WITNESSES:

_____
_____

Mr. RHODES. Now you speak, Mr. Sells, in regard to the enforcement of this contract. Does the Government take a separate lien paper under which the Indian who acquires the individual property obligates himself to pay the Government, or is his only agreement to reimburse specified in this contract or paper which I have just called for for the record?

Mr. SELLS. He makes a triplicate contract signed by the Indian and the superintendent.

Mr. RHODES. Well, that is one contract in triplicate, but that is not what I mean.

Mr. SELLS. That is the only contract he makes.

Mr. RHODES. I assume, then, the Government takes the position that it holds something in the nature of a vendor's lien against the property, and upon that it has the legal right to enforce this contract?

Mr. SELLS. That, together with the fact that the title never passes until he has repaid the reimbursable advances.

Mr. RHODES. To my mind it is clear that the transaction has not taken the form of an ordinary civil contract involving the sale of property and the taking in turn for the purchase price a mortgage or a lien paper.

Mr. SELLS. I think you are right in this, that they are of a different character, since the Government relies largely on the fact that the title remains in the Government.

Mr. RHODES. Has the Government had an opportunity to determine its right to enforce these contracts against Indians?

Mr. SELLS. It has never been questioned.

Mr. RHODES. Then your answers are based upon the understanding you have of the matter from a practical standpoint and not upon any determined cases themselves?

Mr. SELLS. No adjudications.

Mr. RHODES. Following up the original plan of inquiry, you might state how far these activities have advanced in accordance with the theory involving their creation and their development.

Mr. SELLS. Speaking more especially——

Mr. RHODES. Speaking now of the larger enterprises and later of the others, if you like.

Mr. SELLS. Well, of the larger enterprises——

Mr. RHODES. Take the Fort Peck.

Mr. SELLS. On those enterprises I think you will get the best information from Mr. Reed. The initiation of practically all those enterprises antedated my administration.

Mr. RHODES. You mean the Fort Peck, Blackfeet, and Flathead?

Mr. SELLS. All of those.

Mr. RHODES. Have any kindred enterprises been put on foot since your incumbency in the Indian Office?

Mr. SELLS. No, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Do you recommend the continuation of this policy, or would you advise its discontinuance?

Mr. SELLS. The policy is good if not abused.

Mr. RHODES. Is the policy of such character that it could be safeguarded and abuse prevented?

Mr. SELLS. It could be, and should be, safeguarded in such a manner as to prevent abuse.

Mr. RHODES. Well, is it being safeguarded and are abuses now being prevented?

Mr. SELLS. The appropriations for Fort Peck and the Blackfeet are being confined almost entirely to the necessities of upkeep. The appropriations for the Flathead have been continuous and considerable.

I have felt that to abandon the appropriations entirely for either the Fort Peck or the Blackfeet would be to sacrifice the investment, but have sought to minimize it.

On the Flathead I have not had that feeling. I have been disposed to have those appropriations continued and the project finished and the necessity for continuing them brought to a close as early as possible.

Mr. RHODES. How far have these projects progressed in accordance with the original plan?

Mr. SELLS. The Flathead has made considerable progress and is looking toward its culmination. The Fort Peck and the Blackfeet have not.

Mr. RHODES. Well, how soon will these enterprises have reached the full fruition of their purposes?

Mr. SELLS. The Flathead is about 60 per cent completed. It will all depend upon the amount of appropriations Congress sees fit to make. For instance, this year there will be an urgent plea to make a large appropriation for the Flathead. I expect that the delegation from that district will probably ask for a million dollars for the Flathead. The other two I am unable to say, but considerably less.

Mr. RHODES. Who might we call from your office in order to ascertain the details in relation to these activities at Fort Peck and Fort Belknap and the Flathead Reservations?

Mr. SELLS. Mr. Reed, more especially.

Mr. RHODES. He is the right man?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir; and Mr. Meritt can give you information concerning them.

Mr. RHODES. I suppose there will be no trouble in Mr. Meritt segregating from the total amounts appropriated for those purposes the amount used for each of those individual enterprises?

Mr. SELLS. No, sir; not at all.

Mr. RHODES. And we will get that in the record?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Well, with regard to the time involved in which these appropriations are to be returned to the Government—the appropriations used in the report of these enterprises—I think it would be a proper subject of inquiry.

Mr. SELLS. There is no fixed time.

Mr. RHODES. Has there been a return up to this time to any extent on these investments?

Mr. SELLS. The total amount of the specific appropriations to which you have been referring and others of a like nature is something like $20,000,000, and the amount unpaid is something like $17,000,000.

Mr. RHODES. So it means that a very small per cent of the money advanced for those purposes has actually been returned?

Mr. SELLS. Something like one-seventh.

Mr. RHODES. What are the immediate prospects for a continued repayment of these advancements?

Mr. SELLS. Well, not rapid repayment, but the probability of repayment.

Mr. RHODES. What is the nature of the Government's contract or agreement with these tribes or the people in these communities in which these particular enterprises are located, and who is the Government dealing with?

Mr. SELLS. It is entirely the result of legislation. For instance, the Flathead appropriation is made a lien upon the separate holdings of both white and red men.

Mr. RHODES. In proportion to the benefits they receive?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Or is it a community of interest plan?

Mr. SELLS. No; it is individual.

Mr. RHODES. Individual?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Well, who predominates among the beneficiaries—Indians or white people?

Mr. SELLS. White people.

Mr. RHODES. Is that true to-day alone or has it always been that way since the inception of the enterprises?

Mr. SELLS. You are speaking now of these particular irrigation projects?

Mr. RHODES. These particular projects.

Mr. SELLS. I think so.

Mr. RHODES. I did not get that answer fixed in my mind as to the time involved when these repayments are to be made.

Mr. SELLS. The time is not fixed.

Mr. RHODES. Are the legislative acts silent as to the date when the payments are to be made?

Mr. SELLS. That is my understanding.

Mr. RHODES. Are there any interest charges charged against the beneficiaries?

Mr. SELLS. The law provides that after the projects have been completed the Secretary of the Interior shall fix a plan, my recollection is, of 20 years, but the time has not been fixed. There is no interest on the advancements.

Mr. RHODES. What would you say the security consists of against which the Government might enforce its claim in case it becomes necessary?

Mr. SELLS. The land itself. I would say, for example, speaking of the Flathead, that the security would be very apt to recoup the Government.

Mr. RHODES. How about the Blackfeet?

Mr. SELLS. I am not so sure about that.

Mr. RHODES. Is your office in possession of an inventory of these properties?

Mr. SELLS. We have one generally. We would not be able to identify a particular tract and tell the exact conditions as they affect that specific tract.

Mr. RHODES. Suppose I should ask this question: How much money has been expended in the development of the Fort Peck project; you could answer that question?

Mr. SELLS. That question could be answered.

Mr. RHODES. Then suppose I should say: "What is this property worth?" Could you answer that question?

Mr. SELLS. We could make an estimate.

Mr. RHODES. Are you endeavoring to keep track of the condition of the property year by year, as the appropriations are dispensed, with regard to the upkeep and the extension work of these projects?

Mr. SELLS. Only in a general way.

Mr. RHODES. Well, there is a book kept as to the amount of money expended in the upkeep and for the continuation of each individual project, is there not?

Mr. SELLS. All of that is obtainable from my office.

Mr. RHODES. And from whom might we most easily secure this information?

Mr. SELLS. Through Mr. Meritt and Mr. Reed, always keeping in mind that Mr. Govern is the man who handles the books.

Mr. RHODES. Do you think it is a fair proposition to the Government to continue these appropriations in the light of present conditions?

Mr. SELLS. It is largely a matter of protecting an investment already made. I refer now more especially to the Fort Peck and the Blackfeet. As an original investment, if I were called to pass upon it with my present information, I would not encourage it.

Mr. RHODES. To use a homely expression, it is making the best of a bad job, is it?

Mr. SELLS. That is pretty nearly correct.

Mr. RHODES. Do you think it is proper to continue these alleged reimbursable appropriations, when in truth and in fact it is pretty well known and understood, both by the department and by Congress, that these moneys will never be returned?

Mr. SELLS. It is doubtful.

Mr. RHODES. These advancements to which you have referred as having been invested in these particular enterprises I assume are all Treasury funds.

Mr. SELLS. On those projects; yes.

Mr. RHODES. No tribal funds were put into the enterprises along with Treasury funds?

Mr. SELLS. To some extent; but in the instances where tribal funds are used they have been restored to the tribe, and at this time the amount owing is to the Government.

Mr. RHODES. I assume that a record is kept in your office showing the amount of these various funds—the amount of each?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. One more question in connection with this phase of the matter and then I will let my colleagues pursue the inquiry. I assume, Mr. Commissioner, that these are big projects and involve engineering schemes. Who made these contracts originally, and who make these contracts now, with regard to the continuation of the work from year to year?

Mr. SELLS. They are the result of congressional appropriations. The execution of them rests with the Indian Bureau.

Mr. RHODES. Then the administration of the law comes through the Indian Bureau?

Mr. SELLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Which particular department of the Indian Office has charge of the making of these contracts and their enforcement? Is it a matter to which the commissioner gives personal attention or is that a matter delegated to some subordinate?

* * * * * * *

Mr. MERITT. The provision relating to the big reclamation projects is in the act of May 28, 1916, Thirty-ninth Statutes at Large, pages 140 to 141, and reads as follows:

"For continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Flathead Indian Reservation, in Montana, $750,000 (reimbursable), which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the payments for the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers on the surplus unallotted land by section 9, chapter 1495, Statutes of the United States of America, entitled 'An act for the survey and allotment of lands now embraced within the limits of the Flathead Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and the sale and disposal of all surplus lands after allotment,' as amended by section 15 of the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 448), shall be made as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 444), shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, or to relieve the owners of any or all land allotted to Indians in severalty from payment of the charges herein required to be made against said land on account of construction of the irrigation systems; and in carrying out the provisions of said section the exemption therein authorized from charges incurred against allotments purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon shall be the amount of the charges or installments thereof due under public notice herein provided for up to the time of such purchase.

"For continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, in Montana, $100,000 (reimbursable), which shall be immediately available: Provided, That the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers and entrymen on the surplus unallotted irrigable land by section 2 of the act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 558), shall be paid as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in said act of May 30, 1908, shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, and the purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by said systems purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase, and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees or their heirs issued before payment shall have been made of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or upon payment of the delinquent charges may be released by the Secretary of the Interior.

"For continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in Montana, $25,000 (reimbursable), which shall be immediately available: Provided, That the entryman upon the surplus unallotted lands to be irrigated by such systems shall, in addition to compliance with the homestead laws, before receiving patent for the lands covered by his entry, pay the charges apportioned against such tract as herein authorized, and a failure to make any two payments when due shall render the entry subject to cancellation, with the forfeiture to the United States of all rights acquired under the provisions of this act, as well as of any moneys paid on account thereof. The purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by such systems, purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior, before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid, shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees or their heirs issued before payment of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or upon payment of the delinquent charges may be released by the Secretary of the Interior.

"The work to be done with the amounts herein appropriated for the completion of the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Fort Peck projects may be done by the Reclamation Service on plans and estimates furnished by that service and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs: Provided, That not to exceed $15,000 of applicable appropriations made for the Flathead, Blackfeet, and Fort Peck irrigation projects shall be available for the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles for official use upon the aforesaid irrigation projects: Provided further, That not to exceed $7,500 may be used for the purchase of horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles, and that not to exceed $1,500 may be used for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles.

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to announce, at such time as in his opinion seems proper, the charge for construction of irrigation systems on the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Fort Peck Indian Reservations in Montana, which shall be made against each acre of land irrigable by the systems on each of said reservations. Such charges shall be assessed against the land irrigable by the systems on each said reservation in the proportion of the total construction cost which each acre of such land bears to the whole area of irrigable land thereunder.

"On the 1st day of December after the announcement by the Secretary of the Interior of the construction charge the allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner of such irrigable land which might have been furnished water for irrigation during the whole of the preceding irrigation season from ditches actually constructed shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation where the land is located, for deposit to the credit of the United States as a reimbursement of the appropriations made or to be made for construction of said irrigation systems, 5 per cent of the construction charge fixed for his land as an initial installment, and shall pay the balance of the charge in 15 annual installments, the first 5 of which shall each be 5 per cent of the construction charge and the remainder shall each be 7 per cent of the construction charge. The first of the annual installments shall become due and payable on December 1 of the fifth calendar year after the initial installment: Provided, That any allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner may, if he so elects, pay the whole or any part of the construction charges within any shorter period: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, grant such extension of the time for payments herein required from Indian allottees or their heirs as he may determine proper and necessary so long as such land remains in Indian title.

"That the tribal funds heretofore covered into the Treasury of the United States in partial reimbursement of appropriations made for constructing irrigation systems on said reservations shall be placed to the credit of the tribe and be available for such expenditure for the benefit of the tribe as Congress may hereafter direct.

"The cost of constructing the irrigation systems to irrigate allotted lands of the Indians on these reservations shall be reimbursed to the United States as hereinbefore provided, and no further reimbursements from the tribal funds shall be made on account of said irrigation works except that all charges against Indian allottees or their heirs herein authorized, unless otherwise paid, may be paid from the individual shares in the tribal funds, when the same is available for distribution, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

"That in addition to the construction charges, every allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation a maintenance and operation charge based upon the total cost of maintenance and operation of the systems on the several reservations, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to fix such maintenance and operation charge upon such basis as shall be equitable to the owners of the irrigable land. Such charges when collected shall be available for expenditure in the maintenance and operation of the systems on the reservation where collected: Provided, That delivery of water to any tract of land may be refused on account of nonpayment of any charges herein authorized, and the same may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be collected by a suit for money owed: Provided further, That the rights of the United States heretofore acquired to water for Indian lands referred to in the foregoing provision, namely, the Blackfeet, Fort Peck, and Flathead Reservation land, shall be continued in full force and effect until the Indian title to such land is extinguished.

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations and issue such notices as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and he is hereby authorized and directed to determine the area of land on each reservation which may be irrigated from constructed ditches and to determine what allowance, if any, shall be made for ditches constructed by individuals for the diversion and distribution of a partial or total water supply for allotted or surplus unallotted land: Provided, That if water be available prior to the announcement of the charge herein authorized, the Secretary of the Interior may furnish water to land under the systems on the said reservations, making a reasonable charge therefor, and such charges when collected may be used for construction or maintenance of the systems through which such water shall have been furnished."

Mr. RHODES. With that sheet before you, Mr. Meritt, and you having heard the testimony of the commissioner with regard to the Blackfeet, the Flathead, and Fort Belknap projects, I will ask you to state to the committee if you have had an opportunity to visit those reservations personally?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. How recently?

Mr. MERITT. Within the last five years I have visited the Blackfeet Reservation and the Fort Peck Reservation. I have not visited the Flathead Reservation, but I have traveled in a large part of the State of Montana.

Mr. RHODES. From what source do you obtain the information on which you base your opinion and derive your knowledge of the practical side of these projects?

Mr. MERITT. From the general information I have, covering a period of 14 years in the Indian Service, a large part of that time being in a supervisory character, and constantly reading communications and reports regarding these various activities.

Mr. RHODES. The reports, then, in your office, I assume, are made up from individual reports received from the superintendents of agencies in the field, are they?

Mr. MERITT. These reports are submitted to the main office not only from the superintendents in the field but from the supervisors of irrigation as well as the reports of all inspecting officials, and in addition to that we have special reports made by a commission in connection with the Flathead, Blackfeet, and Fort Peck irrigation projects.

Mr. RHODES. Then, as a matter of fact, there are three sources to which you go in obtaining your information in the office here, from what you have just stated?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Are these reports made from entirely independent sources?

Mr. MERITT. They are.

Mr. RHODES. Sources independent of each other?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Do you observe any apparent conflict in reports as they come in from the field from these different sources?

Mr. MERITT. The reports as to the conditions are practically uniform.

Mr. RHODES. Hence, you take that to mean that you are able to arrive at a knowledge of the facts in each case?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir; we also have the superintendents of those reservations visit Washington occasionally and we have the benefit of the personal contact with the superintendent who is in constant connection with the various activities at the reservation.

Mr. RHODES. The commissioner expressed doubt of the defensibility of the Fort Peck project. Do you share in the views of the commissioner?

Mr. MERITT. I think the Fort Peck project is practicable and feasible, but I would say that the Indians of that reservation have protested against that project.

Mr. RHODES. What has been the basis of the objection to the project coming from the Indians?

Mr. MERITT. The Indians have been allotted only in recent years and they were not familiar with irrigation projects. Irrigation was entirely new to the Indians on the Fort Peck Reservation. Prior to that time they had been engaged in dry farming as well as the raising of live stock.

Mr. RHODES. Then you regard the objections that have arisen from the Indians themselves as not being well founded?

Mr. MERITT. I think that ultimately the Indians themselves will acknowledge the benefit of irrigation on the Fort Peck Reservation.

Mr. RHODES. I questioned the commissioner this morning with regard to the number of white people who are receiving these benefits, as compared with the number of Indians who are now receiving the benefits. Have you any personal knowledge on that branch of the inquiry?

Mr. MERITT. We have information as to the number of Indians who are now receiving benefits on that reservation.

Mr. RHODES. Will you give the number if you have the figure?

Mr. MERITT. One thousand nine hundred and eighty-six.

Mr. RHODES. How does that compare with the number of white people who are beneficiaries on the same reservation?

Mr. MERITT. There are probably more Indians who are receiving benefits on the reservation than white people.

Mr. RHODES. Now, are those benefits which arise to the people, both white and Indian, of the same kind and character?

Mr. MERITT. So far as the irrigation of land is concerned, that is true. The white people will be required to pay the same construction charge as the Indians.

Mr. RHODES. You say so far as land benefits are concerned. Are there any other benefits aside from those arising from the irrigation of lands in which there would be an unequal benefit coming to the Indians, as compared with the white people?

Mr. MERITT. We will be more lenient with the Indians in paying the construction cost of the project than we would be with white people.

Mr. RHODES. That is hardly what I meant. Do the white people own more acres of that land and have they more property rights involved than the Indians, or do the Indians have greater and more substantial property rights than the white people? That is what I mean.

Mr. MERITT. The Indians have more substantial rights than the white people. In my statements a few minutes ago saying there were 1,986 Indians receiving benefits from that project, I do not want to mislead the committee into understanding there are that number of Indians actually cultivating irrigated lands, but that number of Indians will have their allotments irrigated by this project; but there is only a small acreage of land being cultivated by the Indians under that project at this time.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will you be a little more definite about that?

Mr. RHODES. That is what I was coming to. I was going to say we have reached the point where we ought to particularize. Just how many Indians have availed themselves of the benefits of this irrigation project?

Mr. MERITT. There are, up to our last report, 16,620 acres under that irrigation project subject to irrigation at that time. Out of that acreage, 1,800 acres were actually cultivated by the Indians.

Mr. RHODES. Did you examine those lands that were cultivated at the time you made the personal trip to Fort Peck?

Mr. MERITT. I did not go out on the reservation to examine the irrigation for the reason that the project at that time had just begun, and lands were not being irrigated to any great extent.

Mr. RHODES. Does your report show how many acres of land were cultivated in 1918 on that irrigated area of Indian lands?

Mr. MERITT. One thousand eight hundred acres.

Mr. RHODES. What crops were raised?

Mr. MERITT. They raised various crops; some alfalfa and wheat and rye—the grain crops.

Mr. RHODES. Now, have these Indians pursued that industry to the extent that it has become actually a profitable agricultural venture, or has it only taken the experimental form up to this time?

Mr. MERITT. It is largely experimental with the Fort Peck Indians for the reason that they have only begun within the last three or four years to use this irrigable land. In fact, it has only been available to them within the last few years.

Mr. RHODES. Then may I infer that the benefits coming to the Fort Peck Indians are of a twofold nature—that of the industrial enterprise where the Government furnishes the seed and farming implements and stock with which to carry on the farming, and also the benefits derived from the irrigation of their lands?

Mr. MERITT. They will get the benefit both ways.

Mr. RHODES. Then they are doubly benefited?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Do you know whether they are actually raising any wheat for sale or barley for sale or alfalfa for sale?

Mr. MERITT. I think there are Indians on the Fort Peck Reservation who are raising those grains for sale.

Mr. RHODES. What do your records show as to the production and the sale of farm products, say, for the year 1918, on those Indian irrigated lands?

Mr. HASTINGS. I will ask two or three question, if you will let me, while we are waiting.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Meritt, the thing I am particularly interested in is the development of the Indian. Of course, if we can increase the value of the crop at the same time, all well and good; but I want you to understand that I am not opposed to irrigation. I might be opposed to it as an Indian project, but that I am not discussing now. But what I want to know about this Fort Peck Reservation and about other reservations is whether the Indians themselves are being educated to use this irrigated land, and to what number. Now, frankly, let me say if I thought that this was just being increased in value by appropriations from the Government and it was being leased to white men, although the Indian got the benefit of it, I might entertain a different view. Now, what I want on this and other reservations is to know whether the Indians, generally speaking, are using the land.

Mr. MERITT. I would say as a general proposition that Indians are using irrigable lands in increasing numbers and they are making splendid showings on certain of the Indian reservations.

Mr. HASTINGS. They are being taught then to use the land?

Mr. MERITT. They are.

Mr. HASTINGS. As distinguished from it being used for their benefit?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. HASTINGS. Very well.

Mr. RHODES. What do your records show as to the production and sale of farm products, say for the year 1918, on those Indian irrigated lands?

Mr. MERITT. Our records show by Table 11 of the commissioner's annual report, headed "Use of agricultual lands belonging to Indians," for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, the following:

"Under Fort Peck: Area of land allotted, 283,000 acres; cultivated by the Indians, 10,100 acres. That includes not only irrigable land but dry land. Number of able-bodied male adults engaged in gainful occupations, 489; number of Indians actually farming, 165."

And the total income to the Indians amounted to $82,350.

Mr. RHODES. What other gainful occupations?

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Rhodes, that is not from just the irrigable lands; that is the value of products from the whole reservation.

Mr. MERITT. That includes both the dry farming lands and the irrigable lands cultivated by Indians.

Mr. HASTINGS. I thought maybe you wanted to develop that.

Mr. RHODES. The question was: What do you show as to products produced and sold? I thought that was what I said. In other words, I want to know if these are profitable enterprises from a practical standpoint?

Mr. MERITT. We have that information in the general table regarding irrigation projects and under the heading of Fort Peck we find this information: Number of acres in reservation, 849,250; number of Indians, 2,039; number of acres allotted, 849,250; number of irrigable acres, 124,643. That is when the project is completed. Construction cost to date, $253,029.32; maintenance cost, $85,252.15; estimated to complete the total cost of the project, $5,000,000; cost per acre to complete, $40; estimated value per acre when completed, $50. Reservation of allotted cultivated area under project, 1,100 acres. No information is given as to the value of the crops.

Mr. RHODES. Suppose you just lose sight of your table for a few moments and go with me over the practical side of the proposition. What do they raise there besides wheat and barley, or alfalfa?

Mr. MERITT. They raise live stock.

Mr. RHODES. Do you know how much wheat these Indians have produced for the market during any one year since their lands have been irrigated and since they have been advanced these funds for industrial purposes?

Mr. MERITT. I would have to get that information from the office of the agency.

Mr. RHODES. You have no record, then, in the Washington office showing how much has been produced in any one year in the way of surplus products?

Mr. MERITT. Not as to the details. We have general information as to the total amounts, but we do not have the detailed information as to the value of each class of products raised on the reservation.

Mr. RHODES. Were this committee to visit the reservation would we be able to find out from the records there how many acres of land have been farmed each year since the project became effective?

Mr. MERITT. They could procure that information for you.

Mr. RHODES. Well, do you not think it would be necessary to know in order to determine whether the enterprise is a successful one and whether it is practicable—just what the expenses are each year and just what the profits are arising from the venture?

Mr. MERITT. That would be necessary on a reservation where the irrigation project is farther advanced than on the Fort Peck, but the project on the Fort Peck is a new project and is by no means completed; only a very small part of the project is completed and the Indians are just beginning to make use of that project.

Mr. RHODES. Then as a practical proposition the scheme has not been perfected up to the point of usefulness that was anticipated at the outset?

Mr. MERITT. I think with the——

Mr. RHODES. Suppose I put it this way: The scheme has not been perfected to the point of profit up to this time?

Mr. MERITT. No, sir; but I think that the experience in Montana during the last two or three years because of the severe drought has demonstrated that irrigation is necessary in order to insure crops.

Mr. RHODES. I think we have long been convinced that irrigation is the only safe method to be employed in arid countries in order that crops may be produced. There could be no question about that.

Mr. MERITT. I was in Montana last summer on the Crow Indian Reservation and the crops were very largely a failure on the dry lands because of the drought.

Mr. RHODES. But there might be a question as to whether or not it is proper for the Government of the United States to go into such an endeavor as that at the expense of the Public Treasury.

Mr. MERITT. As a matter of policy for the Government I think it has been established by the action of Congress in the past that it is a proper policy to advance reimbursable moneys for the development of these irrigation projects on reservations where they are feasible.

Mr. RHODES. Do you know how much land an Indian on one of these irrigated farms is supposed to cultivate with his present means and the use of farming implements such as he has?

Mr. MERITT. That depends largely on the location and the industry of the Indians and the equipment of the Indians. There are some Indians who are farming as high as 160 acres of irrigable lands. Of course, with the assistance of other Indians. And there are other Indians who are farming as low as 5 acres of land. We have Indians in the Southwest on the Yuma Reservation who are making a success by farming 10 acres.

Mr. RHODES. Which class predominates, those farming 160-acre tracts or those farming 5 and 10 acre tracts?

Mr. MERITT. I think the Indians farming the lower acreage predominate.

Mr. RHODES. Do you know how these Indians take care of the stock and farming equipment furnished them through the reimbursable appropriation?

Mr. MERITT. Of course, there is as much difference in the character of Indians as there is in the character of white people. Some Indians are thriftless and abuse their property, and other Indians are careful of their property. I think, as a general rule, the Indians who have received assistance through this reimbursable industrial appropriation appreciate the opportunity that is being furnished them by the Government, and they will very largely reimburse the Government for the moneys advanced.

Mr. RHODES. Do your reports coming in from the field through the Indian agencies on these reservations show the facts as to what extent these Indians are succeeding or failing, and do they show the care taken of the property handled by them?

Mr. MERITT. Our reports show that the Indians are succeeding with these reimbursable appropriations. The fact that during the last two or three years they have increased by approximately 100,000 acres the area cultivated by them and the very material increase in the value of crops raised by Indians has demonstrated to our minds that the reimbursable appropriation is very desirable and practicable and a good business proposition not only for the Indians but for the Government.

Mr. RHODES. It has been stated here by Mr. Aschmeyer and by the commissioner that the Government is secure in these advancements made to the Indians both as a matter of tribal property and individual property. Have you a definite opinion, Mr. Meritt, as to the legal phase of this proposition?

Mr. MERITT. I have.

Mr. RHODES. What is it?

Mr. MERITT. I think that the Government is secured absolutely by the funds advanced by the Government to these Indians for industrial purposes. For example, when an Indian is loaned $400 for the purchase of stock we have that stock branded "I. D.-R.," meaning Indian cattle purchased with reimbursable funds, and that is an indication to the public that that property is trust property. The courts have not only held that it is trust property and that the Indian has no authority to sell it, but we get the further security of any increase from that stock. Another reason why the Government is protected is because that Indian holds an allotment held under trust, and he is having income from leasing from his lands, and that money goes to the superintendent. His property is all under the control of the Government, and the superintendent would have the right to take out of his individual funds money sufficient to meet these payments as they became due on these reimbursable items.

Mr. RHODES. Let me state a hypothetical case: Suppose an Indian has had advanced to him $600, and out of that $600 there has been bought for him a wagon and team and a few head of cattle—you could not buy many head of cattle out of that money—and suppose through negligence or bad luck, or otherwise, this Indian should lose this property, and suppose he has an interest in the tribal funds, and suppose he has an individual allotment, in your opinion can the Government enforce its demand against that Indian's property?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. Now, on what do you base that opinion?

Mr. MERITT. On the idea that the Government is the guardian of the Indian, that the Government has control of his property, and the Indian owes this money, and the Government would have the right to take out of the proceeds of the sale of lands or the rentals from land a sufficient amount to reimburse the Government for any money advanced.

Mr. HASTINGS. Regardless of contract?

Mr. MERITT. The Indian enters into a written contract.

Mr. HASTINGS. Is that one of the stipulations of the contract that authorizes the Government to do that, or would the Government be authorized to do that regardless of any provision in the contract?

Mr. MERITT. The Government would be authorized to do that regardless of any provision in the contract.

Mr. RHODES. Now, Mr. Meritt, in order to define the issue I want to make this statement—are you a lawyer?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir. I might say for your information that prior to my appointment as Assistant Indian Commissioner, which position I have held for the last six years, I was the chief law officer of the Indian Bureau for a number of years.

Mr. RHODES. As a lawyer I have exactly the opposite view of that expressed by the assistant commissioner. I do not understand how the Government of the United States could enforce a contract against its Indian ward under limitations, any more than you could enforce a contract against one of your minor children, or how I could enforce a contract against a minor, or how a guardian could enforce a contract against his ward; and for that reason—it may be because I am from Missouri—I should certainly have to know that there is an approved line of decisions resting upon a decided case, or I should be inclined to question that view of the matter. If the question should be propounded to me by a client as to whether or not the Government of the United States could enforce a demand based upon such a contract, I should be compelled to say that it could not. In other words, the Indian being a ward, I dispute the right of the Government of the United States to bind its ward in contract, and say that the Indian would have the right to either repudiate or ratify his contract on attaining his majority.

Therefore, if I should be correct in this view of the matter, I should be bound to conclude that if unpaid balances be found to exist and the individual Indian or his tribe should undertake to dispute the validity of the Government's right to enforce such a contract, the Government could not do it. It is a responsibility to have charge of the funds, and I think that fiduciary capacity casts a greater burden upon the Government of the United States and would perhaps defeat its right to recover. If a Member should ask me the question if this policy involved the making of a lot of bad debts which could never be collected by the Government of the United States, I would be bound to say that my opinion is it is very doubtful whether the Government could enforce the collections of these funds. Now, if you have legal authority to submit on that point, I, as one member of the committee, would like to have it. In fact, I feel in need of it in order to bring myself in harmony with the policy that has apparently been pursued by the Government for a number of years.

Mr. MERITT. I want to say that I have handled a great many law cases in the Indian Service during my official connection with that bureau, and it is my best judgment that there is no question about the moral and legal obligation of the Indian to reimburse the Government, and there is no question about the authority of the representatives of the Government to take such measures as may be necessary to——

Mr. RHODES. Pardon me. But what course would you pursue in the event a particular Indian defaulted in his payment and it just simply came to the point of having to collect by law?

Mr. HASTINGS. Let me say the Government has three remedies. It has every advantage over the Indian. First, it retains the title to the property purchased by the Government; it holds the title to that property for the payment of the debt. Now, if that property dies or is dissipated, or if for any reason he does not pay it, then if the Government has any money in its possession, or if any money ever comes into the Government's possession, it just arbitrarily takes it out and pays this obligation and the Indian can not help himself.

Mr. RHODES. Then that is the point which I question.

Mr. HASTINGS. Just a moment. The Indian ought not to be permitted to help himself, because he has contracted to pay that and he ought to be taught to be honest, just as a white man. He has signed a contract with the Government that he will pay it and he is presumed to know the contents of that contract. The local man is presumed to have gone over it in detail; it is witnessed; and he has acknowledged it perhaps before a notary, and he knows it.

Now, the third remedy the Government has, aside from just taking money out of anything placed there to his credit from land sales, rentals, or anything else, is finally his allotment. Perhaps he wants his allotment set apart to him, or perhaps wants to sell it. The Government will absolutely refuse to approve the contract of sale of that land until he pays the balance, and they will always hold that over the Indian. And the result is the Government never has to bring the suit; it is always the defendant.

Mr. CARTER. Some of the Indians have a trust period on their allotments. Now, that third remedy you gave would be all right until that trust period expires. Then the Indian would come into full ownership and title to his property.

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes; but I will venture this assertain, that they would hold that patent there forever and use the strong-arm methods of the Government against the Indian and compel the Indian to pay the balance. They would just be about delivering the patent, and they could be 6 months or 6 years or 16 years. Of course, I am exaggerating in using that longer length of time, but the Government always uses that method against an Indian, and I have no objection to them using it against the Indian to force the payment of a just debt. If the Indian understands he owes the obligation, I think he ought to be made to pay it the same as anybody else.

Mr. RHODES. I concede, of course, the force of the argument made by Mr. Hastings, but I do not yet concede that your answer satisfies the legal question that I have raised, and insist that it is not answered.

Has there been a case decided in which the Government of the United States found it necessary to enforce the collection of a demand against an Indian arising out of such a civil contract as is involved in one of these transactions?

Mr. MERITT. The law books are full of cases decided by the highest Federal courts to the effect that the Secretary of the Interior practically has absolute jurisdiction over the trust property of Indians.

Mr. RHODES. Yes; but is not that an entirely different matter from the right of the Government to enforce a civil contract made with one of its Indian wards?

Mr. MERITT. And we also have specific authority from Congress to enact such regulations and take such action as may be necessary to collect this money, and in that connection I wish to read to you the language contained in the Indian appropriation act making these reimbursable appropriations.

Mr. RHODES. I would be very glad to hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. I have no objection.

Mr. MERITT. The provision in the act of May 25, 1918, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919 (40 Stat. L., p. 567), reads as follows:

"For the purpose of encouraging industry and self-support among the Indians and to aid them in the culture of fruits, grains, and other crops, $150,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available, which sum may be used for the purchase of seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, and other equipment necessary, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, to enable Indians to become self-supporting: Provided, That said sum shall be expended under conditions to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior for its repayment to the United States on or before June 30, 1925: Provided further, That not to exceed $50,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be expended on any one reservation or for the benefit of any one tribe of Indians."

Mr. RHODES. But might that not be well construed in the light of civil contracts arising out of the relation of guardian and ward and all those fiduciary capacities which are involved in these contracts between the Government of the United States and its Indian wards? Simply because there is a provision conferring authority upon a department of the Government to exercise general supervision certainly would not justify a department to invade a domain beyond that contemplated in the spirit of the law.

Mr. MERITT. The very spirit of this law is to enable the Secretary of the Interior to take such action as he may deem proper to recover the amount of money loaned to these Indians under these reimbursable appropriations.

Mr. RHODES. Very well.

Mr. MERITT. Now, in addition to that, Mr. Rhodes, I would like to call your attention to a decision of the Supreme Court which may surprise you. The Supreme Court of the United States has held in Indian matters that, notwithstanding the fact that the Government of the United States has entered into a treaty obligation with the Indians, that that treaty obligation can be subsequently changed by the Congress of the United States without conferring with the Indians. I refer you to what is known as the Lone Wolf case, reported in 187 United States, page 553, and the decisions of the Federal courts, from the highest court down, are practically uniform in holding that, so far as the trust property of the Indians is concerned, the Secretary of the Interior has absolute jurisdiction over that property.

Mr. SINCLAIR. Would it not be possible, Mr. Meritt, to submit for the record citations of a number of cases?

Mr. MERITT. I can do that.

Mr. CARTER. And the Cherokee baby case goes more fully into the merits of it than that?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CARTER. But both those cases deal with tribal property and not with property of the individual, do they not, Mr. Meritt?

Mr. MERITT. Yes, sir.

Mr. RHODES. And do not these cases turn upon the right of the Government to terminate treaty obligations and convert those obligations into other treaties, rather than deciding any question of naked right that might arise between the Government and its wards?

Mr. HASTINGS. The Lone Wolf case dealt with tribal property and not individual property.

Mr. MERITT. That is true.

Mr. HASTINGS. And provided that the Government might divide it up if it saw fit among the members of the tribe.

Mr. CARTER. And we might call Mr. Meritt's attention to a decision that has been made since that with reference to the rights of the individual Indian, and that was the Choate v. Trap case.

Mr. MERITT. Yes; I am familiar with that case.

Mr. CARTER. In which it was held that after an agreement had been made with an Indian tribe exempting an Indian's land from taxation for a specific period of time even before the land was allotted, that Congress might not thereafter remove that exemption and bring the property on the tax rolls.

Mr. RHODES. That is just exactly my point and it certainly remains for the Supreme Court of the United States to say what construction should be placed upon the language of the act just read by Mr. Meritt in so far as it relates to the question I have raised, and frankly I do not see the applicability of these decisions cited.

Mr. MERITT. I will endeavor to find some decisions and put them in the record at this point.

I would remind gentlemen who have been zealous in pushing these enterprises in the interest of the great reclamation projects that the Indians of this country are the wards of the Government, and I for one fail to see how the Government of the United States as the guardian of the Indians can make and enforce a contract against an Indian which will require him to pay back into the Treasury moneys which have not been expended in his interest. I would remind Members of this House that the record is full of evidence, coming both from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and from his able assistants, that in many cases, especially in advancing funds for industrial purposes, the Indians even dispute the fact that it was their understanding that the moneys were to be paid back. I think it is time for the Congress of the United States to call a halt in this lavish expenditure of money, because I think the Government has gone far enough in these appropriations for industrial purposes. From the time of the passage of the first reimbursable appropriation act this Government has spent a total of $23,000,000. And I should say that 75 per cent of that sum has gone into big reclamation projects. I assert that less than 15 per cent of that money has been returned into the Public Treasury for the benefit of the Indian. While the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs was before the committee I asked the question whether certain Indian tribes had any money to their credit. He replied affirmatively, and I then asked what effort was being made to collect money—and I am speaking now of the individual advancement—and he said none, but promised to take immediate steps to collect.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

By unanimous consent, Mr. RHODES was granted leave to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS].

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, as everyone knows the Indian question is older than the Government itself. The Indians were here, of course, when Columbus discovered America. Our Colonies had to deal with the question even before the adoption of the Constitution. Our Government, since we formed a Government, has been dealing with the Indians first in one way and then in another. Our policy toward the Indian has not always been a consistent one. Our policy, I think, has been subject to criticism more or less. Yet I think upon the whole that it has been the policy of every Indian Bureau since its creation in about 1832 to advance, to civilize, and be helpful to the Indians. When the Indian Bureau was first created it was created as a branch of the War Department. Later, in the latter eighteen forties, it was transferred to the Interior Department.

Naturally, I have always taken a very great interest in the Indian question. I am an Indian myself and am enrolled as one. I started in to go to the public schools when I was 4 years of age. The white Indian and the full-blood Indian and the white children went together to the common school. Later on I attended the Indian boarding school at Tahlequah, the old capital of the Cherokee Tribe of Indians. Whatever of education or opportunities I have had have been through the Indian school.

Later I represented the Indian tribes in one capacity and another up until the time I was elected to Congress a few years ago. In addition to the personal interest which I have in this matter, we have more than one-third of the Indians of the United States in the State of Oklahoma, so that Members of Congress ought not to criticize the Members from Oklahoma when they take a very deep interest in a matter that is local to them and about which they pride themselves that they know something. In the Five Civilized Tribes we have alone 101,524 Indians, and in the discussion of this question I want to speak about one of the matters that was brought up by the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. I would not be frank with myself, and I would not be fair to the House, and I would do myself an injustice if I did not take occasion here to pay my respects to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. He has the confidence and respect, as he is entitled to have it, of every member of that committee. We think a great deal of his judgment and depend upon it largely. He has been a member of the Indian Committee for a number of years. He is now its honored and distinguished chairman. I want to say now that while he was a member of the committee he was fair, and as chairman he has been able and has been fair.

During the past two or three months, beginning, as I recall, in September, a subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs had taken up the investigation of the Indian Bureau, as authorized by a provision in the last Indian appropriation bill. It has been our hope and our purpose to find the time to go out over the Western States and visit all of the Indian reservations in the hope that we would be helpful to Congress, that we would be helpful to the Indians, and to the Indian Bureau. The investigation has not been a partisan investigation. It has not been a fault-finding investigation, but it has been a constructive investigation. We have tried to be helpful, not only to ourselves but to the Indian Bureau, and we flatter ourselves that in a measure we have succeeded in the limited time that we have had. I believe that if we have the time, so that we may go out and personally visit a great many of these western Indian reservations, it will be very fruitful of results, and I know that it is the hope of the chairman, as it is the hope of other members of the committee, that we will find that time and we believe that it will be time and money well spent to go out and make the investigation and get the information first hand.

As I started to say a moment ago, we spent some two or three months, almost daily, in investigating the Indian Bureau. There were called before the committee the Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the heads of the various divisions of the Indian Bureau. They were examined and cross-examined at very great length with reference to the work that was particularly under their charge. Perhaps it would not be to any good advantage or to the advantage of the House to go back and criticize at any length the policy of the Government with reference to the Indians. That is water that has gone over the wheel; it is plowed ground; it is a matter that is behind us. What we want to do is to try to do the best we can for the Indian in the present day, and we ought to discuss those things that we think are for the best interests of the Indian tribes.

Before I come to that, however, I want to discuss briefly a statement that was made by the chairman of the committee in his discussion of the subject this morning, to the effect that the expenses of the Indian Bureau had largely increased in the last seven or eight years. I am sure that the chairman did not intend to make an unfair statement, but that statement left by itself, I think, would lead to an erroneous conclusion.

In the first place the appropriations carried for gratuities in this bill are $7,370,835.20. You will find that the appropriations for gratuities have not very greatly increased in the last six or eight years. The large increases that are referred to by the chairman were largely increases in the reimbursement items and in the amounts expended out of the Indian tribal funds themselves, so that there are not very large increases in the appropriations out of Government funds and not out of gratuities. Now, another answer might be made to the statement of the chairman—and it is one that I am sure that the Congress does not appreciate and one I am afraid that the chairman himself does not appreciate—and that is this: Only a few years ago you dealt with the tribes in their collective capacity. For instance, there are 41,824 Cherokees, 20,709 Choctaws, 18,774 Creeks, 3,727 Seminoles, 6,304 Chickasaws. Only a few years ago you had an Indian agent down there in the Five Civilized Tribes. He had one clerk and a few Indian police to keep the peace. There was not much demand for large expenditures then, was there? No. You dealt with the tribe in its collective or tribal capacity. Within the last 15 or 20 years you sought to change their relations to the Government of the United States, and you have done it. You sent commissions down there who have made agreements with them, and, either by agreements or acts of Congress, which is the same thing in legal effect, you have induced the Indians to give up their tribal government. Their lands had to be surveyed, rolls had to be made, their lands had to be individualized. So that, instead of dealing with the five tribes, you are now dealing with 101,524 individuals. That requires a very large expenditure of money. Instead of having one agent at $1,500 a year, and a clerk, and a few Indian policemen at $12 or $15 a month, you have officers and employees down there ranging from 265 employees now, where there have been as many as 500 employees a few years ago, in the Indian Service in Oklahoma. Now, what I say of the Five Civilized Tribes can in a measure be said also of the other Indians throughout the Western States. In other words, it takes a great deal more money when you are pursuing the present policy of the Indian Bureau to make Indians citizens of the United States, to allot their lands, to distribute their funds, and to look after them as individuals than it does to supervise them in their tribal capacity; and I am sure when I make the statement everybody will agree with it. Well, that is what the Indian Bureau is trying to do, and has been trying to do in the last 10, 15, or 20 years; and a great many of those tribes are now in course of having their affairs finally settled up; and a great many of the western tribes, of which there are 150 or more, are having their lands allotted either in whole or in part; and it becomes necessary for the Indian Bureau to give more attention to the individual Indians as those Indians are allotted and declared competent, some of them through competency commissions, some of them through recommendation of their local superintendent, but final approval by the Secretary of the Interior. Thereafter they are turned loose from any Government supervision.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. SNYDER. Of course, the gentleman did not mean to have the committee think that the chairman did not understand the situation as he is stating it now—that there was more expense to operate the bureau as operated now. After the Indian has been declared competent he becomes an individual charge, but there has been no tribe, so far as I know, that has been eliminated entirely, and there have been many separate Indians declared competent. What the gentleman knows perhaps better than I do is that it does not take him away from the bureau. It is impossible, so far as I have been able to discover, to separate any Indian from the charge and care of the bureau.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Why?

Mr. SNYDER. That is what we are trying to find out.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Why should an Indian for 20 years have a string tied to the patent to his land?

Mr. SNYDER. The reason, if the gentleman will pardon me, as I understand it, is that when an Indian is declared competent it does not take him away from any tribal relation. The property that he may own in community with the tribe is still administered for him by the bureau as an individual.

Mr. HASTINGS. Let me answer that by an illustration of the Cherokee Tribe, the one to which I belong, to show how that will work and how it is going to work with reference to the other tribes. That is the only tribe in the world whose tribal affairs are absolutely wound up. It is the largest tribe of Indians in the United States. There are 41,824 members. Now, the lands of the members of this tribe have all been allotted and the fractional lands sold, and the moneys have all been distributed. They have not any tribal lands, they have not a dollar of tribal property, their affairs have been wound up. Now, on all the 41,824 the restrictions have been removed either by legislation or by action of the department or by death—except, I will say, upon all but about 8,000, so that of the 41,824, I will say that approximately 33,000 of those are free from the Government, and that the Government has nothing whatever to do with them either as a tribe or as individuals. They control their own lands, they have charge of their own money, they transact their own affairs, they vote, they hold office, and they manage their own individual affairs, and the Government has nothing to do with them. Generally speaking, the same is true of the Creeks and Seminoles, the Choctaws, the Chickasaws, and other tribes throughout the country——

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I will.

Mr. FESS. When the gentleman says they will be turned loose, does that mean break up their tribal relations and become American citizens?

Mr. HASTINGS. The tribal relations of the Cherokee Tribe are now broken up. They are citizens of the United States. All of the Five Tribes are citizens of the United States, and have been since March 3, 1901.

Mr. FESS. What does the gentleman mean by "turning them loose"?

Mr. HASTINGS. There is this difference between the restricted and unrestricted Indians: If an Indian is of half Indian blood, under the legislation of Congress the Government has some supervision over his tribal property unless he is freed by the action of the Department of the Interior. If he has less than half of Indian blood the Government has no supervision over him or his property. The term "restricted Indian" means one over whom the Government exercises some supervision.

Mr. FESS. Purely for information, under the system of schools do we have a promise that the time will come when the Indian will be entirely free as an individual citizen, with no particular surveillance of the Government over him, just as in your case?

Mr. HASTINGS. As I have already stated, we have 101,524 members of the Five Civilized Tribes. Under existing legislation, on April 26, 1931, just 11 years from now, all the members of those tribes will be turned loose, free of all supervision by the Government of the United States, and in the meantime about four-fifths are already turned loose.

Mr. FESS. Is it promised that that will be done for all of the Indians of the United States?

Mr. HASTINGS. Our hope is that as the years go, with the more advanced Indians first and the others later, as they become competent, all will be turned loose. As to some of the less advanced Indians, from our investigation I think it will take years before they are freed of our supervision. It may be 25 or 30 years. Let me plead with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] and the other Members of the House that we do not want to be impatient with the less advanced Indians in the far West. The Indian question is a national question and one that we ought not to leave to the States. One can not satisfactorily discuss it in the time allotted. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HASTINGS. I am much obliged to the Members. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to my colleague [Mr. ELSTON].

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I became a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs at the commencement of the present session, and I came on at a particularly propitious time to obtain a good perspective of the activities of the Indian Bureau. In last year's Indian appropriation bill an investigation of the Indian Bureau was authorized, and I had the good fortune to be made chairman of the subcommittee to examine into the activities of the bureau at Washington. I think that the good judgment of the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee, in laying out the scope of the investigation, has had a great deal to do with the success which we have had. He made the investigation one of generalities first and particularities next. He declared as his purpose that we should first get a general view of all of the activities of the Indian Bureau as a whole; that we should have it as our object to get a disclosure of their policy, a disclosure of the direction in which they were proceeding, a disclosure of the different bureau activities, including reference to their scope and growth, and how far each of those activities had accomplished the purpose for which it was established. That carried us at the very beginning into a view of practically a state within a state, a view of a community of 350,000 individuals under the Government of the United States as guardian, and with property interests of an aggregate value of over $1,000,000,000. It disclosed to us the policy of the department bringing these 350,000 Indians to a position of competency and of education, with the expressed object of releasing them into the body politic to become self-sustaining citizens of the United States. It was disclosed that the Indian Bureau was not a bureau which should have perennial guardianship over the Indians, but that there was contemplated a definite time when the Indians should be released entirely and the administration of their affairs closed.

The investigation, I believe, was the most impartial, the most thorough, the most inclusive of any that has ever been had, and there were some matters brought out by the subcommittee of which I was chairman which have been incorporated in the present bill and to which I desire to direct attention at the present time.

We found, for instance, with regard to the administration of the inheritance division of the bureau, that a level fee of $15 was charged by the bureau for the probate of an Indian estate. The $15 fee was charged without respect to the value of the estate. The estate might be of the value of $1,000 or it might be of the value of $500,000, and still the charge for the administration was the nominal fee of $15. The cost to the Government of the administration of this inheritance bureau was about $100,000 a year. The return to the Government by reason of the fees collected approximated about $30,000, so that there was a deficit each year of about $70,000. The committee in this bill has amended the act providing for a fee for the administration of estates to provide a graduated scale, beginning with $15 and ending with $50, calculated in such a way as to bring back to the Government the full amount of its annual expenditure of $100,000. As to this item alone the Indian Affairs Committee has saved the Government $70,000 a year.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I will.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. It it not a fact that the administration of the estates by the department is against the protest of the Indians and according to a law which was enacted on the initiative of the department, and that at the present time Indian estates are held up from six months to two years while they wait for the officers of the department to find their heirs, and that there is now no appeal provided at all, and that the final determination of heirs is left purely with clerks in the department?

Mr. ELSTON. I am not advised as to the history of the legislation, but I know this, that whether it is good policy or bad policy, the fees charged by the United States Government for the administration of Indian estates are practically nominal, and that if the probate of Indian estates were thrown into local jurisdictions the probate of a $1,000 estate alone, taking my own State as an illustration, would cost at least $100, which is $50 over the maximum provided in this bill.

The saving to the Indian is such that he can very well abide the little delay in the ascertainment of heirs.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. ELSTON. Yes; but please be short in your question. I have not much time at my disposal.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Is it not better to have an estate determined by the court, which gives the usual protection by right of review, and pay the fee than have it done by a body against whom you are protesting?

Mr. ELSTON. I have never heard any objection made against the administration of Indian estates to the effect that the work was done unjustly or that any great prejudice was done to the Indian heirs or that a full opportunity was not given to prove the facts or that the judgment of the commissioner or examiner was not just and impartial.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Is it not a fact that a number of Indian tribes have refused to be included within that law, and through the action of their representatives are excluded?

Mr. ELSTON. I would say that until the Indians have become absolutely competent and able to take care of their own affairs it would be a great prejudice to their interests to throw the administration of their estates into the local probate courts.

Your committee found further that the financial and property affairs of the Indians have changed during the last 25 years, and that a great many Indian tribes and a great many individul Indians are now rich where before they were poor, and that a great deal of work is now being done by the Indian Bureau for the Indians for which they are well able financially to pay. For instance, with regard to the administration of Indian forests, comprising about 5,000,000 acres, valued at $75,000,000, a tremendously rich estate, bringing in something like half a million dollars annual revenue, we found that the Government has been out nearly $200,000 a year for their administration, where no repayment was made to the Government for the work done.

Your committee believes that it would be proper to have a well-devised scheme by which payments could be made for services performed by the Government in connection with rich forest properties. We have proposed a clause here by which a reasonable fee may be charged without imposing a burden or hardship on the Indian or on his property.

We have a declaration of the Indian Bureau to the effect that its policy is to bring the Indian up to competency and responsibility; that he is not an object of charity; that he should not be taught to be a suppliant for gratuity; that he should be finally trained to the point where he should gradually assume the burdens that other citizens are bearing; and the only way we can bring him to a position where he will bear that responsibility is to have him pay for that which the Goversment does for him touching his property interests whenever he is financially able to do so.

We found that there is need to readjust the relations between the Government and the Indians respecting treaty obligations.

A great deal was brought out by this investigation which would be well worth further study, and it has been suggested by the subcommittee that a clause be put into the bill at a later time providing for an investigation and checking up of the Government's treaty relations with the Indians.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes more to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. ELSTON. It has already been shown that the committee, when it went into reimbursable items, went into a field that has disclosed a tremendous opportunity for constructive action on the part of Congress. Roughly speaking, the Government has two obligations to the Indian. One obligation is by reason of a contract or treaty. Another obligation is the moral obligation of caring for his education and health until he is able to care for himself. With regard to moral obligations we are doing now in some respects what we did 20 years ago, whereas as to many of our activities the moral obligation has lapsed by reason of the Indian's progress in education and material welfare. In the present bill your committee has been careful to avoid placing any burden except where the persons and the properties involved are well able to sustain them.

Many years ago Congress inaugurated a system of so-called reimbursable appropriations in the annual Indian bill. The theory was that such appropriations should be repaid from Indian individual or tribal funds, or from the sale or disposition of the property on which the expenditure was made. In some cases little attention has been paid to the return to the Government of such outlays, and some of it will never be recovered. The present bill carries provisions to prevent the repetition of such mistakes, and provides further for a definite scheme of repayment where the moneys are still recoverable.

Millions of money have been spent on reclamation projects on Indian reservations in the West, far beyond the needs of the Indians. Where 5,000 acres of irrigable land might be ample for the Indians, perhaps 50,000 acres had been placed under irrigation, the surplus being for the benefit of white settlers.

It might be all right, if you are employing the Indian Bureau merely for the purpose of an annex to the Reclamation Service, but it is beyond the express purpose of the Indian Bureau to reclaim lands for others than the Indian wards of the Government.

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman will be fair enough to say that a great many of the western irrigation projects were appropriated for over the protest of the Indian Bureau, and that Congress is responsible for a lot of that.

Mr. ELSTON. I am not referring to any particular Indian Bureau administration or to any particular persons as being solely responsible. We found those conditions, and we found a great field for reform. A great deal of credit is due to the present chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee in directing our investigation in this field. He has taken it up in a helpful, constructive spirit, and without any partisan object.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ELSTON. I will.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I am very much interested in what the gentleman and a previous speaker have said about the reimbursable feature. Where the money could have been reimbursed and has not been reimbursed, and where money has been appropriated which I judge the gentleman thinks ought not to have been appropriated, whose fault has it been? Was it the fault of the Indian Service?

Mr. ELSTON. It would be an assumption for me to suggest an answer to a gentleman of such long and distinguished service in the House. I know very little of the past history or the initiation of these matters, but I should say the responsibility was a mixed one. I can not point to any one individual or body, but I will give the gentleman an opportunity to suggest an answer, because I believe he knows more about it than I do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I would not undertake to instruct the gentleman at all about a matter concerning the Indian Service, because he probably knows more about it than I do. I have taken quite an active part at times in the consideration of the Indian bill and the reimbursable items, and on a number of occasions have insisted that if certain money was to be expended for the benefit of the Indians it should be reimbursed to the Government. I have always been told by the Indian Committee in charge of the bill, and told by the department representing the Indians, that these things were essential for the benefit of the Indians; that it would be a great help for them if the Government would advance money to make certain improvements; and that it could easily be reimbursed to the Government. I will say to the gentleman frankly that I was completely startled when I read the Indian bill and found it was proposed to repeal the laws providing for these reimbursements. I have been taken in by gentlemen on the floor of the House and elsewhere in these statements in the past. I thought they were telling the truth, and I believe they thought they were telling the truth. I am not sure that they were not telling the truth, but I would like to know on what theory we proceed to make an appropriation to-day, under the statement that it is a loan, and then to-morrow cancel it because it is our fault.

Mr. ELSTON. If I may be permitted, with the indulgence of the chairman of the committee, there are two classes of reimbursable items referred to in this repealing clause. One is a class of items covered by a retroactive act which attempted to make reimbursable certain gratuity appropriations theretofore made.

As to those appropriations, it is a false book item to describe them as reimbursable, because having been made as gratuities they are beyond recall by retroactive legislation attempting to put them into the class of reimbursables. The other reimbursable items covered in the repeal clause comprise certain charges made respecting the property of individuals where the reimbursement has never been attempted by the Indian Bureau. It may have started back 10 or 15 years ago. It is a matter that has gone beyond recall, and the items are being carried on the books as assets when they are not collectible as such; and I think it is to the credit of the committee that it is willing to look the situation squarely in the face and wipe these uncollectible items off the slate.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think we ought to be extremely careful, then, about making future appropriations.

Mr. ELSTON. In closing I wish to refer to a subject which has engaged our attention and on which we may make recommendations later. The final disposition of the Indian forests is a large question for the future. These forests, now administered by the Government as guardian, have an approximate value of $75,000,000 and comprise about 5,000,000 acres. We found in our investigation that very little attention had been paid to the final disposition of these forests. Individual allotments are being made of some of these lands in such manner as to destroy their unity and usefulness for watershed and conservation purposes. We believe there should be closer coordination between the Forest Service of the Agricultural Department and the forest division of the Indian Bureau. In some degree there is overlapping in these two departments. Your committee has brought these two departments together, and hopes later to arrive at a plan for the final disposition of these forests which will fully protect the interests of the Indians and at the same time take account of the availability of these forests for conservation and water-shed purposes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That being the case, the man who is worth millions of dollars in timber is not likely to get any part of it.

Mr. ELSTON. This is a tentative suggestion. I believe that the committee is going to try to work out something constructive. It has in mind the Indian who has any interest in the property, tribal or otherwise, but we hope to be able also to preserve intact such forest lands as are highly necessary for conservation.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, the House is now considering the first regular supply bill in the new Sixty-sixth Congress under Republican régime. Four hours debate has been arranged for on this bill. I call my colleagues' attention to the fact that there are exactly 18 members of the majority party now on the floor engaged in the consideration of this measure. It is more than are usually here under such circumstances. It is not as many as ought to be here, and you are going to find it hard, my colleagues, to explain this situation to the people of the country when you go on the hustings in the next few months. The people of the country have a right to demand that more Members of Congress, at least of the dominant party, shall remain here on the floor of the House during the discussion and consideration of these big supply measures. I want to say that it is up to you to convince the people whether or not they want to keep in power a party that will pass laws with 18 Members on the floor.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. You are here and what more do you want?

Mr. BLANTON. I am a pretty good majority if I have some help.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, for some time I have been considering the propriety of making a short statement to the House with respect to the desirability of conserving time as well as money. In the consideration of the bills pending for several years there have been a constantly increasing number of hours consumed in the discussion under the five-minute rule, and if we hope to complete the work of the present session of Congress within a reasonable time we must adhere more strictly to the rules of the House in respect to debate in the consideration of bills under the five-minute rule.

For purposes of comparison I have caused an examination to be made of the length of time consumed under the five-minute rule in the passage of appropriation bills in different Congresses, going back as far as the Fifty-seventh and running through the "long" sessions of the Fifty-seventh, Fifty-eighth, Sixtieth, Sixty-second, Sixty-third, and Sixty-fourth, selecting those at haphazard, only to have them typical, and selecting with the same end in view the legislative, Agricultural, and Indian appropriation bills.

An examination of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during this period discloses the fact that an increasingly longer time is being consumed in the consideration of appropriation bills under the five-minute rule and a decreasingly shorter time under general debate. One is drawn also to the conclusion that a dozen years or more back the membership apparently reposed more confidence in the ability of the appropriating committees in reporting appropriation bills than they have in recent years. Except where a question of policy is involved, one would naturally expect that the various paragraphs in appropriation bills would be regarded as items to be approved in a more or less perfunctory way, inasmuch as the appropriating committees had spent weeks of time and study in the taking of hundreds of pages of testimony in respect to them, and had arrived at a much more reliable opinion in respect to them than could possibly be arrived at by Members in debate on the floor. Notwithstanding that fact, however, an examination of the RECORD shows that whereas formerly contests on the floor respecting items under the five-minute rule were participated in mostly by members of the committee reporting the bill, gradually there has grown up a practice of liberalizing the field of debate under the five-minute rule, under the pro forma amendment, and this has been indulged to such an extent that it has very appreciably prolonged the sessions of Congress. Furthermore, an examination of the RECORD discloses the disappointing fact that if we are to measure the value of debate under the five-minute rule by changes in the text of the bill, one is compelled to conclude that at least 90 per cent of the debate has been absolutely futile. Appropriation bills should be scrutinized closely, and Members are chosen on the appropriating committees with that thought in mind. No appropriation bill is reported to the House that has not had the closest attention given to its items for weeks.

In the calculations that follow, the legislative working day that has been reckoned is five hours, and while the calculations are by days, it should not be assumed that the bills were under consecutive daily consideration. Many appropriation bills are before the House for weeks before passage.

Taking up now the legislative appropriation bill, we find that the days consumed in consideration of the bill under the five-minute rule, in the long sessions of the various Congresses, are as follows: Fifty-seventr, 2 days; Fifty-eighth, 2 days; Sixtieth, 2½ days; Sixty-second, 5½ days; Sixty-third, 9½ days; Sixty-fourth, 6½ days.

Agricultural bill: Fifty-seventh, 1 day; Fifty-eighth, 1 day; Sixtieth, 5½ days; Sixty-second, 8 days; Sixty-third, 6⅝ days; Sixty-fourth, 12 days.

Indian appropriation bill: Fifty-seventh, 1½ days; Fifty-eighth, 1½ days; Sixtieth, 2 days; Sixty-second, 3 days; Sixty-third, 3½ days; Sixty-fourth, 4 days.

The long sessions of those Congresses have been chosen for obvious reasons as being the session from which a comparison of value could be drawn.

The Sixty-fourth Congress brings us up to the close of the short session, 1917, after which was ushered in the war Congress, and no account was taken of it, as it would not approximate a normal condition.

During the Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth, and Sixty-first Congresses, when the Republicans were in control, with Mr. JOSEPH G. CANNON, Speaker, the Congress was in session a total of 1,164 days, an average for each Congress of 291 days. The four so-called "long" sessions during this period occupied 736 days, or an average of 184 days for each long session.

During the Sixty-second, Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth, and Sixty-fifth Congresses, when the Democrats were in control of the House, with Mr. CHAMP CLARK, Speaker, the Congress was in session a total of 2,156 days, an average for each Congress of 536 days. The four so-called "long" sessions during this period occupied 1,227 days, or an average of 307 days for each "long" session.

Thus it will be seen that Congress was in session 992 days, or almost three years longer during Mr. CLARK'S speakership than Mr. CANNON'S.

Not once during the period when the Democrats were in control did they succeed in passing all the appropriation bills by the beginning of the fiscal year for which the bills provided. This was due largely, in my judgment, to a misuse of the privilege of debate under the five-minute rule.

Taking the three appropriation bills referred to here—the legislative, Agricultural, and Indian—and reckoning the difference between the time consumed under the five-minute rule in the Fifty-eighth and the Sixty-fourth as an average added amount, counting the 14 regular appropriation bills, we find it would require 84 additional working days, or more than three months' added time to pass the appropriation bills alone.

Surely one is warranted in the conclusion that a potent reason for the increasing length of the sessions of Congress is too much "liberalizing" of debate under the pro forma amendment.

I therefore venture to suggest to the Members of the House, those here and those absent, that if they hope to conclude the consideration of measures that must be passed by the present session of Congress, it will be necessary for them to discontinue unnecessary debate under the five-minute rule and proceed to the consideration of questions under some scientific systematic method. Most of the debate, as I say, is foreign to the question pending, and in 90 per cent of the cases not a single amendment has been adopted to any measure pending by any debate that has followed the consideration of the bill.

So I say, gentlemen of the House, that it is possible to conclude the work of Congress within a reasonable time, if every Member of the House will cooperate, and we will be able to leave here with all bills passed and nothing left undone and get home to our people before the 1st of June. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think all will agree that the observations made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] are very timely. There might be some Members who think that our business is to stay here indefinitely in order to find something to do, and therefore take all of the year in order that we might seem to be engaged, but I am inclined to agree with the gentleman who has just taken his seat, that the suggestions are not only pertinent but very important. I believe his idea in saving time through a wiser use of the pro forma amendment ought to be observed, and that we ought to insist upon adherence to the rule as nearly as it can be done.

One of the things that is now disturbing the country, as I found out at home, and I have no doubt other Members have found out the same thing, is more or less unrest because there has not been more expedition on some matters over which this body has no control. I have asked for time to introduce the subject, in order to clear up what I think is a general misconception on the delay in the ending of the war. Many seem to think that it is now within the power of the Senate to expedite the consideration of the treaty. I found at home the general criticism was from a belief that the Senate was not expeditious. One man remarked to me that all the people were concerned about was that the Senate act quickly. I asked him whether he realized the parliamentary situation, whether it was apparent to him that the Senate had exhausted its parliamentary powers in having voted first on the ratification of the treaty with reservations, and then upon a second vote under reconsideration having reached the same result, that form of ratification could not again come up in regular order in that body. I asked him whether he realized that after the vote on the ratification of the treaty with reservations had failed, it was then taken on ratification without reservations, and that upon its failing to get a two-thirds vote it was reconsidered, and that motion was placed on the table, which virtually ended the action of that body on the issue. Having exhausted the privilege of ratification with reservations, and having exhausted the privilege of ratification without reservations, the Senate is through, and it is now up to the President to take the next step, and that all of the talk that is going through the press today about compromise, of course, is upon the basis that if any agreement is reached among Senators it would have to meet the approval of the President, who would have to take the steps to resubmit it, for no sort of an agreement on the part of Senators would bring it back to consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. GARNER. Has the gentleman any more time? I would like to ask him a question.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman one minute more time.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman use that so that I may ask him a question?

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman contend that the Senate is not now in possession of the treaty?

Mr. FESS. The gentleman from Ohio contends that the Senate has buried the treaty by refusing to ratify it, first, with reservations, and, second, without reservations.

Mr. GARNER. But the treaty is still in the Senate.

Mr. FESS. Oh, no; it is buried.

Mr. GARNER. Then where is it?

Mr. FESS. If it is in the Senate, it is dead.

Mr. GARNER. If the Senate buried it, the responsibility is with the Senate.

Mr. FESS. Oh, no.

Mr. GARNER. Certainly. It can not be anywhere else.

Mr. FESS. It is within the power of the President to resubmit it at any time.

Mr. GARNER. The original copy of the treaty is not in the hands of the President. It is in the hands of the Senate. If the Senate has buried it, the Senate can resurrect it. It has not been sent back to the White House. It is now in the Senate, and the Senate can resurrect it from being buried by a special rule or in some other way.

Mr. FESS. The President can withdraw it before it is ratified or after it is ratified, or do as he pleases. That is within the power of the President. The Senate has gone as far as it can go. If the President does not withdraw it, or if he does not want to resubmit it, then it is dead, and it is dead because he refuses to disinter it.

Mr. GARNER. I venture to suggest to the gentleman that it is not dead, that it will be resurrected in the Senate itself.

Mr. FESS. Because the President will approve the ratification with reservations.

Mr. GARNER. The President will have nothing to do with it until it is resurrected.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, the interruption of the gentleman from Texas emphasizes the confusion on the status of the treaty and also the source of that confusion which lead me to place before the House and the country the situation, which I now propose to do with some detail.

During the war two dominant ideas controlled the American mind—first, win the war in the shortest possible time at the least loss of life and treasure; secondly, make it so complete as to insure against a repetition of the crime.

The story of the accomplishment of the first task is quite well known to all the world. The second is not so complete. Our country being the last to enter, it was the first to propose its ending. It will always be a mooted question whether the armistice invited by our country before the allied armies had crossed the German border was not premature. Military opinion asserts that the German Army was within a brief time of total collapse under allied pressure if allowed to continue. However, that is past, and is no longer of importance. President Wilson, having initiated the movement to end the war, became active in securing what he believed would lessen the chances of future wars. This step was the league of nations proposition.

As far back as May, 1916, under the influence of the League to Enforce Peace, at the head of which was Mr. Taft, the President committed himself to the idea in a public address in Washington. It was the climax of a nation-wide propaganda to agree upon the idea of a league of nations as a plan for the future security against war. It was the latest chapter in a series of movements, unofficial and semiofficial, beginning with the world peace conferences, and including the Hague conferences, the Interparliamentary Unions, the Lake Mohonk conferences, the world court movement, and various other more or less voluntary efforts. The leaders in these movements were found in all political parties.

In every conference up to this latest a sharp distinction was made between questions justiciable and those nonjusticiable; the latter were never included within the jurisdiction of any proposed league prior to 1919. For example, questions of purely domestic import, such as immigration, deportation, coastwise trade, the tariff question, American labor, American finance, and the Monroe doctrine have always been regarded so far as they affected our people as within the jurisdiction of our own Nation, and must be exempt from the jurisdiction of the league. In every conference, however, there were found some men who were ready to include these items of vital national independence as proper subjects for consideration in a league, and among them were some Americans, but a very small minority. As a Nation, for example, we have always advocated arbitration of national disputes, but we have never agreed to submit the Monroe doctrine to arbitration, which would be equivalent to abandonment. Many other questions, such as the before-mentioned, fall within the same category.

When the proposal to enter a league of nations was officially urged, quite naturally friends as well as foes of the movement were deeply concerned over the extent of the proposal. Was it to be an agreement backed by force, in which the league would become a super-government, to which the members would be subordinate? Would it involve the sovereignty of the member, a surrender of its independence as a nation? Will the jurisdiction be general and unlimited? These questions answered will determine the fate of the proposal. If the league is not to be a super-government, and sovereignty and independence are not to be surrendered, the objection will be limited to those who oppose any step toward this plan or any plan of a league of nations. On the other hand, if it does involve such surrender, the opposition will become militant and overwhelming so soon as realized.

The league proposal is not new. President Wilson, as a historian, is familiar with the numerous proposals in modern history, including the plan of William Penn in 1693, St. Pierre in 1717, the plans of Rousseau, Gondard, and Bentham, and especially the ambitious plan of Kant in 1789 and again in 1795.

All of these, both in theory and form, looked to a confederation of nations. They were the proposals of well-known idealists, some of whom were famous for their theories of philosophy, chief among the list being Bentham and Kant. The plan of permanent peace announced by Kant in 1795 is of interest now, when the proposal of a league is before the country.

The preamble set out the purposes, as follows:

1. No peace with a nation harboring a purpose to renew war.
2. No conveyance of one nation to another by gift, sale, or inheritance.
3. No public loan if concerned with war or peace in foreign affairs.
4. No standing armies allowed.
5. No intervention of one state in the government of another.
6. Laws of humanity must be respected by belligerents.

To carry out these principles Kant suggested his famous plan of federal union of all states by which world peace was to be enforced by moral and physical power. Federal force was to be minimized by a constant growth of a more pronounced mental attitude against war and the consequent advance of the arts of peace.

From the idealists of that period to the present time is not a far cry. In fact, the historian familiar with the numerous plans proposed in the past would most naturally press his case, if it should happen to fall to his lot to head a great nation in an effort to unite the great nations against future wars.

Hence the determination of the President to go to Europe to press his views, not only as the head of the Nation but as representing the American people, "acting in his own name and by his own proper authority," notwithstanding the decisive refusal of the people to support his plea for a Democratic Congress as an indorsement of his policy. In a special plea October 26, 1918, addressed to the American voter, he said that—

"The return of a Republican majority to either House of the Congress would, moreover, certainly be interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership."

His letter was a strong personal appeal for continued leadership:

"If you have approved of my leadership and wish me to continue to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both the Senate and House of Representatives."

The people's answer to this plea was a change of the Senate from a Democratic majority of 16 to a Republican majority of 2, and a Democratic majority in the House of 12 to a Republican majority of 46. However the election may be interpreted in Europe and America, the President, nevertheless, entered upon the task of formulating the league of nations. His purpose was disclosed to some intimate friends before sailing.

The proposal was to concede to British primacy on the sea, but would require her to belong to a league of which the combined naval power of the other members will exceed that of Britain. It was well understood that neither official England nor France was enthusiastic over the proposal. Clemenceau frankly expressed his preference for alliances and an organized balance of power. It was stated that if the chief allies refused the appeals of the President to join the league they would be frankly informed that nothing was left for him to do save to stand on the armistice and return to the United States to recommend the building of a navy equal to that of any country. It will here, in this connection, be recalled that in due time the Secretary of the Navy recommended a building program of 56 vessels. When asked why such program at this stage with the league proposal before the world, Chairman PADGETT informed the House that instructions had come from the President to put the program through. Objection developed on the floor against such expensive program with no further information than a cable from the President, which neither Secretary Daniels nor Chairman PADGETT would make public further than to say that the President wanted it done. This program was the storm center for days both in the House and Senate. The call by the President for the George Washington to be made ready for sailing at any time was a later and similar item of interest, since no definite decision on some other important items had been reached by the conference.

The European nations wanted and demanded specific guaranties. Britain demanded certain enemy colonies, as did France and Italy. They also wanted these possessions guaranteed by the aid of the United States. Britain demanded six votes in the league; France rights in the Saar Valley and a separate tripartite treaty of defensive alliance against German agression; Japan demanded Shantung; Italy pressed her demands. The United States was asking for no annexations, no indemnity, but only a plan of defense against future wars, which had taken the form of a league demanded by the President. The peace table became a center of barter in which "give and take" appears to have been the rule of action.

It was well understood when the President decided upon the very unusual course of heading the American commission against the well-known judgment of many of his closest friends and under the protest of his most powerful party organs that he was but carrying out his well-defined purpose of shaping his plan for future safety. The step of immediately taking over the cables by the Government seemed to be new ground for concern, since the one fundamental demand of the country was to know all the truth on such momentous step as binding the country in a perpetual league. It was disclosed to some friends that he would at once upon his arrival make known his plan and his purpose to secure its adoption, if necessary, by an appeal to the people of Europe. His address at Manchester and before the French deputies and his reception in Italy should be noted with this point in view.

Quite naturally the American public became interested in the terms of the proposed league of nations, which, in accordance with the President's plan, was to be America's sum total to be attained by the war. It became the leading topic of discussion in American circles as it was the chief item for weeks in the dispatches from Paris. On January 25, 1919, weeks after the President landed, it was announced from Paris that the conference had agreed to make the league a part of the treaty. On February 14 the proposed constitution was published in Europe and America. It at once became the subject of the most careful study and scrutiny by various citizens in this country and the chief topic of discussion. Friends of the idea as well as opponents examined it with reference to the extent of its powers, as to whether it affected our independence and sovereignty as a Nation. The President on February 14 requested from Paris that discussion be deferred until such time as he could explain its provisions. Many friends of the idea frankly admitted that it did affect our independence and defended it on the basis that it could not be effectual otherwise and that we should relinquish independence for the sake of the larger interests of humanity. Still others denied that it involved our sovereignty and independence. February 26 the conference at the White House between the President and the two Foreign Affairs Committees of Congress developed a wide divergence of opinion on the full meaning of the league constitution, which at that time was made known to be the plan drawn up by the British. The interest of the President and his emphasis upon the importance of his work are best expressed in his insistence that it must be accepted as written. At this conference he assured the country that every paragraph had a "good and sufficient reason" for its acceptance.

Objections had already been pointed out and were being widely discussed. It was urged that our independence and sovereignty were surrendered if the constitution should become effective as written. This was the judgment of some of the most distinguished lawyers of the country. The jurisdiction covered "all questions affecting the peace of the world," which, it was alleged, was general and broad enough to include questions both justiciable and nonjusticiable, the one serious obstacle and the most vital item in all conferences heretofore held. It was pointed out that the jurisdiction covered immigration, deportation, coastwise trade, tariff legislation, the Monroe doctrine, and so forth. It was also objected that it gave Britain at least six votes to our one. It was urged that the most serious feature was an omission, namely, that there was no provision for withdrawal; that our assent or consent was not necessary to make us a mandatory over foreign countries; that our Army and Navy could be sent anywhere in the world by the league without the consent of Congress; that it nullified that part of the Constitution which gave Congress the power over war. These objections led to a doubt of the wisdom of making it a part of the treaty.

It was variously suggested to the President that the league should be considered separate from the treaty, as it involved possible complications which should not be entangled with the ending of the war; that such situation would preclude necessary consideration. To all the proposed changes the President had but one answer. It must be accepted "without the crossing of a 't' or the dotting of an 'i.'" It was an order to return it as delivered or not at all. On the evening of March 4 in New York City, before sailing the second time for Paris, he told the country, "The first thing that I am going to tell the people on the other side of the water is that an overwhelming majority of the American people is in favor of the league of nations. I know that that is true." He also declared his determination to bring back the treaty so involved as to prevent separate consideration and thus compel the adoption of the league at the cost of the loss of the treaty when he announced to the country that "When the treaty comes back gentlemen on this side will find the covenant not only in it, but so many threads of the treaty tied to the covenant that you can not dissect the covenant from the treaty without destroying the whole vital structure."

While the President was in the United States and necessarily absent from the peace table Paris dispatches carried the statement that the commission had decided to separate the league from the treaty, to which the American commissioners did not dissent. Upon the arrival of the President this decision was vetoed by him. This may indicate an explanation of the alleged strained relations between the White House and Secretary Lansing and Col. House, the associates in Paris. Bullitt had quoted Lansing on what the people would do when they learned what the league meant to this country. Lansing has not seen the President since his illness, not even to consult on the Mexican danger, an indication not only of the embarrassment because of the subordinate if not humiliating situation of the American associates with the President, but especially the ease with which Europe stands ready to meet the requirements, whatever they may be, of our Government when made known. In spite of the persistent claim that the instrument must be accepted unchanged, several changes were made around the peace table by the commission, all of which had been urged by various citizens, friends as well as foes of the idea of a league, including Senators and Members of the House. Some of them were urged by Taft, the father of the idea.

The country, and especially the Senate, the ratifying body, desired copies of the treaty, including the league, for examination. The fact, which was widely published and therefore very well known, that copies were on sale in Europe, and several copies were here in America, led to an effort to secure a copy for the Senate. This failing, Senator BORAH, who had secured a copy, read it into the RECORD of the Senate on June 10. One month later, July 10, the President appeared before Congress to address the country on the league and other topics. The most significant line in his address was that the league "must be accepted at whatever cost of independent action of the Government." This disposed of the claim that sovereignty was not involved. Whatever had been the contention of leaders that the Nation's independence was not at stake, this address set at rest the position taken by the man who was closest to its draft and with greatest power to put it in force. From this time on little contention that independence was not involved was heard.

Then began the President's individual campaign for the ratification of the league without the slightest change through the most unusual series of conferences with individual Senators mostly of what are known as the mild-reservation class. The first of these conferences was held on July 17, when Senators NELSON, COLT, MCCUMBER, and JONES of Washington were invited; on July 18 Senators KELLOGG, KENYON, MCNARY, and CAPPER were called to confer with the President; on July 23 Senators EDGE, CALDER, and CUMMINS; on July 24 Senators PAGE, MCLEAN, and STERLING; on July 25 Senators SPENCER and WARREN; on July 30 Senators FERNALD, HARDING, DILLINGHAM, and LENROOT; on July 31 Senators NEW and KEYES; and on August 1 Senator WATSON. This singular innovation stands as a new chapter in treaty making and indicates a new interpretation of coordinate power under the Constitution.

No progress having materialized, except to strengthen opposition to the "sign here" attitude, the famous conference with the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee was held at the White House on the evening of August 19. The proceedings were reported and printed in the RECORD August 20. The lines of difference between the President and the committee were here made clear. The Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs reported on the 10th of September in favor of ratification of the treaty, including the league, but with amendments and reservations. Then began the fight for amendments and reservations.

On the 3d of September the President had entered upon his famous tour to carry the cause to the people and made his first address on the following day at Columbus, Ohio. This series of addresses made clear his estimate of the importance of the league. On September 6 he reached the climax in Kansas City, where he frankly declared that the cause of the league was greater than the Government. His exact words were: "I have come out to fight for a cause. That cause is greater than the Senate; it is greater than the Government. It is as great as the cause of mankind."

This quieted those among the friends of the league who had persisted that independence and sovereignty of the Nation were not involved. The tour emphasized at least two things: The President's convictions and determination on the one hand and on the other the committee's view of the importance of Americanizing the treaty by reservation, if not by amendment. The tour was interrupted by the ill health of the President. It had no effect upon the vote in the Senate further than to give wider publicity to the points of difference between the two constitutional treaty-making powers and to strengthen the two contesting bodies.

When the President entered upon the campaign before the people to influence the Senate by a direct appeal over the heads of the coordinate branch of the treaty-making power the country was reminded that only once before, back in 1866, in the time of Andrew Johnson, was this method employed. As in that case the plan had rather an unfortunate ending, so in this instance the country was concerned over how it would terminate. The tour ended in mid-September, over three months ago. Since that time the Senate has agreed upon the committee's report of 15 reservations by clear majorities, but that body failed to ratify the treaty, which requires a two-thirds vote. The President is still confined to the White House by lingering illness.

His estimate of the importance of an unrestricted league will throw light upon many otherwise inexplicable agreements—for example, that on the Shantung deal, which admits of no explanation except to secure Japan's acceptance of the league, which seemed necessary. There never appeared to be any enthusiasm for the league either in France, England, or Italy. It will be remembered when Lloyd-George mentioned it in Parliament it provoked laughter, which called out a plea from the premier that it be given a fair trial. The agreement of these countries was necessary to effect the project; hence the acceptance of their demands even though they were embarrassing to this country, and especially to the President, who had outlined the basis of peace in his once famous 14 points, 13 of which were so entirely given up for the sake of the fourteenth.

No one familiar with the constitutional history of our country would deny to the Senate the right to make amendments, nor would any well-informed person assert that the President would be compelled to accept them when made. The President and Senate are coordinate powers in treaty making, neither compelled to accept the work of the other.

The Senate can amend, as has been done from the very beginning of our history. The President may accept, as he usually does, or he may reject, as has been infrequently done. If he accepts the amendments, the treaty becomes effective. If he rejects them, the treaty fails unless an agreement between the two coordinate powers is reached.

In the case of amendments becoming a part of the ratification, they must be accepted by the other nations parties to the treaty. As a final result of the contest over the Senate committee's amendments, the Senate rejected all amendments from fear of embarrassment to the United States by requiring a resubmission to Germany of the amended treaty. There was a general desire to avoid that necessity if possible.

It was urged that the substance of these amendments could and would be covered by reservations which would not necessitate a resubmission to Germany, hence the rejection of all the amendments, including that on Shantung, which is universally deplored throughout this country and over which the President himself has expressed his dissatisfaction. Shantung was a part of the treaty proper, while most of the other proposed amendments were applied to the league, of which Germany is not a member.

Reservations to a treaty are made upon two theories: First, to clear up any ambiguity of language that might admit of reasonable dispute; and, second, to put the members on notice that whatever be the contention under the treaty of other members of the league, the nation making the reservations defines its understandings and leaves it to the other parties to accept the treaty on those conditions. While reservations do not textually alter the instrument as amendments would do, they do virtually have the same legal effect as applied to the country making them.

The chief purpose is to preclude the possibility of dispute after the treaty has become effective.

In the present case men of equal talent and legal acumen differ on whether the jurisdiction of the proposed league covers purely domestic questions. They also differ on whether the Monroe doctrine is included and necessarily abandoned. They differ on whether our armies can be ordered by the league to any part of the world without the consent of Congress. They differ on whether the unequal vote, where Great Britain has 6 to our 1, is dangerous; on our freedom to withdraw, which, as amended, depends upon whether our obligations have been fulfilled; on whether our labor will be dominated by European interference; on the power of the league to fasten upon us the debt of the World War; on the Shantung misfortune. In these and many other items the adherents of an unchanged covenant, the internationalists, led by the President, declare that either the language of the league does not include the dangers feared or we should be willing to make the sacrifice; while the nationalists, led by Senator LODGE and others in the Senate, declare it does include them and the sacrifice is too great for us. The view of the latter is shared by many of the country's greatest international lawyers.

To clear up the doubt so as to preclude the possibility of a dispute when it is too late to correct it, the Senate committee proposed to write into the ratification the exact language of our understandings to cover the points in doubt. This is the object and purpose of the reservation proposal upon which the Senate recently acted when it agreed to 15 reservations covering all the disputed points.

This is a common practice of all nations. We employed it in our very first treaty of any significance, the Jay treaty of 1795, and in most of our important treaties up to date. It is also a common practice in the various conferences of nations, such as The Hague conferences in 1899 and 1907. In these conventions dozens of reservations were made as conditions of ratification by most nations, including our own.

The deadlock in the Senate is unlike anything in the past. The President, recognizing the force and effect of reservations, has interpreted them as objectionable as amendments would be to him. While the Senate by decisive majorities has adopted reservations, it has failed to secure a two-thirds vote necessary to ratify the treaty either with or without reservations.

The Senate, after deliberate debate, adopted 15 reservations, which were accordingly attached to the treaty. The President, under date of November 18, 1919, in a letter to Senator HITCHCOCK, instructed all friends of the treaty to vote against ratification if the reservations were attached. His language was, "I trust all true friends of the treaty will refuse to support the Lodge resolution."

The test came first on ratification with the reservations attached. It was rejected by a vote of 39 to 55. There were 35 Republicans and 4 Democrats for it and 42 Democrats and 13 Republicans against it. On a reconsideration of the vote, proposed by Senator REED, a Democrat, it stood 41 for it and 51 against it—34 Republicans and 7 Democrats for it and 38 Democrats and 13 Republicans against it. This exhausted the parliamentary chances of ratification with reservations.

Then the vote was taken, on motion of Senator UNDERWOOD, to ratify without reservations. It was rejected by a vote of 38 to 53—37 Democrats and 1 Republican voted for it; 46 Republicans and 7 Democrats voted against it. The vote by which this last motion was reconsidered was laid on the table, which ended the parliamentary chance of further considering the ratification without reservations.

Ratification was thus rejected with and without reservations, and under the rules of the Senate unless suspended by same vote (two-thirds) necessary to ratify, it can not again be taken up. It will lie buried where it now rests, unless the President resubmits it to the Senate, which is his constitutional right if he chooses to exercise it. He has stated, "I have no compromise or concession of any kind in mind." However, that does not mean he will refuse to lay it again before the Senate.

The treaty has been killed in the house of its friends. The seven test votes taken show more than two-thirds of the Senate in favor of some form of a league. With reservations: Republicans 35; Democrats 4; without reservations: Republicans 1, Democrats 37; making a total vote of Republicans 36, Democrats 41. This shows 77 votes if united for it.

There are 17 Members of the Senate who are opposed to the Government taking the step to become a member of any league. They are 13 Republicans and 4 Democrats.

There are at least 37 Democrats who thus far follow the President in his claim that the league is more important than the Government.

There are 35 Republicans who favor the league if American sovereignty, independence, and vital national interests are safeguarded by reservations, but who will resist it as it is now written and demanded by the President.

The reservations are the determining factors. Upon every test on the subject of reservations the Senate has shown a very decided majority for them, but always short of the necessary two-thirds to make them a part of the ratified treaty.

If the President refuses to take the necessary step to again bring the treaty properly before the Senate, the latter body will be free to act by a resolution to end the war, either by joint resolution or by repealing the act of April 6, 1917, declaring a state of war to exist. The latter is the more likely resolution which has been reported to the Senate by the committee and now awaits action.

The question is frequently raised, Why is it that the treaty is not now in operation? By the terms of the treaty (article 440) it will come into force between the high contracting parties who have ratified it "as soon as the treaty has been ratified by Germany on the one hand and by three of the principal allied and associated powers on the other hand." On August 1 England ratified it. This ratification was soon followed by France and later by Italy. Germany having ratified it in due time, its terms make it effective now. Dispatches from Europe indicate a willingness to accept the Senate view, and this has been officially confirmed by the recent utterance of Lloyd-George and Clemenceau.

The much talk about compromises between the adherents of restricted and unrestricted ratification, which indicated a willingness to agree upon the reservation program and which is designed to clear up any ambiguity of the language of the covenant, will amount to but little unless the agreement will be accepted by the President, who must act in order to place the treaty again before the Senate. Up to date nothing has been said to indicate that he has modified his last statement that he has no compromise or concession in mind. It appears there is only one obstacle in the way of ending the war by the regular and usual course—the President himself.

As it now appears, the country will not be satisfied with its frightful sacrifices of life and treasure and the cumulation of ominous problems awaiting a return to a prewar status unless steps be taken without delay to end the war and in the best way to lessen the chances of future wars, and at the same time to omit no necessary step to preserve our national sovereignty and independence. The country is not greatly concerned over either disputes between coordinate bodies as such or the pride of opinion of leaders among us, but it is supremely concerned over the Nation's destiny. If our country is to abandon any time-honored principle heretofore looked upon as fundamental, it must be when such step becomes necessary. Great crises such as we have been through call for an unselfish service, divested of every semblance of personal ambition or partisan advantage, and even personal dignity, as important as that is, must not stand in the way of national necessity. As our supreme concern when we were in the world's greatest test of arms was to win the war in the shortest possible time at the least possible sacrifice, so now it is to put an end to this world unrest by reaching peace with our country, still, as ever, the great outstanding Republic, with its sovereignty and independence still intact to fulfill its mission vouchsafed by a combination of circumstances unique in the world's history, where while she is generous she is not foolish, and while she is powerful she is just. Her mission is clearly outlined by her great history, and her destiny should not be in doubt to-day when all the world is knocking at her doors. Whatever be the ambition of our leaders, let them not lose sight of a nation's duty to mankind not to cripple herself by becoming hopelessly lost in the meshes of foreign entanglements in her ardor to become the chief actor in the proposed world's great federation. However important may be the league, it must not be at the price of the necessity of submitting the destiny of this Republic to a vote of a league in which the control must be by nations whose interests can not be our own. Neither must she become the umpire to settle the world's quarrels. Reservations seem necessary to insure what good there is to be gained by the league without sacrificing our Nation, which to-day is the abiding hope of mankind.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN].

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with interest to the arguments relative to the policy that Congress has pursued in making reimbursable Indian appropriations. Particularly was I interested in the remarks made with respect to reimbursable appropriations for irrigation. It is a fact that the first appropriations for Indian irrigation were for projects located in the semiarid Northwest, where in certain years there is sufficient rainfall so that irrigation is not always necessary. The experiment was tried among tribes of Indians who are not agricultural, among nomads who were but a short time away from the habits of life of the hunter and the trapper. The results to date have not justified the expectations of Congress, but the same is equally true of similar experiments in irrigation conducted in other parts of the semiarid region on projects established for the exclusive benefit of white people. As a result of these partial failures, the whole idea of irrigation has been condemned in the House and we are informed in general terms that a mistake has been made in making any appropriations of this character. My own experience is based on knowledge of the Indians in the Southwest, who must live by irrigation, who know no other kind of farming. I assert without fear of successful contradiction that every dollar which has been expended for irrigation in any Indian appropriation act for the benefit of the Indians of Arizona, New Mexico, and southern California has given satisfactory results. Long before Columbus discovered America the Pimas, the Pueblos, and other natives of the Southwest were diverting water from the streams and applying it to their lands. It is no experiment to construct irrigation works for their benefit, because they know how to make beneficial use of every available drop of water which can be furnished to them.

Such is the testimony of every irrigation engineer of the Indian Service, of the Reclamation Service, and of every other person presumed to have knowledge of irrigation who appeared before our committee. I do not want the House to get the idea that because irrigation might not be successful in certain parts of the United States that the whole plan should be condemned.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman is not in favor of reimbursement by the Indians?

Mr. HAYDEN. I favor the return of every dollar that can possibly be repaid.

Mr. MADDEN. I thought the gentleman's attitude was the other way.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have never advocated appropriations for irrigation or for any other purpose where the Indians possessed resources which made reimbursement to the United States possible on any other basis than that such reimbursements should not be made. Full reimbursement for all sums so advanced is not only right for the Indians but right for the white people. Under the United States reclamation project, where I live, there was a movement among the water users at one time to repudiate the debt due to the United States. I fought that effort at repudiation with all the vigor that I possessed, because I believe that a debt owed to the United States is as sacred an obligation as a debt between neighbors or money due a bank and should be paid as promptly. This fact must be recognized, however, that Indians, particularly those of a roaming character, where it is necessary to wean them from their roving habits and locate them on farms, can not be expected to repay the United States for such expenditures as promptly as would an educated and successful white man who is familiar with irrigation and agriculture. For that reason Congress has very properly been more liberal in the terms of reimbursement by the Indians than they have with white men.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. HAYDEN. With pleasure.

Mr. MADDEN. How much longer time does the gentleman think the Government of the United States should continue its control over Indian affairs?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is a question which no man can definitely answer.

Mr. MADDEN. Ought not they to be turned loose on their own responsibility to a larger extent than they are now and given a greater freedom, thereby encouraging and developing——

Mr. HAYDEN. Give an Indian complete freedom, remove him from all restraint, and if he be incompetent and not qualified to engage in business with the skill and experience of the white man, then frequently the result will be that he will promptly be cheated and swindled out of all of his property. Then a claim would be immediately brought to Congress that because the Indian was turned loose and allowed to dispose of his property in any extravagant manner that it was a burden upon the Government to do something further for him. In order to avoid just such a situation Congress has provided a method whereby within the discretion of the officials of the Interior Department the Indian may be declared competent and his property turned over to him. Where he is considered incompetent, supervision is exercised over his business affairs.

Mr. MADDEN. Since it left the power in the Interior Department to declare the competency of the Indians, how long does the gentleman think they will still continue to refuse to declare them competent in order to retain control over them by the Government?

Mr. HAYDEN. The Indian Bureau is like all other bureaus of the Government. It is not anxious to surrender authority, and continued pressure on the part of Congress will be necessary to induce the Indian Service to release control of the Indians. Within my own lifetime I have noted the advancement in civilization of Indians who went about practically naked, who wore long hair and could not speak a word of English. I have seen this same tribe of Indians within a generation driving automobiles and making as good use of their farms as their white neighbors, practically all of the younger people being able to read and write and to successfully manage their own business. I believe that, beyond a doubt, if the same policy which is now carried on by the Congress is continued, within three generations tribesmen can be made into good citizens. In some cases it can be done within a generation. In other tribes it may take two, but certainly within three generations the present educational system will develop the savage Indian into a civilized man.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I will.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman is a member of the subcommittee that made an extended investigation. Did the gentleman's subcommittee investigate the Indian Office here in Washington itself as to whether it would be possible to make any reduction in the expenses, either in personnel or in the office at this time, or is there any prospect in the immediate future that there will be a reduction in that department?

Mr. HAYDEN. One would imagine that reductions might be made in the force in the Indian Bureau, but as a matter of fact there are but a comparatively small number of persons employed in the city of Washington. The total number of persons under civil service in the Indian Bureau is 5,814. Of that number, but 240 are located in the city of Washington. The principal opportunity for a reduction in the number of employees is therefore in the Indian field service and not in the Indian Bureau.

Mr. TILSON. In the legislative bill there is an appropriation of $330,000 for the bureau here in Washington alone. That is a considerable sum.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman from Arizona let me make a little statement in this connection? How can you expect to cut down the number of employees of the Indian Bureau when in 1899 they only received 59,787 letters and in 1919 they received 247,675 letters; their increase in work has been 314 per cent and the Indians dying off all the time?

Mr. TILSON. There may be some sort of propaganda in reference to writing letters, but I find the number of letters I receive is not governed at all by the importance of the business.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Here is a page devoted to the letter writing.

Mr. HAYDEN. There is this possibility, that much of the work which might properly be disposed of in the field is transmitted by letter to the Indian Office in Washington for review and then mailed back for final action at the schools and agencies.

I am satisfied that a considerable portion of such correspondence might be eliminated by giving wider discretion to the local superintendents, and I am heartily in favor of doing so where it can be done under proper safeguards.

Mr. RHODES. Will the gentleman permit?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield to my good friend from Missouri.

Mr. RHODES. In further answer to the gentleman's question, might it not be well to remind the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON] that about 45,000 or 50,000 individual contracts have been entered into between the Indian Department and the individual Indians under the so-called reimbursable industrial appropriation, thus necessarily increasing the work of the bureau in Washington and increasing the number of employees?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is true.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. FESS. What proportion of the Indian children have the facilities of schooling now?

Mr. HAYDEN. Everywhere, except in the Southwest, practically all the Indian children are provided with schools. In the Navajo country alone, in Arizona and New Mexico, there are over 5,000 Indian children who are growing up in ignorance, who can not speak or write the English language, because adequate school facilities have not been provided.

Mr. FESS. Is it not true that the Indian who is educated in the schools would be capable of citizenship?

Mr. HAYDEN. A man's education and his business ability are two different things. The qualifications for competency and citizenship are that the man can speak and read and write the English language and that by his conduct he has shown that he is capable of taking reasonable care of his own business. As the gentleman from Ohio well knows, some of the most highly educated men of our own race are very poor business men. Scholarship is rarely accompanied by a talent for finance.

Mr. FESS. That is very true. What I was getting at was that if we enter upon a campaign of universal education for the Indian children, would not one generation remove the necessity of keeping them as wards?

Mr. HAYDEN. I know a number of Indians in Arizona who were educated in the Indian schools who are successfully managing their own affairs, who speak good English, and are fully qualified to be citizens. But that is not the general rule, and can not be when we stop to consider that the whole tribe to which they belong was steeped in barbarism only a short generation ago. It is too much to expect that they could all be fully civilized in one generation. Within two generations much can be accomplished. Take an Indian child away from his parents and send him to an Indian school, put him through a hot-housing process, and apparently he makes wonderful progress. But if he goes back to his tribe, the majority of whom are uncivilized and illiterate, he is very likely to drop back into the old tribal manners and customs. Much talk has been made about the large percentage of Indian children who have reverted to the blanket after graduation from the Indian schools, but I discount such observations. A parallel case would be a white boy who goes from a country village to college. When he graduates and returns to his home his former associates think slightingly of the culture he has acquired and are inclined to say that he is conceited if he persists in his college ways. He may put on a pair of overalls and a slouch hat, and to all appearances look like his neighbors, but the education he has acquired while away from home is not thereby dissipated from his mind. He has acquired a desire for knowledge, and it is certain that he will insist that his children shall be educated. And so it takes two or more generations to raise the general level of education in a whole community, whether composed of white or red men.

Mr. FESS. Is it not true that our policy of educating the Indians is looking to a time when they will cease to be wards of the Government and be citizens of the United States?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is the only theory upon which appropriations to educate the Indians can be based.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield for a question in that connection?

Mr. HAYDEN. With pleasure.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Is it not a fact that the more the Indians become civilized, the more they acquire citizenship, the larger the appropriation made for their support and maintenance? Is not that a fact?

Mr. HAYDEN. Your bare statement of fact is true.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Somebody suggests that is a coincidence.

Mr. HAYDEN. But the explanation is perfectly simple. If there is but one Indian agent in charge of 5,000 Indians on a reservation, all of whom are in tribal relation, without schools and nothing further is done to civilize them, it will not cost much money to handle the affairs of that tribe. But when the tribal property is segregated and individual Indians are taught to take care of their own business, when farmers are employed to teach them agriculture, when schools are established to educate their children, much larger sums must necessarily be expended.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Were there not as many Indian tribes appropriated for 10 or 20 years ago as now, and was not the appropriation then only half of what it is now? It was a good deal less than half when I came here than it is now. The more they become civilized the more they want or somebody else wants money out of the Public Treasury to support them or make other provision for them. They are never taught real self-sustenance.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It is for the intellectual and high-grade management of the Indian and his affairs, including the money and his property.

Mr. HAYDEN. In connection with the question of expense, which the gentleman from Illinois has raised, I want to make a few observations. The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, for whom I have great respect both as an able legislator and as a good business man, made the statement that during the last seven years, under the administration of the present Indian commissioner, there had been an increase of about $40,000,000 in the sums annually appropriated by Congress for the Indian Service. He is usually so accurate in the use of figures that I was greatly surprised to hear him make so broad an assertion. We so often think alike on the questions before our committee that it is not a pleasant duty to correct the impression which his remarks evidently made upon the House to-day.

I was at a loss to understand where my good friend had obtained the data which he used, but undoubtedly he referred to the report which he submitted to the House in connection with this bill. But that report does not disclose any such large increase. Let me analyze his figures just for a moment.

In 1913, the first fiscal year after the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs assumed office, the total appropriations for the Indian Service were $9,470,000. The following year, 1914, there was an increase of $567,000, or a total of $10,037,000. In 1915 the appropriations were $11,214,000, an increase of $1,744,000 over the total for 1913. In 1916 Congress passed a joint resolution extending the former appropriations, so that the same increase over 1913 was allowed, $1,744,000. In 1917 the Indian appropriations totaled $12,214,000, or an increase of $2,744,000 over 1913. In 1918 the total appropriations for the Indian Service were $12,036,000, or an increase of $2,566,000 over 1913.

About that time Congress directed that thereafter no further use be made of Indian tribal funds without an appropriation by Congress, with the result that in the following year, 1919, the total carried in the bill was $15,462,000, or an apparent increase over 1913 of $6,012,000. Of that amount, $2,500,000 was out of Indian tribal funds, which the Indian Bureau prior to that time had the right to expend without coming to Congress for authority. The net increase over 1913 was, therefore, $3,512,000. The same was true of the last year's bill, which had a total of $15,273,000, or an apparent increase over 1913 of $5,803,000. But in the 1920 bill $2,509,000 was appropriated out of tribal funds, leaving a net increase of $3,214,000 over 1913. Deducting the tribal funds that were included in the 1919 and 1920 Indian appropriation bills, because Congress required an appropriation instead of allowing the Indian Bureau to use such funds without restraint, there remains a net total increase over the amount authorized for the Indian Service in 1913 $16,091,000 for the fiscal years 1914 to 1920, inclusive, an average increase each year of $2,298,000.

Mr. HASTINGS. Of that sum, how much is reimbursable?

Mr. HAYDEN. The reimbursable items aggregated $1,993,000 in 1914, and have been gradually increased to $2,767,000 in 1920.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit me, I recall that we increased the reimbursable items in the last two years in Montana and Washington and Wyoming on irrigation projects quite a bit, and about the year 1914 there began an increase in the so-called industrial funds by which great herds of tribal cattle have been brought up, which I tried to persuade the House not to permit to go into the bill; but, as will be remembered, there was one occasion when the House ran over the Indian Committee and permitted it to be done.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arizona has expired.

Mr. CARTER. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arizona is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. HAYDEN. The gratuity items in the 1913 Indian appropriation bill aggregated $6,478,000, while the total gratuities in the Indian act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, were $7,501,000, a reasonable increase, since the larger part of such appropriations is for the support of Indian schools. Instead of an increase of about $40,000,000 in the aggregate over the appropriations made between 1913 and 1920, there has been an actual increase of $16,091,000, or about $2,298,000 a year, which is not extraordinary, after taking into consideration all the expenses of the Indian Bureau, many of which are necessarily affected by the increased cost of labor and materials.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a question for information?

Mr. HAYDEN. With pleasure.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The gentleman says the tribal funds are expended now under the authority of Congress?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Take one of the 17 or 18 tribes in my district, the Quiniaults, numbering about a thousand Indians, with $6,000,000 worth of property. One of them dies, and his friends have not the money to buy a coffin or to take charge of his funeral, and no undertaker wants to do it, because his pay is so slow. Is that paid out of the tribal funds, or how is that done?

Mr. HAYDEN. If the gentleman will look at the last page of this bill, under the heading of "Washington," he will find appropriations from tribal funds of $160 for the Puyallups, $1,000 for the Quiniaults, and $4,800 for the Spokane Indians, and $8,000 for the Tulalips, and $22,000 for the Yakimas.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I get that. Does the gentleman mean to say that that $1,000 for the Quiniaults is a lump sum, intended to pay for their distresses when they have not money of their own?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is all that is appropriated out of their tribal funds in this bill, and that is all the Quiniault money which can be expended without further authority from Congress.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. How would the gentleman like to be one of those thousand men having this $6,000,000 worth of property and having $1,000 allotted for distresses in his family and in the families of his fellow tribesmen?

Mr. HAYDEN. If the Quiniault Tribe has property, as the gentleman states, a sale should be arranged and some of it turned into cash and the money used for the benefit of the Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. Gladly.

Mr. SNYDER. Just a moment ago there seemed to be an endeavor on the part of my friend from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] to make it appear that the increases had all been made in the reimbursable items. I desire to call attention to the fact that the estimate this year calls for $500,000 more in the gratuity items than in the current act, and there has been about that increase in the gratuity items for the past few years.

Mr. CARTER. I do not think the gentleman accurately caught what I said. As I understood the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], he said the increases were not largely due to the reimbursable items. I simply called attention to the fact of the Montana irrigation item and the Wyoming irrigation item and the State of Washington irrigation item, and the industrial fund, which one year was $600,000, all of which were reimbursable items, and all of which had occasioned a large part of the increases in the last five or six years.

Mr. SNYDER. Of course, the gentleman knows that in no one of the Indian irrigation projects has there been a penny returned. There has been some return on the industrial reimbursables, and there has been a little money returned on moneys that were expended for upkeep or maintenance and operation, but there has not been a single project pointed out where there has been a dollar returned to the Government of any moneys that were appropriated for the capital purpose of developing an irrigation scheme.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman from Arizona has the floor.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Will the gentleman from Arizona yield for a question?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I should like to ask the gentleman from New York if any of the projects have been completed?

Mr. SNYDER. So far as I know there has been no project completed, and so far as my belief goes there is no intention on the part of anyone ever to complete any of the projects.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Particularly not on the part of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SNYDER. The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs proposes at this time, if it is within his power, to make some arrangement whereby some of this money which has been heretofore expended shall be returned, and to make it unnecessary in the future to appropriate large additional sums for the purpose.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Does not the gentleman know that the money was not to be returned until the projects have been completed?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman knows that, but all laws can be repealed and all treaties can be modified, and this is the time when we propose to do it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, I sincerely hope it will be possible for the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs to carry out the plan indicated by the chairman and actually visit some of the reservations in the West so as to see the conditions for themselves.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I hope so.

Mr. HAYDEN. We call upon witnesses from the Indian Bureau to tell us what somebody else told them, except in cases where they happen to have visited a particular reservation. Papers are shuffled, tables are displayed, but to go and see is the way to acquire information. The Japanese have a proverb that one look is better than a thousand words, and I do hope that this committee will actually go upon some of these reservations and observe the conditions there, in order that they may more intelligently appropriate the moneys necessary to carry on the Indian Service. It is only by a personal investigation of the conditions in the West that justice can be done to the Indians and intelligent appropriations made out of the Treasury of the United States. The gentlemen who are the members of this committee, and particularly its most able chairman, are good business men—I have every confidence in their judgment—and I hope they will make as thorough an investigation in the field as they have in Washington.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not think I shall take 10 minutes. The matter to which I wish to refer is not apropos to the discussion of this bill perhaps, but is, I believe, proper under general debate.

In the Washington Post of Tuesday, December 23, my attention was attracted to an article which had the following heading:

Living costs to drop—Palmer in statement emphasizes absence of rise since August—Predicts immediate slump—Lack of teeth in control act has hampered prosecutions.

Following the heading is this:

As a sort of Christmas present to the American people Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer announced last night that the high cost of living has been halted and that there is every reason to believe that with the dawn of the new year definite reductions may be expected. As a matter of fact, the Attorney General argues that the holding of prices at a level between August and November is a distinct victory for the Government crusade, inasmuch as figures as far back as 1911 show prices invariably rise in the fall of the year.

Then follows a considerable criticism of Congress for not having passed the legislation that the Attorney General and the President demanded, and which is alleged to be to some extent the cause for the increase in the cost of living, and this statement is made:

CONFERENCE BEFORE STATEMENT.

A conference of all Government agencies engaged in the campaign against the high cost of living preceded the making public of the Attorney General's statement, in which he said:

The conference authorized the Attorney General to make the following statement:

Then follows this statement:

This year, during September and October, an actual reduction in the general level of retail prices was effected as compared with August, while the figure for November, although slightly above that of October, shows no increase above the August returns. In other words, the official data clearly shows the significant fact that the cost of living, as indicated by retail prices, was no greater in November of this year than it was in August, while during former years, extending back to 1911, the returns for November show a considerable increase over August returns.

When I saw this article, gentlemen, I immediately concluded that some one who was running the exchequer of my family was deceiving me about the true facts. I then began some investigation to ascertain whether the Attorney General had really given the American people a Christmas present or whether in fact the statements made by him were incorrect. So I called on various merchants of repute to see about the cost of living. You will remember, gentlemen, he says that the cost of living has not increased from the 1st of August to the present time. I called on Woodward & Lothrop, a reputable Washington firm, to give the retail prices of common ordinary things which every man has to have in his family. I have them here. Gingham—and they give the different kinds—on the 1st of August was 25 cents a yard. On the 30th of December it was 30 cents a yard. Percale, 40 cents on the 1st of August and 50 cents on the 30th of December. Sheeting on the 1st of August was 80 cents and $1.20 on the 30th of December. Toweling, 18 cents on the 1st of August and 25 on the 30th of December. Muslin, 30 cents on the 1st of August and 40 cents now. Men's cotton union suits, and they give the kinds, the ordinary kind——

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No; I will not yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I simply wanted to know what the gentleman knows about cotton underwear.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. If I did not know more than the gentleman from Texas I would not say much about it. The price of these men's cotton union suits remains about the same. Men's common negligé shirt with collars and soft cuffs were $2 on the 1st of August and now $2.50. Men's shoes, high calfskin, average $9 on the 1st of August and $11 now.

Now, in every case these are the same articles upon which the price is quoted. Women's shoes are quoted the same on the 1st of August and at this time, although from what I learn in my family there seems to be some difference of opinion on that question, but I am willing to take the merchant's say so.

Men's ready-made suits. The merchant's comment is as follows:

On merchandise contracted for previous to August 1 and delivered after that date, no change in price. Purchases made in November for immediate use 20 per cent to 40 per cent higher than goods contracted for in the spring of 1919 for use in the fall of 1919.

Men's hats, Stetson soft, $7 on the 1st of August and $8 now.

Men's kid gloves were selling on the 1st of August for $3 and are $3.50 now. Women's gloves, the ordinary average that is mostly sold, $3 on the 1st of August and $3.50 now.

This firm has this comment to make:

In explanation of the few instances above in which the retail prices are not higher January 1 than August 1, it is only because we have not had to replenish our stocks of these particular items since August 1, not because of stationary cost of price.

I then investigated the price of coal. I find that bituminous coal was selling in Washington the 1st of August, 1919, for $7.75 a ton. It is selling to-day for $8.10. This was caused by an increase of 35 cents which came about under the deliberations between Attorney General Palmer and the miners, by which they resumed operations; deliberations which the great majority of the American people know nothing about, but which we do know increased the cost to the American people of 35 cents a ton on soft coal. Hard coal has had the following increases: Eighty-five cents per ton the 1st of August and on the 1st of September 10 per cent increase on the cost.

Here are some of the common articles, and I must hurry because my time grows short. I find that lumber, such as is ordinarily used in building operations—siding cost on the 1st of August $100 per thousand and at this time it costs $115 to $120. Oak flooring on the 1st of August cost $110 a thousand and is now $182 a thousand. Pine flooring cost $100 on the 1st of August and now costs $135. Shingles cost $9 a thousand on the 1st of August and $18.50 now—over 100 per cent increase.

Dimension stuff remains about the same. Nails sold for $4.50 on the 1st of August for a hundred-pound keg and now is $6.20 for a keg of a hundred pounds.

Plumber's supplies: Enameled ware advanced about 20 per cent; articles of brass, prices advanced about 30 per cent since August 1.

Cast-iron sewer pipe has advanced 15 per cent since August 1. Boilers and radiators have advanced 20 per cent since August 1.

Now, as to cloth, the common ordinary serge for men's suits was $4 per yard on the 1st of August and to-day is $7 a yard.

Domestic worsted increased about 20 per cent on good quality and imported worsted about the same. Cement cost $2.81 a barrel on the 1st of August and remained the same, as does lime.

I looked up the prices of food and I find some changes. Wheat flour increased on the 24½-pound bag from $1.75 a bag on the 1st of August to $1.85 at this time. Navy beans, salmon, canned corn, canned peas, canned beans, remain the same. I call attention to the fact that I believe they have remained the same because the Army food, owned by the Army, has been forced upon the market and has come in competition with these articles and has kept the price down to the natural and legitimate level. So at this time those prices have not risen. On butter the price has risen from 62 cents to 75 cents a pound. Eggs have risen from 53 cents to 59 cents a dozen. Granulated sugar has risen from 10 cents a pound for beet sugar, to 15 cents a pound; and for Louisiana sugar to 20 cents a pound.

All the articles above enumerated are such as ordinarily constitute the bulk of the things that go to make up the cost of living. Of this list of articles, the Attorney General is said to have had particular and intimate connection with two, namely, soft coal and sugar. In the matter of soft coal, Dr. Garfield, Fuel Administrator, announced that in his judgment the soft-coal miners ought to have a 14 per cent increase in wages, and that this ought to be borne by the operators. To this, I understand, the operators agreed. However, the miners did not. Almost immediately thereafter Attorney General Palmer began negotiations with the coal miners, as a result of which they returned to work with the implied understanding, as the press reports, that an increase of wages would be granted to them by a commission to be thereafter appointed. Mr. Palmer announced that a complete victory had been won for the Government; and Mr. Garfield, knowing such not to be the case, is said to have resigned. Dr. Garfield was well bred and had good Republican training in his youth. However, he was one of those who believed in the idealism of Woodrow Wilson. I trust when he returns to the cloistered halls of his college he may reflect on the fact that Democratic idealism and the practical application of democracy in national affairs are as different and opposed to one another as are the holy ghost and original sin.

The other matter dealt with by Mr. Palmer was sugar. The press reports he had a conference with the Louisiana sugar growers, and as a result of it they were allowed to increase their wholesale price to 17 cents. Almost immediately after this statement became public, whether correct or not, in almost every store in Washington where sugar had been heretofore an unknown quantity signs appeared inviting the public to buy what it wanted, but the price had risen in a night from 10 cents a pound to 15 cents for beet sugar and to 20 to 24 cents for cane sugar.

Thus it may be seen that the two matters which the Attorney General had most intimately busied himself with have resulted in immediate increases in the high cost of living. I understand Mr. Palmer is a candidate for President upon the Democratic ticket. If he is, and if this is one of the issues upon which he expects to be nominated and elected, I most respectfully suggest that he had best get another issue.

By unanimous consent, Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois was granted leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. HERNANDEZ].

Mr. HERNANDEZ. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, my purpose at this time in taking a few minutes of time on general debate of the bill now under consideration is for the purpose of calling your attention to two or three items in this bill which have to do with Indians in my State.

First, let me state in a general way that the Indians are making rapid progress in the ways of civilization in New Mexico. Practically all are self-supporting. The Navajo Indians, the most numerous of the Indian tribes in my State, are located in the southwestern part of the State, are engaged in sheep raising. On account of the character of the country in which these Indians live it will be a good many years before the Navajo Indians can be allotted their lands in severalty. That part of their reservation lying and being in the State of New Mexico is solely a stock-raising country. There is but very little water which can be used now for irrigation purposes. Also on account of their nomadic habits of living the matter of educating and finally civilizing these Indians is rather remote at this time. However, they are our wards and, like other troublesome questions and conditions in our various sections of the country, we must meet it in the most sensible and practical manner. Under the treaty of 1868, when these Indians were moved to their present reservation, the Government of the United States entered into a treaty whereby they were to have free education, furnished them by the Government. Owing to, as I have stated above, the fact that these Indians are scattered over a section of country covering an area of approximately 10,000,000 acres of the wildest country that anybody ever saw, schooling facilities for them all is just now an impossibility. They make their living by herding sheep and weaving blankets; they follow the grass wherever that is; they live in hoggans, huts built out of brush, partly under the ground, and in tents. The Navajo Indian is capable of learning.

I hold in my hand a communication from the missionary among the Navajo Indians, who has spent the last 10 years of his life as such missionary amongst the Navajos. In furtherance to the item in this bill appropriating a hundred thousand dollars for the purpose of purchasing and leasing lands for the Navajo Indians, he makes the statement that about 6,000 of these Indians live off of the reservation at the present time. That they are leasing railroad land which they have been occupying for a number of years, and paying for the leases out of their own pockets.

Another item I desire to call your attention to is the one providing for support and education at the Indian school at Albuquerque. If Congress desires to take care of the Indian population in New Mexico, this school should be enlarged. It is full to its capacity to-day, and a number of the Indian children will have to be denied admission therein because of lack of accommodations. The amount provided for by the bill is $200 per capita, when really at the present high prices they could not be taken care of very well for less than $225 per capita, and really it would be better if $250 were given for this and the Santa Fe school, both of which are first-class schools, running at their full capacity.

We have in the State of New Mexico about 10,000 Pueblo Indians, living in villages, most of them along the Rio Grande, among the other people. As a rule these Pueblo Indians have been peaceable and law-abiding. The Indian Bureau has provided school facilities for these Indians in their own villages. They were for a good many years, and are, semicivilized people, and, under Spanish and Mexican régime, citizens of those countries, and have been declared by the Supreme Court of the United States to be citizens of the United States. Notwithstanding that, they have never exercised their rights of franchise or assumed any of the responsibilities of citizenship. The Indian Bureau has been helping the Indians in their agricultural activities by making loans to them from funds appropriated by Congress.

Upon assuming jurisdiction over the Pueblo Indians the bureau has from time to time employed people as farmers, assistant farmers, agents of the Department of Justice assisting in suppressing the liquor traffic among them, and in a good many instances these employees have persuaded the Indians not only to exert their rights but extending what I consider unwise counsel to them, making them rather bad neighbors to the communities adjoining them, advising them not to obey local authorities and in a good many instances defying the enforcement of the local laws. I have in mind a case where the Indians resisted a posse of the mounted police force of the State of New Mexico who went to their village for the purpose of executing a search warrant for beef hides of stolen cattle that the local authorities knew the Indians had in their houses, and serious trouble was averted only by the interference of people who had influence with the Indians. There should be a perfect cooperation between the United States employees of the Indian Bureau and other Federal officials and State and other local officers in the execution of the law, in order to make the Indians understand that they are wards of the Government, but that their guardian is not going to tolerate any violations of the law on their part. They should be made to understand that they can not steal their neighbor's property and get away from punishment simply because they are wards of the Government.

The people of New Mexico among whom most of these Indians live are a law-abiding and in a good many instances timid people, and have no disposition to interfere with or obstruct the proper administration of rules and regulations of the department.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I think that the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] constitute the most complete indictment of inefficiency that could be brought against the dominant party in this House. After calling this Congress into special session on May 19, the President of the United States came on the floor of this House before a joint session of the House and Senate, on August 10, and pointed out the way by which the high cost of living could be materially reduced. He recommended the immediate passage of legislation that would permit of its reduction, and this House remained in session continuously until about 10 days before December 1, in session day after day with the Republicans in majority and in control of the House, and not a single measure was brought before the House for consideration that would force a decrease in any item in the high cost of living. The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] now brings in a statement of conditions, and who is responsible for those conditions? Who had the right to introduce proper legislation that would force a reduction? The President pointed out the kind of legislation the officers of this Government needed. He showed us exactly what he wanted in the way of legislation. He showed us exactly what this country needed in the way of legislation, and you, my colleagues on the Republican side, have fallen down on your job, and now you come in and criticize conditions for which you alone are responsible.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I am sorry that I have not the time now. Instead of bringing in the requested legislation, instead of doing what the President of the United States asked you to do in behalf of the people of this country, you wasted and frittered away the time of the Congress in passing the pearl-button bill, to take 20 cents out of the pocket of every poor family in this country; you have frittered away the time of this House in passing such bills as the chemical-glass bill, and the surgical-instrument bill, which put $10 tax a head upon every poor medical and surgical student in the whole land. You have frittered away the time of this House in passing such legislation as the tungsten ore and magnesite bills, that put millions of dollars into the pockets of the special few against the interests of the many.

You have frittered away the time of this House in passing measure after measure that puts millions of dollars into the pockets of the rich Republican millionaire manufacturers who furnish the campaign funds to put each one of you in seats here in this House. [Laughter.] And the gentleman from Illinois comes in and criticizes the Attorney General and conditions! Oh, my friends, you may laugh. The distinguished gentleman, my friend from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL], may laugh. He is a powerful man. If he would exert that power in a proper way, if he would as chairman of the great Committee on Rules bring in a rule here making in order legislation that would put upon the statute books a law that would help the Attorney General, you would not have to criticize him. He would do his duty.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. OSBORNE].

THE PEACE TREATY RESERVATIONS.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Chairman, although the House of Representatives has no constitutional responsibility for the terms of the treaty of peace with Germany and the proposed constitution of the league of nations, that responsibility and duty being placed upon the President and the Senate, still every phase of the subject is of absorbing interest to the Members of this body, as it is to all the people of the United States. The treaty and the associated constitution of the league involve the entering into great and far-reaching national engagements by our country with European, Asiatic, and African nations, the ultimate effect and results of which our statesmen are endeavoring to foresee.

The peace treaty and the league of nations have been exhaustively discussed. It is not my intention to attempt to present any new considerations in connection with these important documents; but the proposed 15 reservations thereto, that were approved by a considerable majority of the Senate, have not had such detailed attention, and a brief consideration of each of the reservations in a fair and unbiased way may prove interesting and profitable.

So much bitterness has entered into the discussion of the league of nations that it is difficult for many to approach the subject with open minds or with a feeling that those who disagree with them are honest or sincere in the views that they express. Yet I doubt if any public matter of later years—even that of the war itself—has been approached with greater sincerity and honesty of purpose, on both sides of the question, than that of the league of nations. Different minds, even great minds, view public questions from different angles and reach different conclusions. Some are naturally inclined to one feature of the subject as the all-important and controlling one, while others, equally sincere, magnify the importance of another feature, and so they arrive at different and possibly antagonistic conclusions.

The negotiation of treaties with foreign countries is one of the most important functions of our Government. Upon it always has rested our relations with foreign powers as to friendly intercourse and as to facility and volume of commerce. Of such great consequence are treaties with foreign Governments that the Supreme Court of the United States has declared them "the supreme law of the land." The framers of the Constitution evidently were impressed with their great importance, and intended that they should be entered into with the greatest care, so that when completed they should meet the approval of both the President and the Senate. The language employed by the Constitution is found in paragraph 2, section 2, of Article II of the Constitution, and is as follows:

He—

The President—

shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.

Doubtless it was intended that Senators should be fully informed as to the progress of treaties in the making, and not that they should be confined to giving consent and concurrence after the event. Otherwise the provision for "advice" would have been omitted, as advice would be useless and unavailing after the treaty had reached the point where "consent" and "concurrence" were needed to complete the covenant. Mention is made of this requirement of the active participation of the Senate in the making of treaties to correct the idea held by many that the part of the Senate in this responsible labor is merely perfunctory and confined to a concurrence and consent to engagements already made by the Executive with foreign powers without consideration or advice of the Senate in advance.

PRESIDENTS HAVE RECOGNIZED THE RIGHT AND DUTY OF THE SENATE TO "ADVISE."

That the early Presidents, and all Presidents down to a recent period, entertained no doubt as to the meaning of this provision of the Constitution is made evident by the fact that many of them acted upon no treaties without in advance formally requesting the advice of the Senate.

President Washington went personally to the Senate on August 22, 1779, "to consider the terms of a treaty to be negotiated with the southern Indians." Seven specific questions were submitted to the Senate as to the "proposed negotiations," with a request that each be voted upon by the Senate, which was done.

President Washington is said never to have failed to ask the advice of the Senate as to the negotiation of all treaties during his two terms, whether important or unimportant.

On August 11, 1790, he sent a message to the Senate, in which he said:

On this point, therefore, I state the following precedents and request the advice of the Senate thereon:

First. Is it the judgment of the Senate that overtures shall be made to the Cherokees to arrange a new boundary so as to embrace the settlements made by the white people since the treaty of Hopewell in November, 1785? * * *

Third, Shall the United States stipulate solemnly to guarantee the new boundary which may be arranged?

On January 18, 1792, President Washington addressed the Senate as follows:

I lay before you the communications of a deputation from the Cherokee Nation of Indians now in this city, and I request your advice whether an additional article shall be made to the Cherokee treaty to the following effect, to wit:

"That the sum to be paid annually by the United States to the Cherokee Nation of Indians in consideration of the relinquishment of lands as stated in the treaty made by them on the 2d day of July, 1791, shall be $1,500 instead of $1,000 mentioned in the said treaty."

May 8, 1792, President Washington submitted the two following propositions for the advice of the Senate:

If the President of the United States should conclude a convention or treaty with the Government of Algiers for the ransom of the 13 Americans in captivity there for a sum of not exceeding $40,000, all expenses included, will the Senate approve the same? Or is there any, and what, greater or lesser sum which they would fix on as the limit beyond which they would not approve the ransom?

If the President of the United States should conclude a treaty with the Government of Algiers for the establishment of peace with them at an expense not exceeding $25,000, paid at the signature, and a like sum to be paid annually afterwards during the continuance of the treaty, would the Senate approve the same? Or are there any greater or lesser sums which they would fix on as the limits beyond which they would not approve of such treaty?

President Jackson, under date of May 6, 1830, sought the advice of the Senate concerning a proposed treaty with the Choctaw Indians, by which they offered to cede to the United States all their country east of the Mississippi River. After setting forth the situation and his own disposition to exercise the utmost liberality with the Indians compatible with the interests of the United States, President Jackson said:

With these views I ask the opinion of the Senate upon the following questions:

Will the Senate advise the conclusion of a treaty with the Choctaw Nation according to the terms which they propose? Or will the Senate advise the conclusion of a treaty with that tribe as modified by the alterations suggested by me?

If not, what further alteration or modification will the Senate propose?

On March 16, 1861, President Lincoln communicated with the Senate as follows:

The Senate has transmitted to me a copy of the message sent by my predecessor to that body on the 21st day of February last, proposing to take its advice on the subject of a proposition made by the British Government through its minister here, to refer the matter in controversy between that Government and the Government of the United States to the arbitrament of the King of Sweden and Norway, the King of the Netherlands, or the Republic of the Swiss Confederation.

In that message my predecessor stated that he wished to submit to the Senate the precise questions following, namely:

Will the Senate approve a treaty referred to either of the foreign powers above named in the dispute now existing between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain concerning the boundary line between Vancouver Island and the American Continent? In case the referee shall find himself unable to decide where the line is by the description of it in the treaty of the 15th June, 1846, shall he be authorized to establish a line according to the treaty as nearly as possible? Which of the three powers named by Great Britain as an arbiter shall be chosen by the United States?

I find no reason to disapprove of the course of my predecessor in this important matter; but, on the contrary, I not only shall receive the advice of the Senate therein cheerfully, but I respectfully ask the Senate for their advice on the three questions before recited.

The predecessor of President Lincoln referred to was President Buchanan. His views on the subject had been stated while Secretary of State, in 1846, in instructions given to Mr. McLean, minister to Great Britain, as follows:

The Federal Constitution has made the Senate to a certain extent a coordinate branch of the treaty-making power. Without their advice and consent no treaty can be concluded. This power could not be intrusted to wiser or better hands. Besides in their legislative character they constitute a portion of the war-making as in their executive capacity they compose a part of the treaty-making power. * * * A rejection of the British ultimatum might possibly lead to war, and as a branch of the legislative power it would be incumbent upon them to authorize the necessary preparations to render this war successful. Under these considerations the President, in deference to the Senate and to the true theory of the constitutional responsibilities of the different branches of the Government, will forego his own opinion so far as to submit to that body any proposition which may be made by the British Government not, in his judgment, wholly inconsistent with the rights and honor of the country.

President Johnson, on January 15, 1869, asked the advice of the Senate concerning the proposed naturalization treaty with Great Britain.

President Grant communicated to the Senate May 18, 1872, as follows:

I transmit herewith the correspondence which has recently taken place respecting the differences of opinion which have arisen between this Government and that of Great Britain with regard to the powers of the tribunal of arbitration created under the treaty signed at Washington May 8, 1871.

I respectfully invite the attention of the Senate to the proposed article submitted by the British Government with the object of removing the differences which seem to threaten the prosecution of the arbitration, and request an expression by the Senate of their disposition in regard to advising and consenting to the formal adoption of an article such as is proposed by the British Government.

The Senate is aware that consultation with that body in advance of entering into agreements with foreign States has many precedents. In the early days of the Republic General Washington repeatedly asked their advice upon pending questions with such powers. The most important recent precedent is that of the Oregon boundary treaty in 1846.

President Arthur, on June 9, 1884, submitted to the Senate in advance of any negotiations a proposal from the ruler of the Hawaiian Islands to extend the reciprocity agreement then in force for a period of seven years.

In recent years proposed treaties have often been dealt with by the Presidents in annual or general messages instead of special messages, and the whole matter opened in that way for general discussion between the President and the Senate for a complete understanding.

Considering the plain language of the Constitution and the practice of Presidents for more than a century in recognizing the right and duty of the Senate to participate in the making of treaties, so far at least as to be enabled to "advise," can the Senators be blamed for carrying out their constitutional duty when the belated opportunity is finally accorded them?

On the day that each Senator enters upon his official duties he takes a solemn oath before the Senate and the people assembled in the galleries, administered by the Vice President, that he will defend and sustain the Constitution "without mental reservation or secret evasion." Can Senators avoid the full performance of a duty plainly enjoined upon them by the Constitution itself? The question supplies its own answer.

It is to be noted that while more than a majority of the Senators would have amended the covenant of the league of nations and the treaty of peace if they had had the opportunity to do so before it was finally acted upon by the peace conference at Versailles, in one particular or another, they refrained from doing so when the treaty finally reached them, out of deference to the wishes of the President and of respect for the dignity of his high office, and in conformity with their desire to do nothing that would unnecessarily defer the final declaration of peace throughout the world.

They were constrained, however, to place such reservations in the resolutions of ratification as were by them deemed necessary to preserve the sovereignty of the United States over its own affairs, to safeguard the vital interests of the Nation, and to prevent the entanglement of our country in European and Asiatic wars in which we would have none but a remote interest, if any at all.

RESERVATIONS TO TREATIES ARE NOT UNCOMMON.

Many speak of reservations in treaties as though they were a new thing in diplomatic history. Such is far from being the truth. Treaties are often framed which embrace something which fails to meet the approval of the Senate. It is frequently inconvenient to reject the treaty so formed in its entirety and resort is had to a reservation in the act of ratification as to the particular point or points to which objection is had. This is held to be as valid and effective as though the treaty itself had been amended in the original text.

A compilation of such treaty reservations was made in Senate Document No. 135, Sixty-sixth Congress, first session, which enumerates among others the following treaty reservations made in the resolutions of ratification:

January 9, 1883: Treaty of peace, amity, commerce, and navigation with Korea, concluded May 22, 1882. Resolution recites that "It is the understanding of the Senate in agreeing to the foreging resolution that the clause 'nor are they permitted to transport native produce from one open port to another open port,' in article 6 of said treaty, is not intended to prohibit and does not prohibit American ships from going from one open port to another open port in Korea, or Chosen, to receive Korean cargo for exportation or to discharge foreign cargo."

Second reservation: "That the Senate in advising and consenting to the treaty does not admit or acquiesce in any right or constitutional powers in the President to authorize or empower any person to negotiate treaties * * * unless such person shall have been appointed for such purpose or clothed with such power by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

January 11, 1892, general act for the repression of the African slave trade, signed July 2, 1890.

Mr. Sherman * * * reported it without amendment, accompanied by the following resolution:

"Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the general act signed at Brussels July 2, 1890, by the plenipotentiaries of the United States and other powers, for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for other purposes.

"Resolved further, That the Senate advise and consent to the acceptance of the partial ratification of the said general act on the part of the French Republic, and to the stipulations relative to the same."

Second. "That the United States of America, having neither possessions nor protectorates in Africa, hereby disclaims any intention in ratifying this treaty, to indicate any interest whatsoever in the possessions or protectorates established or claimed on that continent by the other powers, or any approval of the wisdom, expediency, or lawfulness thereof, and does not join in any expressions in the said general act which might be construed as such a declaration or acknowledgment, and for these reasons that it is desirable that a copy of this resolution be inserted in the protocol to be drawn up at the time of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty on the part of the United States."

March 8, 1892.—Supplementary Industrial Convention, concluded April 15, 1892: "That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of protocols 3 and 4, signed at Madrid April 15, 1891, by the United States and other powers, amendatory to the convention of March 20, 1883, for the protection of industrial property, subject to the reservation of the plenipotentiary of the United States in the international conference for the protection of industrial property at Madrid, as follows:

"The share allotted to the United States to contribute to the donation of the international bureau is not to be augmented until the Congress of the United States shall have approved the augmentation.

"That articles 3 and 4 of the fourth protocol shall not go beyond what shall be established by the legislation of the United States."

December 12, 1906.—Algeciras convention of 1906: "That the Senate understands that the participation of the United States in the Algeciras conference and in the formation and adoption of the general act and protocol which resulted therefrom was with the sole purpose of preserving and increasing its commerce in Morocco, the protection as to life, liberty, and property of its citizens residing or traveling therein, and of aiding by its friendly offices and efforts in removing friction and controversy which seemed to menace the peace between powers signatory with the United States to the treaty of 1880, all of which are on terms of amity with this Government; and without purpose to depart from the traditional American foreign policy, which forbids participation by the United States in the settlement of political questions which are entirely European in their scope."

April 2, 1908.—Convention for the settlement of international disputes, signed at The Hague, 1907: "Nothing contained in this convention shall be so construed as to require the United States of America to depart from its traditional policy of not intruding upon, interfering with, or entangling itself in the political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign State; nor shall anything contained in the said convention be construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions."

Second reservation: "That the United States approves this convention with the understanding that recourse to the permanent court for the settlement of differences can be had only by agreement thereto through general or special treaties of arbitration heretofore or hereafter concluded between the parties in dispute; and the United States now exercises the option contained in article 53 of said convention to exclude the formulation of the 'compromis' by the permanent court, and hereby excludes from the competence of the permanent court the power to frame the 'compromis' required by general or special treaties of arbitration concluded or hereafter to be concluded by the United States, and further expressly declares that the 'compromis' required by any treaty of arbitration to which the United States may be a party shall be settled only by agreement between the contracting parties, unless such treaty shall expressly provide otherwise."

April 17, 1908.—Convention concluded at the second Hague peace conference, held at The Hague, 1907, concerning the rights and duties of neutral powers in naval war: "Reserving and excluding, however, Article XXIII thereof, which is in the following words:

"'A neutral power may allow prizes to enter its ports and roadsteads, whether under convoy or not, when they are brought there to be sequestrated pending the decision of a prize court. It may have the prize taken to another of its ports.

"'If the prize is not under convoy, the prize crew are left at liberty.'

"Resolved further, That the United States adheres to this convention with the understanding that the last clause of Article III implies the duty of a neutral power to make the demand therein mentioned for the return of a ship captured within the neutral jurisdiction and no longer within the jurisdiction."

April 17, 1908.—Convention respecting the employment of force for the recovery of contract debts, signed at The Hague, 1907: "The United States approves this convention with the understanding that recourse to the permanent court for the settlement of the differences referred to in said convention can be had only by agreement thereto through general or special treaties of arbitration heretofore or hereafter concluded between the parties in dispute."

May 22, 1908.—Extradition convention with Portugal, signed May 7, 1908: "In giving this advice and consent to the ratification of the said treaty and as a part of the act of ratification the Senate understands that it is agreed by the United States that no person charged with crime shall be extraditable from Portugal upon whom the death penalty can be inflicted for the offense charged by the laws of the jurisdiction in which the charge is pending, and that this agreement on the part of the United States will be mentioned in the ratifications of the treaty and will, in effect, form part of the treaty."

March 3, 1909.—Ship-canal treaty with Panama, signed January 9, 1909: "Resolved as a part of this ratification that the United States approves the treaty between the United States and Panama with the understanding that, so far as the United States is concerned, no question shall be submitted to arbitration herein provided for which in any way affects the vital interests of the United States in the protection, operation, maintenance, sanitation, and protection of the Panama Canal."

May 6, 1909.—Agreement with Russia regulating the position of corporations and other commercial associations, signed June 25, 1904: "The Senate advises and consents to the ratification of the said agreement with the understanding that the regulations referred to in the third paragraph in the agreement as existing in the several countries refer to and include on the part of the United States the regulations established by and under the authority of the several States of the Union."

March 7, 1912.—Arbitration treaty with Great Britain, signed August 3, 1912: "Provided, That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the said treaty with the understanding, to be made part of such ratification, that the treaty does not authorize the submission to arbitration of any question which affects the admission of aliens to the educational institutions of the several States, or the territorial integrity of the several States or of the United States, or concerning the question of the alleged indebtedness or moneyed obligation of any State of the United States, or any question which depends upon or involves the maintenance of the traditional attitude of the United States concerning American questions, commonly described as the Monroe doctrine, or other purely governmental policy."

January 22, 1913.—International wireless telegraph convention, concluded July 5, 1912: "The Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the radiotelegraphic convention signed at London on July 5, 1912, with the final protocol and service regulations connected therewith: Provided, That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of said convention with the understanding, to be expressed as a part of the instrument of ratification, that nothing in the ninth article of the regulations affixed to the convention shall be deemed to exclude the United States from the execution of her inspection laws upon vessels entering or clearing from her ports."

February 19, 1913.—Convention signed at Paris on January 17, 1913, modifying the international sanitary convention of December 3, 1903: "The Senate advise and consent to the ratification of a convention between the United States and other powers, signed at Paris on January 17, 1913, modifying the international sanitary convention of December 3, 1903: Provided, That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of said convention with the understanding, to be expressed as a part of the instrument of ratification, that nothing contained in article 9 thereof shall be deemed to prevent the United States from carrying out any special quarantine measures against the infection of its ports which might be demanded by unusual sanitary conditions."

Sufficient evidence has here been shown that reservations to treaties and conventions are neither new nor unusual. The Senate has never hesitated to adopt such reservations to treaties presented to that body by the President whenever a sufficient number of its Members deemed such reservations essential or desirable to preserve and protect the interests of the United States and its citizens, and the language employed has often been so clear and emphatic as to appear brusque.

Let us take a glance at the reservations proposed to the treaty of peace with Germany and undertake to analyze them so far as we are able, to ascertain whether or not they are simply mischievous, or whether they are necessary or desirable to protect and safeguard our country and our people.

I hold in my hand a complete copy of the proposed treaty of peace with Germany, which includes the covenant of the league of nations. You will observe that it is a substantial volume of 194 pages, and embraces 440 separate articles, each article embracing one or more subjects. In its scope it seeks to effect substantial changes in the government of all the great nations of the world and in the relations of the separate nations to each other. Indirectly it influences all the neutral nations. Thus it affects in some degree all the nations and all the peoples of the earth. When it is reflected that this enormously powerful and far-reaching treaty—the most important document of its kind in the history of the world in its probable effect upon mankind, voluminous in detail as it is in general principles—was not presented to the American Senate for perusal or consideration until after it had been completed in its present form in the councils of the world's predominant powers at the peace conference at Versailles—councils which were to a large degree secret in their character, and in which numerous secret treaties were unveiled for the first time—is it not remarkable that the Senate should have found so few reservations to the 440 articles of the treaty sufficiently serious to command a majority vote of the Senate?

At this point permit me to state my own convictions upon this momentous subject. The House of Representatives, unlike the United States Senate, has no part in the making of treaties, and its Members have no greater responsibility in regard thereto than has any other citizen. Many years before the Great War I was much interested in plans for the prevention of war, and became a member of the League to Enforce Peace, of which former President William H. Taft was the presiding officer. I believed then and believe now that some plan of organization of the great nations offers the means by which this most beneficent result might be attained. In 1911, when Mr. Taft was President, he made a great speech upon this subject at a banquet given to him in my home city of Los Angeles, to which I listened with absorbing interest. So when the present war ended I was much in favor of some combination of the nations which won the war that should perform the twofold purpose of fixing the terms of closing this war and of preventing entirely or of minimizing the chances of future wars. A league of nations as such, or by whatever name it might be called, commended itself to me.

Immediately preceding his first trip to Europe, in early December, 1918, President Wilson appeared before a joint session of the two Houses of Congress, at which I was present, and it was supposed that he would set forth somewhat fully the nature of the league of nations which he would propose to the peace conference at Paris. He did not, however, give any definite idea of what form the proposed league would take, and it is quite probable that at that time he had not formulated more than a general plan of the organization, with little or no detail as to its scope and activities.

It was not until February 14, 1919, that much further information was given as to the league, on which day the draft of the proposed "constitution of the league of nations" was presented to the peace conference through President Wilson, chairman of the committee in charge.

When published this constitution was found to contain several provisions that would bear particularly hard upon the United States and calling for sacrifices of sovereignty and giving pledges of resources, finance, and man power to protect foreign nations that many American statesmen and publicists of the different political parties regarded as unnecessary to accomplish the purpose of preserving the peace of the world and in excess of the benefits to be obtained by the people of the world, and especially by our own people. To the members of the Senate and House Committees on Foreign Affairs the President, at a dinner given at the White House in early March, 1919, in reply to a question of one of the legislators, who had asked him if the objectionable feature of the "constitution" could not be amended to cover the defects, replied that they could not.

However, upon the return of the President to Paris later the proposed "constitution" was amended materially, and many of its articles were redrawn in different language, and in some cases greatly modified. The title was changed from "constitution" to "the covenant of the league of nations."

My intense desire to have war made impossible, if such can be done by human agency, has kept me a consistent advocate of a league of nations, the only agency now under consideration with that end in view. My personal experience as a soldier when a boy in the closing months of the Civil War made me a lifelong hater of war. The horrors of the great European struggle through which the world has just passed, in which the inconceivable number of 7,000,000 men lost their lives, and in which there were casualties of nearly 20,000,000 of men, and which has resulted in a world madness—a sort of universal hysteria or insanity—has deeply confirmed my horror of war. So with all its faults I have been an advocate of the league of nations. I say "with all its faults," for I have not been oblivious to its faults, and I have hoped to see them corrected. When I was home for two months at the end of the Sixty-fifth Congress, in March, April, and May, 1919, I spoke before various organizations in Los Angeles 39 times—nearly every time on the subject of the league of nations, that I deemed at the time of the highest importance to the people and to the country. I pointed out some of the features of the first "constitution" that I thought ought to be amended in justice to our own country. In general, these amendments applied to articles that placed the constitution of the league of nations over the Constitution of the United States; that would substitute the council of the league of nations for the Congress of the United States in declarations of war and in providing armies and moneys, involving heavy Federal taxation to carry on the purposes of the league; for giving sweeping and undefined pledges to preserve the territorial integrity and political independence of all members of the league, and for avoidance of those pledges that would tend to throw America into an international supernation, where international rules and laws, formulated mainly by European and Asiatic foreigners, would supersede and be superior to the laws and rules adopted by Americans elected by the people for that purpose in the conduct of their own country and its affairs.

As I have stated, an attempt was made in the several drafts of the constitution of the league of nations, now known as the "covenant," to correct some of these defects. The changes were not altogether successful, and did not fully accomplish the purpose. In one important instance, indeed the most important one of all, namely, article 10, no change whatever was made. This is the article which pledges all the nation signatories to preserve the territorial integrity of all members of the league against external aggression, and in case of any such aggression or any threat or danger of such aggression, gives authority to the council of the league to "advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled." This solemn commitment is doubtless the most serious of any connected with the league, and is the one which is most portentous in its possibilities and even its probabilities. That there will be external aggression against the territorial integrity of some of the nations in the future as there have been in the past is most probable. The nature and causes of those aggressions we do not know; but, regardless of their causes or merits, and without reference to whether they may have the approval or disapproval of the people of the United States, we would have pledged ourselves in advance by this article to fulfill this obligation by such means as the council of the league shall advise. That means might take the course of a national boycott and nonintercourse, or it might require us to furnish such a quota of troops and money for war supplies as the council might deem equitable, considering our population and financial resources. The council, it should be remembered, would have one American representative and one representative each of eight foreign nations.

I occasionally meet men who say, "Well, I presume that the league covenant is defective; but even so, let us give it a trial, anyway. If we find it does not work, we can find some way of getting out of it." This attitude is a very general one, but it is not sound. When we once get in, good faith requires that we stand up to our national agreements, no matter how repugnant may be the duties imposed upon us, until such time as we can withdraw in strict conformity to the instrument itself.

When individuals are entering into contracts with each other their legal representatives are most careful to set forth clearly and concisely what each party to the contract is to do, and to make such conditions and reservations as will protect the parties to the contract from being called upon later to do things not contemplated by them when the contract was signed. In a great contract binding our Nation to the other nations of the world, involving the possible and even probable calling of our young men into military service in distant countries, the commandeering of our national resources, and even the sovereignty of our Nation itself in matters which we now regard as purely our own, how much more important is it that the contract or covenant should be so perfected before signing that we may, without detriment to the peace treaty itself, avoid unnecessary national sacrifices, as well as subsequent disputes and quarrels with other nations as to the meaning of the obligations which we have assumed? Is it not far better to have these interpretations and reservations, as to the merits of which most of our people are agreed, made now before the treaty is signed, even though it may have occasioned a little present disappointment to our national associates and cause delay, rather than to leave them to future misunderstandings and disputes and probably to charges against us of bad faith and failure to meet national obligations?

My own idea is that perfect frankness in advance is the better and safer course. Therefore, while I favor the league of nations, I also favor full reservations upon all points as to which in the future would probably arise questions as to the commitments and obligations of the United States.

Let us consider these reservations in their numerical order. They are called the Lodge reservations, and they were favorably reported to the Senate by the Committee on Foreign Relations.

RESERVATION NO. 1—REQUIRING AFFIRMATIVE CONSENT OF THREE POWERS.

This reservation has been called the "preamble" to the other reservations and provides that they are to be made a part and a condition of the resolution of ratification, and that as such they must be accepted by an exchange of notes by at least three of the four principal allied and associated powers, to wit: Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan.

The principal, if not the only objection that has been raised to this reservation, is to the requirement of the assent of three of the four allied powers. A treaty is a contract between two or more nations. If the terms of the contract are agreed to it does not seem unreasonable that at least a majority of the principal parties should say so. It probably would be possible to modify this reservation, however, without imparing its value.

The reservation in full is as follows:

The reservations and understandings adopted by the Senate are to be made a part and a condition of the resolution of ratification, which ratification is not to take effect or bind the United States until the said reservations and understandings adopted by the Senate have been accepted by an exchange of notes as a part and a condition of said resolution of ratification by at least three of the four principal allied and associated powers, to wit: Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan.

RESERVATION NO. 2—CONDITIONS AS TO WITHDRAWAL FROM LEAGUE.

The United States so understands and construes article 1 that in case of notice of withdrawal from the league of nations, as provided in said article, the United States shall be the sole judge as to whether all its international obligations and all its obligations under the said covenant have been fulfilled, and notice of withdrawal by the United States may be given by a concurrent resolution of the Congress of the United States.

This reservation is intended to qualify the last paragraph of article 1 of the covenant of the league of nations, which reads as follows:

Any member of the league may, after two years notice of its intention to do so, withdraw from the league: Provided, That all its international obligations and all its obligations under this covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal.

The reservation, it will be noted, in the event that the United States should desire to withdraw from the league, does not leave the question whether its obligations have been fulfilled to the foreign nations composing the council of the league, but determines for itself that question. Very likely we would not wish to withdraw; but if we did we would not wish to be halted by the raising of the question by the representative of a foreign nation that we had failed of a technical, or even what another nation might think a real, obligation. It is not easy to raise in America a valid objection to this reservation. On the contrary, it may if made operative prove a great benefit to us—possibly save us a war—in the future.

One objection made to this reservation is that the notice is to be given "by a concurrent resolution of the Congress"—a concurrent resolution not requiring the signature of the President. A joint resolution does. If Congress should wish to withdraw there can hardly be conceived a condition in which the President would not be of the same mind, and still that possibility remains. In a matter of foreign policy so important as this, it would seem that the President should have a voice and that a joint resolution would be better.

RESERVATION NO. 3—IN REGARD TO GUARANTEEING TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY.

This reservation has to do with the much-discussed article 10, and is the one upon which the widest difference exists. Article 10 reads as follows:

The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggresion the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

The reservation (No. 3), which applies solely to the foregoing article 10, is as follows:

The United States assumes no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country, or to interfere in controversies between nations—whether members of the league or not—under the provisions of article 10, or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States under any article of the treaty for any purpose, unless in any particular case the Congress, which, under the Constitution, has the sole power to declare war or authorize the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, shall by act or joint resolution so provide.

This reservation is the most sweeping of any, as it applies to an article which is deemed the most dangerous of any in the covenant. It involves the most serious undertaking of preserving the present territorial boundaries of all the signatory nations—just as they are to-day. As the peace treaty itself, of which the league of nations covenant is a part, changes the territorial boundaries of nearly, if not all, the countries engaged in the war, it seems an enormous contract to keep them just where they have so recently been established—in fact, where they are not yet, but will be established upon the adoption of the treaty. While the reservation disclaims the obligation to underwrite the territorial integrity of all the nations of the world, still it would permit Congress to provide for such action, involving the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, in any particular case.

It is probable that the fate of the peace treaty and of the league of nations, so far as the United States is concerned, hinges on this article 10 and the reservation thereto. As to all the other reservations, some of them are not seriously objected to; others could undoubtedly be modified and compromised—even the preamble which appears as reservation No. 1; but this reservation No. 3 to article 10 is the most difficult of all. There is a direct collision of ideas on article 10 between the President and a large majority of the Senators. The President says that the elimination of article 10 kills the treaty. The Senators say that article 10 in the treaty without reservation endangers the Republic; forces foreign wars upon the country without the voice or approval of Congress or of the people. This is a fair statement of the nature of the differences and shows the difficulty of compromise. It will require considerable concessions on both sides to reach a common conclusion.

RESERVATION NO. 4—MANDATES.

This is upon the subject of mandates. The first constitution of the league of nations provided that the league might assign to member nations "mandatories" to assume charge of "backward peoples," having reference to their relations with such "backward" countries as to geographical situation, experience, and financial resources. No option was provided for the nation so selected. Under this mandatory system it was generally understood that the United States would be assigned as mandatory of Armenia. So much opposition was expressed in this country to a compulsory mandatory that in the second draft of the constitution the mandatory was made subject to assent by the insertion of the language, "and who are willing to accept it." The reservation on the subject leaves the acceptance of a mandatory by the United States subject to the action of Congress. The language of the reservation is as follows:

No mandate shall be accepted by the United States under article 22, part 1, or any other provision of the treaty of peace with Germany, except by action of the Congress of the United States.

RESERVATION NO. 5—QUESTIONS WITHIN DOMESTIC JURISDICTION.

This reservation is to reserve to the United States decision on all questions of domestic jurisdiction, defining what some of such questions are. Article 20 of the covenant of the league provides that the council shall, upon the complaint of any nation member, take up any dispute or disagreement between nations, and hear and decide such questions, and provides the process for so doing. The article is quite a long one, and the only reference that it makes to excepting question of a domestic nature is in the following paragraph:

If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them and is found by the council to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the council shall so report, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement.

The reservation reserves to the United States the right to decide what questions are within its domestic jurisdiction, and defines some of these questions, as follows:

The United States reserves to itself exclusively the right to decide what questions are within its domestic jurisdiction, and declares that all domestic and political questions relating wholly or in part to its internal affairs, including immigration, labor, coastwise traffic, the tariff, commerce, the suppression of traffic in women and children and in opium and other dangerous drugs, and all other domestic questions, are solely within the jurisdiction of the United States, and are not under this treaty to be submitted in any way either to arbitration or to the consideration of the council or of the assembly of the league of nations, or any agency thereof, or to the decision or recommendation of any other power.

A unique feature entered into the discussion of this reservation. There was read into the RECORD an article from the October number of the University Magazine, of Montreal, written by Sir Andrew MacPhael, a distinguished Canadian publicist, editor of the magazine referred to and of the Canadian Medical Journal; a veteran of the European war and a major of the Canadian medical corps. The article, which was evidently written in entire good faith, pointed out the fact that Canada had no outlet to the Atlantic Ocean and was greatly disadvantaged thereby. The only way to overcome this was to obtain a strip through the State of Maine to the ocean, and a map of the 8,000 square miles of the territory of Maine that would be required was made a part of the article. Sir Andrew pointed out how this territory could lawfully be acquired from the United States in the following language:

There is a way out. It is to be found in the league of nations. If it is not found therein, then that instrument has no force, and its signatories no sincerity. According to article 19, "the assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by members of the league of treaties which have become inapplicable, and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world." Whatever the status of Canada may in the future be, its existence will depend upon the outcome of this issue. The issue, then, is large enough to warrant an extended examination. It is nothing less than the relations in the past, at the present, and in the future between the United States and the British Empire, which many wise men on both sides are now considering.

RESERVATION NO. 6—THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The covenant of the league contains the following reference to the Monroe doctrine:

Nothing in this covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings, like the Monroe doctrine, for securing and maintenance of peace.

Many maintain that this reference is entirely inadequate and misleading; that the Monroe doctrine is not a "regional understanding" at all; that it is a national policy of long standing, and is not to be passed upon in any way by any power excepting the United States Government. The reservation is as follows:

The United States will not submit to arbitration or to inquiry by the assembly or by the council of the league of nations, provided for in said treaty of peace, any questions which in the judgment of the United States depend upon or relate to its long-established policy commonly known as the Monroe doctrine; said doctrine is to be interpreted by the United States alone and is hereby declared to be wholly outside the jurisdiction of said league of nations and entirely unaffected by any provision contained in the said treaty of peace with Germany.

RESERVATION NO. 7—THE SHANTUNG QUESTION.

This reservation reads as follows:

The United States withholds its assent to articles 156, 157, and 158, and reserves full liberty of action with respect to any controversy which may arise under said articles between the Republic of China and the Empire of Japan.

The articles of the treaty referred to—156, 157, and 158—are those which transfer the Chinese Province of Shantung to Japan. The reservation withholds the approval of the United States from that unjust award and reserves full liberty of action in the future.

The remaining reservations—Nos. 8 to 15, inclusive—apply to methods of procedure under the organization of the council, the league of nations, and the boards and commissions that are to be formed thereunder. Largely they are for the guidance of the United States alone, but are of such a character that the members of the league should be informed that these methods have been adopted.

RESERVATION NO. 8—APPOINTMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The Congress of the United States will provide by law for the appointment of the representatives of the United States in the assembly and the council of the league of nations, and may in its discretion provide for the participation of the United States in any commission, committee, tribunal, court, council, or conference, or in the selection of any members thereof, and for the appointment of members of said commissions, committees, tribunals, courts, councils, or conferences, or any other representatives under the treaty of peace, or in carrying out its provisions, and until such participation and appointment have been so provided for and the powers and duties of such representatives have been so defined by law no person shall represent the United States under either said league of nations or the treaty of peace with Germany or be authorized to perform any act for or on behalf of the United States thereunder, and no citizen of the United States shall be selected or appointed as a member of said commissions, committees, tribunals, courts, councils, or conferences, except with the approval of the Senate of the United States.

RESERVATION NO. 9—TRADE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GERMANY.

The United States understands that the reparation commission will regulate or interfere with exports from the United States to Germany or from Germany to the United States only when the United States, by act or joint resolution of Congress, approves such regulation or interference.

RESERVATION NO. 10—FUNDS FOR LEAGUE TO BE PROPERLY APPROPRIATED.

The United States shall not be obligated to contribute to any expenses of the league of nations, or of the secretariat, or of any commission or committee or conference or other agency organized under the league of nations or under the treaty or for the purpose of carrying out the treaty provisions unless and until an appropriation of funds available for such expenses shall have been made by the Congress of the United States.

RESERVATION NO. 11—LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS.

If the United States shall at any time adopt any plan for the limitation of armaments proposed by the council of the league of nations under the provisions of article 8, it reserves the right to increase such armaments without the consent of the council whenever the United States is threatened with invasion or engaged in war.

RESERVATION NO. 12—RELATIONS OF CITIZENS OF COVENANT-BREAKING STATE.

The United States reserves the right to permit, in its discretion, the nationals of a covenant-breaking State, as defined in article 16 of the covenant of the league of nations, residing within the United States or in countries other than that violating said article 16, to continue their commercial, financial, and personal relations with the nationals of the United States.

RESERVATION NO. 13—PROTECTION OF CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Nothing in articles 296, 297, or in any of the annexes thereto or in any other article, section or annex of the treaty of peace with Germany shall, as against citizens of the United States, be taken to mean any confirmation, ratification or approval of any act otherwise illegal or in contravention of the rights of citizens of the United States.

RESERVATION NO. 14—WITHHOLDING ASSENT TO PARTICIPATION IN CERTAIN COMMISSIONS.

The United States withholds its assent to Part XIII (articles 387 to 427, inclusive) unless Congress by act or joint resolution shall hereafter make provision for representation in the organization established by said Part XIII, and in such event the participation of the United States will be governed and conditioned by the provisions of such act or joint resolution.

RESERVATION NO. 15—NOT BOUND BY DECISION REACHED WHERE ONE NATION HAS MORE THAN ONE VOTE.

The United States assumes no obligation to be bound by any election, decision, report, or finding of the council or assembly in which any member of the league and its self-governing dominions, colonies, or parts of empire, in the aggregate have cast more than one vote, and assumes no obligation to be bound by any decision, report, or finding of the council or assembly arising out of any dispute between the United States and any member of the league if such member, or any self-governing dominion, colony, empire, or part of empire united with it politically has voted.

Thus we have briefly traversed the reservations that were adopted by the Senate by a majority vote, the votes on the different reservations ranging from 48 to 60 Senators for, to 35 to 40 against. Throughout the voting there was a very full attendance of Senators, several of the votes showing 95 of the 96 Members present and voting, the only vote missing being that of the deceased Senator from Virginia.

The natural question arises, what will become of the treaty and the league of nations, so far as the United States is concerned.

For my own part, I sincerely hope that good judgment may prevail; that the President and the Senators of all States of the Union may take friendly counsel together; and that, with proper safeguards that will prevent the United States from becoming involved in all the quarrels of Europe, the treaty of peace and the covenant of the league of nations will be adopted. A modification of the language in some of the reservations might be made without impairing their value as safeguards. A war-weary world desires no more wars, with their ghastly accompaniment of bloodshed, destruction, and death. I have little confidence that the league of nations is a universal panacea, but I believe that it would help, and I would like to see it tried if it can be done without our own country sacrificing its nationality and taking upon its shoulders all the burdens of all the peoples and nations of the world.

With the blessing of God our country has grown great and powerful in the 140 years of its existence by following public policies that commended themselves to the fathers and defenders of the Republic, which were approved and adopted by the people. These policies embraced friendliness to all nations and an avoidance of such intimacies and alliances with any as should impede or embarrass our control of our own country and its policies. Let us not drift too far from that aspiration. Let us renew our allegiance to the most lofty of American ideals. Let us especially emphasize and practice universal and unwavering respect for and obedience to law, and let us sternly put down all violations of law, especially those of mob violence, lynchings of colored or other people without trial, acts of sabotage and murder to effect political results, such as the overturning of our Government in order to effect a condition of anarchy. Let us set our faces against all forms of class government, whether it be of plutocracy or proletariat. And let us try to keep our Government and people in the highway of respect for God and his laws and for the laws of our country and a just and fair consideration of the rights of all our own people and of all the peoples and nations of the earth.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I make a similar request.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I submit the same request.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request made by the gentlemen to extend their remarks in the RECORD? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to compliment the present chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, first, on having given in his report some very valuable information for the House, and, second, on his ability and arduous labor in actually bringing about a reduction in the amounts carried in this bill, although I do not agree that the reduction is as great as the report seems to indicate, and that I will discuss in a few moments.

Both the information given and the reduction brought about were made possible by an investigation authorized in the Indian appropriation act of last year. This was but a continuation of an investigation started by a similar resolution carried in the act of 1916, but which investigation was cut short on account of the war, and the Indian Committee was precluded from pursuing the matter further at that time.

I had introduced a resolution for this investigation, and this resolution was copied into the Indian appropriation bill of 1916, heretofore mentioned. The same paragraph was carried in the act of the current fiscal year and under its provisions the investigation has been conducted. On two different occasions your committee proposed this same paragraph to the Indian bill and urged the importance of its acceptance by the House, but over the urgent protest of myself and several other members of the committee, including the present chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL], the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS], the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TILLMAN], and various others, Members of the House, felt called upon to make a point of order against this good, wholesome proposition.

There could have been no politics in the defeat of the proposition, for at one time the point of order was made on the majority side and the other time on the minority side; therefore both sides of the House were equally responsible for the discontinuation of the investigation.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman from Oklahoma also introduced a resolution before the Committee on Rules, and the minority members of that committee endeavored to get a report upon it and get it out, but it was killed in the committee.

Mr. CARTER. That is correct. My resolution was presented to the committee; and several persons, both minority and majority members, including myself, appeared before the committee and urged the importance of its passage, but the Committee on Rules failed to give us a rule for the passage of the resolution and it failed.

My friend from Kansas, of course, understands that this obstacle could have been obviated and the investigation continued at any time if the House, in its wisdom, would have permitted us to pass this item which was carried in these two appropriation bills and which was prevented on one occasion by a Democrat and once by a Republican. So, when all is said and done, I think it will be admitted that whatever reduction was made in this bill was made possible on account of the continuation of the investigation and would not have been possible but for such investigation.

I have called attention to these facts for two purposes: First, to show that those of us who represent the minority on the Indian Committee are as much responsible for these reductions as anyone else, and, second, to further demonstrate that it is usually safe and wise to trust the Indian Committee of the House with the investigation of any matter it seeks to look into, because the investigations conducted by that committee during the 13 years I have served upon it have always been of a nonpartisan character. The investigations have been fair; they have been impartial; and out of them have always come in the past, as has come now, improvement in the service and the possibility of making some reduction and relieving the Treasury of unnecessary burdens.

Again, while I congratulate my friend the present chairman of the committee in giving the House valuable information and upon making an actual reduction in the charge on the Federal Treasury, I must take issue with him on one statement made by him this morning. This statement perhaps was made inadvertently and hurriedly and not with the seriousness with which I think the House accepted same.

My friend stated that the bill of 1913 carried only about $9,000,000, while the actual amount carried by that bill was about nine and a half million dollars; but that is not the point I wish to bring out.

Since the gentleman from New York has been chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs he has had his reports set forth the amount carried in the Indian appropriation bill in quite a different manner from that carried by former chairmen. As the House knows, the amounts carried in the Indian bill come under four heads: First, gratuity; second, reimbursable; third, treaty items; and fourth, appropriations from tribal funds. The items under the heads gratuity, reimbursable, and treaty are a direct charge upon the Treasury, but it must be remembered that those coming under the head tribal funds are appropriations made from the funds of the different tribes held in trust by the Federal Government, and are no charge at all upon the Federal Treasury.

The reports filed by the present chairman of the committee on both occasions have included not only the first three items but the item of tribal funds, while all reports previous to the gentleman's incumbency, including the report of 1913, did not include the tribal-funds item, because it was not an actual tax upon the Treasury. Now, the fact is that during the year to which this act applies about $4,000,000 was spent from tribal funds, which was not set out in the committee report on the 1913 bill at all. If this report on the 1913 bill had carried any reference to the amount appropriated from tribal funds which is not a tax upon the Treasury, but what is carried in the report on the present bill, then the 1913 bill would have aggregated some thirteen and one-half million dollars.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. I yield.

Mr. SNYDER. The chairman of the committee desires to state that these figures that he has given in the report, running from 1910 to 1920, were given to him by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at his request that he give him the total amount of the appropriations used by that office.

Mr. CARTER. I had supposed the gentleman got his information from that source, and it is very natural for that mistake to occur. For this reason, so far as an appropriation per se is concerned—that is, so far as the money appropriated was a tax upon the Treasury—I take it that the commissioner's statement is in the main correct, for that is about what is cited by the committee report as appropriated from the Federal Treasury; but the fact remains that during that same fiscal year more than $4,000,000 was used out of tribal funds, of which this committee report made no mention at all. And, again, the $4,000,000 added to the nine and one-half million dollars would make thirteen and one-half million dollars, making the current law carry not six million more than the appropriation of 1913, but only about $1,700,000 more, which, with the enlarged activities of the service and increased cost of things, is not, after all, such an unreasonable advance. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the first paragraph of the bill be read, and after that I shall move that the committee rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will begin the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and in full compensation for all offices and salaries which are provided for herein for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, namely:

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, had come to no resolution thereon.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on to-morrow we dispense with the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that on to-morrow the Calendar Wednesday business be dispensed with. Is there objection?

Mr. FESS. Reserving the right to object, would the gentleman state what committee has the calendar to-morrow?

Mr. MONDELL. The Committee on the Public Lands. They are perfectly willing to have their business go over.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from Wyoming what we may expect to come up to-morrow?

Mr. MONDELL. The Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. BLANTON. The continuation of this bill?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO A COMMITTEE TO SIT DURING THE SESSIONS.

Mr. KENNEDY of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rivers and Harbors or any subcommittee thereof be authorized to sit during the sessions of the House during the second session of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. IRELAND, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for 10 days, on account of the death of an intimate friend.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO A COMMITTEE.

Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That EWIN L. DAVIS, a Member of Congress from the State of Tennessee, be elected a member of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 7, 1920, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of communication from the Acting Secretary of Labor submitting estimates of appropriation required by that department for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 564); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimates of appropriation from the Acting Secretary of Commerce for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 565); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimate of additional appropriation required for the service of the Coast Guard and repairs to Coast Guard cutters for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 566); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War, submitting item of reappropriation for unveiling memorial to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant (H. Doc. No. 567); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting draft of proposed legislation permitting removal of the charge of desertion from the record of any officer or enlisted man who served in the Navy or Marine Corps (H. Doc. No. 568); to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7158) to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, submitted a report thereon (Rept. No. 531), Minority Views, Part II, which said report was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FULLER of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11489) concerning proof of widowhood in claims for pension; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 11490) for the purchase of a site for and the erection of a post-office building at Mount Vernon, Ohio; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BEE: A bill (H. R. 11491) directing the Secretary of War to authorize a survey of a military road for the uses of the military from San Antonio in the State of Texas via Corpus Christi in the said State of Texas and terminating in Brownsville in the said State of Texas; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SIEGEL: A bill (H. R. 11492) to amend section 3 of an act entitled "An act to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States," approved February 5, 1917; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. THOMAS: A bill (H. R. 11493) establishing the Mammoth Cave National Park, in the State of Kentucky, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BEE: A bill (H. R. 11494) to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the western district of Texas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY: A bill (H. R. 11495) providing for delivering to the State of Illinois the statue of Abraham Lincoln which formerly stood in front of the courthouse in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. WOODYARD: A bill (H. R. 11496) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a public building at Winfield, W. Va.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LEHLBACH: A bill (H. R. 11497) to amend the act entitled "An act to pension widows and minor children of officers and enlisted men who served in the War with Spain, Philippine insurrection, or in China," approved July 16, 1918; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SIEGEL: A bill (H. R. 11498) to amend sections 4, 8, and 10 of the act of June 29, 1906, as amended, relating to naturalization, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SELLS: A bill (H. R. 11499) to amend an act entitled "An act to increase the efficiency of the Medical Department of the United States Army," approved April 23, 1908; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HUDSPETH: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 271) suspending the operation of certain provisions of the immigration act relating to alien contract laborers and illiterate aliens; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 11500) granting an increase of pension to Frelin C. Lumbert; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11501) granting a pension to Benjamin C. Moffet; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. AYRES: A bill (H. R. 11502) granting an increase of pension to John W. McPherron; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11503) granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Kinney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOIES: A bill (H. R. 11504) granting a pension to Oren O. Pound; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BOOHER: A bill (H. R. 11505) granting a pension to Sarah A. George; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLEARY: A bill (H. R. 11506) for the relief of the Merritt & Chapman Derrick & Wrecking Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COPLEY: A bill (H. R. 11507) granting a pension to Johanna Ferron; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GREENE of Vermont: A bill (H. R. 11508) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Monteith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HERSMAN: A bill (H. R. 11509) granting a pension to Mary E. Skinner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11510) granting a pension to Susan H. Orr; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JONES of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 11511) granting a pension to William A. Anderson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 11512) granting a pension to John W. Thompson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LAMPERT: A bill (H. R. 11513) granting an increase of pension to Cora I. Cromwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11514) granting an increase of pension to Hugo Schrottky; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11515) granting an increase of pension to Eliza Brown; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11516) granting an increase of pension to Herbert H. Pommerich; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11517) granting a pension to Eva J. Plante; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LONGWORTH: A bill (H. R. 11518) granting an increase of pension to James B. Bristow; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11519) granting an increase of pension to Mary Gass; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RAMSEYER: A bill (H. R. 11520) granting an increase of pension to James Reagin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROSE: A bill (H. R. 11521) granting a pension to Loretta McKee; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SANFORD: A bill (H. R. 11522) granting an increase of pension to Rosella Magee; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SELLS: A bill (H. R. 11523) for the relief of the Wales Island Packing Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11524) for the relief of the estate of John Stewart, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11525) granting a pension to Sallie A. Cox; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11526) for the relief of the Snare & Triest Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11527) to correct the status of Mate John L. Vennard, United States Navy, retired, deceased; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11528) granting a pension to minor heirs of John W. Barr; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHERWOOD: A bill (H. R. 11529) granting an increase of pension to John Foster; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMAS: A bill (H. R. 11530) granting an increase of pension to Edward R. Roll; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 11531) granting an increase of pension to James Hodges; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WELTY: A bill (H. R. 11532) granting a pension to Harriet Sillman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WHITE of Maine: A bill (H. R. 11533) granting an increase of pension to Laura Lavensaler; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11534) granting an increase of pension to William W. Goodridge; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11535) granting an increase of pension to Cornelius Conley, alias Cornelius Connelly; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11536) granting a pension to William Bradford Cobb; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

648. By Mr. BABKA: Petition of Roger Casement Branch of Friends of Irish Freedom, protesting against present financial relations with other countries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

649. Also, petition of American Federation of Railroad Workers, protesting against the railroad bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

650. By Mr. CRAGO: Petition of a committee of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, favoring the repeal of acts of Congress conferring privileges upon special classes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

651. Also, petition of sundry citizens of Greene County, Pa., for the enactment of House bill 10045, directing the Secretary of War to return to this country the bodies of our soldiers buried in France; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

652. By Mr. DALLINGER: Petition of citizens of Cambridge, Mass., praying for immediate legislation to extend credit to the starving peoples of Europe; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

653. By Mr. ESCH: Petition of National Farmers' Union, asking legislation to develop and place in operation the nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala.; to the Committee on Agriculture.

654. Also, petition of Flint (Mich.) Board of Commerce, asking legislation rescinding income tax on mortgages owned by individuals up to $40,000; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

655. Also, petition of La Crosse Lodge, No. 300, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, asking immediate legislation to deport all aliens who are members of the I. W. W. or similar organizations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

656. By Mr. LAMPERT: Petition of Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Lodge No. 1022, Manitowoc, Wis., protesting against the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

657. Also, petition of Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Oshkosh, Wis., protesting against the passage of the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

658. Also, petition of Manitowoc Central Labor Council, protesting against the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

659. Also, petition of the Oshkosh Trades and Labor Council, protesting against the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

660. Also, petition of Fond du Lac Trades and Labor Council, protesting against the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

661. Also, petition of Local No. 158, International Association of Machinists, protesting against the Esch-Cummins bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

662. Also, petition of Soo Railroad Shop Federation, protesting against the Esch bill; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

663. Also, petition of Fond du Lac (Wis.) Lodge, No. 769, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks of America, protesting against the Esch bill; to the committee of conference on Esch-Cummins bills.

664. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of Dairymen's League of New York City, favoring passage of the Capper-Hersman bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

665. By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of Harry N. Anderson and others, of Hartford, Conn., favoring the passage of House bill 487; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

666. Also, petition of Hartford Lodge, No. 29, Federation of Railroad Workers, against an antistrike clause in any railroad-return bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

667. Also, petition of New London County (Conn.) Pomona Grange, for legislation requiring cloth manufacturers to put on each yard of cloth the amount of new work in every yard; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

668. By Mr. OSBORNE: Petition of E. G. Lorbeer and six others, for additional allowance of travel expenses; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

669. By Mr. RAKER: Petition of Santa Rosa Chamber of Commerce, relative to the need for legislation suppressing anarchy and sedition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

670. Also, petition of Dr. H. N. Miner, of Penryn, Calif., protesting against section 400 of the Esch bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

671. By Mr. SINCLAIR: Petition of Williston Post, World War Veterans; Williston Local Miners' Union No. 3796; Williston Newspaper Men's Union; and individual citizens of Williston, all in the State of North Dakota, requesting North Dakota delegation in Congress to vote to seat Victor L. Berger, because "no legislative body has a right to bar a man elected by unquestioned majority when the voters knew before election the charges upon which it is proposed to bar him"; also, that "denial of his seat under present circumstances would ultimately spell destruction of popular government"; to the Special Committee on Elections.

672. By Mr. SCHALL: Petition of Lorentz Post No. 11, Minnesota American Legion, urging legislation to suppress all disloyal organizations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

673. Also, petition of Bergquist Post, American Legion, Mora, Minn., requesting immediate legislation to suppress and, if necessary, to deport all anti-American agitators; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

674. By Mr. SNELL: Resolution of Clinton County Pomona Grange, New York, that, as there is a request before the President and Congress to have a commission appointed to settle the question of hours and wages, at such conference the rate of wages should be fixed so as to be used as a basis for determining the price on farm produce; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, resolution of Clinton County Pomona Grange, New York, favoring the ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany at the earliest possible moment; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

676. Also, resolution of Clinton County Pomona Grange, New York, favoring the enactment by the present Congress of more stringent laws regarding the admission of foreigners; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

677. Also, resolution of Clinton County Pomona Grange, New York, indorsing Senator TOWNSEND'S bill, No. 1309, in regard to a national highway system; to the Committee on Roads.

678. Also, resolution of Clinton County Pomona Grange, New York, recommending that the Sherman antitrust law be amended so as to permit farmers to form organizations to buy and sell collectively; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

679. By Mr. WEAVER: Petition of Balsam Lodge, No. 62, Knights of Pythias, Waynesville, N. C., in regard to the suppression of sedition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

680. Also, petition of Asheville Kiwanis Club, relating to appropriation for Government building at Asheville, N. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

681. By Mr. WOODYARD: Petition of citizens of Middlebourne, W. Va., asking for modification of the present revenue laws; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

682. By Mr. KETTNER: Petition of 400 members of the Riverside (Calif.) City and County Teachers' Association, indorsing the Smith-Townsend educational bill; to the Committee on Education.

683. By Mr. KEARNS: Petition of Millbrook Council, Daughters of America, Southern Star Council, of Summerside, Ohio, New Boston (Ohio) Council, Milford Council, and Laurel Blossom Lodge, of New Richmond, Ohio, all councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring the passage of House bill 10379; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

684. Also, petition of Portsmouth Lodge, No. 154, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, favoring passage of House bill 3110; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

685. By Mr. TILSON: Petition of T. M. Byxbee, of New Haven, Conn., against passage of Senate bill 3565 and House bill 1138; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

686. By Mr. GOLDFOGLE: Petition of New York County Organization of the American Legion, indorsing universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

687. Also, petition of New York Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, commending the bills establishing a Civil War volunteer officers' list; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, January 7, 1920.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, in the discharge of our highest duty we come to Thee. We pray that Thou wilt direct all our thinking processes that we may be guided to final conclusions of the difficult questions which present themselves to us to-day. Give to us the courage that comes only as Thou dost inspire us with the high ideals of a perfect plan of life that we may bravely set ourselves to accomplish the task that Thou hast committed to our hands. Guide us this day. For Christ's sake. Amen.

On request of Mr. CURTIS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I have here several hundred telegrams from unions of Federal employees asking immediate action to secure a report by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor upon the Nolan minimum wage bill. I move that the telegrams be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McCUMBER presented a petition of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of Bottineau, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation to punish violation of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution by American citizens in certain foreign countries, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Local Division No. 614, Order of Railway Conductors, of Dickinson, N. Dak., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Cummins railroad bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Tim Running Post, No. 24, American Legion, of Devils Lake, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation granting a bonus to soldiers who served in the World War, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the Commercial Club of Larimore, N. Dak., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Siegel bill, providing for the marking of cost prices on articles of merchandise for sale, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented petitions of the Commercial Club of Larimore, N. Dak., and of Local Lodge No. 1089, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of Minot, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the suppression of anarchy and the deportation of undesirable aliens, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the Commercial Club of Larimore, N. Dak., praying for a revision of the antitrust laws, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I have a telegram in the nature of a petition from Hon. William Hale Thompson, mayor of the city of Chicago. I have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with the mayor, and know of no reason why the telegram should have been sent to me; but I offer it and ask that it be read from the desk. The well-known attachment of the mayor to the institutions of this country and his devotion to its welfare in the war with Germany entitle it to a place in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Reading Clerk read as follows:

CHICAGO, ILL., January 6, 1919.

Hon. THOMAS J. WALSH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Petition to the Senate of the United States.

Washington dispatches indicate the possibility of an early vote in the Senate of the proposed treaty of peace and the covenant of the league of nations.

Approval of the league's covenant would, in my opinion, not only undermine the sovereignty of the American people, but also involve the United States in un-American foreign entanglements, in shameless violation of the wise foreign policy established by President Washington, which has been subscribed to, upheld, and enforced by all American Presidents prior to the present administration.

In my opinion the covenant of the league of nations with reservations is equally as vicious and tyrannical as it is without reservations; without reservations the covenant of the league destroys American sovereignty in the open with one blow; with reservations the covenant of the league destroys American sovereignty under cover by piecemeal.

A vote for the adoption of this cunning contrivance is, I firmly believe, a vote to barter away the rights of the American people.

As an American whose ancestors fought in the Revolution for American independence, and whose father fought at the side of Admiral Farragut in the Civil War to preserve the Union; as mayor of Chicago, a city containing one-fortieth of the population of the United States; as a citizen who fervently hopes that this country will be spared from further financial burdens which the speculative international bankers are seeking to impose for the purpose of impoverishing the American people; and in the name of the mothers of Chicago, who are beseeching me to aid them in securing the return of their sons who are still performing military service in foreign lands, I appeal to you to use your power and influence as a United States Senator to have Congress declare that we are now at peace, without making peace dependent upon the approval of this hellish scheme to deprive us of our freedom and our independence.

While the Senate, under the Constitution, has a voice and a vote in the ratification of treaties, the right to transfer or surrender the people's sovereignty, in whole or in part, is vested solely in the people.

I therefore respectfully petition you to give the people the opportunity which so rightfully belongs to them to vote on this un-American proposal.

WM. HALE THOMPSON.

Mr. CAPPER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Dodge City, Kans., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the retirement of civil-service employees, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. NELSON prsented resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of Richmond, Va.; the Chamber of Commerce of Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Produce Exchange of Toledo, Ohio; the Church Peace Union of New York City, N. Y.; and of Local Branch, Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association, of Randolph, Mass., favoring the early ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SUTHERLAND presented a memorial of Local Lodge No. 362, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of Martinsburg, W. Va., remonstrating against the enactment of antistrike legislation, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Huntington, W. Va., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Cummins-Esch railroad bills and praying for the adoption of the so-called Plumb plan, which was ordered to lie on the table.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Harris	McLean	Sherman
Ball	Harrison	McNary	Simmons
Brandegee	Henderson	Myers	Smith, Ga.
Calder	Hitchcock	Nelson	Smith, Md.
Capper	Jones, N. Mex.	New	Smoot
Chamberlain	Kellogg	Norris	Spencer
Colt	Kendrick	Nugent	Sterling
Curtis	Kenyon	Overman	Sutherland
Dial	Keyes	Owen	Swanson
Dillingham	King	Page	Trammell
Edge	Kirby	Phipps	Underwood
Elkins	Knox	Poindexter	Walsh, Mont.
Fernald	Lenroot	Pomerene	Williams
France	Lodge	Ransdell	Wolcott
Gerry	McCumber	Robinson
Gore	McKellar	Sheppard

Mr. CURTIS. I was requested to announce the absence of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] on official business; of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] on official business; of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] on account of illness in his family; of the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] on account of death in his family; and of the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. NEWBERRY] on account of illness.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My colleague, the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], is absent on official business.

Mr. GERRY. I wish to announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained by illness in his family, and that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is absent on account of the illness of a member of his family.

I wish also to announce that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GAY], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] are absent on official business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-two Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SWANSON:

A bill (S. 3659) providing for the reconstruction of certain public roads in Fairfield district, Henrico County, Va. (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 3660) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan to States, when so requested, 5-ton and 10-ton artillery tractors for use in highway construction; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 3661) for the relief of the Lloyd Mediterraneo Societa Italiana di Navigazione, owners of the Italian steamer Titania;

A bill (S. 3662) for the relief of Th. Brovig, as owner of the bark Bennestvet;

A bill (S. 3663) for the relief of Gaetano Davide Olivari fu Fortunato, as managing owner of the Italian bark Doris; and

A bill (S. 3664) for the relief of the Link-Belt Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. OVERMAN:

A bill (S. 3665) for the relief of Stanley Mitchell (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 3666) granting an increase of pension to Minnie Lord Henderson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MYERS:

A bill (S. 3667) to appropriate $4,000,000 for loans to farmers in drought-stricken sections of the United States for the purchase of seed for 1920 spring planting; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. SHERMAN:

A bill (S. 3668) requiring compliance with agreements to furnish heat in living quarters in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. NELSON:

A bill (S. 3669) granting an increase of pension to John Kenney; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. EDGE:

A bill (S. 3670) to save daylight in the first zone so as to encourage the establishment of home gardening, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. McCUMBER:

A bill (S. 3671) granting a pension to Edna C. Wilson;

A bill (S. 3672) granting an increase of pension to Herman Binderwald; and

A bill (S. 3673) granting an increase of pension to Miranda Green (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GORE (by request):

A bill (S. 3674) prohibiting the bringing into the United States and the carrying and transporting therein, from one State, Territory, or District to another State, Territory, or District, of pictures, films, moving-picture film or films, purporting to show or to simulate the acts and conduct of ex-convicts, desperadoes, bandits, train robbers, bank robbers, or outlaws, in the commission or attempted commission of crime or acts of violence; and to prohibit the use of the mails in carrying communications relating to the same, and providing punishment therefor; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. WALSH of Montana:

A bill (S. 3675) granting an increase of pension to Edmund W. Bache (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND:

A bill (S. 3676) granting a pension to Harriet L. Stone;

A bill (S. 3677) granting an increase of pension to George W. Loughery;

A bill (S. 3678) granting an increase of pension to Absalom Virden; and

A bill (S. 3679) granting a pension to Chloe T. Hutchison; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HARRIS:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 141) to enable the Public Health Service to cooperate with the States in the investigation and control of malaria in the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

By Mr. KING:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 142) to authorize the construction of Army ordnance supply depots; to the Committee on Appropriations.

CHART OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I have had presented to me a chart of the activities of the Government service for the use of the schools of the country. Heretofore the chart has been published in connection with pamphlets which have been made public documents, and it seems, according to representations which have been made to me, that there is quite a demand for these charts for the use of the schools of the country.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I can not hear a word the Senator from New Mexico is saying, although I was trying the very hardest to do so.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I think the Senator from Utah is right about that.

As I was saying, representations have been made to me that there was a considerable demand throughout the country, coming from the schools of the country, for charts of the activities of the Government, and that such charts have heretofore been printed in connection with certain documents of the Government which have been printed as public documents. It is suggested that the chart might be printed as a separate public document, and I present it and ask its reference to the Committee on Printing for investigation and consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The matter will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

TREATY OF PEACE WITH GERMANY.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, just before the adjournment of Congress for the Christmas holidays I submitted a resolution looking to the appointment by the Vice President of a committee on ways and means to endeavor to secure the ratification of the treaty of peace. When Congress adjourned for the holidays it was my intention to call up that resolution as soon as we reconvened, but since my return I find that an effort is being made to reach an agreement independent of the resolution; and, as I do not desire to throw any monkey wrenches into any machinery that would look to the ratification of the treaty of peace, I have withheld pressing the resolution. I do not wish it to be understood, however, that I have abandoned the resolution. Of course, I will not bring it up to interfere with any effort that is being made to work out a solution of the problem, but if no definite arrangement can be made within the next few days, then I shall endeavor to call up the resolution in the morning hour and ask for a vote upon it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what is the order of business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The presentation of concurrent and other resolutions.

DATA RELATIVE TO OFFICERS OF ARMY AND NAVY.

Mr. SMOOT submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 269), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby, respectively, requested to transmit to the Senate, not later than January 31, 1920, a statement showing the name, rank, assignment, and headquarters, and base and longevity pay, and commutation of heat, light, and quarters of every commissioned officer in their respective departments who is assigned to duty in other than strictly combatant or line organizations.

TRAINING OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.

Mr. SMOOT. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk requesting certain information, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 270) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Bureau of Efficiency is directed to submit to the Senate, as early as practicable, a report on the desirability of establishing a school for the purpose of training Federal employees in the various classes of work performed in the executive departments and independent establishments, and to submit recommendations with respect to the conduct of such a school.

INTERSTATE RAILWAY SECURITIES.

Mr. NORRIS. I present a Senate resolution calling on the Interstate Commerce Commission for certain information, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The Assistant Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 271), as follows:

Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission be, and it is hereby, directed to report to the Senate:

First. To what extent, if any, part or all of the proceeds from the sale of stocks or bonds by interstate railroads have been used for purposes other than the proper and legitimate purposes of such railroads issuing such securities, giving in each of such instances the railroads guilty of such practice, the extent thereof, the purposes to which such proceeds were used, and the names of the officials guilty of such misconduct.

Second. To what extent, if any, are directors and other officers of interstate railroads, also directors or other officers of financial or industrial corporations having business dealings or financial relations with such railroads, giving in each instance the names of the railroads, the names of such directors or other officials who are directors or officials of both such railroads and such corporations, the names of the financial or industrial corporations, the nature of the business relations between such financial or industrial corporations and said railroads, to what extent, if any, such relationship has resulted in such railroads paying an unreasonable or exorbitant price for material and supplies purchased by said railroads from such financial or industrial corporations, and what effect said business dealings and relationship has had upon other competing corporations engaged in the same or similar lines of business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that the resolution may be all right, and there may be no objection to it, but the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], is not present. Therefore I desire to ask the Senator from Nebraska to allow the resolution go over until to-morrow.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I can not conceive of the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce having any objection to the resolution. It simply calls for information and nothing else, the information being in the possession of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I myself do not understand how it could be possible that anyone would object to the information being supplied to the Senate by the commission which has it in its possession. I do not see any reason why we should wait until the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee is here. The Senator from Iowa will not be here to-morrow very likely as, the Senator from Utah knows, he is engaged on a conference that is probably going to consume several weeks.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Nebraska knows that when a resolution of this kind is read from the desk it is difficult for a Senator to follow it. I tried to do so, but I could not. I thought the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce ought to know what is in the resolution, and I assure the Senator from Nebraska that I will see that the resolution is called to his attention.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator from Utah thinks best, of course he can object to the present consideration of the resolution, and it will go over until to-morrow.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have the resolution go over until to-morrow.

Mr. FRANCE. May I ask the Senator from Utah if he would object to the resolution being again read?

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all.

Mr. NORRIS. I think if the Senator will hear the resolution read he will see there is not anything in it that the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce would have any more interest in than would any other Senator. As I have stated, it simply calls for information and nothing else.

Mr. SMOOT. By to-morrow, of course, we will have an opportunity to examine the resolution, and there may be no question regarding it; in fact, it may be passed to-day if I can get the resolution to the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Being objected to, the resolution goes over.

BALLOT ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. GORE. I ask to have read the telegram which I send to the desk. For obvious reasons I withhold the name of the sender.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the telegram will be read.

The Assistant Secretary read the telegram, as follows:

MIAMI, OKLA., January 6, 1920.

Hon. THOMAS P. GORE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

From a house-to-house canvas on league of nations, city of Miami, Okla., 347 for, 1,173 against.

SUZERAINTY OF TURKEY OVER EGYPT.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Secretary of State, with certain addenda which have not been previously printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 16, 1919.

Hon. ROBERT L. OWEN,
United States Senate.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of November 29 last, in which you inquire as to the effect of this Government's recognition of the so-called protectorate proclaimed by Great Britain over Egypt on December 18, 1914.

In reply I beg to state that the department does not understand that Egypt was, prior to the British proclamation of December 18, 1914, in possession of full independent sovereign rights.

The effect of this Government's qualified recognition of April, 1919, was to acknowledge with the reservation set forth at that time only such control of Egyptian affairs as had been set forth in the notice of the British Government transmitted to the department on December 18, 1914, a copy of which is inclosed.

It is assumed that it is the purpose of Great Britain to carry out the assurances given by King George the Fifth of England to the late Sultan of Egypt, as published in the London Times of December 21, 1914.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

ROBERT LANSING.

Inclosure: As indicated.

—

No. 434.] BRITISH EMBASSY,
Washington, December 18, 1914.

The Hon. W. J. BRYAN,
Secretary of State, etc.

SIR: I have the honor under instructions from my Government to communicate to you, sir, for your information the accompanying copy of a telegram stating that His Majesty's Government consider that the suzerainty of Turkey over Egypt is terminated and that they have advised the King to place Egypt under his protection.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir,
Your most obedient, humble servant,

CECIL SPRING-RICE.

—

You should communicate the following to Government to which you are accredited:

"In view of the state of war initiated by Turkey against Egypt, His Majesty's Government consider that the suzerainty of Turkey over Egypt is terminated, and they have advised His Majesty to place Egypt under his protection and to order the adoption of all measures necessary for the safety of the inhabitants, the defense of the country, and the protection of the many and various important interests existing there. Official notifications to this effect have been issued in London and Cairo. The unprovoked nature of the Turkish aggression has prevented any discussion of this matter with the powers beforehand, but His Majesty's Government have no intentions of impairing foreign interests and wish to act in harmony with the powers in making those changes affecting their interests which are rendered unavoidable by the aggression of Turkey.

"Meanwhile the Egyptian Government will arrange for the issue of a Khedivial decree providing that the consular and other foreign courts shall continue to exercise in Egypt their accustomed jurisdiction to the extent to which the arrangements which will have to be made by the military authorities for the maintenance of public order are not inconsistent therewith. You should add that His Majesty's Government have appointed a high commissioner for Egypt who will also be the minister of foreign affairs in the Egyptian Government, and His Majesty's Government would therefore ask that the Government to which you are accredited will be so good as to instruct their representative in Cairo to address all his official communications in future to the high commissioner as minister for foreign affairs."

FIRE DEPARTMENT OF THE DISTRICT.

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10137) to amend an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1906, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I shall object if there is a likelihood that the consideration of the bill will lead to any discussion; otherwise I shall not object.

Mr. CALDER. I do not think it will require very long to act upon the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think that bill will take some time.

Mr. CALDER. I do not think it will take over 10 or 15 minutes. It has been on the calendar for some weeks; it has been passed by the House, and we have already reclassified the pay of the police force of the District. I see no reason why the firemen, who are just as important a body in the affairs of the District of Columbia, should not receive the same treatment.

Mr. KING. I shall not object, but it seems to me that during the morning hour we ought not to take up a measure of this character.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection or is there not?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That section 2 of an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1906, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall appoint, assign to such duty or duties as they may prescribe, promote, reduce, fine, suspend, with or without pay, and remove all officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, according to such rules and regulations as said commissioners, in their exclusive jurisdiction and judgment (except as herein otherwise provided), may from time to time make, alter, or amend: Provided, That the rules and regulations of the fire department heretofore promulgated are hereby ratified and shall remain in force until changed by said commissioners: Provided further, That all officers, members, and civilian employees of such department, except the chief engineer and deputy chief engineers, shall hereafter be appointed and promoted in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States,' approved January 16, 1883, as amended, and the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof, in the same manner as members of the classified civil service of the United States, except as herein otherwise provided: Provided further, That hereafter only captains shall be appointed battalion engineers, preference being given to those who have had at least three years' experience next preceding as captains in command of fire stations; hereafter only lieutenants shall be appointed captains, preference being given to those who have had at least two years' experience next preceding as lieutenants in command of fire stations; hereafter only members of the uniformed force above the rank of private shall be appointed lieutenants, preference being given to those who have had at least 10 years' experience in the fire department, including at least five years' experience next preceding in the actual work for fire fighting. The chief engineer of the fire department shall hereafter be appointed from among the deputy chief engineers, preference being given for previous service as lieutenant and captain in such department; and the deputy chief engineers from among the battalion chief engineers, preference being given to those, if any, who have had at least three years' experience next preceding as battalion chief engineers in command of battalions. All original appointments of privates shall be made to class 1. Privates who have served one year in class 1 shall be transferred to class 2, and privates who have served two years in class 2 shall be transferred to class 3. Such transfers shall not be subject to the provisions of such act of January 16, 1883, as amended, and the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof. Whenever vacancies occur in classes 2 and 3 which can not be filled by such transfers, the commissioners may appoint privates in class 1 equal in number to the positions vacated in classes 2 and 3; and the respective salaries specifically provided for such vacant positions may be reduced to pay the designated salaries of the privates so appointed in class 1."

SEC. 2. That section 3 of such act of June 30, 1906, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"The positions of engineer and assistant engineer in said department are hereby abolished, and those members of said department holding such positions at the time this act becomes effective shall be transferred to the positions of privates of class 1, 2, or 3, as may be determined by their length of service on August 1, 1919, in the same manner as hereby provided for the appointment and promotion of privates. The authorized number of men in the various classes of privates is hereby permanently increased to provide for such men so transferred, for additional privates equal in number to the vacancies existing in the positions of engineer and assistant engineer at the time this act becomes effective, and for their respective successors. Such transfers shall not be subject to the act entitled 'An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States,' approved January 16, 1883, as amended, and the rules and regulations made in pursuance thereof."

SEC. 3. That section 4 of such act of June 20, 1906, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That the annual basic salaries of the officers and members of said department shall be as follows: Chief engineer, $3,750; deputy chief engineers, $2,750 each; battalion chief engineers, $2,300 each; fire marshal, $2,300; deputy fire marshal, $1,800; inspectors, $1,660 each; captains, $1,900 each; lieutenants, $1,760 each; sergeants, $1,700 each; privates of class 3, $1,460 each; privates of class 2, $1,360 each; privates of class 1, $1,260 each. Every officer and member of the fire service between August 1, 1919, and the time this act becomes law, shall, in addition to the salary received by him for his period of service between August 1, 1919, and the time this act becomes law, receive for such period the difference between such salary and the salary payable to him under the provisions of this act for a period of equal duration."

SEC. 4. That section 5 of such act of June 20, 1906, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"No officer or member of the fire department of the District of Columbia shall be or become a member of any organization, or of an organization affiliated with another organization, which itself or any subordinate, component, or affiliated organization of which holds, claims, or uses the strike to enforce its demands. Upon sufficient proof to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that any officer or member of the fire department of the District of Columbia has violated the provisions of this section, it shall be the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to immediately discharge such officer or member from the service.

Any member of the fire department of the District of Columbia who enters into a conspiracy, combination, or agreement with the purpose of substantially interfering with or obstructing the efficient conduct or operation of the fire department of the District of Columbia by a strike or other disturbance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $300 or by imprisonment of not more than six months, or by both.

For the payment of the increases in salaries for the positions designated in this act, in the number, specified in the act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1919, and for the payment of the salaries designated herein to the additional number of men in the various classes of privates authorized in this act, one-half of the amount necessary is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the other one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, to supplement the amounts appropriated for the salaries of the officers and members of such fire department in such act of July 11, 1919.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

SEDITIOUS ACTS AND UTTERANCES.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3317.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Reading Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McCormick	Sherman
Ball	Gronna	McCumber	Simmons
Bankhead	Harris	McKellar	Smith, Ga.
Brandegee	Harrison	McLean	Smith, Md.
Calder	Henderson	McNary	Smoot
Capper	Hitchcock	Nelson	Sterling
Chamberlain	Jones, N. Mex.	New	Sutherland
Colt	Kellogg	Norris	Swanson
Culberson	Kendrick	Nugent	Trammell
Curtis	Kenyon	Overman	Underwood
Dial	Keyes	Owen	Wadsworth
Dillingham	King	Phipps	Walsh, Mont.
Edge	Kirby	Pomerene	Williams
Elkins	Knox	Ransdell	Wolcott
France	Lenroot	Robinson
Gerry	Lodge	Sheppard

Mr. GRONNA. I have been requested to announce that the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is absent because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-two Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The Senator from South Dakota moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3317.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3317) to prohibit and punish certain seditious acts against the Government of the United States and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill has been reported to the Senate and the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole have been concurred in. The bill is now in the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to section 3 of the bill. I ask to have it printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That order will be made.

Mr. BORAH's amendment is as follows:

Add to the end of section 3 the following proviso: "Provided, That any author, publisher, or party affected or aggrieved by the action of the Postmaster General in excluding materials from the mails under this section shall, upon filing a bond to cover the actual cost of such proceeding, be entitled to a hearing de novo before the judge either of the Federal court or of a State court of record of the district or circuit in which the party affected or aggrieved resides. But in case the party aggrieved or affected is successful in securing the admission of his mail matter to the mails, he shall not be liable for the cost of the proceedings, and during the pendency of the proceedings in court the order of the Postmaster General shall be suspended."

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I submit an amendment to the pending bill. I ask that it be printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, when this bill was first under consideration no statement was made, nor deemed necessary to be made, at that time with regard to the purpose of the bill. I want to make a very brief statement now.

The object of this bill, Mr. President, is to make unlawful the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the United States, or of all government, by force or violence. It seems to me that there is an urgent demand for legislation of this kind at this particular time. We are familiar with the disclosures and the revelations made through the investigations of the Department of Justice, and how in very many of the larger cities of the United States there have been found those individuals and those organizations who, in one way or another, are advocating the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all government.

I have before me a part of the New York Times of Sunday, November 9, 1919, which gives an account of what may be termed, I think, the first raid for the purpose of finding out something in regard to the activities of these radical propagandists; and I desire to quote briefly from some of the literature found by the agents of the Department of Justice:

In order to attain our goal we place in our plan, first of all, the necessity of creating a broad, class revolutionary organization of toilers, which, carrying on a struggle directly with all institutions of capital and power, must train the working classes to initiative and self-dependent activity in all of their undertakings, thus developing in them a realization of the necessity and inevitability of a universal strike—social revolution.

* * * * * * *

The struggle between these classes continues at the present time and will cease only when the toiling masses, organized as a class, recognize their true interests and by means of a socialistic revolution by force gain control of all the wealth of the world.

* * * * * * *

The American Committee of Siberian Agricultural Cooperative Unions, which has a headquarters here, made public yesterday a copy of an alleged official order captured from the Bolsheviki in Russia, directing Bolshevist agents and sympathizers to encourage general strikes in all countries, produce uprisings, assassinate or compromise influential men, and carry on an inflammatory propaganda calculated to incite international wars.

That is quoted from the "Covenant of Comrades of Unions of Russian Workers of the United States and Canada Uniting Themselves in a Federation."

I might quote further, Mr. President, from the literature found on the occasion of this raid, but I forbear for the present. There have been raids subsequent to that first raid in November, and other literature of the same character has been found—literature which advises and advocates the overthrow of government by force or violence, or by force or violence changing the present social and political order.

This bill, Mr. President, is not a bill, as has been supposed by some, for the repression of discussion in regard to forms of government or in regard to what form of government may be preferable. So far as the terms of the bill are concerned, a man may freely advocate a soviet government, he may advocate a monarchial government, he may even advocate a state of anarchy; and yet, Mr. President, he may not, and could not under the terms of the bill, if it becomes a law, advocate the overthrow of this Government or of all government by force or violence. "Force or violence" runs throughout this bill, and that element must be present in order that a party may be amenable to the law under the terms of the measure.

The first section of the bill provides:

That it shall be unlawful for any person to advocate or advise the overthrow, or to write or knowingly to print, publish, utter, sell, or distribute any document, book, circular, paper, journal, or other written or printed communication in or by which there is advised the overthrow * * * of the Government of the United States or of all government.

Section 2 prohibits "the display or exhibition at any meeting, gathering, or parade, public or private, of any flag, banner, or emblem" which is intended to indicate or symbolize the overthrow of government by force or violence.

Section 3 prohibits the use of the mails by those who, through their publications, advocate or advise the overthrow of the Government by force or violence or advocate "the use of force or violence or physical injury to or the seizure or destruction of persons or property as a means toward the accomplishment of economic, industrial, or political changes." All such matter is declared by the terms of the bill to be nonmailable.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GRONNA. Speaking for myself only, I wish to preface my question to the Senator by saying that I am in thorough accord and sympathy with the idea of punishing anyone who willfully and knowingly does anything which even tends to destroy organized government. But does the Senator from South Dakota believe that it is a safe proposition to leave to one man to say whether a book or a newspaper or a print of any kind constitutes in itself a violation and for which the party responsible for the publication must be punished before he has had an opportunity to be heard? In other words, does the Senator believe it is safe to give the plenary power, the great authority, to any one man to prevent the circulation of documents which might be liberal but which might not mean in any sense the overthrow of organized government?

Mr. STERLING. I will say, in answer to the Senator, that I think we must lodge somewhere in the first instance the power to determine whether or not any particular publication is mailable; and since the Postmaster General is at the head of the Post Office Department of the United States, it seems to me that we can lodge that power, to begin with, in no other person, and he must determine whether or not the matter in controversy comes within the prohibition of the law.

The party publishing is not without his remedy. If the Postmaster General prohibits the use of the mails to any particular publisher, he may have his redress in court, and the Postmaster General may be restrained from excluding the matter in question from the mails on a showing that it does not come within the prohibited class.

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will further yield, would it not be a safer plan to leave it to the courts in the first instance to say whether or not such documents were unmailable, rather than to leave it to be decided by one who holds a political office?

Mr. STERLING. No, Mr. President; I do not believe it is practicable, in the first instance, to have the courts determine whether matter of this kind is mailable or not.

Mr. GRONNA. Let us suppose that citizens of the United States sympathize with people of a subject nation, and the people of that subject nation advocate a new form of government, not in this country, but in a foreign country. Does the Senator believe that we ought to go to the extent of saying that men should be prohibited from sending literature through the mails setting forth their views, so long as it does not interfere with our own form of government?

Mr. STERLING. I do not, I will say to the Senator from North Dakota; nor does the bill so provide.

Mr. GRONNA. I think it does.

Mr. STERLING. The bill provides for the exclusion from the mails simply of matter that advises and advocates the overthrow of the Government by force or violence, and the case supposed by the Senator from North Dakota comes nowhere near the condition or the situation described in the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KING. Let me suggest to the Senator from North Dakota that we already have a statute which prevents the mailing of obscene literature, or literature that tends to the promotion of a fraud, and provides that it shall not be carried through the mail. Does the Senator from North Dakota believe that we ought to exclude obscene literature and permit literature to be circulated which advocates the overthrow by force and violence of our Government?

Mr. GRONNA. I trust the Senator from South Dakota will yield long enough for me to reply to the distinguished Senator from Utah.

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish to say that, having acted years ago as a postmaster, I am very familiar with that statute.

Mr. KING. I am very glad to get that reply from the Senator.

Mr. BORAH. May I ask the Senator from South Dakota whether there is any provision in the bill by which the man whose printed matter is excluded from the mail has a right to a hearing?

Mr. STERLING. There is no provision in the bill, I will say to the Senator from Idaho; but let me remind the Senator from Idaho of a case that is now pending——

Mr. BORAH. I am perfectly familiar with those cases which are now pending, and so far as practical relief is concerned, it would be just as well if they were not pending. The court will likely say that it was in the discretion of the Postmaster General to do thus and so, and it will not review it.

But here is a bill which excludes from the mail printed matter, which action may result in the utter destruction of a man's property, and he is not given a hearing even before the Postmaster General; and that would be small enough.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, he can be given a hearing, and not before the Postmaster General alone, but before a court, in which it may be determined whether the matter he is sending through the mails comes within the provisions of the act or not.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. It is to the particular point on which the Senator has just spoken that I intended to call the attention of the Senator from Idaho. As I understand the bill—and I would like to be corrected if I am wrong—even though the evidence is secured by an employee of the Dead Letter Office, and then turned over to a court, it becomes a question entirely for the court to decide whether the matter thus turned over and reviewed by the court comes within the purview of the act. Certainly there must be some authority to secure the evidence. As I understand the act, the man is not necessarily guilty, even though the matter has been taken from the mail. It then, of course, becomes a matter of court review, whether such matter advocates the overthrow of the Government by force or violence. Is not that correct?

Mr. BORAH. The Senator misunderstood me. I am not speaking of a case where a man is charged with a criminal act under the statute. I am speaking of section 3, which gives the Postmaster General the power to exclude from the mail any printed matter which he finds objectionable. He may exclude that from the mail, and he need not give the party any hearing at all prior to the time when he does exclude it. It is true that the party may go into court afterwards, and by an equitable process, or appealing to the equitable side of the court and seeking an injunction, undertake to have the Postmaster General stayed from preventing it from going through the mail.

Mr. EDGE. Is not that the natural proceeding after having his matter confiscated?

Mr. BORAH. It having been excluded without a hearing, in the meantime the man's business has gone, he has not had a hearing, and his property is practically destroyed. I know of instances in which parties publishing magazines or weeklies have had their publications excluded from the mails. In some instances they did not feel able to go into the court; in others they have gone in; but in the meantime the publication has ceased; they are not permitted to send it through the mails; their subscribers naturally fall off; those who are patronizing them naturally cease to patronize them, and the injury is done before it is possible for them to go into court and get action taken by the court. It is a fundamental principle of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence and of justice and equity that a man be given a hearing prior to any judgment which shall be taken which may result to his injury.

Mr. EDGE. But you must first have the evidence before the hearing can be given. In the case of publication, as I followed the Senator, of course the evidence would be in existence; but in the case of matter sealed and in the mails, going through in the ordinary way, unless some one had authority in the Post Office Department, where there had been indication of such propaganda, certainly you would not have the evidence necessary to have it passed on by the court. It seems to me that the provision in the bill takes care of such possibilities and probabilities and gives the defendant a full court review.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator is a business man. Suppose he were operating a business which depended for its success upon the speedy use of the mails. Suppose a law were passed which would enable the head of a bureau in Washington to be the sole judge as to whether the material should go through the mail. Suppose the Senator had a competitor across the street in the same business, and that the Senator was excluded from the mails this week and it would take a couple of weeks to have the matter reviewed. He would be excluded and literally out of business as against his competitor, and he is destroyed without a hearing. He ought to have a hearing before he is condemned.

Mr. EDGE. My answer to that is that the business of overthrowing government by violence, which is all this bill covers, is a business which it does not seem to me should be given any particular consideration.

Mr. BORAH. With all due respect to the Senator's begging the question, what I want is an impartial tribunal to determine whether or not the party is engaged in overthrowing the Government.

Mr. EDGE. I think that is given by the courts of the country.

Mr. BORAH. That is what I want. I have an amendment to that effect.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Idaho refers to what might occur in the meantime in the way of injury or loss to the party whose publication is denied admission to the mails; but, Mr. President, we want to think of what might occur in the meantime as a result of propaganda of this kind. In the meantime, incited by this kind of propaganda, there might be uprisings here and there in the United States, there might be assassination, which has been advised by literature such as I read from just a little while ago. All that might occur meanwhile.

Whose interest should we look after meanwhile, the interest of the Government, the interest of the great public, the 110,-

000,000 people of the United States, or the interest of one individual who complains because his questionable publication, to say the least, has been held up for the time?

That is the danger and that is the need for putting the power in the hands of the Postmaster General or the Post Office Department, in the first instance, to stop this propaganda and prevent the use of that great instrumentality of the United States—the mails—for the purpose of the overthrow of the Government of the United States.

Mr. President, there is no such want of a right or opportunity to be heard by the party whose publication is excluded from the mails. I know in the case I referred to awhile ago and to which I called the attention of the Senator from Idaho, a citation to show cause was issued. It was the case of the New York Call. The party came before the Third Assistant Postmaster General and other officials of the Post Office Department to make his showing. On that showing and on all the evidence produced by and on behalf of the Government and on behalf of the relator in the case, it was determined that the publication should be prohibited from going through the mails.

I do not mean to say that in every instance such a citation will or should be issued before the publication is excluded from the mails. I can imagine cases where there should be no citation, when upon bare inspection of the material going through the mails, by the postmaster at this or that place or by the Postmaster General, it can be readily determined that it is matter that comes within the provisions of the bill and of a character to incite to an immediate attempt to overthrow the Government by force or violence. The Postmaster General would be derelict in his duty if under circumstances of that kind he should first issue a citation for the party to appear and show cause why his publication should not be prohibited from going through the mails.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. KENYON. The Senator may remember that in the steel investigation we had evidence of publications being sold on the streets of Chicago at news stands absolutely advocating the overthrow of the Government.

Mr. STERLING. I recall that.

Mr. KENYON. Will the Senator's bill not reach a situation of that kind? In the city of New York I am informed on what I consider credible authority that there are more than 30 papers printed in foreign languages which are practically advocating the overthrow of the Government. They reach a million people a day. The bill will not reach that situation.

Mr. STERLING. The mailing provisions of the bill will not reach that, I will say to the Senator from Iowa, but the other provisions of the bill which prohibit advocacy of overthrow of government by force or violence, either by oral argument or written argument, will reach it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

Mr. KENYON. Just let me finish, please. Then it would reach also the case mentioned as existing in the city of Chicago?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly; if the publisher or the distributor could be found, he would be amenable to the law.

Mr. KENYON. Does the bill cover the distributor?

Mr. STERLING. Yes; I think so.

Mr. KNOX. It does, in specific language.

Mr. STERLING. It says "sell or distribute any document, book, circular, paper," and so forth.

Mr. KING. That is what I desired to call attention to.

Mr. BORAH. In that instance the man is given a trial before a court and jury. That is not the portion of the bill to which I called attention.

Mr. STERLING. It provides:

> That it shall be unlawful for any person to advocate or advise the overthrow, or to write, or knowingly to print, publish, utter, sell, or distribute any document, book, circular, paper, journal, or other written or printed communication—

And so forth.

Again the Senator from Idaho refers to the right of trial by jury before the man's case is determined, before he is forbidden to use the mails for these purposes. We have passed act after act—and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] referred to two of them awhile ago—the obscene literature act, the lottery act, and still other acts, such as the one relating to libelous or indecent wrappers or envelopes; another relating to the use of the mails to promote frauds; another to counterfeit or spurious articles, poisons, explosives, or other dangerous articles; another relating to the transportation of intoxicating liquors; and then comes the espionage act, with its prohibitions against the use of the mails for purposes named therein. The publications and articles named are not mailable, and in no case in any of these acts is provision made for a hearing.

The obscene-literature act was amended in 1911, so that the term "indecent," according to the amended act, is construed to include matter of a character tending to incite arson, murder, or assassination. The last part of it, the word "assassination," renders the bill similar in one feature, at least, to the pending bill.

Mr. BORAH. Does not the act to which the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] referred and to which the Senator now refers provide specifically that the party shall have a hearing?

Mr. STERLING. I do not think it does, I will say to the Senator. I am quite sure that it does not, but I would not like to say absolutely that it does not. I am quite sure that none of the acts prohibiting the use of the mails for these specified purposes give a right of hearing in the first instance.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. NELSON. My recollection is that there is only one case in which provision is made for a hearing, and that is where permission has been given to a newspaper for use of the second-class privileges, and it is intended to revoke that privilege. In that case, under the provisions of a law passed a number of years ago, a hearing is provided for, but I recall no other instance at this moment, though I want to say it has been the practice of the Post Office Department, as a rule, in all these cases to give hearings. I know particularly in what we call fraud-order cases they have had repeated hearings, and always have given hearings. In most of those cases they do give a hearing.

Mr. BORAH. That is the reason why I was under the impression that there was a provision for it. I have not the law before me, but I saw a statement in connection with the discussion of the question which said that there was provision for a hearing, but perhaps the conclusion was drawn from the fact that they had been in the habit of giving hearings.

Mr. STERLING. I have never heard of any complaint because no provision has been made for a hearing under the other acts.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator has heard no complaint?

Mr. STERLING. Under these other acts, I say, to which reference has been made, acts that have been on the statute books for years.

Mr. BORAH. I have heard complaint of the method of enforcement ever since they have been in existence. It has been arbitrary and bureaucratic from the beginning, regardless of those who were in the Post Office Department.

Mr. STERLING. I am free to admit that some Postmaster General might on occasion abuse the authority and the power conferred upon him. That may happen with reference to any department of the Government, but for that reason we never abstain from conferring the necessary power for the administration of that office or of that department, nor can we do so here.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. FRANCE. If I understand the Senator correctly, he holds that the bill is one to make a crime of direct incitation to violence against the Government? Is that true?

Mr. STERLING. That is the main purpose of the bill.

Mr. FRANCE. I desire to ask the Senator if he proposes during the course of his discussion to refer to statutes already existing which cover the very same matter?

Mr. STERLING. I do not. If the Senator from Maryland desires to do that he is at liberty to do so, of course, and will, I presume, refer to the statutes already in existence. That is, if he takes the position that there is no necessity for the bill becoming a law because there are other statutes covering the same subject, he may so show.

Mr. FRANCE. The Senator reported the bill from the Committee on the Judiciary and does he not think that it would be advisable to cite the statutes already in existence and their inadequacy in connection with his argument in support of the bill? It seems to me, if the Senator will pardon me, it is a very vicious practice to enact a statute to make crimes of acts which are already crimes under statutes which have been heretofore enacted.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Maryland will not find that the exact subjects covered by this bill are covered—adequately covered, anyway—in any statute now on the books. There is no statute which in terms makes it unlawful to advocate the overthrow of the Government or of all governments by force or violence. We have, it is true, our naturalization statutes, we have our immigration statutes which provide for the deportation of men who believe in the overthrow of government or of all government, of the anarchists, and so on; but there is no statute making it a distinct offense or crime to advocate the overthrow of the Government by force or violence. There is a statute which punishes a conspiracy, namely, section 6 of the Penal Code, but that section does not reach the individual criminal.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from South Dakota a question?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator think that it is essential for the enforcement of this proposed law that all hearings should be denied?

Mr. STERLING. The Senator asks me what I may term a mixed question. No; I do not think it is essential that all hearings shall be denied in any event or at all times or under all circumstances; but I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts they should be denied in the first instance, with the right upon the part of the party complaining to resort to legal proceedings for redress and to prevent the Postmaster General from prohibiting his publications going through the mails.

Mr. BORAH. May I say there again that the bill itself, so far as it is concerned, does not provide for any hearing at all? If the party gets a hearing, he must proceed under some other general law and seek the aid of the courts. I repeat, the bill itself provides for no hearings at all.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator from South Dakota at that point?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. The course that would be open to a person feeling aggrieved at the action of the Postmaster General would be to go into the courts and secure an injunction restraining the Postmaster General.

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. There may be some other course, but I do not know of any. Does the Senator know of any? Is that the method which the Senator has in mind?

Mr. STERLING. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that that is the method I have in mind.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I had in mind. Now, let me ask the Senator a question. This proposed law says that certain matter shall be unmailable. The Postmaster General passes on that question. I wish to ask the Senator, as a legal proposition, when the publisher resorts to injunction proceedings, would not the court hold that the Postmaster General was given a discretion to say whether the particular matter was contrary to law, and would not the court, even though if it had had an original hearing of the matter it might decide differently from the Postmaster General, still not set aside the action of the Postmaster General? Would it not be like the appellate court passing on the verdict of a jury—that the verdict of the jury on the question of fact submitted to the jury is binding on the court?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, granting that the Postmaster General has a discretion, it must necessarily be, under the terms of the bill, a very limited discretion; and it will be easy for the court in passing upon the question to say whether the Postmaster General has abused the discretion lodged in him under the law.

Mr. NORRIS. In the case of the verdict of a jury, if the court found that the jury had rendered its verdict without any evidence, it would set the verdict aside—I think the courts do that right along—but they draw a clear distinction; if there is evidence, the courts say, "Even though we might feel differently from what the jury felt, we still uphold the verdict of the jury, because under the law that is the function of the jury." Would not the Postmaster General occupy the same position?

I will say to the Senator from South Dakota that recently I saw a brief filed by the Department of Justice in a case now pending in the courts against a newspaper excluded from the mails by the Postmaster General, and it is alleged in that brief as one of the grounds of defense that the Postmaster General has exercised his discretion, and therefore the court has no jurisdiction to set his decision aside.

Mr. STERLING. I will say, in the main, that the Senator from Nebraska comes back to the question now, in the last analysis, of dependence on the jury——

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. STERLING. Under the rules relative to the admission of evidence or when a court will be authorized in setting aside the verdict of the jury. We can not help that, as it is our established system and custom.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KING. It does not seem to me that there is any discretion at all in the legal way—that is, there is legal discretion—but that does not mean an illegal or an arbitrary discretion. If the publication comes within the purview of the statute, then the Postmaster General, exercising a judicial discretion which is subject to review, excludes it or permits it to pass through the mails. If he adjudges that something ought not to go through the mails because it is violative of the law, the courts can review that; and if he has adjudged wrongfully, of course, his order will be set aside. Will the Senator permit me merely to call his attention very briefly to the statute which I have here?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. KING. The statute enumerates some of the cases under which the discretion of the Postmaster General—which is a legal discretion—may be exercised. The statute reads:

> Unmailable matter includes all matter which is by law, regulation, or treaty stipulation prohibited from being transmitted in the mails, or which by reason of illegible, incorrect, or insufficient address it is found impossible to forward to destination. Unmailable matter is classified as follows:
>
> (a) Matter which is insufficiently prepaid to entitle it to be dispatched in the mail.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> (c) Matter which from its harmful nature is forbidden to be in the mails.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> (f) Obscene matter.
> (g) Libelous and indecent matter.
> (h) Lottery matter.
> (i) Fraudulent matter.
> (j) Publications which violate copyrights granted by the United States.

When publications are presented for transmission through the mails and the attention of the Postmaster General is directed to them he is compelled to exercise some discretion. Is it obscene? Is it libelous and indecent? Is it lottery matter? Is it fraudulent matter? Is it a publication which violates copyrights granted by the United States? If it comes within any of those designations, then under the law it is his duty to prohibit its transmission through the mails. I concede that he may err and may sometimes exclude something from the mail that is not libelous, but the courts are open for redress.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will permit me on that point, I take it we are all agreed as to the purpose of the bill and the desirability of preventing the dissemination of appeals to overthrow the Government by force or violence; but we are conferring a very great power on the Postmaster General, who is to be guided solely by his own opinion. Let us suppose there is some newspaper which is obnoxious politically to the Postmaster General; he finds an article which he thinks can be brought under the terms of this proposed act, and thereupon declares it nonmailable. By the time the slow redress is had from the courts the paper is ruined. So the Postmaster General in that position can make a newspaper print anything he wants it to print.

Mr. STERLING. Let me say to the Senator from Massachusetts that if meanwhile the going through the mails of such publications can not be stopped a revolutionary uprising may be incited by this very matter advising the overthrow of the Government and assassination of public officials may result from that advice and that advocacy.

Mr. LODGE. I am not suggesting that it should not be stopped. I am suggesting that we want to exercise very great care in the power granted to the Postmaster General, and that is why I asked what the objection is to a hearing. I am a great believer in publicity; I should like to see the reasons of the Postmaster General stated at once.

Mr. STERLING. The fundamental proposition, Mr. President, is that the safety of the people is greater and of more concern than the temporary inconvenience of the individual whose publication may be stopped from going through the mails.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, I can very readily conceive how a Postmaster General, if so minded, might act with impropriety and injustice in the suppression of a newspaper for political or other reasons; but, as I read this bill, I can not see that there is very much, if any, danger of a wrong being perpetrated under it. Under the language of the bill the right to exclude from the mails can only be exercised where the paper or document or book really advocates "the overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property of the Government of the United States or of all government."

In order for the Postmaster General to act at all under this bill, certainly the paper or the book must come very close to the border line that is here drawn, if it does not actually cross it. It seems to me that we are in grave danger of becoming just a little too solicitous about the protection of the sacred right of the individual who wants to come just as close as he can to advocating the overthrow of the Government and keep out of jail and keep his newspaper in the mails of the United States. If we are to err at all, considering the times and the conditions, I would a good deal rather err on the side of illiberality than to err the other way; but I do not believe that there is any danger of error in that respect under the language of this bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I am as anxious to stop this sort of matter going through the mails as anyone can possibly be. We must all be anxious to accomplish that purpose, and I hope to see effective legislation on that point. I agree that often the interest of the individual must be sacrificed to the welfare of the community, but I think when we put in the hands of one man the uncontrolled power to blackmail, if he chooses, every newspaper in the country we go far beyond the rights of the individual. What I am afraid of is that under this power a Postmaster General who is unscrupulous—and such may exist—can practically compel half of the newspapers of this country, or many of them, at any rate, to take a line in politics which he wishes to have taken by the mere threat of excluding them from the mails. The redress of the court is all right, but in the case of a newspaper the time taken may mean ruin. I desire the bill to pass. I should like to see legislation of this character enacted, but we do not want to put provisions in the law which will defeat the very end at which we aim.

Mr. NEW and Mr. OVERMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WADSWORTH in the chair). The Senator from South Dakota has the floor. Does he yield?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. OVERMAN. Do I understand the Senator from Massachusetts wants a hearing before the fire can be put out? Would he let the fire go on without taking steps to check it?

Mr. LODGE. How long would it take the Postmaster General to hold a hearing? He could hold it in a morning. What I want is to have the public know why these things are done.

Mr. OVERMAN. What about obscene literature? Before such matter is excluded from the mails the parties do not go into court and get a hearing. We have never so provided; we leave it to the discretion of the Postmaster General.

Mr. LODGE. Obscenity in writing is not a parallel question at all.

Mr. OVERMAN. How about the propaganda that is now being circulated in the South in connection with which millions of documents are sent out asking the negroes to rise and help them overturn the Government and burn, destroy, and assassinate?

Mr. LODGE. Why, Mr. President, that of course ought not to be, and it ought to be put down drastically. I am speaking simply of the newspaper, and the power of the Postmaster General to blackmail.

Mr. OVERMAN. Of course, I do not see how the Senator could say that any Postmaster General or any American citizen would blackmail anybody, no matter what party he belonged to. I do not believe it.

Mr. LODGE. I do not say anybody is doing it.

Mr. OVERMAN. You have to give sound discretion to the officer. We give it in many, many instances. They will have a hearing. There is no doubt about that. We want to stop it at once, however, and then give the hearing afterwards; and if the officer has erred, public opinion and Congress and the courts will always take care of that situation and take care of him.

Mr. LODGE. In other words, hang him first and then try him afterwards.

Mr. OVERMAN. I would put out the fire before it got started in this country, before anyone is permitted to start up a revolution in this country.

Mr. LODGE. I do not disagree with the Senator about the importance of suppressing it, but it does seem to me that there ought to be some protection for innocent people who may publish an article in a newspaper that is distasteful to the Postmaster General politically, and he finds something else which he thinks can be brought under this law—perhaps it can not be brought under it, but he declares that it can be—and he destroys that newspaper.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota has the floor. Does the Senator yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. STERLING. I yield first to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, I do not want to be misunderstood at all in my position on this matter. I quite agree with the Senator from Idaho, so far as that is concerned, that it would be a perfectly infamous thing for a Postmaster General, or any other public official, for partisan political reasons, or any such unworthy consideration, to undertake to exclude a newspaper from the mails or to curtail the rights to free speech of any citizen; but once more I want to call attention to the language of this bill, and to say that I do not understand—layman that I am and not lawyer—how the language could possibly be construed so as to permit anything of the kind.

As I have said before, in order to make the publication or the individual liable under this measure, certainly the paper or book must advocate or advise the overthrow by force or violence, or the physical injury to person or property, of the Government of the United States or of all government.

It seems to me it is so clear that there is no opportunity whatever for the Postmaster General to abuse the authority that is conferred upon him by this statute. If I saw the matter in another way I should occupy a very different position on it, but I can not see how it is possible under the language of this statute for the Postmaster General to wrong the publisher. As I said before, it seems to me that we are in grave danger here of entertaining too much sympathy for and giving too much thought to protecting the "rights" of the fellow who wants to come just as close as possible to the border line of sedition, of anarchy, the overthrow of government, and still keep himself out of jail or continue his newspaper within the rights accorded him by the privileges of the mails, and so on. I think we are more apt to do that than we are to err on the other side.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from South Dakota, who has been very good-natured, will allow me to say one more word, because I think I am totally misunderstood——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. I am not seeking to protect the man who wants, directly or indirectly, to advocate such propositions as this bill inhibits. What I am afraid of is the case of the perfectly innocent man, editing a great paper or a small paper, who may have some paragraph which may be distorted into meaning something which comes within the statute because the Postmaster General does not like what he says on other subjects.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. FRANCE. During the course of a discussion of this subject of anarchy and anarchistic literature recently, one of the great metropolitan dailies, in order to point out the danger, and, indeed, the absurdity of anarchistic doctrines, printed extensive excerpts from anarchistic literature. That was done with the very purpose of showing both the danger and the absurdity of the doctrines of the anarchists. I desire to ask the Senator if that paper might not have been excluded from the mails for printing quotations from anarchistic doctrines, and, if not, indeed, how the Senator could control the publication of papers or magazines which, to evade the law, quoted from anarchistic literature?

Mr. STERLING. No, Mr. President; I do not think quotations of that kind in a newspaper opposed to the propaganda or literature, for the purpose of warning the people of the danger, would come within the meaning and spirit of the act at all.

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. FLETCHER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. STERLING. I shall yield to the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], who has been standing now for some time.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, the comments of the Senator from Massachusetts have moved me to invite the attention of the Senate to section 481 of the Postal Laws and Regulations reciting the acts of 1888 and 1909, as follows:

All matter otherwise mailable by law upon the envelope or outside cover or wrapper of which, or any postal card upon which any delineations, epithets, terms, or language of an indecent, lewd, lascivious, obscene, libelous, scurrilous, defamatory, or threatening character, or calculated by the terms or manner or style of display and obviously intended to reflect unjustly upon the character or conduct of another, may be written, printed, or otherwise impressed or apparent, are hereby declared nonmailable matter, and shall not be conveyed in the mails, nor delivered from any post office by any letter carrier and shall be withdrawn from the mails under such regulations as the Postmaster General shall prescribe.

Mr. STERLING. Will the Senator from Montana allow me to interrupt him right there? To that section which the Senator has just read has been added this, by way of an amendment, in 1911:

And the term "indecent" within the intendment of this section shall include matter of a character tending to incite arson, murder, or assassination.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, there is provision for a hearing in the case of anyone charged with a violation of this provision of the act, so far as the introduction of the matter in the mails is concerned. When the Postmaster General finds such matter in the mails or when any of his subordinates find such matter in the mails, he refuses to send it. Moreover, in the case of one who is found to be sending through the mails matter which is fraudulent, the Postmaster General puts out an order refusing him permission to use the mails, and declines to allow him to receive any matter which comes through the mails.

Mr. President, the statute to which I have invited your attention reposes in the discretion of the Postmaster General the exclusion from the mails of matter which is libelous, which is scurrilous, which is indecent. Why, if the Postmaster General is given the power suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts by the bill under consideration here, of requiring the publisher of a newspaper to print anything that he declares he shall print—in other words, the power to exercise any control over his utterances, editorial or otherwise—he has already been given that power by the statute passed 10 years ago.

Mr. LODGE. I did not mean to suggest that the power had not been already abused. I think it has been.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes; but the complaint the Senator makes is that the policy which has long been adopted with respect to this matter is all wrong. Of course, if we grant to the Postmaster General the right to exclude from the mails matter which is defamatory in character, which is libelous in character, which is scandalous in character, as he thinks, without any hearing at all upon the matter, and then we require him to allow to pass through the mails, without any hesitation at all and without any interference upon his part, matter which advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence, do we not really have him swallow the camel and then balk at a gnat?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. STERLING. I do.

Mr. BORAH. May I say to the Senator that so far as I am individually concerned, I can not recall when I have not protested against just such outrages as the Senator is now speaking of. I say that there is absolutely no necessity in this country of injuring a citizen without giving him a hearing.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. On that, of course, there may be differences of opinion; and let me remark, in answer to the Senator, that we are obliged to pursue one of two courses. We must either permit the general public to be injured often by allowing this thing to go on without any interference until after a hearing is had, or we must take the chances—and, of course, there are chances—of sometimes injuring an individual by an unjust decision of the Postmaster General. Here is matter which is declared by this statute to be unmailable, and the Postmaster General is required, as he is required in these other statutes, to refuse transmission of it through the mails. Now, that must go at once. The Senator asks for a hearing. Meanwhile, what will be done with the mail? Will it be held? That is all we ask—that it shall be held until a determination can be made. But the Senator does not want that. He does not want it held until a hearing can be had. He wants it to go through, and let it do its harm to the public.

Mr. BORAH. How does the Senator know that the Senator from Idaho does not want that?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Because the Senator has not offered anything else.

Mr. BORAH. I have offered something. The amendment I have offered provides that the mail shall go through. But I want a hearing, and if the Senator will provide a method by which the party may be publicly and speedily heard, before an impartial tribunal, with his witnesses, and present his case, I would be willing that you shall hold the matter until the hearing is had.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is a very simple matter. The Senator, then, simply desires an advantage given to the circulator of this kind of literature which is denied to the circulator of other unmailable literature.

Mr. BORAH. No; I do not desire anything of the kind. If it were within my power, I would write into every one of these statutes the right to be heard. I would write it into any kind of a statute. I would not erect here upon the American Continent the doctrine of Lenin and Trotski by denying a man the right to be heard, and condemning him beforehand. That is their doctrine. It is said that just as soon as they got in power they destroyed all papers and publications which they believed to be against their government, and did so without a hearing. With halting footsteps we are following their methods, condemning and ruining men and their business without a hearing.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I merely desire to remark that I have been here with the Senator for seven years, and I have yet to learn of his introduction of any bill looking to the modification of the statutes to which I have invited attention.

Mr. BORAH. I can refer the Senator to time and time again when I have advocated this same proposition that I am advocating now and with the same success, no doubt, that I will gain at this time.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I recall very well that the Senator has been consistent in his position. He has resisted every attempt to enforce this principle, in connection with the espionage law, and in connection with every other law along these lines. But that is not what I am talking about. I am talking about the position of opposition which the Senator occupies with reference to the specific legislation, remaining silent with reference to all such legislation that is on the statute books.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, a word or two in conclusion, and in calling attention to the two remaining sections of the bill, sections 4 and 5.

Section 4 provides—

That it shall be unlawful to import or cause to be imported into the United States or any place subject to its jurisdiction any matter declared by section 3 of this act to be nonmailable or to transport or cause to be transported any such matter from one State to another or into any place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Section 5 provides a penalty for the violation of any of the provisions of the law, and provides also that any alien convicted under the law shall be deported and forever barred from reentering the United States or any territory under its jurisdiction.

Mr. President, I can conceive of no greater crime than the overthrow of the Government of the United States, or than an attempt by force or violence to overthrow the Government of the United States. How can any true American regard it as anything else than the greatest of crimes? It involves the welfare and the happiness of 110,000,000 people who believe in free government and free institutions. That is what is involved in the overthrow or the attempt to overthrow the Government of the United States.

Mr. President, it is a greater crime than to send obscene literature through the mail; it is a greater crime than to send libelous or indecent wrappers or envelopes through the mail; it is a greater crime than to promote a lottery scheme or to send lottery tickets through the mail; it is a greater crime than to attempt to use the mail for the purpose of promoting a fraudulent scheme or enterprise; it is a greater crime than to use the mail for the purpose of bringing about the transportation of liquors, prohibited under the law; to overthrow the Government of the United States or to attempt to overthrow it is a greater crime, Mr. President, than any of these. It is a greater crime than murder; it is a greater crime than arson; it is a greater crime than individual assassination, a great deal. Yet we find Senators here, Mr. President, protesting against section 3 of the bill, which gives the Postmaster General the power to prevent the use of the mails for the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the United States. They object to it and seem to feel sensitive in regard to it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator will not do us the injustice of saying that we are sensitive in regard to it. The Senator says we object to excluding printed matter from the mail which advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States. That is not the position which anyone takes here. The position which we take is that it shall be fairly determined that it is literature which advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States before it is excluded. The whole question here turns on the proposition of a fair and impartial hearing.

Mr. STERLING. Yes; and the position I take in opposition to the Senator's position is that it must necessarily and for all practical purposes be left to one man in the first instance to decide and before the harm is done, before the uprising as a result of this propaganda comes about, before the assassinations result. That is the idea of giving one man the summary power, which it may seem to be, to at once stop that matter from going through the mail.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I want to read a paragraph here which has been excluded from the mail under the discretion of the Postmaster General, and I want to ask the Senator under what law he thinks it is excluded. It is one of a series of articles, but I ask upon what ground could it be even one of a series:

President Wilson's talent for mobilizing noble ideas in support of whatever he has decided to do will be almost as helpful to the Entente as his armies. There are signs that the plain people of the world in their weariness are growing dubious of a war whose concrete purposes are kept secret from them. They are tactless enough to keep wondering, and even asking to know, what they are fighting about. Russia takes the lead in posing this question to the Entente, because in Russia the official crust has been lifted off and the people are able to stand up and speak. But the question is there in all the countries, and the gentlemen in charge are exercised to know how to answer without telling any facts. President Wilson shows them how to answer with abstract ideas, and that is why he is so popular with the statesmen of the Entente.

Under what law is that excluded?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I am not able to say just at this time.

Mr. BORAH. No; nor can anyone else.

Mr. STERLING. I have no knowledge of the provision of law under which that was excluded, unless it was under that provision which prohibits the discouragement of enlistments in the Army of the United States in time of war.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. NELSON. The article read by the Senator from Idaho is one of a group of articles contained in that paper, and it is not exactly fair to say that the paper was excluded from the mails on account of that particular article. It was excluded because of a series of articles.

Mr. BORAH. Precisely so.

Mr. NELSON. That was only one of them. But there were a great many other articles that were ten times as bad.

Mr. BORAH. That is precisely what I wanted to show. The Postmaster General takes a publication, running through months and months, and he finds a paragraph somewhere which he thinks should be excluded. But it is not sufficiently strong, and he undertakes to build up what in his discretion he denounces as unmailable matter by putting in different publications like this. What trait could this have given to any publication which would make it unmailable?

Mr. STERLING. Does the Senator refer to something found in the answer of the Postmaster General to the New York Call proposition?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. STERLING. The proposition there was as to whether the New York Call did not persist in a course of publishing matter which was objectionable and should be excluded from the mails, not on account of one single item at all, as the Senator from Minnesota said, but item after item, having more or less of a tendency to discourage enlistments.

Mr. BORAH. In other words, the law upon the statute book and the law which you will put upon the statute book will enable the Postmaster General to censor any paper that he desires to censor. That is precisely what you are creating here—a censorship.

Mr. STERLING. No.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. NEW. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] asks under what law the Postmaster General took the action referred to in that case. It certainly was not under the bill now under discussion. It was under a law that existed at that time, if under any, and perhaps under none. As to that, I do not know. But it certainly was not under this bill. I do not think that this bill, if it should become a law, will affect the rights or provinces of the Postmaster General at all. It does not add to or detract from the right which he has employed in any action that he has taken in the past. This refers to one subject only; that is, the advocacy of the overthrow of the Government of the United States, or that which tends in that direction.

Mr. BORAH. I am cognizant of that fact. But what I was undertaking to say was that under these different laws, as built up and as we are enlarging them from day to day, it establishes a censorship in the Postmaster General's office here in the city of Washington. That is precisely what is done.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, a moment ago the Senator from South Dakota alluded to the case of the New York Call. I wish he would give his judgment on the case of the Metropolitan Magazine, with which he is doubtless familiar, in which case the Postmaster General exercised his discretion, and in which, after doing a very grave injury to the magazine, he reversed his own judgment.

Mr. STERLING. I am unable to give any judgment in regard to the Metropolitan Magazine, I will say to the Senator. I am not familiar with the details of that case.

Mr. McCORMICK. May I ask the Senator, then, if he will acquaint himself with the facts before the resumption of this debate on another day, to the end that the discretion of the Postmaster General may be considered in the light of those facts?

Mr. STERLING. It simply would show this, that the Postmaster General held in a later opinion that he had erred in making a former ruling. In any given case, as in the case of obscene literature, or the case of using the mails for the purpose of promoting a fraudulent scheme, there may be an error on the part of the Postmaster General. There may be an error on the part of any head of department when intrusted with a matter that is at all within his discretion. You can not avoid that, Mr. President.

Now, just this word in closing. Reference has been made again and again to section 3, and this section of the bill seems to invite the opposition of Senators who have engaged in this colloquy. I appreciate what has been said by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. NEW] in pointing out the very clear language of section 3. I stated awhile ago, with the same thought in mind, that the discretion of the Postmaster General must be exercised within very narrow limits under the very terms of the bill, because it reads "any document, book, circular, paper, journal, or other written or printed communication, in or by which there is advised the overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property of the Government of the United States," and so forth.

Can the Postmaster General determine on inspection that such is the very language of the publication, or that the language of the publication is such that the fair inference or conclusion to be drawn from it is that it so advises and advocates the overthrow of the Government? That is the discretion and all the discretion that he can exercise.

Mr. President, I read in the hearing of the Senate this morning certain excerpts from radical propaganda where revolution by force was advocated, concerning which I think neither the Postmaster General nor any other man who heard it would say that literature like that did not come within the prohibition of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is House bill 3184.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I know that the other bill is up, and I do not mean to delay it for a moment, but simply make a request. The answer that is made to anyone who suggests that this law should be made not only effective but safe, namely, that he favors the overthrow of the Government of the United States, seems to me to be an inadequate answer. I do not think it is well founded. As to what purposes these powers may be put, I ask that there may be reprinted from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 25, 1918, page 7054, a letter of Col. Roosevelt, which was printed then at the request of the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER]. It contains some cases cited by Col. Roosevelt by which great newspapers and publications which were supporting the war in the most loyal possible way were injured and broken down on the ground that they were treasonable because they criticized the administration.

I ask to have Col. Roosevelt's letter reprinted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request is granted.

The letter is as follows:

THE KANSAS CITY STAR,
OFFICE OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
347 MADISON AVENUE,
New York, May 22, 1918.

MY DEAR SENATOR POINDEXTER: The following article from me appeared in the Kansas City Star on May 7, 1918:

"SEDITION, A FREE PRESS, AND PERSONAL RULE.

"The legislation now being enacted by Congress should deal drastically with sedition. It should also guarantee the right of the press and people to speak the truth freely of all their public servants, including the President, and to criticize them in the severest terms of truth whenever they come short in their public duty. Finally, Congress should grant the Executive the amplest powers to act as an Executive and should hold him to stern accountability for failure so to act, but it should itself do the actual lawmaking and should clearly define the lines and limits of action and should retain and use the fullest powers of investigation into the supervision over such action. Sedition is a form of treason. It is an offense against the country, not against the President. At this time to oppose the draft or sending our armies to Europe, to uphold Germany, to attack our allies, to oppose raising the money necessary to carry on the war are at least forms of moral sedition, while to act as a German spy or to encourage German spies, to use money or intrigue in the corrupt service of Germany, to tamper with our war manufactures and to encourage our soldiers to desert or to fail in heir duty, and all similar actions, are forms of undoubtedly illegal sedition. For some of these offenses death should be summarily inflicted. For all the punishment should be severe.

"The administration has been gravely remiss in dealing with such acts.

"Free speech, exercised both individually and through a free press, is a necessity in any country where the people are themselves free. Our Government is the servant of the people, whereas in Germany it is the master of the people. This is because the American people are free and the German people are not free. The President is merely the most important among a large number of public servants. He should be supported or opposed exactly to the degree which is warranted by his good conduct or bad conduct, his efficiency or inefficiency, in rendering loyal, able, and disinterested service to the Nation as a whole. Therefore it is absolutely necessary that there should be full liberty to tell the truth about his acts, and this means that it is exactly as necessary to blame him when he does wrong as to praise him when he does right. Any other attitude in an American citizen is both base and servile. To announce that there must be no criticism of the President, or that we are to stand by the President, right or wrong, is not only unpatriotic and servile, but is morally treasonable to the American public. Nothing but the truth should be spoken about him or anyone else. But it is even more important to tell the truth, pleasant or unpleasant, about him than about anyone else.

"During the last year the administration has shown itself anxious to punish the newspapers which uphold the war but which have told the truth about the administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently, whereas it has failed to proceed against various powerful newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country, as these papers upheld the administration and defended its inefficiency. Therefore no additional power should be given the administration to deal with papers for criticizing the administration. And, moreover, Congress should closely scrutinize the way the Postmaster General and Attorney General have already exercised discrimination between the papers they prosecuted and the papers they failed to prosecute.

"Congress should give the President full power for efficient executive action. It should not abrogate its own power. It should define how he is to reorganize the administration. It should say how large an army we are to have and not leave the decision to the amiable Secretary of War, who has for two years shown such inefficiency. It should declare for an army of 5,000,000 men and inform the Secretary that it would give him more the minute he asks for more."

Thereupon Postmaster General Burleson issued the following statement:

"OFFICE OF INFORMATION,
"POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
"May 8, 1918.

"Postmaster General Burleson to-day made the following statement with reference to the editorial signed by Col. Roosevelt which appeared in this morning's paper.

"Ex-President Roosevelt in the newspapers this morning made the following statement:

"'During the last year the administration has shown itself anxious to punish the newspapers which upheld the war but which told the truth about the administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently, whereas it has failed to proceed against various powerful newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country, as those papers upheld the administration and defended the inefficiency.'

"This statement, taken in connection with other published statements of Mr. Roosevelt, is manifestly aimed at the administration of the Postal Service. It is either true or false. If true, I am utterly unworthy of trust and should be scourged from office in disgrace. If false, right-thinking men and women will form their own opinion of the man who uttered it. Its truth or falsity is easily demonstrable. I invite Mr. Roosevelt to name the papers or magazines which have 'upheld the war but which told the truth about the administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently' which have been 'punished' by the Post Office Department. I invite Mr. Roosevelt to name the newspapers or magazines, powerful or otherwise, 'which have opposed the war and attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country' in such manner as to violate the law, which have not been proceeded against by this department.

"Failure on the part of Mr. Roosevelt to respond is to admit his inability to do so."

As this was issued officially by the Postmaster General, I desire that a permanent record shall be made of my answer and of the facts that led up to my statement to which the Postmaster General took exception and which caused him to issue his challenge to me to prove my statement. I therefore wish to put these facts before you in full.

I insert as appendixes to this letter the editorial in the Metropolitan Magazine, in the issue which the New York post office attempted to suppress, this editorial being entitled "Put the blame where it belongs," and my article in the Metropolitan on "Lincoln and free speech," together with the Metropolitan statement as to its war record (p. 6, May Metropolitan).

I deal with Mr. Burleson and his actions purely because he is the representative of President Wilson, exactly as is Secretary Baker, exactly as is Mr. Creel. President Wilson is responsible for everything that Postmaster General Burleson and Secretary Baker and Mr. Creel do or leave undone. Nothing that any one of these gentlemen says, nothing that any one of them does, and nothing that any one of them leaves undone is of the slightest importance, except because he is President Wilson's representative, appointed by President Wilson to a position of high governmental importance in a great crisis and serving as the medium through which President Wilson carries out his policies affecting this country. This is, of course, equally true of all of President Wilson's other appointees. I have scant patience with the timidity or the folly which dares not hold accountable the source of power and only ventures to express displeasure with the instrument through which the power is exercised. Messrs. Burleson, Baker, Creel, and their associates possess no importance whatever except that accruing to them because it is through them that the President speaks and acts or refuses or fails to act. As the above article shows, I was not speaking of Mr. Burleson in particular, but of the administration of which he is a part, of the President whose servant he is.

The reason for my comment in the Kansas City Star and for my previous article in the Metropolitan Magazine is that since the war began the administration has used the very great war powers of the Government over the public press to stifle honest criticism of governmental inefficiency or misconduct, while condoning (which necessarily means encouraging) pro-German, anti-Ally, and therefore anti-American agitation in certain powerful papers which defended this inefficiency and misconduct; and it has sought from Congress a great addition to the already existing power it has thus misused. I believe that the first article of the Constitution guarantees the right of the people to criticize truthfully the conduct of their public servants, and that this right can not be taken away by any law. But the average man is naturally and properly afraid to challenge a law backed by the whole power of the United States Government, even although it may be his belief that ultimately the law will be held unconstitutional.

Our governmental officers, from the President down, are of right the servants of the people, not the rulers of the people. This is the fundamental difference between an autocracy and a democracy. The Hohenzollerns are the rulers of Germany, and the Germans are the subjects of the Hohenzollerns, not their fellow citizens. On the contrary, our Presidents are not the rulers of the American people, but the servants of the American people, and the rest of the people are their fellow citizens. Our duty is to stand by the country. It is our duty to stand by the President—as by every other official—just so long as he stands by the country. It is no less our duty to oppose him whenever, and to the same extent that, he does not stand by the country. If we fail to oppose him under such conditions we are guilty of moral treason to the country. The President and our other public officials are subject to the laws just like the rest of us. It is an infamy untruthfully to assail our public servants—or anyone else. But it is our duty to tell the truth about our public servants, whether the truth be pleasant or unpleasant. The higher the public servant and the more important his task, the more careful we should be to speak only the truth about him; and the more necessary it is that we should tell the full truth about him.

During the past year the action of the administration, taken largely through the Post Office Department, has been such as to render it a matter of some danger for any man, and especially any newspaper, to speak the truth, if that truth be unpleasant to the governmental authorities at Washington. The effect of this attitude has been very marked politically. Such coercive power tends to make upright men, even though they are strong men, cautious about telling truths which ought to be told. It forces weak men to praise the administration whether it does well or ill. It invites unscrupulous men who desire to serve Germany to gain license to do so and to secure advantage by praising the administration, especially when it has acted wrongfully or inefficiently, and by supporting it politically. There are cases where all competent and honest observers are morally certain that political support has been given, and is now being given, to the administration by various newspapers, especially German-American and semisocialistic newspapers, because of the club thus held over them by the administration. From the very nature of the case there can rarely be positive proof in such cases. But as regards the most striking cases of favoritism, those concerning the Hearst papers, as compared with the suppression of Tom Watson's paper, and the attack (for nominally wholly different reasons) on the Metropolitan, I herein give the facts, which prove exactly what I have alleged. The Postmaster General has raised the issue; I meet it squarely, and he shall not evade it. The administration has successfully endeavored to prevent expression of opinion hostile to it and to put a premium upon supporting the President personally and politically without regard to whether his actions are detrimental or beneficial to the country.

The administration, through the Publicity Bureau, under the lead of Mr. Creel, is conducting a gigantic news propaganda with the public money. Mr. Creel's activities are exercised nominally on behalf of the country, but in reality primarily on behalf of the administration. Mr. Creel announces and publishes himself as the special representative of the President, and is permitted by the President so to announce and publish himself. He assails the publications that truthfully expose the shortcomings of the administration; and, without regard to the facts, he, personally and through his bureau, actively upholds the administration as regards those matters, such as the aircraft program, in which there have been grave governmental shortcomings. This is partisan political propaganda of the very worst type, carried on with public moneys, under the guise of public work. The editor of the Metropolitan wrote Mr. Creel, on March 7:

"Is it right that you should use the time and money of your bureau, which is supported by the American taxpayers, to defend members of the administration from criticism in the public press? Are you not in fact the personal press agent of the President and members of the administration?"

What the editor of the Metropolitan thus stated in the form of a query should be stated affirmatively as an unquestioned fact.

I have said so much by the way of making the general situation clear. Now, as to Postmaster General Burleson's challenge. This can be divided into two parts: First, Mr. Burleson denies that the administration has ever discriminated improperly against any publication, and, second, he denies that it has ever failed to proceed against any publication which ought to have been proceeded against.

First. The Metropolitan Magazine, Collier's Weekly, and the New York Tribune have consistently upheld the war. They eagerly demanded that we should go to war, they supported the President in going to war, they have cordially upheld every measure for prosecuting the war. But they have also told, not all of the truth, but some small portion of the truth, which it was absolutely necessary to tell, about the administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently. They have only told even this small portion of the truth when it was imperative so to do, in order to speed up the war and to prevent perseverance in inefficiency. All three publications have been attacked by Mr. Creel officially, speaking as President Wilson's representative and "as giving a message from the United States Government to the American people." (I quote from The Independent.) The Post Office Department, through the New York postmaster, on March 2 last, notified the publishers of the Metropolitan Magazine that its March issue was nonmailable under the espionage act. This action was widely published throughout the country. It was calculated to do great damage to the Metropolitan. It was precisely the kind of action which, as I know by having been so assured again and again by various editors, was the reason why these editors have been afraid to tell the truth or even a small part of the truth about our governmental inefficiency or misdeeds. The article on which the action was nominally based was by a man who had written articles of exactly the same kind in a publication, the New Republic, which, however, is a political supporter of Mr. Wilson, and has not been interfered with. The Metropolitan is not a political supporter of Mr. Wilson and was interfered with, yet the Metropolitan has upheld the war far more zealously than the New Republic. The Metropolitan immediately asked the postmaster of New York for the grounds of his action, but got no answer. On March 9 it telegraphed the Postmaster General, asking whether the action was taken by the order of the Postmaster General, and, if not, what steps the Postmaster General would take to repair the damage done to the Metropolitan Magazine. On March 11 the Postmaster General replied to the Metropolitan, stating that accusations had been made that an article in the Metropolitan was a traitorous effusion, but that he did not know whether the complaints were justified, and that no order had been issued about it by the department. He did not answer the Metropolitan's question as to what steps would be taken to repair the damage done it by the conduct of the New York postmaster. On the same day the New York postmaster wrote the Metropolitan reversing his action of March 2, but making no apology and making no excuse. On March 12 the editor of the Metropolitan wrote to Mr. Burleson, saying among other things, "You must remember that there are a great number of pacifists and pro-Germans in this country who would willingly put the Metropolitan Magazine out of business because it is the most strongly pro-Ally and anti-German publication in the country," calling attention to the fact that a statement attributed to the solicitor general of the department was obviously not in accord with the facts, and that the Metropolitan could not accept newspaper statements without confirmation from the Postmaster General, and asking for a written statement from the Postmaster General in the matter. He has received no such statement, nor has any attempt been made by the Post Office Department to remedy the wrong it did by the postmaster at New York.

At the same time one of the advertisers in the Metropolitan, Mr. E. M. Mansur, of Floral Park, N. Y., received a letter from a man in Chicago suggesting that he withdraw his advertisement because of the editorials in the Metropolitan Magazine. Mr. Mansur declined to withdraw it. On April 3 he notified the Metropolitan that a special agent of the United States Department of Justice named James A. Corcoran, with shield No. 436, giving his address as Box 241, Park Row, New York City, called on him with copies of the letters of this Chicago man to him and of the replies and asked if Mr. Mansur had stopped advertising, and wanted to know if he was going on advertising next year, and then if he were an American citizen. The last query, taken in connection with the first two, contained, of course, an implication that was in effect a threat. This shows that the Department of Justice had knowledge of the attempt to boycott the Metropolitan and lent its official power to further it, unless the man in question had stolen the special agent's shield which he possessed and forged his name and address.

The above facts Mr. Burleson has not denied and can not truthfully deny, and they absolutely demonstrate the exactness of my statement, so far as the administration's effort to punish the publications which upheld the war but have told the truth about the administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently.

Now, for the second part of my statement: The prime example of failure by the administration to proceed against newspapers which oppose the war or attack our allies and therefore directly or indirectly aid Germany is afforded by the failure of the administration to deal with Mr. Hearst's papers as it has dealt with certain other papers. Mr. Hearst is a very wealthy man, reputed to be much more than a millionaire, owning a dozen newspapers, more or less, and a half dozen magazines, in different parts of the country. At the very beginning of the war the Government proceeded successfully against Tom Watson's publication in Georgia. I entirely disagreed with Tom Watson's general political philosophy; I was utterly opposed to his contention that drafted men should not be sent overseas to fight; I regarded him as a narrow, although an upright and sincere, man. But he had done nothing that was anything like as dangerous to this country and our allies and as helpful to Germany as Mr. Hearst was at that very time doing. The circulation of Mr. Watson's paper was very small compared to Mr. Hearst's papers, his wealth and influence were infinitesimal compared to Mr. Hearst's wealth and influence, and he had denounced Germany and even advocated war against Germany, whereas Mr. Hearst had in numerous editorials opposed our going to war, attacked Germany's foes, and defended Germany. Yet the administration crushed Tom Watson, a poor man, while it tolerated and then encouraged wealthy, powerful Mr. Hearst. Tom Watson's paper was not the only small paper the Postmaster General attacked and hampered for doing far less than Mr. Hearst's papers had done. The New York News is edited by George W. Harris, a colored man, for the colored race. Under date of May 2 last Mr. Harris, the editor, received a notice from the postmaster of New York that the issue of that date had been "withheld from dispatch through the mails pending advice from the Solicitor for the Post Office Department as to whether this issue is mailable." One of the editors of the paper informs me that Mr. Harris called at the post office in New York to ascertain the reason of this order, but was not given any reason. The only explanation the editors could think of was that the paper had contained a protest against an alleged order of a colonel in the Army "directing colored officers not to enforce upon white inferiors a military salute." Certainly nothing in this humble paper warranted the administration, through the Post Office Department, in attacking it, while at the same time not venturing to interfere with the wealthy Hearst papers.

Mr. Burleson, however, while he will pardon certain proadministration papers, even although they are antiwar, will nevertheless occasionally attack not only antiwar but prowar and even proadministration, radical papers, if he objects to their radicalism. Two entirely responsible persons have called my attention to the suppression of one issue of a radical magazine called The Public. This has been an entirely prowar magazine. In its issue of March 30 it urged editorially "heavier taxation of unearned incomes and of excess profits" and the raising of more money by direct taxation in preference to bond issues. Apparently, as far as the editors can make out, it was because of this article this issue was suppressed. A former editor of the paper writes me that it is possible that Mr. Burleson objected to the paper because of an account of an interview with him on October 12 last, in which he was quoted as stating his lack of sympathy with the proposition that a man ought not to get his money from the ownership of land which was tilled by tenants, and the ground that he could not be expected to favor a public policy where his interest lay on the other side of the proposition. "As a landowner you can't expect me to believe that," he is reported as saying. It does not appear, however, that any steps were taken because of this article. The question, therefore, is as to the right of The Public to print the editorial in the issue of March 30. The question as to our belief or our disbelief in the soundness of this editorial has nothing whatever to do with the case. There are plenty of conservative doctrines with which I emphatically disagree, and also plenty of radical doctrines with which I disagree, and if it should happen that on either side of the case I found myself in agreement with Mr. Burleson I should, nevertheless, adhere to my beliefs. But, unless these doctrines were seditious, or represented the kind of immorality and incitement to violence or other unlawful conduct (which would properly bring them under the law), I would fight as stoutly for the right of the editor to publish them as I would fight for my own right to publish articles against them. Such action as that of Mr. Burleson does not help the war; on the contrary, it tends to keep people so angry with the agents of the war that they become and remain hostile to the war itself.

There could be no more striking example of discrimination than that furnished by the contrast between the treatment of a paper like Mr. Watson's and papers like those of Mr. Hearst; there was severity of treatment for the helpless, while the strong were given complete immunity.

There is no need to rely upon my statement that the Metropolitan has been a loyal, prowar, pro-American publication. In a letter published by Mr. Creel, since Mr. Burleson's statement was published, he states: "We reply to the Metropolitan for the very reason that we do not reply to antiwar or anti-American papers. They are known to be what they are, but the reputation of the Metropolitan for loyalty gives weight to its misstatements." This is, as shown by the use of the word "we," a complete and full acknowledgment on the part of Mr. Creel that my statements with regard to the administration in this matter are correct. It is a complete and full acknowledgment that the administration acts against a publication whose loyalty is unquestioned, but which attacks the kind of governmental inefficiency which tells in favor of Germany, although at the same time the administration does not act against the "antiwar or anti-American papers"—so long, I may add incidentally, as these papers champion the administration and apologize for the inefficiency of its actions.

Since the Postmaster General's challenge to me was made public, private citizens have taken against the Hearst papers the action which the administration has refused to take. The New York American, in publishing President Wilson's Memorial Day proclamation omitted that part of the proclamation which contained the prayer for victory, although it printed the part containing the prayer for peace—a proceeding entirely in consonance with Mr. Hearst's advocacy of a "peace without victory." In Poughkeepsie, according to a special dispatch to the New York Herald of May 13, a party of Grand Army veterans protested against such action by procuring every available copy of the American and burning them in the courthouse square, the veterans explaining, through Maj. Louis C. Dietz, organizer of the local Loyal Service League, that they did this because they regarded the action of the New York American as an attempt "to fool the people of this country by publishing articles that are perfectly agreeable to the Kaiser's Government and to traitors and pro-Germans that are in this country." At the same time, according to the statements in the New York Times and New York World, the mayor and common council of Mount Vernon, N. Y., barred the Hearst papers for the period of the war from Mount Vernon, the mover of the ordnance reading various extracts from Mr. Hearst's papers which he said moved him to take the action he did, while the mayor announced that he signed the bill because he wished "to put a curb on the Kaiser or any of his agents" and that "Mount Vernon will not stand for anything or anyone not wholly American at this time." The mayor of Summit, N. J., is reported to have succeeded in getting the news dealers to refuse to handle the Hearst publications.

I have before me at the moment copies of the New York American editorials of May 11, May 20, June 1, 1915, and an editorial of June 6, 1915, signed by Mr. Hearst himself, dealing with the Lusitania question and stating that Germany's action was right about the Lusitania; that "the Lusitania incident is, of course, no cause for a declaration of war," and that we had no just cause for complaint in the matter—saying that we "had no right to make this demand * * * that Germany suspend her submarine warfare against the commerce of the Allies"; that we had "no right to question Germany's use of submarines in her warfare upon British commerce"; and that the Lusitania was an English vessel and properly "subject to destruction," and that its destruction by the German submarine was in accordance with the authorized and accepted rules of warfare, and that Germany's methods of submarine warfare "were none of our business." The Hearst papers continued to try to make our people range themselves against England, and therefore in favor of Germany, and to appeal to the people of the United States to put the safety of their dollars above the safety of their women and children. In the issue of the New York American of August 25, 1915, is an editorial headed, "Must the United States be a cat's-paw for England against Germany?" There is not a word in this editorial about the German murder of our women and children on the high seas, not a word protesting against Germany's taking the lives of our citizens, but a scream against England because she had made cotton contraband of war! No American can read this editorial in the Hearst papers of that date without hanging his head in shame that such papers should at this time be backed by the American administration.

Let the administration recall that Mr. Hearst was writing these editorials, week after week, month after month, during the time succeeding the sinking of the Lusitania. On December 5 last, Secretary Baker, the official representative of the President in all matters relating to the war, said, as reported in the public press: "From the moment the Lusitania was sent to a watery grave by the hands of the assassin the United States had only two choices. The United States could have crawled on its knees to the Hohenzollerns, crying out that their frightfulness and their military efficiency were too great, and that we submit and become their vassal, or as an alternative we could fight. We chose to fight." This is the description by President Wilson's Secretary of War of the course (that we become the vassal of Germany) which Mr. Hearst, through his papers, did his utmost to get the American people to adopt.

After we went into the war, on April 11, 1917, Mr. Hearst wrote: "Stripping our country of men, money, and food is a dangerous policy. Our earnest suggestion to the Congress is that it imperatively refuse to permit the further draining of our food supplies and our military supplies to Europe." This was equivalent to a demand that after going to war we should turn around and help Germany more than if we had continued to remain neutral. On April 24, 1917, the New York American said: "The painful truth is that we are being practically used as a mere reinforcement of England's warfare and England's future aggrandizement." This was an effort against our ally and an effort to pander to anti-English prejudice in the interest of our foes, and nothing else. On May 17, it advocated our spending all our money on preparing our Army and Navy here at home "and so compelling Germany if she wants to fight to come to us," which was, of course, equivalent to arguing that we would render no aid to defeat Germany until she had defeated our allies and was prepared to attack us single-handed. On May 25, the same paper said of the efforts to float the Liberty loan: "If you want our food and wealth sent abroad to help suffering England, buy a Liberty bond, furnish the sinews of war." In view of Hearst's continued effort to excite hatred between the United States and England, the implication of this sentence can not be mistaken. In the very next sentence he subtly attempts to appeal to all men with a feeling of affection for Germany by intimating that whoever purchased a Liberty bond desired to see Germany not merely defeated but "dismembered." On July 27, the New York American spoke of our soldiers being sent over "to be offered up in bloody sacrifice to the ambition of contending nations on foreign battle fields." On November 22 it spoke of our "interfering in Europe's quarrels."

It is absolutely impossible to reconcile the Government's action in proceeding against Tom Watson's paper with its failure to proceed against Mr. Hearst's papers, on any theory that justice was to be done alike to the strong and to the weak.

The above quotations from Mr. Hearst's papers and many others like them may be found in recent issues of the New York Tribune. The Government had full notice about Hearst's, because the allies had barred him from the cable service, and only through the good offices of this Government have these privileges just now been restored to Mr. Hearst. Nor is this all. A mass meeting of thousands of citizens of New York was held in Carnegie Hall on November 2, 1917, under the auspices of the American Defense Society to protest against the spirit of disloyalty shown by certain persons, especially Mr. Hearst. Mr. James M. Beck delivered an address dealing for the most part with Mr. Hearst. This portion of the address I have also included in the appendixes. The New York Times, among other papers, printed this address almost in full. The Government, therefore, had full warning and full knowledge of all of Mr. Hearst's activities. Mr. Hearst's papers have defended our war inefficiencies, have apologized for the failures in the war program, and have even denied such breakdowns as that in the aircraft program. It is true that since we entered the war Mr. Hearst has at various times issued editorials professing great patriotic zeal; but it was at the very time when in other editorials he was attacking the allies of America, England and Japan, in the most offensive way, and at the very time when he was upholding the Russian Bolshevists, who had made Russia a traitor to the free nations of the world and a subservient ally of the German autocracy. Such action can not fail to give aid and comfort to Germany.

By turning to the New York Tribune of May 8, 1918, Postmaster General Burleson will find an ardent tribute paid by the former German correspondent of the Koelnische Zeitung to Mr. Hearst and Mr. Hearst's editor in chief, Mr. Arthur Brisbane, for having been "auxiliaries of valued influence" to Germany, especially because of "the editorials in the Hearst newspapers." In the New York Times of August 14, 1917, there is a quotation by special cable, via The Hague, from the German Vossiche Zeitung, which states that the "antiwar movement in America is gaining in strength" and that "war propagandists in the New York press have lately met stout resistance from no other than Mr. Hearst and his 30 papers by the issuance of warnings to the people about the danger of plunging into European war," and continues to speak of "the generous nature of the work he had done for Germany," and that Mr. Hearst "preached" in behalf of the central powers. Mr. Hearst earned the praise thus given him by the servants of the Kaiser, and during the time when he was earning it the Kaiser was saying to Ambassador Gerard, as the latter recites in his book: "America had better look out after this war. I shall stand no nonsense from America after the war"—which the ambassador reported to the administration at Washington, without, by the way, producing any effect upon the administration.

Mr. Brisbane in the Washington Times ably followed Mr. Hearst's lead. On August 8, 1917, it said: "The most powerful and effective peace worker in this country is William Randolph Hearst. The world wants peace. It is more important than victory." On July 16, 1917, when Russia was under a democratic government and still a fighting ally of the United States against Germany, Mr. Brisbane's paper, the Washington Times, said: "Anarchy rules in Russia; somebody must do something. The natural somebody is Germany, right next door to Russia * * *; the civilization of western Europe may be very grateful to Germany if the war finds Germany with enough strength left to undertake the maintaining of order in Russia, developing the resources there and making a few billion of rubles in the process." It seems literally incredible that a paper making an utterance like this could have been left unmolested by an administration that had proceeded against poor Tom Watson—and this paper was published within two blocks of the White House. On August 21, 1917, this paper said: "We have lent to our allies about two thousand millions * * *; this we lent our allies to help in the game of murder."

I commend these facts to Mr. Burleson, and also to his Cabinet associate, Mr. Daniels, in view of their recent telegrams of congratulations to Mr. Brisbane upon assuming charge of certain Chicago papers, reported as being Hearst papers. These telegrams have been published in one of Mr. Hearst's New York papers, the Evening Journal. Mr. Burleson says of Mr. Hearst's alter ego that he "congratulates" the people of Chicago because they are to have the benefit of Mr. Brisbane's "able and unselfish efforts * * *. I indulge the hope that (his paper) will always stand for justice and freedom and true democratic Government." And Mr. Daniels goes Mr. Burleson one better in expressing the belief that Mr. Brisbane will preach "patriotism" and "civic righteousness."

Mr. Burleson has stated that he has received "more complaints" about my writings than about those of Mr. Hearst. In view of Mr. Burleson's record and actions there is small cause for wonder in this. Every pro-German and anti-American, every believer in a feeble American war and a triumphant German peace, every man who follows Mr. Hearst, would naturally appeal for sympathy to Mr. Burleson in denunciation of what I have done.

Messrs. Hearst and Brisbane, through their papers, have been unceasing in their attacks upon England and Japan. The New York American on December 20, 1917, said that "the offensive and defensive alliance then negotiated between Japan and England was aimed at the United States." This deliberate falsehood was published at the very time that England was defending us with her fleet and her army. There could be no meaner example of treachery to our allies and of subservience to our enemy. It was a thousand times more worth the attention of Mr. Burleson than anything done by the small papers against which the Post Office Department did act. On September 15, 1917, Mr. Hearst's plea for a German peace in the New York American ran "that the best peace for all concerned is a peace without victory, a peace without conquest, a peace without indemnities, a peace without annexations." On March 2, 1918, Mr. Hearst made an embittered attack upon Japan and on March 20 he repeated the attack. He spoke of the "military despotism of Japan," of the "brutal oriental selfishness in Japan's present attitude," and then asked the question as to who was going to drive her from Siberia, answering it: "Not the Allies, for they are too much occupied with their war. Not the United States, because we are putting all our eggs in the Allies' basket. There is one combination possible which might drive Japan out of Siberia and that is Russia in an active and aggressive alliance with the Teutonic Empires." These sentences amount to incitement to Russia to become the military ally and therefore the military vassal of Germany, and to the effort to persuade our people that the war is not our war, but only the war of the Allies—that it is "their war." Such language as this, used less than two months before Mr. Burleson issued his challenge to me, is a thousand times more damaging to the United States than anything ever said by Tom Watson, or any other of the editors of small papers. For Mr. Burleson to allow the paper making such an appeal to go unchallenged, and yet at the same time to permit, without rebuke, the New York post office to attack a publication like the Metropolitan, is incompatible with the supposition that he was thinking only of the welfare of the country.

Mr. Hearst's paper actually stated that it believed "that our Government made a great mistake when it did not meet both English aggressions and German aggressions * * * with armed resistance." This was announced during the war. Yet at this very time England is protecting us from Germany, and without that protection we would be given no time in which slowly to make ready to protect ourselves. If we had begun to prepare in August, 1914, we would have needed no protection from others. But we refused to prepare, and therefore we owe our safety now only to the fact that our friends are able to fight for us against our enemies while we are slowly preparing to fight for ourselves. And Mr. Hearst, under these conditions, expresses regret that we did not go to war against the friend who fought for us! Such a proposal is a proposal in the interest of the enemy who murdered our women and children.

On September 22, 1917, when the American Nation still had no troops in the trenches, when we had only lent money to the Allies, Mr. Hearst touched the nadir of the policy that puts the dollar above the man when he stated that "our Government has the right and power to dictate the terms of peace, and the American people expect England and the other allied Governments to recognize that right and to accept the terms laid down," the statement being preceded by the following: "Having practically exhausted the resources of Russia, France, and Italy, the English Government now seeks succor in our American resources. The money of the American people has been loaned to the Allies in great sums. Still greater sums are in readiness to lend them." Statements like this can not but aid Germany. In all of Mr. Hearst's career it may well be doubted whether he has ever proposed anything more sordid than this suggestion to the American people, to a free people with a glorious past, a people proudly able and willing to fight for its honor. The proposal is that we should treat having lent money to the Allies as offsetting the fact that these Allies had shed the blood of millions of their sons in protecting not only themselves but this country from the brutal dominion of Germany—a dominion under which, if Mr. Hearst's advice had been followed, this country would now be cowering. The debt the Allies owe to us for our money is infinitesimal compared to the debt that we owe them for the blood shed by their sons on battle fields where this Nation had as much at stake as the nations whose armies fought thereon. On March 8 last Mr. Hearst, preaching hatred to Japan, and using language tending to serve Germany by bringing about a break between the United States and Japan and perhaps Great Britain, says, "if Great Britain can not restrain her special ally, Japan, from acts of aggression inimical to our interests, we can remove our ships and troops from Europe and transfer them to Asia." This is a threat of war with Japan—a threat that we will enter on a war of aggression in Asia. There could be no possible result of such a threat except service to Germany. It was a threat to abandon the war against Germany, our enemy, and embark upon a war against Japan, our ally; and this because Japan, in the interest of the Allies and of civilization, had contemplated action in east Siberia against the Bolsheviki, who have shown themselves to the allies of Germany, the enemies of civilization, and the enemies of the United States.

These quotations show that Mr. Hearst has steadily endeavored to belittle the vital importance to our country of this war, and to excite the hatred of our people against allies who are faithfully fighting beside us; and such conduct can be of help only to Germany, to the enemy we are fighting. Just so long as Mr. Hearst's publications are permitted in the mails, Mr. Burleson is without excuse for excluding any other publication from them. The administration by its acquiescence permits the continuance of Mr. Hearst's campaign which necessarily tends to give aid and comfort to Germany and to impair the morale of our own people.

The quotations above given deprive Mr. Burleson and the administration, of which he is a part, of any shred of justification for their action and inaction. Mr. Burleson is, of course, only secondarily responsible in the matter. Mr. Hearst's papers are so important and Mr. Hearst's position among the administration's political friends, supporters, and advisers is so prominent, and the action in connection with reinstating him in his cable privileges was so purely dependent upon the President himself, that no subordinate of the President can accept or be credited with the chief responsibility for any action or inaction of the administration in relation to Mr. Hearst. The administration is responsible for the toleration of Mr. Hearst's antially, anti-war, and therefore anti-American activities, and for the reward, nevertheless, given him; and the service rendered on the other side by Mr. Hearst was service to the administration and not to the country. I have quoted above the language of complimentary indorsement in which two of President Wilson's Cabinet ministers have addressed Mr. Hearst's editor, Mr. Brisbane. The President's private secretary writes Mr. Brisbane in the same vein. In the Chicago Herald and Examiner of May 19, last Sunday, appears the following letter, under the heading, "A new subscriber":

"THE WHITE HOUSE,
"Washington, May 14, 1918.

"MY DEAR MR. BRISBANE: When you were at the White House offices to-day I forgot to ask you to send me the Chicago Herald and Examiner regularly to my office here. I am sure you are going to make the same good Democratic fight in Chicago that you have been making in your paper in Washington, and I want to see just how you do it.

"Sincerely, yours, J. P. TUMULTY,
"Secretary to the President.

"MR. ARTHUR BRISBANE,
"Care Chicago Herald and Examiner, Chicago, Ill."

Mr. George Harvey has pointed out in the North American Review War Weekly that Mr. Burleson is encouraging enemy-language publications by having a special division whose function is to assist editors of foreign-language papers "in complying with the law." The act of Congress provides that all foreign-language papers should submit to censorship or go out of business. The Post Office Department's duty is merely to suppress those of them which are guilty of treasonable practices. Apparently, as Mr. Harvey points out, Mr. Burleson, instead of suppressing papers that preach sedition, establishes a division to show them how they can escape suppression. Mr. Hearst's papers are infinitely the most important of those which during the last year and a quarter have tended to serve Germany and have harmed the United States by attacking our allies or opposing our effective participation in the war. There are various other papers published in English or German which have been less important offenders. On April 2 Prof. Guernsey Jones, of the University of Nebraska, published an article in the Nebraska State Journal on "The Enemy Press." He quoted various articles that have appeared in German-American papers since the war, and some of them as late as January, February, and March last, championing the German-American Alliance, attacking England and Japan, announcing that "the problem of the German press is to save Deutschtum in the United States," demanding a peace which would give Germany the victory, praising Germany's action toward Russia, and in other ways, as Prof. Jones says, showing themselves to be "insolent organs of Prussianism." These papers were being published, and Mr. Hearst was publishing his papers, without interference by the Post Office Department and the Government at the same time that proceedings were being taken against the Metropolitan Magazine, one of the staunchest upholders of the war and staunchest opponents of Prussianism in all the United States.

Congress has with lavish generosity granted all the administration has demanded to carry on the war. It has also granted the administration extraordinary power, of a kind never hitherto granted any administration, to deal with the internal foes of the Nation; and this power can be and has been misused to reward the administration's personal or political supporters and punish the administration's personal or political opponents. Congress, through such bodies as the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, has exercised its power of investigation and supervision to correct executive inefficiency, executive delay, and executive abuse of power, and has done this in such fashion as to speed up and render immensely more efficient our part in the war. Congress should vigilantly exercise its right of supervision as regards the use of all the great powers it has granted the administration over the properties and activities of the citizens of the United States.

In his last statement about me Mr. Burleson, like Mr. Wegg, at the behest of Mr. Boffin, dropped into verse. As he seems to like poetry, I commend to him and to the administration of which he is part the following lines:

Whoso speaks in your presence must say acceptable things;
Bowing the head in worship, bending the knee in fear—
Bringing the word well smoothen—such as a king should hear.
* * * * * * *
Given to strong delusion, wholly believing a lie,
Ye saw the land lay 'fenceless, and ye let the months go by,
Waiting some easy wonder; hoping some saving sign—
Idle—openly idle—in the lee of the forespent line.

Very truly, yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

HON. MILES POINDEXTER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, I desire to make some general remarks relating to the provisions of the bill now under discussion for the development of water power, and as I do not wish to take up much of the Senate's time I would prefer not to be interrupted until my statement has been completed, after which I shall try to respond to any questions which may be asked.

Having been in position to watch the hydroelectric development in the Rocky Mountain region and the Sierra-Nevada Range for some 15 years, some of the difficulties which have been encountered in developing the western country have naturally been brought to my attention, and they have indeed been numerous.

To produce hydroelectric power on a comparatively small stream in the mountain ranges and then to transport it for many miles to market over high-tension transmission lines is no easy task, but presents many difficulties with elements of risk always attendant. Mountain streams adaptable for power purposes frequently have run-offs exceeding 500 second-feet in flood seasons, with a minimum flow during the dry seasons of less than 1 per cent of the maximum, and in some cases lower than 10 second-feet, which, of course, is much too small to operate any power plant of commercial size. This irregularity of water supply must be overcome by equating the stream flow through the construction of dams in the higher altitudes, forming reservoirs on the headwaters of the stream that hold back the water during the period of melting snow, and such reservoirs entail expenditures running into millions of dollars. There is always risk of accident operating in these high altitudes, as reservoirs must frequently be constructed at or above timber line and at times on the very edge of a perpetual glacier. The power plants must be carefully located so as to avoid danger of washouts during high water, and despite all precautions accidents to power plants have occurred. In one instance a power plant was located about one-eighth of a mile from the base of a mountain and had only been in operation about three months before it was buried under a snow avalanche and practically the entire investment lost.

Another class of risks incurred in business is loss of market, as, for instance, the working out and abandonment of mines, which means the tearing down and removal of transmission lines and other equipment, the salvage usually amounting to less than half of the original investment.

The claim that hydroelectric power companies have made large or inordinate profits can not be substantiated, and the question has not been, "How much can a power company earn?" but rather "Can a power company earn enough to justify the issuance of bonds, and will those bonds represent a security that will be attractive to the investor?" The resources of the great West have been held back in development partly because it has not been possible to induce capital to invest in power plants on account of the small promise of return for the risk involved, and partly because of the unnecessarily stringent regulations and requirements of the Government in the use of public lands.

Another feature has been the uncertain tenure of property under existing laws, whereby no assurance is offered the investor that the property will not be taken from the company during the customary term or life of a mortgage; that is to say, the ordinary life of a railway or manufacturing company's mortgage. The 50-year term proposed in the present bill, accompanied by reasonable conditions providing for recapture of Government property, offers some encouragement and relief from existing conditions, and it does not seem unreasonable to accord a preference for renewal to the first holder of license and developer of power possibilities, so long as the Government retains the right to take over the property itself at termination of the lease, or earlier through condemnation proceedings, or to give a lease to some other applicant on reasonable terms provided the original lessee declines to accept same.

To say that the year-to-year extension at the original rental, provided for in section 15, resorted to in the event that the licensee and the commission are unable to agree upon terms for a new lease at the termination of the original one, amounts in effect to a perpetual lease, does not seem justifiable. Power companies can only be financed by the sale of bonds secured by mortgage on their properties and can only find sale for their bonds by pledging property that can not be taken from them without just compensation at the termination of the first leasing period. The history of the hydroelectric power business shows that surplus earnings, if any, must be reinvested in the business in order to take care of the growing demand for power from customers, so that in all likelihood a majority of the companies which may be established under this bill will find themselves at the end of the first leasing period with bonded indebtedness to be provided for, and naturally they would be under the necessity of agreeing to any reasonable terms for renewal which the Government might offer rather than to attempt to operate on a year-to-year basis, which would absolutely preclude the possibility of refinancing themselves. Those who have had actual experience in dealing with the Government bureaus, always subject to change as to the officials in charge, have learned to their sorrow that they can not always expect fair and just treatment, excepting through recourse to the higher courts. Under the terms of section 15, as now revised by the Senate committee, the holder of an original lease at its termination would undoubtedly find himself under the necessity of accepting any reasonable terms of extension which were offered by the Government representatives, meaning the commission; otherwise such a holder would be in danger of losing the fruits of his enterprise through having the commission award a lease to some new applicant or by the taking over of the project works by the Government itself.

There appears to be a general impression throughout the Eastern States that the people of the West are trying to secure undue advantages for themselves at the expense of the Government, which is far from the truth. The fact is that the possibilities of the western country can not be properly developed with the capital available in the Western States, and that it is necessary to tender the first security on the property itself and a large interest rate in order to obtain the needed money from eastern investors. What the people of the West really want is to have the natural resources of the country developed, and it is just as open and available to citizens of the Eastern States as to those who have their homes in the West. Both eastern capital and eastern people are not only invited but welcomed to the taking of a part in this great work.

The Western States, as a rule, have established public utility commissions, which have full power and control over hydroelectric power companies as to rates to be charged the public and earnings permissible on the actual value of the properties operated. The tendency is undoubtedly toward the establishment of public utility commissions in all of the States and the practice will unquestionably become universal.

However, under one of the provisions of the bill where the States have not set up their own public utilities commission, the commission established by this bill has the power to fix rates and establish the basis of earnings for the operating company.

Any amounts which may be assessed against power-producing companies for privileges granted by the United States Government simply become a part of the operating expense and are passed on to the ultimate consumer as a part or portion of the rates charged for services rendered.

In order to guarantee, in so far as possible, continuous service to the consumer of power, it is necessary for all hydroelectric companies to erect auxiliary steam plants, which represent one important feature of the very large investment necessary to establish a power company that can give economical and efficient service to a number of municipalities, business and manufacturing establishments, and the farmer.

As to the auxiliary steam plants, I might say that the cost for installation will average more than double the cost per horsepower of installation for hydroelectric plants, and yet their establishment is essential and absolutely necessary to guarantee continuous and uninterrupted service to the consumer.

The plants are operated, as a rule, simply floating on the line, so to speak. The fuel used is crude oil, and the boilers are simply kept up to that capacity which will enable them to turn over the dynamo wheels and so float on the line.

In case of a break in the transmission line which brings in the hydroelectric power, the motors of the steam plant are started up immediately, and within a very short space of time the steam plant is producing up to its full capacity. Of course, for a greater portion of the time we yet have capital lying idle. It has been found by experience that this large investment is absolutely necessary in order to guarantee the service which the customer is entitled to expect.

In this connection I may state that the power companies now operating in California, as a rule, sell more power to farmers than to all other classes of consumers combined. Many hundred thousand acres of land have been brought under cultivation through the use of hydroelectric power in pumping underground water flows to the surface for lands which otherwise would to-day remain as arid and unproductive as they had been for ages past. The modern up-to-date hydroelectric company of the West developes a mountain stream to the limit of its power-producing capacity, and at the very time or even before the building of its first power plant on that stream provides a reservoir to hold back the flood water and equate the flow of the stream. In the natural course of its business development such company must build a long, expensive, high-tension electric transmission line, with many branches operated at a reduced voltage, to supply its customers. With business in sight for the capacity of its initial plant it will build a second power plant above or below the first installation, but using the same water which has been partly stored and regulated by its reservoir or reservoirs. Any company which has had the courage to locate and first develop the power possibilities of a mountain stream should, in my opinion, be given a preference right for securing a license for additional developments on the same stream, and as that point has not been covered in the bill as presented by the committee, I have offered an amendment which provides that the party or parties operating or actually engaged in constructing power works on a stream shall have the preferential right to a license for other or secondary power developments on the stream.

It seems to me that the provisions of section 7 as it now stands give undue preference to municipalities in the matter of securing preliminary permits and licenses. None but the larger municipalities could take advantage of such preference rights, for the reason that the demands of a community with a population even fully up to 20,000 people would be insufficient to justify the expense involved in an economical power-plant development. Power companies of the West as a rule supply a number of municipalities with light, heat, and power at rates fixed by public utility commissions, which only admit of earnings on the property investment of the power company at a net annual return of not exceeding 8 per cent, which does not appear to be too high a rate of earnings when the risks of the business are taken into consideration. Even a half dozen or a greater number of small communities can not well arrange to pool their interests to develop hydroelectric power for their own wants; yet under the provisions of section 7 a larger municipality, such as San Francisco or Los Angeles, would have a preferential right to file on a stream in the neighborhood of the smaller towns and take from them their natural source of electric supply, which could readily be furnished to them through a private company already operating in their neighborhood.

Mr. President, I may say that under one provision of the bill it is not only the privilege but the duty of the commission in case of a filing to call the attention of a municipality which might be interested therein to that filing, and under the provisions of the bill that municipality can look over the ground and file on it, either the same or, as they may think, a better plan and secure the permit, to the disadvantage of the one who first discovered the possibilities of the stream. Then, under the preliminary permit, they may hold for a period of three years, neglect to do any construction work, and still have the right to an extension of two years' additional time. It appears to me that the large municipality is entirely too much favored under that provision of this proposed act. It seems to me that if States and municipalities are to be accorded preferential rights for permits and licenses, public service corporations already engaged in serving municipalities, a State, or the United States Government should have similar preference, and to that end I have proposed an amendment to section 7, on page 13, line 25.

Companies now operating in some of the Western States have installed plants on both public lands and private lands, and in order to secure the benefits of the proposed act will find it necessary to apply for a license under its provisions. Some small percentage of their expenditures has been made from money donated by companies or individuals as an inducement to engage in the business of supplying power, and in the case of a resort to the recapture provision it would hardly seem fair to exclude from the calculation of net investment the expenditures so made out of donations. For this reason I have proposed an amendment to section 3, page 6, line 25, which would eliminate the clause "excluding donations from the calculation for net investment" and permit the inclusion of reasonable development cost in arriving at the net investment in the business.

Under the terms of the so-called recapture clause, covered by section 14 of the act, the first proviso in effect excludes the value of any lands, rights of way, or other property of the United States licensed under the act, and, further, the license, good will, going value, or prospective revenues, without stating that such possible assets as good will, going value, or prospective revenues relate merely to the property licensed from the United States. I therefore call attention to the necessity for clarifying that language by adding the words "relating thereto" at the end of this proviso, on page 25, line 18.

In the following proviso of the same section, beginning on line 18, page 25, it seems to me that the values allowed for water rights, rights of way, lands, or interest in lands should be extended to include "other property of the United States licensed by the commission under this act," so that the values for all of these assets shall not be in excess of the actual reasonable cost thereof at the time of acquisition by the licensee; and I believe further that the values allowed for water rights, rights of way, lands, or interest in lands or other property heretofore acquired by the licensee shall be just and reasonable, as it would not seem proper for the Government to take, at the time of recapture, interest in private lands now owned or hereafter acquired without according just compensation therefor.

I also desire to call attention to that portion of section 24, commencing with line 23 on page 37, which reads, "whenever the commission shall determine that the value of any lands of the United States so applied for, or heretofore or hereafter reserved or classified as power sites, will not be injured or destroyed for the purposes of power development by location, entry," and so forth, and suggest that the word "materially" should be inserted before the word "injured," as otherwise an injury, no matter how slight, could technically be held to prevent the use of land lying within designated power sites for other development purposes.

Mr. President, the people of the great West have been waiting many long, weary years for some feasible, reasonable plan that will enable them to secure the capital so badly needed to develop the latent resources of that section. The present bill, as amended by the Senate committee, appeals to me as the best measure which has been so far proposed and as being one which will form a basis on which new enterprises may be founded, yet under which the rights of the Government as well as those of the different States and the community at large are carefully safeguarded.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KIRBY in the chair). Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PHIPPS. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Before the Senator from Colorado takes his seat I should like to ask him a question for my own information. Do I understand that the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Colorado is for the purpose of giving companies now operating power plants preference on the filing, and does that apply to the power sites on the public domain or on Government land coming under the jurisdiction of this act?

Mr. PHIPPS. My contention is that where there is an available power site on Government land and application is desired by a municipality or by a company which is furnishing a number of municipalities with power, or intending to furnish them with power, and to use the possible development for that purpose, there should be no discrimination in favor of the large municipality. I think that the smaller municipalities, a group of them, of course, being represented by a power company, should have equal privileges on the Government domain.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. They have naturally been operating such power plants under certain permits where they were located upon Government land. I wish to ask if there is anything in this bill—I have not had an opportunity to give it a thorough study—that would interfere with the rights under which they are now operating?

Mr. PHIPPS. I have not found anything that would lead me to think there was such danger in the bill, or I should oppose it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I understood the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator is for the purpose of assuring to them a continuation of their rights.

Mr. PHIPPS. No; it is extending to them an equal opportunity with a large municipality, such as Los Angeles or San Francisco, to develop the undeveloped resources of the public domain.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I thank the Senator for the information.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question of the distinguished Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], who is in charge of the pending bill.

I see that in section 29 of the bill the committee has sustained the bill as it came from the House in striking out or repealing section 18 of the act of 1917, creating the Newlands water power commission. I am going to propose at the appropriate time an amendment, and I will submit it to the Senator for his investigation, viz:

On page 41, line 21, after the word "repealed":

And all authority and power conferred and duties imposed by said section 18 of the law of 1917 upon the commission thereby created are hereby conferred and imposed upon the Federal water-power commission, which, in the discharge of the same, shall be subject to all the requirements of said section 18 governing the commission referred therein.

I assume that there will not be two water-power commissions, but I believe the duties and authorities and powers that were conferred on the Newlands Commission should also be conferred upon this Water Power Commission. May I ask the Senator in charge of the bill why that was left out—why they wished to repeal the Newlands Commission?

Mr. NELSON. I am not able to speak for the rest of the committee. That was left out in the bill as it came from the House, and the Senate simply left the bill in that condition. I am not able to speak for them. I understand, in a general way, that while the Newlands amendment has been in force for quite a while, no action has been taken under it. It has been in force since August, 1917, and no action has been taken by anybody under that provision of the river and harbor bill.

Mr. ASHURST. The commission has never been appointed, as a matter of fact.

Mr. NEW. No; and the Committee on Commerce simply left the provision in the bill as it came from the House.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator for the information; but, in my judgment, it would be a backward step to repeal the provisions of the law of 1917 respecting the Newlands Commission. The Newlands Commission, as we all remember, was the culmination of many years of labor by the departed and lamented Senator Newlands. After many years of work he enlisted in both Houses of Congress and elsewhere much sentiment in favor of his idea of a commission that would take up the water-power question in a comprehensive way that would begin to treat with these waters where they fell in mountains, intercept them in their mad rush to the sea in the arid and irrigable States, tearing up the soil and carrying it away as they went, and would distribute these waters gradually upon the irrigable lands.

The Newlands Commission was never appointed. That is true. I think it should have been appointed. But I ask the members of the committee to study with sympathy section 18 of that bill, which this bill proposes to repeal, because it grants to this commission and imposes upon it powers and duties that it seems to me this Federal Water Power Commission ought to have. While I realize that the committee has done a great and beneficial work in drafting this bill and in bringing it here, I believe that the bill will be vastly improved if all the duties, powers, rights, and authorities that were proposed to be conferred upon the Newlands Commission are simply transferred to this Federal Water Power Commission.

Indeed, there are many things with respect to our water powers that this Water Power Commission ought to do; but they will be inhibited; they will be powerless to do those things, unless some such authority is granted to them as was granted by section 18 of the act of 1917. I assume that the reason why the other branch of Congress repealed section 18 of the law of 1917, creating what is called the Newlands Commission, was because Congress did not want two commissions. But it does seem to me that there is no reason why we should not transfer to this Water Power Commission all the rights, duties, powers, and authority created by this section. I believe that the bill would be strengthened and immensely improved if that were done.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. LENROOT. I should like to ask the Senator what power he has in mind that was delegated to the Newlands Commission that is not found delegated to this commission under the terms of this bill?

Mr. ASHURST. That is a very fair question, and I will try to answer it. The Senator will permit me, then, to make a comparison between the two acts.

As I view it, there is no power given to this Water Power Commision to study and report and act upon the erosion and waste of soil. As I view it, there is no authority given in this bill to treat any system of rivers or any particular river in a comprehensive way. This Water Power Commission seems to be limited wholly to the jurisdiction and duty of passing upon applications as they are made.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. LENROOT. I should like to call the Senator's attention to section 4, on page 7, where the commission is expressly empowered—

> To make investigations and to collect and record data concerning the utilization of the water resources of any region to be developed, the water-power industry and its relation to other industries and to interstate or foreign commerce, and concerning the location, capacity, development costs, and relation to markets of power sites—

And so forth.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator, because he has made a point there. There is some authority granted, that is true; but let me read now section 18 of the act of 1917, entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes." Section 18 reads as follows:

> That a commission, to be known as the Waterways Commission, consisting of seven members to be appointed by the President of the United States, at least one of whom shall be chosen from the active or retired list of the Engineers Corps of the Army, at least one of whom shall be an expert hydraulic engineer from civil life, and the remaining five of whom may each be selected either from civil life or the public service, is hereby created and authorized, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, and subject to the approval of the heads of the several executive departments concerned, to bring into coordination and cooperation the engineering, scientific, and constructive services, bureaus, boards, and commissions of the several governmental departments of the United States and commissions created by Congress that relate to study, development, or control of waterways and water resources and subjects related thereto, or to the development and regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, with a view to uniting such services in investigating, with respect to all watersheds in the United States, questions relating to the development, improvement, regulation, and control of navigation as a part of interstate and foreign commerce, including therein the related questions of irrigation, drainage, forestry, arid and swamp land reclamation, clarification of streams, regulation of flow, control of floods, utilization of water power, prevention of soil erosion and waste, storage, and conservation of water for agricultural, industrial, municipal, and domestic uses, cooperation of railways and waterways, and promotion of terminal and transfer facilities, to secure the necessary data, and to formulate and report to Congress, as early as practicable, a comprehensive plan or plans for the development of waterways and the water resources of the United States for the purposes of navigation and for every useful purpose, and recommendations for the modification or discontinuance of any project herein or heretofore adopted. Any member appointed from the retired list shall receive the same pay and allowances as he would if on the active list, and no member selected from the public service shall receive additional compensation for services on said commission, and members selected from civil life shall receive compensation of $7,500 per annum.
>
> In all matters done, or to be done, under this section relating to any of the subjects, investigations, or questions to be considered hereunder, and in formulating plans, and in the preparation of a report or reports, as herein provided, consideration shall be given to all matters which are to be undertaken, either independently by the United States or by cooperation between the United States and the several States, political subdivisions thereof, municipalities, communities, corporations, and individuals, within the jurisdiction, powers, and rights of each respectively, and with a view to assigning to the United States such portion of such development, promotion, regulation, and control as may be undertaken by the United States, and to the States, political subdivisions thereof, municipalities, communities, corporations, and individuals such portions as belong to their respective jurisdictions, rights, and interests.

I shall not read it all; but Senators will perceive, of course, that the Newlands provision, known as section 18 of the act of August 8, 1917, confers plenary power—wide, sweeping, full, complete, and comprehensive power—upon this commission.

I am a friend of this water-power bill. I think it is constructive legislation. I want it to succeed; and when I reflect that we have a scarcity of coal and are burning up our coal in drawing our trains when we might be utilizing the water powers that are pouring uselessly over, I think it is close to a reproach to our genius and our constructive work that we have not before had a water-power bill, so that these latent powers could be utilized. But I believe that the bill will be strengthened, popularized, and made more efficient if this commission, which is to be composed, as I understand, of heads of departments—and to that I have no objection—shall be given full, complete, and comprehensive powers.

Congress is very familiar with what I have just read. Congress worked for years to attain that very thing, and it was the dream of our departed friend, Senator Newlands, that this be done. He went all over the United States lecturing and speaking, and aroused enthusiasm among technical people who understood the question. He also enlisted the enthusiasm and the support of practical men throughout this country. We have discovered that these great rivers can not be treated by piecemeal as one single, isolated question. They must be treated together.

The Colorado River comes to my mind. It flows through five or six States, and then touches Mexico. It is an international river. It is an interstate river. It is an intrastate river. The Newlands bill gave this commission full, complete, and plenary power to do all that ought or could be done by any community or any State or the Nation with the waters of that river. This commission, if granted the powers granted to the old Newlands Commission, could utilize every drop of the water that runs through the arid regions. It could make the arrangements with the State of California as to its part, it could make the arrangements with the State of Nevada, and with Arizona, and the various other States of that region, whereas, I believe, indeed I fear, that under the present plan the proposed commission will find itself bereft of the requisite authority to act in those cases where I am sure it ought to and may desire to act.

Mr. President, when the Newlands Act was passed the various States were invited by that act to pass the requisite legislation looking toward the unification of the water systems, looking toward coordination and cooperation of the States and the Nation; and, indeed, several States took action. My own State comes to my mind. The State of Arizona, relying upon the good faith of Congress, passed an act believing that the congressional act meant what it said, believing that it would promote the public weal and save the waters, by creating hydroelectric power, but after the waters have gone over the cascade or gone over the falls, to still further turn their useful and beneficial purposes; and, without saying anything in derogation of the work of this committee, because its work has been very great and they have been patient, I know they will not be offended if a Member of this body suggests that he believes the bill can be improved. So, I say, I see no reason why the powers, duties, and authorities granted to the old commission should not be granted to this commission or why this commission should be deprived of those powers.

It is true, Mr. President, that the executive branch of the Government has never appointed the waterways commission that was supposed to have been and that I think should have been appointed under the Newlands Act. But the Newlands Act was passed some three or four months after we entered the war. The Executive was very busy, of course; we were busy; and, possibly like many other things that ought to have been done, that was overlooked in the general mass of other duties.

But the fact that no commission was appointed at all can not be used as an argument why the legislation was unwise, or that the Executive thought the legislation was unwise, because the Executive signed the bill. But what the Executive thinks was wise or unwise does not furnish thinking for us. We thought it was wise, so we passed it. I think we ought to pass it now, but I am open to argument. I would like to hear some argument as to why the duties, powers, rights, and authorities which we proposed to confer upon the old so-called Newlands Commission should not be imposed upon this commission. If we are to have a commission, let us give it full and plenary power, so that it will not be interrupted and stopped by the suggestion here and there that "You are without adequate authority."

At the appointed time I shall offer an amendment. I send it to the desk and ask that it be printed.

Mr. KING. Let it be read.

Mr. ASHURST. Very well; I ask that it be read.

The SECRETARY. In section 29, page 41, line 21, after the word "repealed," strike out the period and insert:

and all authority and powers conferred and duties imposed by said section 18 upon the commission thereby created are hereby conferred and imposed upon the Federal Power Commission, which in the discharge of the same shall be subject to all the requirements of the said section 18 governing the commission referred to therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. ASHURST. Other Senators have come in, and I would like to have them hear this. It simply means that the duties, powers, rights, and authorities which Congress by the act of August 8, 1917, conferred upon the Water Power Commission, the so-called Newlands Commission, we propose to transfer and to lay upon this new commission to be created. I am assuming—and I think it is not a violent assumption—that Congress will not create two commissions. It is going to have this Federal Power Commission and it is not going to retain the Newlands Commission. But I do insist, respectfully, of course, that all the duties, rights, powers, and authorities that were conferred upon the old commission, which we discussed for months, ought not to be now swept aside, and our work wasted, before the commission has a chance to operate.

I repeat now that I am harassed with the fear that when the Federal Power Commission begins to operate it will find itself without requisite authority to do the very things that Congress for years has been asking and urging be done under the old Newlands Commission.

I see before me, happily, two Senators who had something to do with the legislation on this Newlands Commission—and there are many, many others—the distinguished senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] and the distinguished senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL]. What are they going to say? Are they going to say that after the work we put in for some months creating this commission, and after the investigation as a result of which Congress passed the act, we will throw aside the work of our hands the next year, or even a few months afterwards? It seems to me that is boys' play, especially when the language employed in section 18 of the act creating the Newlands Commission is language which was the subject of discussion for months—indeed, I can say years—and finally, after agreement here and agreement there and discussion here and there, was galvanized into section 18 of that act. Now we propose to sweep it aside. So I earnestly hope that Senators will reflect on this matter and give this Federal Water Power Commission the power it ought to have, so that when it is called upon for information, called upon to act in any department where the water powers of our country may be mentioned, it will not find itself bereft of the appropriate authority to act, to take the initiative.

The main fault I find with the present Federal Water Power Commission is that the language employed does not set it up as a militant, aggressive commission, clothed with initiative, one that will be astute and quick to grasp situations. It would not have the power under the present act to do that. It is limited, I think, too much to making reports on applications. It ought not to be limited completely and wholly to making reports on applications. It ought to be required to furnish a comprehensive plan to our country as to how we are going to handle all these waters that fall from the heavens and rush madly to the sea, taking our soil with them. In the Southwest some uninformed people assume that it is the question of rainfall. It is not the question of rainfall in the Southwest. In some communities there is a very small amount of rainfall. But taking the Southwest as a whole the trouble is not rainfall, it is a question of conserving and storing the water after it has fallen and distributing it at the proper time. If the waters of the Southwest that rush madly to the Gulf of Mexico or to the Gulf of California were conserved, as they could be conserved under the old Newlands Commission, and released at the appropriate time, when settlers or farmers needed them, millions of acres—I measure my words—millions of acres now useless, on which nothing can be raised but "disturbances," could be brought into cultivation and waste waters utilized.

I fear that under the present act the power to do those things so necessary to our life is not granted to this commission.

That is all I care to say at this particular time.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, this is the situation: Under the act of 1917, section 18, what was known, or to be known, as the Waterways Commission was created. The commission, as I remember now—and I have not had time to refresh my recollection about the exact reading of the act—was to be mainly an investigating commission. They were not authorized to do anything except to make a study of conditions with reference to coordinating the different uses that might be made of the waters. But that commission was never appointed. The act is in effect; the law is there; it is still provided for; and the only thing lacking about it is the appointment of the commission and setting them to work.

I do not believe there would be any real conflict between that commission and the Federal Power Commission created under this bill. This Federal Power Commission has specific duties set out in the bill, which would not be in conflict, in my judgment, with the functions of the commission created under the river and harbor act. So that we might accomplish, possibly, what the Senator has in mind, by simply striking out the last lines of the pending bill, beginning on line 18, page 41, which repeals section 18 of the act of 1917.

I am inclined to think that it would be advisable to do that, so that that commission might be brought into existence and put to active work at any time when the President was able to furnish the names comprising the commission, and lay down, as he was required to do under the act, certain regulations which would govern them. I would, therefore, favor either striking that out of the bill or an amendment as suggested by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST].

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask the Senator if he does not realize that unless it is repealed there will be a very great duplication of work and a vast additional expense entailed upon the Government?

Mr. FLETCHER. I scarcely think so, because the commission provided for in the act of 1917 was to be appointed simply to make a study of conditions and report to Congress. They do not have anything more to do than that, and for that reason I do not think their duties would conflict with those of the commission provided for in the pending bill.

Mr. LENROOT. The commission proposed in the pending bill would have to make that same kind of a study before it would be in a position to determine where licenses should be granted.

Mr. FLETCHER. To that extent there might be some duplication in a way, but I think it would be really a small part of the scope of the work which the Waterways Commission created by the act of 1917 was intended to perform. I think, therefore, that we could probably accomplish the same thing by striking out the proviso in the last section of the bill and leaving the language as it stands in the river and harbor act of 1917; or if there is duplication, perhaps it would be well to transfer to the commission provided for in the pending bill the duties and functions of the commission provided for in the act of 1917.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I wish to observe, if I may have the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] for a moment, that my amendment, as he will perceive, would do away with the Newlands Commission. I realize that it would be a very hopeless task to try to preserve the Newlands Commission, which the President has not appointed and will not appoint, probably, and set up another commission to take care of the same subject.

Therefore it seems to me that the proper and logical way to reach it would be, since the commission has never been appointed and we are legislating nobody out of office, to transfer to a new commission all the duties and powers and authority that we propose to confer on that commission. I trust I am not laboring under any mental lapse, but I fail to observe why, since the old commission is to be wiped out entirely—that is, in name—we can not employ that language here and transfer the duties, rights, and powers that were proposed to be imposed on a commission under that act.

If any better plan can be recommended, I yield readily to it, but I am as yet unable to see any reason why we should not use the language of the act of 1917, which we all understand, which was the subject of discussion for months—years, as I recall—and which was the result of compromises, which language we admit is so full and complete and comprehensive that no additional language could give it any strength whatever or give the commission any additional powers or authorities whatever.

I do not wish to perpetuate two commissions. I doubt the expediency of the attempt; I doubt the wisdom of such an effort if it should succeed, but I do want, and I believe that other Senators are moved by the same idea, such commission as is created to have such power as we may lawfully under the Constitution grant to it.

I think the language used in the act of 1917 will do it very much more effectively than the present language. In other words, the language of the act of 1917 does what Congress wants to do. There is a doubt whether the present language does or does not.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President, I am very glad to say a few words with regard to the pending measure. I wish to remind the Senate that the Waterways Commission, provided for in the act of 1917, was discussed before the Senate and before the Congress of the United States not for months, as stated by my friend the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], but for many years. It was before us in a most serious and determined manner, and all of us have heard debates for hours and hours in regard to the subject matter of the commission.

If I may be permitted to say so, the commission provided in the river and harbor act of 1917 is very much more comprehensive and covers infinitely more ground than the water power commission created in the pending act. Permit me to read to the Senate the provision of the river and harbor act of 1917 creating the commission. I will not read it all. Section 18 provides for the creation of a commission to be known as the Waterways Commission—to bring into coordination and cooperation the engineering, scientific, and constructive services, bureaus, boards, and commissions of the several governmental departments of the United States and commissions created by Congress that relate to study, development, or control of waterways and water resources and subjects related thereto, or to the development and regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, with a view to uniting such services in investigating, with respect to all watersheds in the United States, questions relating to the development, improvement, regulation, and control of navigation as a part of interstate and foreign commerce, including therein the related questions of irrigation, drainage, forestry, arid and swamp land reclamation, clarification of streams, regulation of flow, control of floods, utilization of water power, prevention of soil erosion and waste, storage, and conservation of water for agricultural, industrial, municipal, and domestic uses, cooperation of railways and waterways, and promotion of terminal and transfer facilities, to secure the necessary data, and to formulate and report to Congress as early as practicable a comprehensive plan or plans for the development of waterways and the water resources of the United States for the purposes of navigation and for every useful purpose, and recommendations for the modification or discontinuance of any project herein or heretofore adopted.

Then it goes on further:

In all matters done or to be done under this section relating to any of the subjects, investigations, or questions to be considered hereunder, and in formulating plans, and in the preparation of a report or reports as herein provided, consideration shall be given to all matters which are to be undertaken, either independently by the United States or by cooperation between the United States and the several States, political subdivisions thereof, municipalities, communities, corporations, and individuals within the jurisdiction, powers, and rights of each, respectively, and with a view to assigning to the United States such portion of such development, promotion, regulation, and control as may be undertaken by the United States, and to the States, political subdivisions thereof, municipalities, communities, corporations, and individuals such portions as belong to their respective jurisdictions, rights, and interests.

Now, Mr. President and Senators, a very casual reading of the provisions of the river and harbor act of 1917, creating what is popularly known as the Newlands Commission, would convince anyone that it takes in a great deal more than the provisions of the pending bill.

I wish to say to Senators that the people of my section of the Union have no interest in either of the measures, but a Senator would be a very poor representative of a great State if he confined himself to the things which interest his own people only. I assisted in the passage of the Newlands Waterways Commission Act. I was very glad to assist in its passage in its present form. Senators will recall that for years the former Senator from Nevada, Mr. Newlands, insisted upon a great national waterways commission similar to that created in the river and harbor act of 1917, but with an annual appropriation of $60,000,000 for 10 years, a total of $600,000,000, for the purpose of carrying out the objects and purposes assigned to that commission.

When the commission was finally created, however, as provided in the river and harbor act referred to, it was not given any money with which to carry on the great projects, but was given full authority to investigate, to study, to throw all possible light upon everything relating to water, water resources, and water utilities of every kind and report to the Congress its recommendations, its findings of fact, its suggestions as to what should be done in a broad, general, comprehensive, far-reaching manner, so that all the water resources of the country for navigation, for irrigation, for forestry, for swamp-land reclamation, for flood control might be utilized to the very best advantage.

It seemed to me then and it seems to me now that it was a most wise provision. It seems to me that a commission armed with the authority conferred in the river and harbor act of 1917 could obtain a great deal of most valuable information and could assist Congress very materially in legislating on a number of most important subjects.

It was not intended, Senators, to interfere with any of the present agencies of the Government. It was not intended to interfere with the great Board of Engineers of the Army, which has charge of the improvement of the navigable streams. It was not intended to interfere with the great irrigation service of the West, which places water on the arid lands and has been of so much value to our Republic. It was not intended to interfere with the efforts of the Agricultural Department to reforest the cut-over lands of the country, nor with the efforts of the various cities and communities to clarify the streams and purify them and make water suitable for human use.

It was merely intended in a big, broad way to assist all of those agencies, to study them in a general, comprehensive manner, and to assist them all. The commission was given no power except the power of investigation and advice. It was created simply to throw light on these extremely difficult subjects. No one should object to having all possible light thrown on all subjects upon which he is obliged to legislate.

If I understand correctly the amendment of the Senator from Arizona, it does not interfere with the pending bill; it leaves in full force and effect the provisions of the pending bill in so far as the Water Power Commission is concerned, but simply adds to them the power, the authority, the rights, the obligations, and the duties conferred upon the National Waterways Commission by the river and harbor act of 1917 which are not included in the pending measure. If there be any of them which are not included in the pending measure—and, as I read it, there are a great many not included—the amendment simply proposes to carry out the will of Congress, determined after the most careful consideration, by saying we do not care to have two commissions; we do not care to nullify what has been done, and we will add to the new commission the duties given to the former commission.

It would be a most serious mistake, Mr. President, not to adopt this amendment. I can not believe any of the friends of the pending bill will insist upon its rejection. I appeal to them not to do so. It covers much ground that the provisions of the pending bill do not cover.

Let me ask, What is there in the pending bill in regard to flood control? Flood control vitally interests my section. I say we are not interested in this measure, and we are not, because flood control in Louisiana and the Lower Mississippi River generally is now handled by the Mississippi River Commission; but there are a great many serious flood-control problems in various parts of the Union. There is no power granted to the commission created by this bill to study flood control. Why not allow the power of the Newlands Commission to be placed on the shoulders of the new commission in order that they may study flood control?

I understand, even in the State of Florida, so ably represented in part here by the senior Senator from that State [Mr. FLETCHER], serious floods occur at times; I understand that sometimes in the State of Georgia, along the Savannah River, very serious floods happen; I understand that in the State of Texas, represented in part by my friend the junior Senator from that State [Mr. SHEPPARD], they have terrific floods which sweep away hundreds of thousands of dollars—aye, millions of dollars—worth of property and destroy human life. Why not study those flood problems along with the other questions?

A great commission is proposed to be created by this bill. It will be composed of the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of Agriculture. Why not let that commission investigate other questions as well as the special question of water power? There can not be any objection, Senators, and I beg of you to sustain the amendment of the Senator from Arizona.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with section 18, on page 29, and continued to the end of section 19, on page 31.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] desires to present a series of resolutions and to move an adjournment. In view of that fact, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside without losing its place, so that it may continue as the unfinished business to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEW in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE WATSON, OF VIRGINIA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Assistant Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
January 5, 1920.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. WALTER ALLEN WATSON, a Representative from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect, this House do now adjourn.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, in the death of Representative WALTER A. WATSON, of the fourth congressional district, the State of Virginia has lost one of its ablest Representatives. Representative WATSON was a lawyer of great ability, his legal attainments being of an unusual character. He was a man of strong and vigorous mind, of high character, of lovable and sweet disposition, kindly and loyal. He measured up to the very highest ideals of Virginia manhood, character, and capacity in his private and public life. In recognition of the loss to the Nation and his State by the death of this distinguished public servant, I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that they may be immediately considered.

The resolutions were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. WALTER ALLEN WATSON, late a Representative from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, January 8, 1920, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, January 7, 1920.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who hast ever been our refuge and our strength, a very present help in trouble, come now with all Thy holy influence and inspire us with clear perceptions, unerring judgment, in a faithful discharge of the duties Thou hast reposed in us and which a grateful people expect of us, that we may move forward to larger life, greater achievements, in the affairs of state, to the honor and glory of Thy holy name. In the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague, Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky, be given leave of absence, for 10 days, on account of illness.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that his colleague, Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky, be given 10 days' leave of absence, on account of illness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT OF SCHOOL-TEACHERS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask to take from the Speaker's table the teachers' retirement bill, H. R. 5818, and I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan calls up from the Speaker's table H. R. 5818, for the retirement of school-teachers in the District of Columbia, with Senate amendments, which the Clerk will report.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, the Senate made four brief amendments to the teachers' retirement bill. The first two have to do with the deductions which are made from the teachers' salaries. The bill provided that these deductions should be made in 10 monthly installments. The Senate struck out the word "ten," and provided for monthly deductions according to the months in the school year, thereby providing for any change in the school year from 10 to 9 or 11 months.

One of the other amendments strikes out the appropriation for this year of $50,000 and inserts $30,000. The bill as it passed the House provided that $5,000 of the appropriation could be used for clerical expenses during this year. The Senate struck out $5,000 and inserted $3,000, for the reason that the bill can only operate now for one-half of this year.

Mr. GARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GARD. What was the $50,000 carried in the House bill which the Senate reduced to $30,000?

Mr. MAPES. It was to provide the retirement fund.

Mr. GARD. The portion to be paid by the General Government?

Mr. MAPES. The anticipated amount for this year that would be required for the retirement of teachers who are to come in under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. GARD. Is that for one year?

Mr. MAPES. For this year.

Mr. GARD. The Senate reduced the amount from $50,000 to $30,000?

Mr. MAPES. The Senate reduced the amount from $50,000 to $30,000, because the law con operate for only half of the year now.

Mr. GARD. There was another change striking out the word "ten." Is the effect of that to change the number of months from 10 to 11 or 9, as the case may be?

Mr. MAPES. The Senate struck out the word "ten" in the sentence which said that the deductions from the teachers' salaries should be made in 10 monthly deductions. They struck out the "ten," leaving it "monthly deductions."

Mr. GARD. Those are the deductions from the teachers' own salaries?

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Is it not a rather unprecedented proceeding for the Senate to reduce in at least two particulars an appropriation made by the House?

Mr. MAPES. It may be unprecedented, but we are glad to take advantage of their unprecedented procedure.

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan moves that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Military Affairs or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, asks unanimous consent that that committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the House. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

On motion of Mr. SNYDER, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, H. R. 11368, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill under the five-minute rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

SURVEYING AND ALLOTTING INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

For the survey, resurvey, classification, and allotment of lands in severalty under the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., p. 388), entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians," and under any other act or acts providing for the survey or allotment of Indian lands, $10,000: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be used for the survey, resurvey, classification, or allotment of any land in severalty on the public domain to any Indian, whether of the Navajo or other tribes, within the State of New Mexico and the State of Arizona, who was not residing upon the public domain prior to June 30, 1914: Provided further, That any and all provisions contained in any act heretofore passed for the survey, resurvey, classification, and allotment of lands in severalty under the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887, supra, which provide for the repayment of funds appropriated proportionately out of any Indian moneys held in trust or otherwise by the United States and available by law for such reimbursable purposes, are hereby repealed: Provided further, That the repeal hereby authorized shall not affect any funds authorized to be reimbursed by any special act of Congress wherein a particular or special fund is mentioned from which reimbursement shall be made.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order upon the paragraph for the purpose of asking for information about the provision in reference to the repeal of the reimbursable legislation referred to in the paragraph.

Where we have made provision for the survey, resurvey, classification, or allotment of lands in severalty and have provided that the cost of that work shall be reimbursed to the Government after the Government has first paid the cost, what will be the effect of now repealing these provisions in laws already passed? I am asking for information.

Mr. SNYDER. In reply to the gentleman from Illinois I will state that since 1884 moneys have been appropriated for the purpose of survey or allotment of Indian lands. During that period something like $2,500,000 has been appropriated under the item of reimbursable, no dollar of which, so far as our investigations show, has been charged up against any Indian or any Indian's property. No effort for the collection of any part of that money has ever been made to this time. And since it has been the policy of the Government for years to do this surveying and allotting for the white man gratuitously, and since the Indian himself never was advised that this would be a charge against him, and since many of the Indians against whom the charge would have to be made are dead and the property has passed through several hands, it has seemed to the committee after careful investigation that there is no possible way of ever collecting any of this money. Therefore it would be wise, we believe, to discontinue not only these items against property which can not be found and people who can not be located but in the future give to the Indian the same treatment that we give to the white man and survey his lands for him gratuitously.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, well, the situation is very different. Here we make provision for the survey of Indian lands, where Indians own a large amount or a small amount of land. Perhaps the lands are thrown open to settlement, but we pay the Indians for the lands. We either pay them directly out of the Public Treasury, or else we provide that the settlers who enter upon the land shall make payment for it, and that the money shall be held as a trust fund for the benefit of the Indians, either in the Treasury, or paid out for their benefit, or paid directly to them. We pay the Indians and give them the full value of the land, and in some cases more than the value of the land. Now, upon what theory is it conceived that it is the duty of the General Government in administering a trust to administer it at the expense of the General Government? Here they own the land and we sell it for them. We pay the expenses of the Indian Office out of the General Treasury, but why when we sell the land for their benefit at good prices should we say that the expenses of that sale shall be charged not against the land, but against the whole people of the country.

Mr. HAYDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. HAYDEN. The cases which the gentleman mentions where lands have been sold in large tracts on reservations to white purchasers have been invariably authorized by acts of Congress wherein it is provided that the expenses of surveying should be paid out of the proceeds of the sale. We were careful in drawing this legislation to add the last proviso that the repeal shall not affect any funds authorized to be reimbursed by any special act of Congress. Therefore in the cases which the gentleman from Illinois has in mind, reimbursement will continue to be collected out of the sales of such lands.

But where a survey has been made solely for the benefit of the Indians and there has been no sale of their lands, it was the opinion of the committee that such survey work should be done gratuitously in the same manner as is now done for a white man who is seeking a homestead.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not know where the term "special act of Congress" was derived from, and I doubt the ability of any Member here to define what it means. It usually refers to a private act. All public laws are general acts of Congress and not special acts.

Mr. HAYDEN. Would the gentleman from Illinois consider an act of Congress opening the Sioux Reservation in the State of South Dakota a special or a general act?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It is a general law.

Mr. HAYDEN. It is special legislation applicable to that particular reservation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not know what the term "special act of Congress" means. It is specially directed to a certain thing. Most legislation is specially directed to a certain thing; even in the criminal code a provision is directed against some particular offense, but it is not a special act of Congress. But what is the effect of this? That is what I want to get at.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will yield, I would like to say further that since the Indian Bureau states definitely that these items are uncollectible and that it would cost probably $10 to collect $1, wherein is there any advantage in retaining these amounts on the books? I agree with the gentleman that we should start to collect such items as are collectible, but when the administrative function of the Government states that these items have never been charged against anyone, where are you going to start from to begin to collect?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I agree with the distinguished gentleman from New York that there is no benefit in carrying book items on the books of the Treasury which can not and will not be collected. If all of the items that are covered by this provision are of that character, I shall make no objection to it. But here is a provision proposing to repeal all acts of Congress heretofore provided for for reimbursement to the Government on the cost of preparing the land for settlement and sale by the Government, the money to be paid to the Indians. If the Indian Office has violated the law or if it has paid no attention to the law, of course they are subject to criticism for that. No one can tell how the words "special act of Congress" will be construed. There has been no definition of the term "special act of Congress" that I know of.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. I am afraid that if this repealing clause becomes effective the claims that are now being instituted by the Indians in the Court of Claims against the Government of the United States will be allowed and no charges available in offset. Therefore I think this provision is unwise.

Mr. SNYDER. That might apply to the next set of reimbursables we are seeking to repeal, but it does not apply to this one, because there is no item on the books of the bureau charged against anybody for this service. Therefore, if the claim were made by some tribe for some other purpose, there would be no other way to offset it. The condition is entirely different when you come to the repeal of those moneys which have been spent for irrigation purposes, spent previous to a certain date as a gratuity and then charged up by the Government as reimbursements. It might be well enough to carry those items along with a view that at some time they might be used as an offset. But in this case there is no offset, because nothing has been charged up against them.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Why are there no items charged up?

Mr. SNYDER. Because the Indian Bureau failed to find anybody to charge it to.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. But the money is in the Treasury, is it not? It is held in trust available for this purpose.

Mr. SNYDER. No; there are no moneys available for surveys of allotted lands. These moneys have all been appropriated during all these years as reimbursable, and none of them has been reimbursed, and there has been no effort to have any of them reimbursed.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I understood the gentleman to say that the Indian Office had never been able to find anyone or any fund against which to charge these amounts. That seems an anomalous statement—that where you provide for the allotment there is nothing to which to charge the expense. The land is there.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I yield first to the gentleman from Missouri, a member of the committee.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman from Illinois just stated that no Member is able to state what these special acts of Congress mean. I wish to call the gentleman's attention to this fact, that these special acts of Congress mean the various acts of Congress authorizing the big reclamation projects. For instance, by act of Congress of May 28, 1916, Thirty-ninth Statutes at Large, pages 140 to 141, Congress appropriated $750,000, designated as a reimbursable item, in the interest of the Flathead Indian reclamation project.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, that was passed in the general appropriation act, and is not a special act of Congress.

Mr. RHODES. But the fact remains it is a special act in so far as it relates to a general project, and the language which this bill seeks to repeal relates only to the act of Congress which undertook to make reimbursable that which was not reimbursable and which the committee thought an unreasonable and improper thing for Congress to do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. But the gentleman will not claim that the general appropriation act for the Indian Service is a special act of Congress. An item in it might be special action of Congress, but it is not a special act of Congress. An act of Congress has a definition.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. I have spoken, Mr. Chairman, with regard to the practical effect of the language against which complaint is made. The idea of the committee was, and it was based upon an investigation resulting in definite information, that by the act of Congress of August 1, 1914, it was undertaken to make reimbursable two and a half million dollars which up to that time was not reimbursable, and that is the only act to which reference is made in the pending bill.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, no; the pending bill says in any act heretofore passed. That is not any particular act.

Mr. SNYDER. Later on we do specify.

Mr. RHODES. Special acts of Congress refer to the Flathead, Fort Peck, the Blackfeet, and all of the other big reclamation projects.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Later on the gentleman has another provision in the bill about reclamation projects, but this has nothing to do with reclamation projects.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. Would it improve the situation to leave out the word "special," in line 24, so that it would read:

Any act of Congress wherein a particular or special fund is mentioned from which reimbursement shall be made.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think it would very much improve the lucidity of the language of the bill.

Mr. SNYDER. If that will satisfy the gentleman we will be very glad to strike the word out.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I raise the point because no one knows how department officers construe acts of Congress in advance. What I wanted to know was whether we are releasing any actual claim against the Indians, or their lands, which can be reimbursed to the Government, where we have gone to the expense out of the Federal Treasury in surveying and classifying the land for allotment. If there is no opportunity to be reimbursed, of course, I concede there is no special reason for carrying the items on the books; but I say now that in my judgment where we survey lands for the Indians at the expense of the Federal Treasury and the Indians get the benefit of it, they ought to pay for it. There is no reason why they should not.

Mr. HAYDEN. Congress appropriates $700,000 each year for surveying the public domain and gives the homesteader and the desert-land entryman the benefit of such surveys free of cost.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. But the situation is entirely different. We treat Indians on a different basis, a far better basis than we do the white man. We pay them for their land and then we educate them besides.

Mr. HAYDEN. The sale of surplus Indian lands has always been authorized by a particular act of Congress setting forth that payment shall be collected for the lands and that the expense of the surveys shall be taken out of the money derived from the proceeds of the sale. In all such cases the law is not repealed, but on Indian reservations where there has been no sale, where allotments are made merely for the benefit of the members of the tribe in order that they may establish homes, there has been no practical way up to this time in which the money could be collected from the Indians.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the Assistant Commissioner of the Indian Office stated the truth when he said that the fault lies with the Indian Bureau in not collecting this money. He said further, in not collecting it when the work was done. It is not necessary to collect this money when the work is done. This is the fact with regard to these items. I think it is true that in a great many cases, possibly in a majority of cases, it may not be practicable, it may not be advisable, to collect the cost of these surveys.

But in the case of heirship land, in the case of Indian lands, where the original allottee has died and the lands are sold, improved or unimproved, the proceeds frequently go to distant relatives, and there is not any reason why there should not be a charge made against the sums collected by the Indian Office on the sale of the cost of the survey, and there is not any reason why the Indian Office should not have made these charges. It is entirely possible for the Indian Office to charge against every allottee the cost of the survey, but if that is not deemed advisable, owing to the fact that in many cases it will be difficult to collect, at least the Indian Office should make a charge when lands are sold and when large sums or considerable sums come into the hands of the Government. My view of all these expenditures is this, that while in many cases they will prove to have been gratuities, though carried as reimbursable items, the books of the Government ought to show what we have done for the Indian in order that when some day in the future a claim is presented on behalf of the Indians the Government may be able to present its side of the ledger and offset not only these large expenditures for irrigation but small expenditures suggested here—offset claims which attorneys working for themselves rather than the Indians frequently set up on behalf of the Indians. No Indian is harmed by these items being carried as being reimbursable. If they are not collected, why nobody pays them; but if they can be paid, they ought to be.

Mr. SNYDER. The point of the gentleman's argument, to my mind, is not substantiated by the facts. The facts are that there is no one known by the bureau to whom to charge this money which has been spent.

Mr. MONDELL. Why, Mr. Chairman, all of these lands, as they are allotted, are allotted to individual Indians. There comes an owner; there is always some individual against whom this charge can be made the moment the lands are allotted. I do not, however, agree they should be called upon to pay in many cases.

Mr. SNYDER. Now, will the gentleman yield again? The gentleman did not let me finish.

Mr. MONDELL. If the lands are not allotted and are held in severalty, there are frequently tribal funds against which charges of this kind could be drawn.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield? In opposition to the argument I want to go a little further. This committee started out with the idea of endeavoring to reduce the cost of operating the Indian Bureau. It is found in these investigations that it seems to be impossible to collect any part of these moneys spent for survey and allotments without the establishment in the Indian Bureau of a collecting agency, with small hope of collecting any money, and with the idea that it would cost more to secure the return of any of this money than the amount outstanding, and it seemed to us best to cut the thing off and at least, notwithstanding the argument of the gentleman from Illinois, give the Indian the same run for his money that the white man had, and to survey his land exactly as we did for the white man, and that is gratuitously.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Let us see about that, if the gentleman will pardon me. We make an allotment to the Indians. We usually allot a certain acreage to the father and mother and all minor children, and if more children are born before the lands are all exhausted we give the babies an additional allotment. We do not do that for the white man.

Mr. SNYDER. No; but we do survey the lands upon which the white man finally settles, and there is no charge against him for it, whether he has 1 child or 10.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We have upon the express provision that the white man shall be a homesteader and live upon the land or else that he pays for it. We require neither of the Indian. On most of these allotments, or many of them, no one lives at all. They lease the lands, and when they get a chance they sell them. The cases are in no wise similar.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. If the gentleman will pardon me, I find here the Quinault Reservation has 223,543 acres, and it belongs to 686 Indians. It has on it six or seven million dollars' worth of timber. If they have that allotted and surveyed, it will be quite an expensive undertaking.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The committee is not to blame for that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. If it is surveyed——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I presume the Lord is to blame for their having so much good timber there. Nobody blames the Indians for that. It is fortunate it is there, and the question is whether we should go to a lot of expense and pay it ourselves in order to give them the benefit.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Why does the Indian Service send a set of surveyors out there every pleasant summer to do a little surveying?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I can expain that easy enough, and I am sure the gentleman from Washington ought not to ask such a question. It is a solubrious climate and a delightful trip.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Exactly so; exactly so.

Mr. SNYDER. The committee has used its best judgment in asking for this legislation. Its judgment may be poor, but it was after a careful investigation of the facts and a unanimous vote of the committee, and therefore we have inserted this provision and believe it is the right thing to do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have great respect for the recommendation of the committee, and it may be they are right. If we take the action, that ends it; if we do not take this action now, it is easy enough to take it in the future, when possibly some of us may know more about it. Even the Committee on Indian Affairs may ascertain new information either for or against the proposition. I therefore make the point of order against the proviso beginning in line 14 to the end of the paragraph.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I concede in the beginning that if there is one thing I know less about than another it is the rules of this House, but I have taken some pains to look up this question. The Holman rule, No. XXI, in the last proviso of the second paragraph, reads:

That it shall be in order further to amend such bill upon the report of the committee or any joint commission authorized by law or the House Members of any such commission having jurisdiction of the subject matter of such amendment, which amendment being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures.

I maintain that this provision does retrench, for the simple reason that it would cost more money to collect this money which is apparently to be collected than could be collected. And therefore it is a matter of retrenchment. Since the item was put in the bill from a duly authorized investigating committee, it seems to me that we are justified in asking for a retention in the bill of the item under this rule, and further from the fact that it has the force and effect of being a retrenchment, it comes under that rule. That is all I have to say on the question.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the rule that the gentleman refers to in the first place, as I recall, does not apply to an original provision in the bill. But that is a matter of minor importance. The gentleman says, in his opinion—though maybe he does not state it as an opinion—that it will cost more to collect the money than it will amount to. That is a process of reasoning which the Chair can not follow. It would not cost anything not to repeal the law. That is perfectly patent. And in order to retrench expenditures chairmen have always held that the bill on its face must effect a retrenchment in expenditures and not by argument of counsel. Nobody can argue that anything will retrench expenditures. Even the building of a navy, or the increase of an army to a million men, some people say, will retrench future expenditures. Perhaps so. That is a matter of argument and supposition. Here is a clear case of legislation on an appropriation bill which does not on its face, will not, as a matter of fact, in any way, retrench expenditures.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I have nothing further to say on the point.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] makes the point of order against that part of the paragraph beginning at line 14 and ending on line 25 on the ground that it is new legislation. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] defends this language, while admitting it is new legislation, which it clearly is, on the ground that it retrenches expenditures, and hence comes under paragraph 2 of Rule XXI, commonly known as the Holman rule. The present occupant of the chair has never been greatly enamored of the Holman rule. In so far as it may tend to retrench expenditures it may serve a wise purpose, but in so far as it may be used to authorize legislation on an appropriation bill under the guise of a retrenchment of expenditures the Chair is inclined to believe that it is unwise and should be construed strictly. In so construing the rule the Chair thinks that he is not permitted to guess or speculate as to whether or not the particular provision under consideration may possibly retrench expenditures. It must be apparent that a saving must necessarily result. In this particular case it is contended that inasmuch as most of the funds provided are uncollectible any effort to collect them will cost more than will be realized, and hence a repeal of the legal provisions for their collection will save money. The Chair thinks that such a conclusion involves a process of speculation in which he is not permitted to indulge, and under the circumstances feels constrained to sustain the point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, that, of course, raises another question with regard to this same provision. It will be noted that the item in the bill is appropriated this year as a gratuity. If we are going to attempt to collect the old moneys, we certainly ought to charge for the service in the future, and therefore I move to amend the first section, line 8, after the figures "$10,000," by inserting the word "reimbursable."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNYDER: Page 2, line 8, after the figures "$10,000" insert the word "reimbursable."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, upon that I want to say that it has been the belief and it is the desire and the ambition of the committee that every item in this bill which can be made effectively reimbursable shall be so made. Therefore I ask that, since the provision we desired to have in is now out, this amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

IRRIGATION ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS (REIMBURSABLE).

For the construction, repair, and maintenance of irrigation systems, and for purchase or rental of irrigation tools and appliances, water rights, ditches, and lands necessary for irrigation purposes for Indian reservations and allotments; for operation of irrigation systems or appurtenances thereto when no other funds are applicable or available for the purpose; for drainage and protection of irrigable lands from damage by floods or loss of water rights, upon the Indian irrigation projects named below:

Irrigation district 1: Sand Creek, agency and miscellaneous projects: Klamath Reservation, $6,100; Round Valley Reservation, Calif., $1,000; Colville Reservation, $6,000; total, $13,100.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The heading of this section is "Irrigation on Indian reservations (reimbursable)." Are the items carried in this paragraph reimbursable?

Mr. SNYDER. They are all reimbursable items, but there has never been anything reimbursed upon them up to date.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The gentleman says they are reimbursable items. In what way? Is there any act of Congress providing that these shall be reimbursable, or does the gentleman think that the heading would in itself make them reimbursable?

Mr. SNYDER. The act of August 1, 1914, provided that all moneys "theretofore and thereafter" expended upon Indian irrigation projects should be charged against the land. That is the theory upon which the laws subsequent to that law have been enacted, and the word "reimbursable" has been put in all the items subsequently during these years. That is the theory we are proceeding under.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Irrigation district 2: Moapa River, $1,050; Shivwits, $800; Walker River, $9,285; Western Shoshone, $3,000; total, $14,135.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. There are a great many private corporations in the West empowered to irrigate private property. In a case where Indian reservations adjoin such lands watered by private irrigation companies does this section of the bill permit Indians to buy water, providing it is more economical to the Indian Bureau?

Mr. SNYDER. I know of no provision in the bill which prohibits an Indian from buying water power or water for irrigation from any outside corporation. Neither do I know of any who are doing that. It does not affect directly or indirectly these private corporations.

Mr. WATSON. Then under the bill an Indian reservation could be watered by a private company if it were deemed advisable?

Mr. SNYDER. That would be done, of course, under an arrangement with the Secretary of the Interior, because an Indian on land which is under restriction would have no authority to make any arrangement for himself. That would have to be done under the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Mr. WATSON. Would an amendment be necessary to cover that proposition?

Mr. SNYDER. I do not know of any proposition to correct it, and therefore I can not say.

Mr. WATSON. I mean to give the Indians the privilege of watering their reservations in that way.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman know of any case in point? Has he any particular case in mind?

Mr. WATSON. I have not any particular case in mind, but it occurs to me that there may be Indian reservations in the vicinity of private properties where it might be desirable to secure water from the private corporation.

Mr. SNYDER. There are some private properties irrigated adjacent to Indian reservations, but I do not know of anything exactly in line with the suggestion of the gentleman. There was nothing brought before the committee in its investigations, anything which would lead me to have any knowledge in regard to the question the gentleman has brought up. I do not think an amendment is necessary. I think the Indian has all the protection he needs in these matters, and I do not think you need put in an amendment which would change the status of an Indian under restrictions.

Mr. WATSON. Then the Secretary of the Interior would have the privilege to do that?

Mr. SNYDER. He would have under existing law.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Irrigation district 4: Ak Chin, Maricopa Reservation, $4,000; La Jolla Reservation, $2,200; Coachella Valley pumping plants, $8,500; Morongo Reservation, $5,500; Headgate, McDowell Indians, Salt River Reservation, $1,500; Pala Reservation, $4,500; Rincon Reservation, $2,000; miscellaneous projects, $15,000; total, $43,200.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the chairman of the committee in regard to this particular irrigation district No. 4. It seems that a number of reservations for which appropriations were made last year are omitted this year and a number of others that were not in the bill last year have been added. However, when the sum total is taken it is found that the total of the paragraph has been increased. A large portion of the increase is in the "miscellaneous projects." The item for miscellaneous projects has doubled in the last year.

Mr. SNYDER. The reason for that, I will say to the gentleman, is that it has been the policy of the bureau not to ask for appropriations for every project each year. And under the item for miscellaneous projects, my understanding is that they have adopted in some of those sections the policy of putting in wells for pumping water for the use of the Indians located in a territory where water can be found, and the committee has permitted in only a very few cases an increase in any appropriation asked last year. I may add that we met with the greatest satisfaction any item where they reserved it for another year and did not try to force it onto us this year.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. The gentleman will remember that prior to last year this item was carried in one lump sum, aggregating about $275,000. The committee thought it wise to require the Indian Office to segregate the items for the different irrigation districts and the different projects, with the result that last year we made a substantial reduction in the total, making it $253,750. This year we made a further reduction, the total being $224,000. There is a shifting from year to year from one district to another and from one project to another, varying with the conditions of the work, but the aggregate sum of money appropriated out of the Treasury is less under this plan than under the lump-sum system.

Mr. SNYDER. I think we can show the gentleman later on in the bill that by appropriating in detail we reduce the amount $1,000,000.

Mr. TILSON. I thoroughly approve of giving the details, of course, and I can understand why some of these projects might not need an appropriation in one year and might need it the next year.

Mr. HAYDEN. As an illustration, in this very bill last year irrigation district No. 1 carried $32,000 while this year $13,100 is appropriated; irrigation district No. 2, $14,135, as against $15,900 last year; irrigation district No. 4 shows a slight increase, $43,200 this year as against $36,700 last year; while irrigation district No. 5 shows a decrease from $75,400 last year to $67,000 this year.

Mr. TILSON. In a general way will the gentleman explain just what these expenditures on these reservations are for? Are they for riding the ditches, or repairs to dams, or something of that kind?

Mr. HAYDEN. The bulk of this appropriation is used in the construction and repair of small irrigation enterprises.

Mr. TILSON. Constructing ditches?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; canals; to irrigate small areas, building a small dam, or extending a ditch.

Mr. SNYDER. Under that item I would like to read into the RECORD a short explanation:

Miscellaneous projects, $15,000: This sum is necessary to carry on investigations into the feasibility of power and irrigation projects within district No. 4, where water is scarce, in order to provide for the increasing needs of the Indians and to protect Indian water rights from encroachments of private irrigation projects. It is very important to have a reasonable sum available for carrying on investigations of this character and for developing small water supplies from time to time as the circumstances require.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, may I get a little information on these items? These are all operating irrigation districts, are they not?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Why does the Government have to appropriate money out of the Federal Treasury to pay the running expenses of an operating irrigation district for the Indians? We do not do that for the whites after a district has become operating, do we?

Mr. SNYDER. I should like to answer the gentleman——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And this one further question: While these items are reimbursable, are they ever reimbursed?

Mr. SNYDER. No; not one penny; but they will be if this bill passes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, we have had the law since 1914.

Mr. SNYDER. But we have not had in that law what we have here. I do not know as we will have this when we get through with it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Here is this situation: On the plea that we must treat the Indian justly we are impelled to appropriate money out of the Treasury to construct an irrigation project. It is stated to us that if we do that the Indians can use their land and become self-supporting and civilized. Thereupon we continue to pauperize them by constructing the irrigation projects and then maintaining them, saying that the Indians must reimburse the expenditure, but never requiring them to do it. I can not think of anything worse for the Indians, except where we give them gratuities upon which they live, than to pay the money out of the Treasury to construct a project which it is said will pay for itself, and then, charging no interest, continuing to pay the operating expenses of the project. Who, even from the Indian country, can defend such a thing as that?

Mr. SNYDER. I agree with the gentleman's argument absolutely, and if the gentleman will permit me I should like to show him what we propose to do in this bill, although I am sure he has read it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have read the bill.

Mr. SNYDER. It is the belief of the committee that we have language in here which will make reimbursement necessary for these items in the future and for the money which has been expended in the past.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not believe there is any language that can require a slack Indian Office to reimburse funds paid out of the Treasury. The way to reimburse the Federal Treasury is not to appropriate the money to begin with. Then they will have to pay their own operating expenses. If one of these projects is successful, there is no reason in the world why it should not pay in enough to run it.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman think this language will cover the situation?—

Provided, That no reimbursable moneys appropriated in this act for irrigation works shall be used for any purpose other than operation and maintenance unless the Secretary of the Interior has prescribed rules and regulations for the payment of the per acre charge by all the users of water under the project, to apply on the reimbursement of the total amount expended: And provided further, That the said Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, showing the irrigation projects or units thereof where repayment of the construction charge has been required.

Now, I may be wrong, but I maintain that under that language—and it was the understanding of the commissioner and of the Secretary of the Interior, because they told us so—they can not expend one dollar for a capital purpose under that provision until they have arranged to get payment per acre back from the users of the water.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. As I recall that provision—I have not read it just now, but I heard it read—it authorizes the expenditure of the money for maintenance and operation.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; and for——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. In other words, we deliberately say to the Indian, "We have constructed irrigation projects for you to use. You are supposed to pay back the cost gradually. Now, we not only will not make you pay back the cost, but we will pay the cost of operating and maintaining the project out of the Treasury." As I recall it, there is no provision in there forbidding that.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Only that it shall not be expended for capital purposes. Well, just what "capital purposes" are I do not know. The only items authorized in this particular bill are for maintenance.

Mr. HAYDEN. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Maintenance might include the purchase of land. It certainly includes the purchase of fuel.

Mr. HAYDEN. We provide in the bill for all purposes——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, no; you do not.

Mr. HAYDEN. This item provides for construction, maintenance, and repair of irrigation systems, the purchase of tools, ditches, water rights, and lands.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. "Construction, maintenance, and repairs" means nothing but maintenance and operation where there is no Government construction.

Mr. HAYDEN. The testimony before the committee by the chief of engineers of the Indian Service is that the major portion of this money is to be used for new construction.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This language in the bill as to appropriations for irrigation projects contemplates a sufficient amount of money to permit the plant to be maintained and operated and a sufficient further amount to keep it from undue depreciation. The theory of the committee was that the moneys should be returned; that in nearly every case the acreage was far ahead of the necessities; and there would be no damage done to the property or to the Indians by holding up further development of the schemes until such time as arrangements could be made and the actual money turned in. There are certain projects which are paying for maintenance and operation, but I regret to say that they are very few and far between. During all the time these projects have been in existence the maintenance and operation charged has amounted to $3,500,000, and up to the time this investigation was made there has been returned only $800,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I take it that all the items in this part of the bill are for maintenance and operation for those projects that do not pay the charges for maintenance and operation.

Mr. SNYDER. There are a few, and I can point them out, which pay for operation and maintenance.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I thought that they were not covered by this language.

Mr. SNYDER. These are all Indian projects, but many of them are operated by white men.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Many of them were constructed for the benefit of white men.

Mr. SNYDER. That is true.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, for irrigation on Indian reservations, $224,185, reimbursable as provided in the act of August 1, 1914 (38 Stat. L., p. 582): Provided, That that part of the provision of said act requiring reimbursement of all moneys theretofore expended for Indian irrigation work is hereby repealed: Provided further, That the repeal hereby authorized shall not affect any funds authorized to be reimbursed by any special act of Congress wherein a particular or special fund is mentioned from which reimbursement shall be made: And provided further, That the said Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, showing the irrigation projects or units thereof where repayment of the construction charge has been required: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended on any irrigation system or reclamation project for which public funds are or may be otherwise available: Provided further, That the foregoing amounts appropriated for such purposes shall be available interchangeably in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior for the necessary expenditures for damages by floods and other unforeseen exigencies: Provided, however, That the amount so interchanged shall not exceed in the aggregate 10 per cent of all the amounts so appropriated.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that portion of the paragraph from line 15, page 5, the word "Provided," down to and including the word "made," on line 22, page 5.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I make no defense to that point of order, since I think the same ruling of the Chairman to the other paragraph applies to this.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that the two propositions are on all fours, and therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, in line 22, to strike out the words "Provided further" and insert the word "Provided."

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 22, strike out the words "Provided further" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Provided."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were 49 ayes and 2 noes.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to require the owners of irrigable land under any irrigation system heretofore or hereafter constructed for the benefit of Indians and to which water for irrigation purposes can be delivered to begin partial reimbursement of the construction charges, where reimbursement is required by law, at such times and in such amounts as he may deem best; all payments hereunder to be credited on a per acre basis in favor of the land in behalf of which such payments shall have been made and to be deducted from the total per acre charge assessable against said land: Provided, That no reimbursable moneys appropriated in this act for irrigation works shall be used for any purpose other than operation and maintenance unless the Secretary of the Interior has prescribed rules and regulations for the payment of the per acre charge by all the users of water under the project, to apply on the reimbursement of the total amount expended: And provided further, That the said Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, showing the irrigation projects or units thereof where repayment of the construction charge has been required.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask in reference to this provision which gives the Secretary authority to fix the time and amount for reimbursement for these irrigation projects. I take it that that will not affect the law which requires that the project shall be paid for. Does not the Secretary of the Interior now have authority to collect these amounts?

Mr. SNYDER. In the original legislation creating these very projects many of them had no time set for the payment. Others, and nearly all the larger projects, contained a provision that payments should be made after the projects were completed and the Secretary had been informed that they were completed. Then he was authorized to make an arrangement with the users of the water to pay back—most of them in 20 annual payments—the amounts assessed against the acreage, which would be the actual cost of the irrigation project up to that time.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This does not authorize the Secretary to collect the money ahead of that time.

Mr. SNYDER. This confers authority on the Secretary of the Interior to collect from each user—but we had to give him a little latitude because under some projects the people are not as well able to pay as much per acre as they are under some others. So we provide in the last paragraph that the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1921, showing the irrigation projects or units thereof where repayments of the construction charges have been required. That was as far as we thought we could possibly go at this time, except we have limited every appropriation to maintenance and operation and an amount sufficient to keep them from undue deterioration until we determine whether a proper arrangement has been made for reimbursement of the money.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the gentleman from New York if he feels that he can under this provision so modify the law as to begin those collections now, when the present law provides that the settlers on these projects shall begin payments when the work is complete, and shall pay in 20 annual payments, distributed proportionately over a period of 20 years, taking into consideration the amount of the cost of the project. Can the gentleman now by this provision modify that law?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, in reply I will say that it is my belief where an irrigation project has been developed beyond the necessities and certain users of the water are receiving the same or approximately the same benefits under the water they would get 10 or 15 or 50 years from now, when the project is fully completed, it is time that a rearrangement of that original contract, even though it be a law, should be made; and it is our intention here to have the law so modified that those people who are now profiting from the use of the water shall begin to pay something for it, which will be simply anticipating the day when they would have to pay under the original act. This will make it possible for a man to begin to pay while he is living and not put that burden upon his heirs.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, the idea of the committee is this, that it is entirely feasible under many Indian irrigation projects to declare certain parts or units thereof complete and to begin reimbursement.

The original plan under the reclamation law was to wait until the entire project was complete, and that same idea has been carried in the Indian irrigation legislation, but the committee can see no reason why, if a unit of a project is now finished and water users are obtaining all the benefits they ever will, the Secretary of the Interior should not have authority to declare that particular part or unit of the project complete and direct that the payment of the construction charge shall commence. Where the water users are not getting a full service, where there remains construction work yet to be done, of course it would be unfair, and it is not to be expected that the Secretary of the Interior will declare a unit of a project completed when, in fact, it was not.

Mr. SNYDER. The Secretary of the Interior is in sympathy with this movement and the Indian Bureau also, and it is time that some of the water users should begin to pay.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I think the idea and aim of the committee are commendable. The question raised in my mind was whether or not the language used would so modify the law that it could be enforced.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Montana has expired. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPPRESSING LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

For the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors among Indians, $75,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have an amendment to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. WALSH. I wanted to get some information before that is done. I do not know how this appropriation compares with the previous one, but did the committee in considering the matter take into consideration the fact that the eighteenth amendment has been ratified and that the Congress has enacted a national prohibition law, and whether that would make it more difficult and costly to suppress this traffic among the Indians or less expensive?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will note that we reduced the item a little bit, $15,000, but it was developed in the hearings that in this particular case where we expend $75,000 we returned to the Government $125,000 or $130,000 in the form of fines, and so forth.

Mr. WALSH. Then it might be a good idea, if it is as profitable as that, to operate a few stills out there.

Mr. SNYDER. I hope that after this year the Department of Justice will have their arrangements so made that this can be eliminated from the bill entirely, but they have not as yet gotten their arrangements made to properly protect that country.

Mr. WALSH. But we appropriated $3,000,000, as I recall, for the enforcement of that national law. Why pick out the poor Indian and appropriate an additional sum where he is concerned?

Mr. SNYDER. I am willing to admit that it was my thought when the argument was being made in the investigation that the item should be wiped out; that it is simply an appropriation for the purpose of keeping a number of Government employees in the service who ought to be out.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is exactly right.

Mr. WALSH. I am very glad that the gentleman from New York expressed that view.

Mr. SNYDER. And that the Department of Justice should handle the service there just as they will in any other part of the country, but the chairman—well, I might say that he weakened a little on the proposition.

Mr. WALSH. Oh, no; I do not think it was weakness, for I do not think he is a gentleman who is subject to weakness.

Mr. QUIN. Is there any way to get it out by amendment?

Mr. SNYDER. Certainly.

Mr. QUIN. Then let us get it out.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 7, line 3, strike out the paragraph contained in lines 3, 4, and 5.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, this is the paragraph which provides for the suppression of the liquor traffic, and appropriates $75,000 for that purpose. That is a few thousand dollars less than was carried in the previous year.

Mr. SNYDER. Fifteen thousand dollars.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Fifteen thousand dollars less, I am told. The theory ought to be that if there is no liquor permitted under Federal license in the United States, they will not need so much suppression of it. The presumption is that a certain number of Indians will get some wood alcohol and die, as a few white people have. This appropriation clearly becomes a waste of money, as indicated by the chairman of the committee, and a duplication. There is no reason why the appropriation should be left in the bill except to sustain some Federal employees, some of whose headquarters are, I believe, in Denver, and who make long trips to engage in the prosecution of the Indians. In the State of Washington, in addition to the pending cases, there were 40 new cases against Indians in connection with liquor violations. There were 39 cases disposed of, and the income to the United States from fines was $4,000.

That represents about an average fine of $100 in each case to Indians who have little or nothing in hand. The remarkable statement appears in the hearings that the amounts collected in fines and turned into the Treasury were $125,000. It says:

Naturally, as the efficiency of the service increases, the fines will increase.

That is a poor way for the Government of the United States to get money into the Treasury, from its wards, the Indians.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman rises in opposition to the amendment?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I rise in favor of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not entitled to recognition.

Mr. BLANTON. No one asked for recognition.

Mr. SNYDER. I asked for recognition, but I will yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the committee I listened attentively to the justification made by the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs on this item. He showed to the committee that in the past few years the item had been gradually reduced from the original figure of $150,000, and that the bureau expected to reduce it further when the National Government in its enforcement of the prohibition act got into action. He made a very good presentation to us of the conditions in the Indian Service, and showed that they were distinct and different from other parts of the country. He showed their isolation. He showed that the ordinary agents of the Government in the enforcement of the prohibition act could not easily get into the Indian reservations in pursuance of their work. The map showing the location of those Indian reservations will easily portray to anyone how far removed they are from the ordinary course of travel and how far they would be from the ordinary field of investigation by agents of the department who might be enforcing the prohibition act. Now, on the whole he convinced us that if this appropriation was justified initially it was still justified for the fiscal year covered in this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Look at the figures. In 1919 there were 3,600 cases pending, and in 1911 556 cases. In other words, as the States have gone dry and the difficulty of getting liquor increases more and more, the more of these agents go on the reservations and work down on the Indians to get the $100 fine. It looks like the record of a police court, and the United States Government ought to be ashamed of it.

Mr. ELSTON. The gentleman is not absolutely correct in that statement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Here are the figures.

Mr. ELSTON. As the States have gone progressively dry there has been progressive reduction in the amount of the appropriation. I know it has been decreasing from year to year.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I did not say the reduction in appropriations, but I said the decrease in the number of cases.

Mr. ELSTON. That shows the effectiveness of the organization and shows the need of this kind of work. The chairman of the committee has already stated that there were a great number of prosecutions. The gentleman has just shown that fact, and shown there have been a great number of convictions and the aggregate fines total about $125,000.

Mr. HASTINGS. The appropriation two years ago was $150,000, and it has been reduced to $75,000.

Mr. ELSTON. It has been reduced 100 per cent in two or three years. I think that any reasonable person can see that if this appropriation was justified initially and this work is a necessary work for the protection of the morals and health of the Indians, that its continuance is necessary. The peculiar situation of these reservations makes it necessary as well——

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I will.

Mr. WALSH. What process of mathematics did the gentleman use when he says that the appropriations were $150,000 two years ago and that there has been a 100 per cent decrease?

Mr. ELSTON. The gentleman knows anybody here will be indulged in an approximate statement, and I think——

Mr. WALSH. The gentleman is a member of this committee, and he should give accurate information.

Mr. ELSTON. Well, what is the percentage, I will ask the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. WALSH. Up in Massachusetts we would call it 50 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I think it is time to stop the duplication of expense in two different departments of the Government. It can hardly be denied that this is a duplication of expense. The prosecution of illegal sales of liquor is placed by Congress in one department of this Government, and why hamper it by placing this particular item of prosecution in another department? We had the other day the disgraceful spectacle of the State officials in Illinois claiming that the Federal Government had interfered with its apprehension and taking into custody of many radicals by tipping off some criminals and then a recrimination by officers of the Federal Government concerning the issue. I refer to the matter of the round-up of reds in Chicago, and so it might happen with respect to the liquor-traffic prosecutions. Why spend this $75,000 when the chairman of the committee himself, by admitting that he weakened, virtually admits it is useless? Why keep on expending it merely to keep a few Federal officeholders in jobs? The country is looking to our friends over here to cut off useless officeholders. Why not begin with this $75,000 item? What is the use of keeping it in here any longer? Does not the committee know, does not this House know, that the Department of Justice can handle the situation with respect to the Indians so far as the illegal sale of liquor is concerned as well as it can handle it with respect to every other part of the Government? I think that the amendment ought to be adopted.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

I am in favor of retaining in the bill the appropriation that is provided for until the committee may have opportunity at least to work over the question; and, considering the proposition that has been suggested of letting the work be handled by the Department of Justice, I believe that we should not disturb the present method of enforcing the prohibition laws among the Indian tribes. Letters that I have received, not only from white people but from right-thinking Indians, tell me that one of the curses among the Indians is liquor. The Indians are upon reservations that are remote from the great bulk of the people in the States where the Indians are located. The Indians have their own language in many instances and their own habits. There must be men engaged in the enforcement of this law who understand the customs, the language, and the manners of the Indians. In my State often the best officers are Indians themselves.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I will be glad to do so.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Let us look at this from a practical standpoint. In the gentleman's own State of Idaho they have two liquor agents or deputies, reinforced by those sent from Denver. They had about 80 cases pending and made a few convictions, and these agents have, all told, in one year seized, grabbed, and taken possession of, in the great State of Idaho, 3 quarts of liquor. Do you want to keep that up?

Mr. FRENCH. I suppose if we had not had any agents attempting to enforce the law and then suddenly some one with the power to seize liquor could have gone in there, instead of 3 quarts he could have obtained 3,000 quarts or even more. The fact of the business is, it is a commendation of the system that has been operating that so small an amount was seized. We must have those who understand the Indians engaged in this work, who understand their habits as to hiding the liquor and cacheing it, in order that we may be able to enforce the law.

Mr. WALSH. Will not the Department of Justice be able to secure that kind of assistance?

Mr. FRENCH. Probably so; but the question should be worked out carefully.

Mr. WALSH. This does not become effective until July 1.

Mr. FRENCH. It seems to me the committee itself ought to have the opportunity, with the suggestions made here, of working out a general policy in regard to enforcing the law through the Department of Justice; and the House ought not now, without having its attention focused to that particular point for more than a few minutes, attempt to wipe out an appropriation and force a new policy upon the Government.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to say to the gentleman that the committee considered carefully whether or not this could be eliminated and taken over by the Department of Justice, but in its judgment it thought it better to make as much of a reduction in the item as it could, and give the Department of Justice a year to organize in order to carry on this work, and then eliminate the item. That is the theory we worked on. Further, I would like to say that I do not think I made the statement that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] said I did, that it was useless. If I did, it was because between now and July 1 the Department of Justice could organize a force and take over this work.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Our chairman said, however, that it weakened it.

Mr. SNYDER. I did intend in the beginning to try to keep it out altogether, on the theory that the Department of Justice ought to be able to take over the work.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. And the chairman is exactly right.

Mr. FRENCH. I do not want to stand for any duplication of appropriations or of work, but until this matter can be worked out systematically, as the chairman of the committee has suggested, I say it would be utterly inadvisable to strike out the appropriation for the enforcing of these laws among the Indian people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time for debate on this amendment has expired.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. For the purpose of striking out the last two words.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to see if we can not get an agreement as to time to finish this section, and in order to see if we can not, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section close in five minutes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have five minutes.

Mr. SNYDER. I will make the request for 10 minutes, including the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS] and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have this amendment reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be again reported.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] stated that the chairman of the committee admitted that this appropriation was useless. I would like to know if that is the attitude of the committee.

Mr. SNYDER. I did not catch the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I understand that the gentleman from Texas stated that the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs said that this appropriation was useless. Is that the attitude of the committee?

Mr. SNYDER. That is not the attitude of the committee and it is not the attitude of the chairman, except to be qualified with the further fact that it was the hope that the Department of Justice would get itself in shape between now and July next to take over this work. Now, if they can do that, this appropriation is useless.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Now, is not this the situation, that the expenditure of this appropriation will cause work to be done that no other department of the Government will take up?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; it is true in that country.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. If this appropriation is withdrawn, will there not be a hiatus in that territory with respect to the enforcement of the law?

Mr. SNYDER. It was the thought—at least, of the chairman of the committee—that the States bordering the Indian reservations would have to see to it that liquor was kept out from the Indian reservations themselves.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. We know perfectly well from experience that that will not be done.

We have just passed a national prohibition act, and unless the Government proposes to make the operation of that law, and of all other prohibition laws effective, through its own agencies, it is perfectly futile to hope that the States and the agencies of the States will effectively take its place.

This is just a question, it seems to me, of what is actually being done. It is not necessary for me to call attention of this body to the great evil of the illicit alcoholic liquor traffic among the Indians. It is not necessary for me to call your attention to the long history of that nefarious traffic. It is not necessary for me to call your attention in detail to the extent to which the Government has fallen down in what it ought to have done to suppress this flagrant mischief among the Indians. Whether this appropriation in this particular territory is being effectively used, is purely a question of fact.

If the Nation is in earnest in desiring to see this evil wiped out in that locality or in any locality where the prohibition law is being violated, or is likely to be violated, it certainly would be a great mistake on our part to withdraw our appropriations, upon the theory that some other body, somewhere else, operating through some other agency will take our place and do the work.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to a question?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. FESS. If we should transfer this work to the Department of Justice, would it not entail additional expenditure on the part of the Department of Justice?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. If we can do this work just as well through the Department of Justice, there would be no vital objection that I can see to transferring it to the Department of Justice. On the other hand I fail to see that any advantage to the Treasury, or the public interests, would be secured by the transfer. Hence why make it?

If the Department of Justice will merely do this work as effectively as it is being done by the present force, and no more effectively, what advantage will be secured by the transfer?

Mr. TILLMAN. I have been a member of this committee for five years, and I am convinced that these people who are now enforcing the liquor law in the Indian country are experts along that line. You can not organize another force immediately that will be as effective as this force.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. If the present force is not effectively doing the work, then it ought to be wiped out, root and branch. But we should not wipe out that force merely on the theory that the Department of Justice will take up this work. We should not do that as a matter of policy. If the present force with the present expenditure is effectively enforcing the law, then it should be upheld. There is no occasion or reason for a change in the existing method of enforcement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Is it not likely that they will be employed for the next 50 or 60 years if they are now retained? You can not make them let go.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Well, in answer to that I will say that if the evil is there, you should not seek to make them let go. I do not expect that for 50 years to come there will be a complete eradication of the illicit-liquor traffic. The hope of gain is too enticing at the prices likely to prevail during that period. It will be necessary for years to come to appropriate many millions of dollars a year to provide the force sufficient to execute the prohibition laws. Already we have organized in the Treasury Department a special force to execute the statute enacted pursuant to the national prohibitory amendment.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the theory on which the item this year was based was that the enforcement would be superseded by the force which will be employed to put into execution the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. We believe that will enable us to permit a further reduction in that appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, if I may be permitted, I would like to ask that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TILLMAN] may use two minutes of my time. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arkansas may be permitted to use two minutes of the five that have been allotted to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TILLMAN] may proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, this is a question that Members should decide, regardless of their views on the prohibition question. Many Indians are fond of liquor and have suffered a great deal from this evil all these years. A great many States years ago made it illegal to sell liquor to Indians. The Bureau of Indian Affairs has a trained corps of officers to enforce this legislation among Indians, and it does not make any difference whether a State becomes dry, liquor is going to be sold to these wards of the Government. All the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs are of the opinion that it would be unwise and unsafe to transfer to the Department of Justice this work of the enforcement of the liquor laws among the Indians.

As I stated, the Bureau of Indian Affairs has a well selected and competent force organized for the enforcement of this wholesome provision. The Department of Justice without a police force trained for this work is not able at this time to cope with the situation. I hope we shall decide this question solely in the interest of the Indians, many of whom fall easy victims to the bootlegger. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. What difference will it make to the Government whether the amount is expended through this bureau or through the Department of Justice?

Mr. TILLMAN. No difference at all.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. If we cut it out here it will have to be paid for through the Department of Justice?

Mr. TILLMAN. It will.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I have always been a prohibitionist, but I have never been sufficiently wild eyed on the subject to be called either a long-haired man or a short-haired woman. [Laughter.] I think the question ought to be looked at from a reasonable standpoint. Here is the situation: The opportunity for the sale of whisky has been reduced, or will be reduced, by the prohibition law, but it is also true that the increased price and the expectation of increased profits from the sale of whisky will be much greater than heretofore, and will serve just that much more as an inducement to the bootlegger to go among the Indians and peddle his wares. If there are any two States that have been cursed by the sale of liquor to Indians, they are the State which I have the honor, in part, to represent and the State represented, in part, by my friend from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I disagree with the gentleman.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman had taken the trip with me to Omak and Okanogan in 1913, he would agree with me fully. In fact, if he knew those conditions as we found them, I fancy he would not even favor the amendment he himself has offered.

My friend from Arkansas, Judge TILLMAN, expressed the situation in a netshell when he said that these men in the Indian Bureau are experts in this line of work. They have worked at it for years, and they know more about it than any force that can be organized by any other branch of the Government in the next fiscal year. It will be possible, however, to reduce your appropriation further. It was reduced this year, and it was reduced last year. But I do not think that those who have at heart the interest of the Indians and who believe the traffic ought to be checked will vote for this amendment. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ELSTON. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 29, noes 28.

The CHAIRMAN. On this question the ayes are 29 and the noes are 28, and the amendment is agreed to. The Clerk will read.

Mr. SNYDER. Tellers, Mr. Chairman.

A MEMBER. We don't want tellers. Our side won.

Mr. SNYDER. I withdraw the demand.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

RELIEVING DISTRESS, ETC.

For the relief and care of destitute Indians not otherwise provided for——

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers on the vote just taken.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. It is too late.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair announced that the ayes were 29 and the noes 28, and that the amendment was agreed to, and then instructed the Clerk to read, and the Clerk began to read, and in the opinion of the Chair it is too late now to ask for tellers.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CRAMTON. During all the proceedings to which the Chair refers, I was upon my feet trying to get recognition, but during the confusion I could not make myself heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not see the gentleman.

Mr. CRAMTON. I realize that fact. Nevertheless I have stated the facts as they were. I was on my feet trying to get recognition.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WALSH. There is nothing before the House. I demand the regular order.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman from New York demanded tellers.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. This is the regular order, Mr. Chairman, the inquiry whether or not we can have a vote by tellers.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] was on his feet and demanded tellers.

Mr. O'CONNELL. And then he withdrew the demand.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Some one stated that his side had won, and he then sat down.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can not guess what are the causes operating in gentlemen's minds. [Applause.]

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. But the gentleman demanded tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman then withdrew the demand.

Mr. CRAMTON. During that time I was on my feet seeking recognition.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. CRAMTON. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. Under all the precedents here, under such circumstances, tellers have been allowed, and we are entitled to them upon such a close vote.

Mr. CARTER. Regular order!

Mr. CRAMTON. I was on my feet trying to get recognition. It was not my fault that the Chair did not see me.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. A question of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WALSH. There is an appeal pending.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I do not think there ought to be undue haste in a matter of procedure like this. Various occupants of the Chair have heretofore announced that when confusion has arisen on the floor the Chair should not be in haste to cut off the opportunity for the committee to have decisions upon close questions made in orderly succession in the way provided for by the rules. The actual situation was exactly as the Chair has stated it to be. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] asked for tellers. Some one told him that he had won, and he withdrew his request and sat down, but at that very moment another gentleman was asking for recognition. He has stated to the Chair that the recognition that he sought was for the purpose of asking for tellers. Under those circumstances the Chair should extend this recognition, so that a vote may be taken by tellers, to ascertain what is the will of the committee with respect to this particular proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to adhere to the rules of the House. The Chair confesses that he was surprised that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER], when an amendment carried by such a close vote, did not demand tellers. The gentleman did demand tellers for a moment, but then withdrew the demand. The Chair did not see anybody demanding recognition; but under the circumstances, and in order that the committee may have an opportunity to register its will by a vote by tellers, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the Chair permit me to make a statement?

The CHAIRMAN. No; that is not in order. The Chair recognizes the gentleman, but not for the purpose of making a statement.

Mr. SNYDER. Then I demand tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York demands tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chairman appointed Mr. SNYDER and Mr. JOHNSON of Washington.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 55, noes 49.

Accordingly the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

RELIEVING DISTRESS, ETC.

For the relief and care of destitute Indians not otherwise provided for, and for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, smallpox, and other contagious and infectious diseases, including transportation of patients to and from hospitals and sanatoria, $375,000: Provided, That not to exceed $45,000 of said amount may be expended in the construction and equipment of new hospitals at a unit cost of not exceeding $15,000: Provided further, That this appropriation may be used also for general medical and surgical treatment of Indians, including the maintenance and operation of general hospitals, where no other funds are applicable or available for that purpose: Provided further, That out of the appropriation herein authorized there shall be available for the maintenance of the sanatoria and hospitals hereinafter named, and for incidental and all other expenses for their proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, equipment, and improvements, not to exceed the following amounts: Blackfeet Hospital, Montana, $12,500; Carson Hospital, Nevada, $10,000; Cheyenne and Arapahoe Hospital, Oklahoma, $10,000; Choctaw and Chickasaw Hospital, Oklahoma, $35,000; Fort Lapwai Sanatorium, Idaho, $40,000; Laguna Sanatorium, New Mexico, $17,000; Mescalero Hospital, New Mexico, $10,000; Navajo Sanatorium, Arizona, $10,000; Pima Hospital, Arizona, $10,000; Phoenix Sanatorium, Arizona, $40,000; Spokane Hospital, Washington, $10,000; Sac and Fox Sanatorium, Iowa, $25,000; Turtle Mountain Hospital, North Dakota, $10,000; Winnebago Hospital, Nebraska, $15,000; Crow Creek Hospital, South Dakota, $10,000; Hoopa Valley Hospital, California, $10,000; Jicarilla Hospital, New Mexico, $10,000; Truxton Canyon camp hospital, Arizona, $10,000; Indian Oasis Hospital, Arizona, $10,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I should like to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] if there is any absolute necessity at this time of constructing new Indian hospitals? We have a very large number now. Under present conditions could we not very well postpone the erection of any additional hospitals at this time and await a more appropriate season?

Mr. SNYDER. There is nothing of a mandatory character here providing that any new hospital shall be built.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. There is a proviso here that not to exceed $45,000 may be expended in the construction and equipment of new hospitals. It does seem to me that with the very large number we have and with the authority we have that Indian patients may be placed in other hospitals, we might suspend, at least temporarily, the construction of new hospitals and save that $45,000.

Mr. SNYDER. I quite agree with the gentleman in his idea of economy at this time, but the committee, after investigation, concluded all of the hospital facilities now existing are in actual use, and since the department did not ask for a greater appropriation than it did the year before, and since the committee knew, as everybody else knows, that it will cost more to operate them this year than it did last, we thought we were doing quite well in holding the appropriation down to the amount of the previous year. But I would not object to the cutting out of the amount provided for new hospitals. I think the department could well get along during the coming year with the hospitals now existing.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the first proviso in the paragraph commencing on line 11, page 7.

Mr. SNYDER. What is the point of order?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That it is legislation and not an appropriation. It authorizes the construction of new work, and that has always been held subject to a point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. It has been in the bill for years.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have no objection to constructing a sufficient number of hospitals, and I suppose it is in the bill mainly because it has been customary in recent years to put the item in.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like also to say that in our investigations we endeavored to discover whether this service could be turned over to the Government Health Service. We had before us for many hours Surgeon Blue, and I tried my best to get him to agree that eventually they might take over this service; but we were not able to get a community of interests so established that we could turn any part of this service in the Indian Bureau over to the health department. It seems to me, if there is any increase necessary in the number of hospitals, it ought to be carried out by the health department of the country and not by the health department of this bureau. I tried also to establish a connection not only between these two departments but between the Forestry Division and the Reclamation Service.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope the gentleman's efforts will prove effective, for we have too much duplication in all these things now.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Illinois to make the point of order against the proviso beginning on page 7, line 11, down to and including the figures "$15,000" in line 14?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Now, is there any objection to reducing the total?

Mr. SNYDER. No; the total should be reduced.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the figures "$375,000" in line 11 and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$330,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 7, line 11, strike out the figures "$375,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$330,000."

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I want to be heard in opposition to that amendment. I do not think there is any more important work done by the Indian Bureau than the health work. I do not think any of the $45,000 was used last year. I do not believe that it would be used this year. That item was contained in the bill for emergency purposes.

Mr. ELSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes.

Mr. ELSTON. Is the gentleman proceeding on the assumption that $45,000 is still in the bill after the point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois has been sustained?

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman from Illinois moves to reduce this amount.

Mr. ELSTON. The effect of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois is to make a correction in the total amount, merely a clerical matter.

Mr. HASTINGS. This provision permits $45,000 of the $375,000 to be used, although it has not been used in the past. I think the amount of $375,000 ought to be retained in the bill and the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to reduce it by $45,000 be voted down.

Mr. ELSTON. What is the gentleman's conclusion as to the effect of the sustaining of the point of order and leaving the total $375,000?

Mr. HASTINGS. I do not think it amounts to anything, because no three or additional hospitals were established last year, and if this remains in the bill I do not have an idea that any hospital would be erected, but they would have the $375,000 for health work among the Indians.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. Certainly.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The paragraph is quite specific and provides the amount of money which can be expended at the various hospitals. Now, the reduction of the total will not change that.

Mr. HASTINGS. This proviso permits the expenditure of $45,000—it says that it may be expended, but suppose it is not expended for new hospitals, then the total amount of $375,000 may be expended for other purposes, relieving distress, and so forth, among the Indians.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It could not be expended at other hospitals, because the appropriation bill fixes the amount that could be spent at any particular hospital. The estimate includes $45,000 for construction of new hospitals.

Mr. HASTINGS. If you add up the total amount provided for these hospitals, it will not amount to $375,000 including the $45,000. A part of the money is directed, in the first few lines of the paragraph, to be expended for the relief and care of destitute Indians not otherwise provided for, and the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, smallpox, and other contagious and infectious diseases. All of the $375,000 is not required to be spent through these hospitals. If the $45,000 was not spent for new hospitals, it could be spent for relief and care of the destitute Indians and the treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, and contagious diseases, and so forth.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That is the general language applicable to the expenditure of money at the hospitals.

Mr. HASTINGS. If the gentleman will yield a moment, Mr. Meritt, Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, when he was before the committee, made the following statement:

Mr. MERITT. We have authority to build not to exceed three new hospitals, but because of the appropriation we have not found it possible during the last year to build any new hospitals out of this appropriation, and we found it very difficult indeed to keep the hospitals open during the entire year because of the influenza epidemic; we had very heavy calls for the relief of distress among Indians, and if it had not been for the cooperation of the Public Health Service we could not have met the conditions that arose on our various Indian reservations because of the influenza epidemic.

That corroborates what I have said about this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The paragraph which the gentleman just read was brought about by a question which the chairman asked Mr. Meritt with regard to the matter. I asked him whether this amount included any hospitals, and he replied as the gentleman from Oklahoma has read. This testimony will bear out the fact he expected to build out of the $375,000 various new hospitals, up to the limit of the law. It seems to me that since the point of order has been sustained and the $45,000 for the three new hospitals has been stricken out of the bill, the committee would be perfectly justified in striking from the total amount $45,000.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman will agree that none of the $45,000 as contained in the bill was used for hospitals last year, and the chairman must agree as to the entire amount of $375,000 was otherwise expended?

Mr. SNYDER. I do not know.

Mr. HASTINGS. But Mr. Meritt states that in the testimony that I have read.

Mr. SNYDER. But last year, the gentleman will recall, they also said they had a very serious time with influenza, and the necessity for the expenditure of the money was much greater than they anticipate will arise at present. They stated they had the cooperation of the Public Health Service, and that they received a great deal of help from them, otherwise they would not have been able to get through. I am disposed to be more liberal with this branch of the service than any other I can think of at this moment, but it is my understanding that they did intend to build hospitals out of this appropriation.

Mr. HASTINGS. Oh, no; it is the same amount of money carried for two or three years. It was not utilized for that purpose last year. It is only a permissive provision that is in the bill.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Is the aggregate of these various items at the bottom of page 7 and at the top of page 8, $330,000?

Mr. BEGG. No; it is $304,000.

Mr. SNYDER. There is a reasonable amount of latitude left in all of these items so that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs can distribute the money in almost any part of the country that he desires, and he is not always confined to the items mentioned in the bill. Further funds, tribal funds, and so forth, other money, can be used for this purpose, but I maintain that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is quite correct in striking the $45,000 from the total. And inasmuch as the point of order has been sustained, and with the amount remaining in the bill, I believe the service will not be any worse off than last year. It is my belief the calls upon the hospital service will be much less this year than last, and more money will not be needed. Of course, that is only my belief.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. In regard to the new hospitals, there is a provision for the maintenance of 19 different hospitals, and so far as I know, other than this provision for new hospitals, there is no appropriation; and there would be no appropriation available were any one of these 19 hospitals destroyed by cyclone, fire, or anything of that sort.

As to the necessity for hospitals, there are among the Indians at this time 23,021 cases of tuberculosis, 3,941 of which are active. We all know from the nature of the blanket Indians that they are not trained in sanitation. They are the distributers of this disease, not only among their own people but among their white neighbors and also the lessees of their land and the children in the schools. So far as trachoma is concerned, a very serious and destructive eye disease, especially found among the Indians, there are some 30,375 cases, 12,474 of which are active. You may as well turn loose as many cases of leprosy as to turn this number of tuberculosis and trachoma victims loose to mingle with the school children and the citizens in the different communities. These are communicable diseases. They are deadly. Trachoma is one of the greatest causes of blindness in this country, and the Indian can not and will not be properly taken care of in cases of this kind unless he is placed in a hospital. I think it would be very short-sighted economy for us to strike out the possibility of the construction of these hospitals, if the department found it necessary, in order to save $45,000 and at the same time to turn loose these cases of communicable diseases and thus spread the disease throughout the country.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, is trachoma as prevalent among the Indians in Washington now as it was some six or seven years ago?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. I can not answer in regard to that. There are many cases among the Indians there at this time.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. If the gentleman will permit, when the first appropriation was made for the treatment of trachoma some seven or eight years ago, it was stated then that if the appropriations asked for were allowed it would wipe out the disease entirely, and that thereafter there would be no need for its repetition or occasion for further appropriations. I was just wondering if that purpose had been accomplished.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, trachoma is not a disease that any appropriation could absolutely stamp out. It is something that has existed and has been the cause of blindness from the beginning of time, especially in dry and sandy countries. It is a disease so serious that if an immigrant comes to this country from another country who is found at Ellis Island or any other port of entry to be the victim of trachoma he is sent back to his native country.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Chairman, it is a self-originating disease under certain conditions.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Yes; and it is a matter of fighting it all of the time. You have to fight it from year to year. It would therefore be impossible for this appropriation or any other to absolutely eradicate the disease.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. Certainly we have had our sympathies aroused with the statement made by the two distinguished gentlemen, both of them members of the medical profession, and we ought to see that this dangerous disease is checked in its ravages upon the Indians. But when we are providing 19 hospitals for 300,000 Indians we are doing fairly well, it seems to me, in giving $304,000 to these various hospitals and allowing some $26,000 for general expenses. I regret I can not agree with the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma that we ought to permit the appropriation to stay at $375,000 after having eliminated the authority to erect additional units to these hospitals.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will note, on page 43 the capacity of these hospitals is only 738 patients.

Mr. WALSH. I suppose the gentleman wants them to have a capacity to take care of 300,000——

Mr. CARTER. No; but the point I make is that 738 patients are not a very large proportion of the total number of Indians.

Mr. WALSH. No; it is not a very large capacity, but it is a rather large number of hospitals, with new units to cost $15,000 each. I was about to state that it seems to me that even though they had the cooperation of the Public Health Service last year that was under very unusual conditions of an epidemic prevailing. I understand it was very severe among the Indians, probably because of the civilizing influence of Uncle Sam tendered to them. I doubt if the ravages would have been as severe as they were if the Indian had been permitted to roam his reservation unrestricted as to care and regulations by this great bureau of the Government.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALSH. I yield gladly to the doctor.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. All right. The gentleman from Massachusetts has no doubt observed that this bill provides for the abolition of certain Indian schools and placing those Indian children in the white schools, where it can possibly be done.

Mr. WALSH. Well, I did not know——

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. When you have placed these children in the white schools and they are affected with trachoma, that means that some of those white children are going to be affected by that disease. Now, I assume every gentleman here—and I invite your special attention—fully realizes the importance of tuberculosis, but I doubt whether you realize the importance of trachoma. It is an eye disease, very serious; so serious that if one white child contracts that disease from an Indian child there is every probability that he is going to have to fight it and contend with it for months and months, probably for years, with a possibility of very serious injury to his eyesight, and many cases of blindness result. To make it possible, if it should deem it necessary, to construct three hospitals of not to exceed $15,000 each so as to take care of such things, I think would not be an extravagance.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman know that there are 83 hospitals in the Indian Service now and we are only talking about 19 here?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPPORT OF INDIAN SCHOOLS.

For support of Indian day and industrial schools not otherwise provided for, and other educational and industrial purposes in connection therewith, $1,600,000: Provided, That not to exceed $40,000 of this amount may be used for the support and education of deaf and dumb or blind Indian children: Provided, That all reservation and nonreservation boarding schools, with an average attendance of less than 50 and 100 pupils, respectively, shall be discontinued on or before the beginning of the fiscal year 1921. The pupils in schools so discontinued shall be transferred first, if possible, to Indian day schools or State public schools; second, to adjacent reservation or nonreservation boarding schools, to the limit of the capacity of said schools: Provided further, That all day schools with an average attendance of less than seven be, and are hereby, discontinued on or before the beginning of the fiscal year 1921: And provided further, That all moneys appropriated for any school discontinued pursuant to this act or for other cause, shall be returned immediately to the Treasury of the United States: Provided further, That hereafter the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make and enforce such rules and regulations as may be necessary to secure the enrollment and regular attendance of eligible Indian children who are wards of the Government in schools maintained for their benefit by the United States or in public schools: Provided further, That hereafter the Secretary of the Interior may place Indian children in any Government school without regard to the State in which such children or the school may be located: Provided further, That not more than $200,000 of the amount herein appropirated may be expended for the tuition of Indian children enrolled in the public schools: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the support of Indian day and industrial schools where specific appropriation is made.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the language in line 15, beginning with the words "Provided further" down to line 19, including the word "located."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman state first what he makes the point of order on? I did not hear it.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Line 15, on page 9, beginning with the words "Provided further," down to and including the word "located" in line 19. Does the gentleman concede the point of order? It is useless to argue it if he does.

Mr. SNYDER. I wish the gentleman would reserve it just a moment.

Mr. GALLIVAN. I will.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the reason for the insertion of this provision is that if the other section applies and certain schools are eliminated it will be necessary, in order to care for children who are now at school and who will be eliminated, to take them from one State to another. At present the Government has no authority which permits it to do this except upon compliance of the parents with the request that it be done.

Mr. BEE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SNYDER. I will.

Mr. BEE. Why does the committee discontinue these schools, line 20, page 8, "reservation and nonreservation boarding schools, with an average attendance of less than 50 and 100 pupils"?

Mr. SNYDER. There are several reasons for that. First, the best authority who came before us maintained that no boarding school could be operated on an economical basis with less than 300 pupils. It was the belief of the committee that a child in a small school gets nowhere near the advantage that he would enjoy in a larger school.

Mr. BEE. Is not the reverse of that proposition true?

Mr. SNYDER. No; the facts are that in schools where they have an attendance of 300 pupils they can educate them on a basis which to my mind seems at least at an expense of about 50 to 60 per cent less.

Mr. BEE. Is not the result of this elimination, to which the gentleman from Massachusetts calls attention, that you are sending these children all over the country, away from their homes, instead of keeping them among their own people? Is not that the result?

Mr. SNYDER. In the Indian country mileage does not count much.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Does the gentleman mean Alaska; that is quite a bit?

Mr. SNYDER. I mean these Indian schools which are located in 22 different States in the Union. I mean also the biggest boarding schools we have in our country—the colleges where the men come from all over the United States, of course, under quite different environment from which the Indian goes from one section of his State to another.

But I say it is only a matter of theory that a child is farther away from home when he is 500 miles away in a boarding school than he would be if only 1 mile away. In the interest of economy and the better service the child will receive, this legislation should be enacted. I realize that this is doing things on a horizontal basis, but when you come to consider that we found a surplus of 2,000 capacity in our nonreservation boarding schools; that in the reservation school a surplus of nearly 4,000, and in the other schools nearly 12,000, it seemed to us that it was time that we should begin to economize.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. You mean by that that there are more benches than pupils?

Mr. SNYDER. I mean that those schools had a full complement of professors, teachers, matrons, doctors, nurses, caretakers, and all that sort of thing, whether they had 16 pupils or 250 pupils.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. They need pupils in some of the schools.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will not the gentleman admit that when this Indian administration here recently decided that their parents should pay $200 a year to help to cut down the tuition, that the agents of the department went around and coerced the parents to pay that $200, even when they could not afford it? That is what has happened in the schools.

Mr. SNYDER. I hope that under this provision, between now and the time the schools will be shut down next June, most of them will be brought up to the requirements set forth here, and instead of it being necessary to take pupils away from these places it will probably be necessary to furnish greater capacity.

But the difficulty has been that the bureau has been willing to spend money to furnish schools, but has overlooked the necessity of getting pupils to attend them. What we are endeavoring to do is to bring in a new viewpoint on the proposition. But until a proper time arrives we propose to shut down the schools, which will save not only the Indian Bureau but the public that amount of money.

I want to say a word further. Since this investigation started, and the bureau discovered we were going to do business, they have come to their senses, and have presented here a long list of schools which have been eliminated within a few days or a few weeks; also a list of others which are going to be eliminated or consolidated, having arrived at the conclusion that the time has come when we were going to insist upon a reformation so far as this proposition is concerned. And so this provision we are putting in here is very much less drastic than the action the bureau has seen fit to take on its own account. I may say that this item which my friend from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] is so exercised about did not come about by any action on the part of the committee, except that the bureau discovered certain schools were going to be eliminated, and they happened to select his as one of the first ones to go.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. With 250 pupils.

Mr. SNYDER. I am not arguing now as to the merits of the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] has expired.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, I renew the point of order

Mr. SNYDER. I do not care to argue the point of order.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. THLSON). A point of order is pending. The language of the proviso is clearly legislation and seeks to repeal and would repeal twenty-ninth statute, page 348, as follows:

Hereafter no Indian child shall be taken from any school in any State or Territory to a school in any other State against its will or without the written consent of its parents.

The item is clearly legislation, and the point of order is sustained.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word to discuss for a minute this school proposition among the Indians. I make no objection to striking down particular schools, either nonreservation or reservation, with an attendance of less than 50, if they think that is best, or striking out day schools that have run down to less than 8 or 10 pupils. I have seen a good many of these Indian schools, and in many cases they are lucky if they get 10 little pupils.

It happens that the Indian Commissioner has taken a notion that Indian pupils should be educated in agriculture, and for that reason he seems to have turned against this Cushman School, with an attendance of 251 in 1919 and 250 in 1918, and abandoned that school, and will close it on June 30 this coming year. That is all right if that is his business.

I went before this committee, and the statement was made after I left the room that it was expected that I would be for that school, inasmuch as it was in my district. That is not the case. The school is not necessarily an asset. The school buildings are run down. They are in the limits of the city of Tacoma and are an eyesore. The school has not been properly conducted for years. Now, it is to be abandoned. Look at what you are doing. You are sending these young students back to a lot of little tribes. The actual attendance at the close of the last school term was 184, made up as follows: Alaskan, 8; Aleut, 1; Blackfeet, 8; Cayuse, 1; Chehalis, 1; Chippewa, 2; Clallam, 1; Colville, 28; Eskimo, 4; Flathead, 16; Kootenai, 2; Lummi, 1; Makah, 4; Muckleshoot, 9; Nez Perce, 2; Okanogan, 2; Peoria, 4; Puyallup, 28; Quileut, 2; Quinault, 6; Skokomish, 6; Spokane, 8; Squaxon, 2; Suquamish, 1; Thlinget, 8; Walla Walla, 6; Warmsprings, 5; Yakima, 10; Yukon, 6; Hyda, 2.

Now, there is a school where parents have sent their children. It is maintained in part by the Government, about $50,000, we will say, annually, and $10,000 or $12,000 or $14,000 as remnant from the tribal funds of the Puyallups. It is an industrial school. They have taught the boys blacksmithing, wagon making, and carpentering. Many of them have turned out well. But beyond that work the good work in that school has been in the instruction of the girls. Girls are brought from all of these tribes I have named. Their parents pay $20 a month toward the support of the school, and those girls go back to the place where they live with some knowledge of modern housekeeping and clothes making. But that school has fallen under the disfavor of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs because some inspecting agent has so reported, and it has been cut out. They explained to the committee that they have had some trouble in getting a suitable instructor in blacksmithing. The pay seems to be $1,200 or $1,400, and the teacher quits and goes down into the shipyards and gets $8 or $10 a day.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I ask for an additional five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. ELSTON. Did I understand the gentleman to state that it is too late now to reestablish this school and that he was going to acquiesce in its abolition?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. No. Here is an inquiry leading up to it, covering 1,500 pages. Here the Commissioner of Indian Affairs announces that this school will die on June 30 definitely. There is no appropriation provided. This has come into this bill surreptitiously. Fifteen or sixteen days' notice was given me before the bill was printed, and I had time to telegraph to two or three principal citizens of Tacoma, and they say they do not particularly care that the school be kept there.

Mr. ELSTON. What part of the bill is the gentleman discussing?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I am discussing the school policy. We will reach the Cushman item much later. By the time we get down to the State of Washington Indian affairs will have been pretty well thrashed out and few will pay attention to the proceedings. I think the commissioner is making a mistake to chop that school off on such short notice. I have always thought it ought to be developed on a par with the great Sherman School at Riverside, in the gentleman's district, and which is one of the show places of that city.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Is the reason assigned by the gentleman a while ago the only reason given for the discontinuance of this school?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is one primary reason I find by looking through these hearings.

Mr. FESS. That they could not get a teacher?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That blacksmith teachers and wagon-maker teachers will not stay there at the pay offered. A further reason, so far as I can make out, is that Mr. Commissioner Sells seems to think that agriculture is the principal thing which should be taught the Indians. It shows in this report that 16 of these boys came from the Flathead Reservation and that they should be taught agriculture.

Mr. FESS. He thinks the course of instruction should be changed to agricultural teaching?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes. Further, the buildings are becoming dilapidated.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I think it is a very apparent fact that the teaching everywhere is going to face this crisis that the gentleman has suggested.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes. That is the situation. What a pity it is, where we have Indians in an organized school, as many as 300 in one school, to send them back to those squalid little reservations, away, away to the very borders of civilization.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. How do they get teachers for manual training in these other schools?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. As to that I do not know. I think they will have the same trouble as that referred to by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. RHODES. Is it not a fact that these Indian children can receive their educational and vocational training at home?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. No.

Mr. RHODES. Why?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. These are poor people. They are rich in property but poor in money. The desire is to make them go to the public schools. I think the law provides that if they are sent to the public schools the Government shall pay the bills. The Government will gain nothing by shutting down this school. I have seen these people to whom I refer. They are poor, but they have bought Liberty bonds. They live poor. They will never come into their own. The whole appropriation here granted for the survey of their lands would not survey three sections in that Indian country. It is all a waste of money. Now, it is proposed to send 250 of these school children to other Indian reservation schools, or back to school in the little one-story places, with the windows broken out and iron stovepipes sticking up through the roofs and an American flag on the flagpole. It is a great hurrah, this "education for the Indians."

Mr. RHODES. How long will it be necessary to maintain this Cushman School to which the gentleman refers?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I should say 25 years, or just as long as it is necessary to retain the Sherman School.

Mr. RHODES. On what ground does the gentleman contend that it will be necessary to maintain this school for 25 years?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It will be necessary until the Indians die out. The Government is not likely to let go of Indian control.

Mr. HUSTED. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. Are there any other schools of similar character, where the same subjects are taught, to which these children could be sent without hardship?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. There are reservation schools in various places; but they claim they want to get rid of the boarding schools.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has again expired.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. On page 9, line 5, I move to strike out the word "seven" and insert the word "fifteen."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BEGG: On page 9, line 5, after the word "than," strike out the word "seven" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifteen."

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to argue the amendment or discuss it at any length, except to say that a school of seven is no school at all. I do not know anything about Indian schools, but I think I do know a little something about white public schools. I know that with respect to the mental defectives in the United States to-day they classify a reasonably sized school of defectives as around 12 or 15. One of the big assets of a school training in everyday schools is the opportunity for rivalry in play. In a school of seven there is no opportunity for anything. There is practically nothing to do. If a teacher were to give individual instruction, he could not keep busy during the daytime with a school of seven. I most certainly think that the minimum ought to be placed at twice seven.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. Does the gentleman happen to know what the minimum number of pupils for a school is, as provided under the laws of the State of Ohio?

Mr. BEGG. I do.

Mr. HAYDEN. What is the number?

Mr. BEGG. It is 15 or 18, I believe.

Mr. HAYDEN. The committee made some inquiries in regard to that and found that in most of the States the limit was 10 and in other States it was 7. We thought that if we followed the rule adopted by the States, inasmuch as this was the first time that we were undertaking the experiment, we would be safe. In the State of South Dakota, where there are a large number of Indians, the law limits the number of pupils to 7. That is why we fixed it on this basis. This was thought to be a step in the right direction, but we should not make it too drastic.

Mr. BEGG. I want to say to the gentleman, in regard to that, that even if the minimum in some of the States is 7 or 10 that would not be a rational argument here. The practical workings of the school require a greater number of pupils than 7 or 10, and I would not want my child to go to a school that had only 7 pupils in it, and I question whether the gentleman would want his children to go to such a school.

Mr. HAYDEN. It would be better to have the children go to that kind of a school than to go to no school at all.

Mr. BEGG. There is no argument of no school at all. We are not depriving anybody of school privileges. I am in favor of seeing that they all get school privileges.

Mr. HASTINGS. This is average attendance. There might be sometimes an enrollment of 20 or 25. It only requires average attendance.

Mr. BEGG. There is something wrong with any school system where the enrollment is 20 or 25 and the average attendance is only 7.

Mr. HASTINGS. I used that only as an illustration.

Mr. BEGG. I do not think the gentleman's illustration is a very good one.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. What provision would the gentleman make for educating the children in a sparsely settled country, where there are two or three families, and a little school, and no other school for miles and miles, where the attendance sometimes runs down to three or four or five? In such a case there seems to be no other way of giving those children an education. Theoretically, of course, it would be very much better if it were practicable for the children to attend a school where there were 20 or 30 pupils, but there are communities where schools are maintained for the benefit of a very few white children, and it seems to me that the same thing should be done for the Indian children. If a school is discontinued because the number of pupils is small, what is to become of the children who did attend that school?

Mr. BEGG. Some provision should be made to transfer them to a school where there are a greater number of children.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. At what age would the gentleman take an Indian child away and send that child to some school a hundred miles from home? Would he take such a child away from home at the age of 6 years?

Mr. BEGG. I would hardly take a child of 6 years away from home, but I would not want that child to attend a school where there were only three or four pupils.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, with reference to the amendment I will say that the bill now makes the limit 7, and that will affect about 12 schools. There are 12 schools which are being operated on a very high per capita basis, for the purpose of teaching an average of less than 7 children in each of those schools.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. How near are those schools to any other schools?

Mr. SNYDER. That is a difficult question to answer. I should think, however, that many of them were not adjacent to other schools. Some of them are close to public schools where these children could be put.

Mr. FESS. It would not necessarily deprive them entirely of an education?

Mr. SNYDER. No; and I am in sympathy with the amendment. My first thought was 10, and I started with that proposition, to eliminate all schools where the average attendance was below 10, but the judgment of gentlemen from the Indian country prevailed over mine, and I conceded the point and allowed a reduction from 10 to 7; but I must admit that it was against my own better judgment, and I had the same notion about it that my friend has who presents the amendment.

Mr. FESS. What is the gentleman's impression of the effect on both the Indian child and the white child where the Indian child goes to a public school?

Mr. SNYDER. I think it is the best possible practice to get the Indian into a white school just as quickly as you can.

Mr. FESS. So that the closing of some of these schools might put Indian children into public schools?

Mr. SNYDER. That is exactly what will happen. I do not want to discuss the Cushman School, because that whole argument was several hours ahead of time. When we come to the Cushman School we will be able to show that there is ample room nearby for all of those pupils if that school is eliminated, and, so far as the chairman of the committee is concerned, I would be willing to accept the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio if he will lower the limit from 15 to 10.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I would like to inquire whether the effect of the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG], with the theory of which I entirely agree, would be to throw any considerable number of these Indian children entirely out of school?

Mr. SNYDER. I fear that if the limit were fixed as high as 15, it would close so many Indian schools that some of the pupils would not be able to be provided for anywhere except in boarding schools, which, in that event, would make the cost greater than it is now.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will ask the gentleman from Ohio if he is disinclined to accept the proposition to make the limit 10?

Mr. BEGG. I would be glad to accept that. I would rather see it a larger number. I think 10 is too small, but under the conditions I have no disposition to deprive anyone of the opportunity to go to school; and if I may be permitted I will ask unanimous consent to change the word "15" to "10."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment as the Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BEGG: Page 9, line 5, after the word "than," strike out the word "seven" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

INDIAN SCHOOL AND AGENCY BUILDINGS.

For construction, lease, purchase, repair, and improvement of school and agency buildings, including the purchase of necessary lands and the installation, repair, and improvement of heating, lighting, power, and sewerage and water systems in connection therewith, $335,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available for the payment of salaries and expenses of persons employed in the supervision of construction or repair work of roads and bridges and on school and agency buildings in the Indian Service: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow employees in the Indian Service, who are furnished quarters, necessary heat and light for such quarters without charge, such heat and light to be paid for out of the fund chargeable with the cost of heating and lighting other buildings at the same place: And provided further, That the amount so expended for agency purposes shall not be included in the maximum amounts for compensation of employees prescribed by section 1, act of August 24, 1912.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word Before leaving the question of Indian schools I want to ask the chairman about the policy of discontinuing schools. Has there been a change in the Carlisle Indian School in Pennsylvania?

Mr. SNYDER. The Carlisle School was taken over by the Army almost as soon as the war started. Originally the Carlisle School belonged to the War Department, and when the war started they immediately called for the building to be used as a hospital. It will be the policy of the War Department to keep the property for hospital purposes, and no longer will there be carried on there a school for the education of the Indians.

Mr. FESS. Was the great work in the Carlisle School duplicated in many other schools?

Mr. SNYDER. Not in many other schools, but in some.

Mr. FESS. So that pupils that have been denied the privileges of that school are not deprived of education.

Mr. SNYDER. I am fearful that a great injustice was done when the Carlisle School was taken away. I think it was the means of establishing a morale among the higher grade Indian pupils who desired to go there to get the benefit of athletics and higher education. The Indian Service got a great deal of advertising throughout the United States by sending out a football and baseball team. It was greatly against my thought and wish that the school was done away with. I wish there might be established somewhere one school in the United States under the Indian Bureau where the system that was carried on at Carlisle might be established.

Mr. FESS. I am obliged to the chairman; that is my impression, that the Indian school at Carlisle had attracted nation wide attention to its great work. I had understood that it had been discontinued, but did not know that it was to be permanent.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. For a great many years the Carlisle School did a great work in educating Indians. It was always rather an expensive school, not the least of which extra expense was brought about on account of the money necessary for transportation of pupils clear across the continent to get to the school.

I had the privilege of attending several of the commencement exercises at the close of the Carlisle School. The school was apparently getting along swimmingly. They had a splendid football team, a splendid athletic team, a good band, and many of the other things that go to build up the morale of such institutions. At these commencement exercises they would give an exhibition of their industrial work by the demonstration of some certain scholar of some of the several supposedly industrial lines conducted there. One young man would show how to make a buggy and put it together. Then one young lady would show how to make bread, keep house, do laundry, or something of that character, so that at these exercises the school was certainly made to appear to the audience as doing great work. Some complaint, however, came from the institution, and in 1913 a joint committee of Congress, on which I had the honor of serving, went to Carlisle and made an extended investigation of conditions. The testimony by which our facts were developed was given not only by the pupils themselves but by several members of the faculty, practically all of which unbiased statements showed a condition of corruption, immorality, underfeeding of pupils, and a complete demoralization of discipline and morale. We found that while a great football team still existed, that the educational courses in the different branches were inefficient and so far as industrial departments are concerned, practically nil. It was testified by one of the gentlemen in charge of the farm instruction that no pupil was ever sent to the farm except as a punishment. This was practically the situation with reference to the other industrial branches. I agree that the Carlisle School was at one time a good and important school, but it degenerated to such a level by the time we made the 1913 investigation as to warrant the committee in recommending the removal of the superintendent and several others and to justify the Interior Department in carrying out the committee recommendations to the letter. Indictments were made with reference to some of these matters and convictions followed, although, as I recall now, only one penitentiary term was served, and as is usual in such cases that term seemed to have been served by an Indian member of the faculty, who was made the goat.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I got the impression some way or other that the primary idea of the Carlisle School was for industrial purposes.

Mr. CARTER. That was one of the prime motives for the establishment of this school, and I had the impression that this purpose was being carried out until this investigation was had. I thought at that time that Carlisle was giving instruction such as could not be procured in any other part of the country; but under the management it seemed to have degenerated until the school had become demoralized and never seemed thereafter to have been able to rehabilitate itself.

Mr. HUSTED. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. How have the graduates of Carlisle made it in after life? It seems to me that that is the real test.

Mr. CARTER. Those who graduated from Carlisle more than seven or eight years ago are among the very best.

Mr. HUSTED. Does the gentleman think the management of the school or college running down is a sufficient reason for discontinuing the school?

Mr. CARTER. I do not think that was the sole reason why it was discontinued.

Mr. HUSTED. Is there any reason why it should not be reestablished?

Mr. CARTER. Yes. The policy of the Indian Bureau and of Congress has been to diminish and cut down the expenses of the Government, and in doing that it is necessary to decrease activities all along the line, including schools. I was always a friend of Carlisle when it was giving good service, but on account of its remoteness from Indian reservations, added to this demoralized condition, I can think of no school which might be more wisely dispensed with. As the gentleman perhaps knows, this school was suspended during the war in order that the buildings might be used for war activities. The course prescribed for Carlisle School was about the same as that given at many other Indian schools, and their instruction in industrial lines did not begin to come up to the standard of such schools as Sherman Institute, Haskell Institute, Chilocco, and a great many others that could be named.

Mr. HUSTED. I used to see the Carlisle School pupils when I was at college when they came to witness football games, and I was very much impressed with their appearance and bearing, and I have always understood it was the representative Indian school of the country. If it ran down in recent years, it seems to me that the proper course was to change the management and put it back where it used to be rather than to discontinue the schools, because I think it served a very useful purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for a few minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, what the gentleman states would be true and would be the proper course to pursue if it were not a fact that Congress has repeatedly expressed itself as favorable to the winding up of the affairs of the Indian and the Indian Bureau, just as fast as it is safe to do so. This very bill takes many valuable steps in that direction. In fact, one of the valuable provisions contained is the closing up of such schools as can be safely dispensed with. If it is our purpose to bring the Indian Bureau to an end, then we should actually take some steps to do it, and that can not be done by reestablishing schools which the bureau itself has discontinued, especially when we have other schools sufficient to support the Indian Service.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, my suggestion was not to establish any more schools, but my thought was that if we had a school somewhere within the service that could be brought up to the standard of Carlisle, it ought to be done.

Mr. CARTER. Yes; I agree with the gentleman that Carlisle was in an atmosphere very favorable to the Indian. The people for miles around took great interest in the school and pupils, and the people of Pennsylvania are to be complimented on the splendid manner in which they supported the school and gave encouragement to the Indians. I have felt that the Indian at Carlisle was in an atmosphere that caused him to be just a little bit too much "hothoused," if I may use that term. But when all is said and done it was a splendid school, until it finally began to go to pieces, and when it began to deterioate it placed itself in line for abolishment.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the first or the last word for the purpose of asking a question. I notice the provision in the bill on page 9—

That all moneys appropriated for any school discontinued pursuant to this act or for other cause shall be returned immediately to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. SNYDER. Of course, the gentleman understands that we have passed that section?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Very well, I would like to ask the gentleman about this anyway. Where did that language come from.

Mr. SNYDER. That language was invented by the committee itself.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I thought so.

Mr. SNYDER. That was the best that we could do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It does not mean anything, but if it did it would not mean what it seeks to convey.

Mr. SNYDER. That may be so, but here is what it amounts to——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, I know the purpose of it is to make the money unavailable, but it is a lump-sum appropriation.

Mr. SNYDER. No; it goes further than that.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I beg the gentleman's pardon. It is in a paragraph providing a lump-sum appropriation of $1,600,000, and there is no specific appropriation for any school that will be discontinued under it.

Mr. SNYDER. But there is a specific expense item handed us by the Secretary of the Interior covering each one of those schools.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. But that is not an appropriation.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And when money is appropriated it is not taken out of the Treasury. It can not be returned to the Treasury unless it has been taken out of the Treasury. It is not taken out of the Treasury until the bills are paid. However, that does not matter. I did not know but that the Indian Department had prepared this language and I asked to find out.

Mr. SNYDER. The theory was that we are appropriating $1,600,000 in a lump sum which provides for 80 reservation boarding schools and 197 day schools. None of those are appropriated for separately, as the gentleman says, but there are set aside by the bureau, down there, according to testimony we have, certain sums for certain schools, and they issue us a bulletin which gives the amount expended for each of those schools in the previous year. The best we could do was to get some language in there that would show when they come to make their report that certain schools had been eliminated, and that certain moneys must have been returned to the Treasury.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It can not be returned to the Treasury, but I take it the purpose of the committee was that if a school is discontinued the money that would have been used to sustain that school if it had been continued shall not be used on some other school.

Mr. SNYDER. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That is quite clear, but I doubt whether the department will pay any attention to it. I hope they do.

The Clerk read as follows:

EXPENSES OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS.

For expenses of the Board of Indian Commissioners, $10,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 13, line 17, strike out the paragraph, lines 17, 18, and 19.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this three-line item affords a fine chance of saving an additional $10,000. This committee has done pretty well in its minor trimmings. The Board of Indian Commissioners has got down to a point where this appropriation pays a high-class secretary, who has a nice office here and nice stationery, and pays for the traveling expenses about the country of some high-grade gentlemen who can lecture and who can write and occasionally make suggestions in regard to the Indians. That board long ago outlived its usefulness. The Board of Indian Commissioners was set up in the time of President Grant in an effort to cure a great deal of trouble and crookedness in one thing and another in the then new attempts to handle and civilize the Indians. This thing has run down and run down until it has now a secretary here in Washington, as I said, paid, and a board of commissioners of very fine gentlemen appointed in an honorary capacity, but, like everything else in the Federal Government, where people once get an appropriation you can not ever get them off. I can not see that any of their suggestions of late have been adopted by any Indian committee or by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. I know that their suggestions for the Pacific Northwest have not been heeded. Only one of these commissioners ever made a trip to the Pacific Northwest, where there are many tribes of Indians, and made a few good suggestions. Not one was adopted, and, in my opinion, none will be. I hope this committee will adopt the amendment and strike the item from the bill.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. With pleasure.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does the gentleman happen to have read the recent report of the commission?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Not the last report; I have read others.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think I have read all of them.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. They are very interesting, very entertaining, but what practical good do they do?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Well, I think they do good——

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Everything, I will admit, does some good.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I received more information about the condition of the Indians from reading the last report of this commission than I have ever received in all the discussion which has taken place on the floor of this House since I have been a Member of it. Now, I do not say that that is doing any good, but there is some satisfaction in getting information.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I will tell the gentleman what I believe——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The secretary of this commission—I notice, by the way, now he is a member of the commission—has made some very interesting statements—at least, reports of investigations which he has made.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Then let him be taken into the Indian Service.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The investigations made by Father Ketcham are very interesting, and I wish the Committee on Indian Affairs had read—and I am sure they have not—the report of the commissioner who visited the Seminole Indians in Florida, because it was the sanest discussion for anyone interested in Indians I have ever read. He advised it was useless for the Government to try to make paupers of those Indians now when they are taking care of themselves.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Right in the same line, after criticism on the floor, some years ago Dr. Eliot went to the north Pacific country. With difficulty we got him to an outlying reservation, and he wrote a very interesting report. But what good did it do? I think these gentlemen will visit and write about the Indians even if they lose their clerk and their stationery.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have frequently obtained very valuable information about the Indians in the Northwest from the limited discussion on the floor of the gentleman from Washington, and I am always delighted to hear him upon that or any other subject, but he is particularly instructive upon the subject of Indians and upon the subject of deportations.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Then right now let us deport this little item of $10,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Still I am inclined to think, in all due regard for the Indian Service—and I have a regard for the service—the $10,000 here probably does as much good or more good than any other $10,000 carried in the bill.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word or the last two words. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this amendment. As a general proposition I favor eliminations where there is a 50-50 chance in it, and I agree with the gentleman from Illinois that the most valuable information I have received, and information which has led me to do many things I have tried to do in the putting together of this act with the assistance of the committee, has come from members of that commission. It is true the commission is a body of citizens who are operating without pay, but every one of them is a high-class student of citizenship and he is entitled to consideration. We are doing ourselves justice when we accept the opinion, in my judgment, of a set of men of that class. They are without prejudice, working wholly in the interest of the Indian, and I think it is a splendid check upon the Indian Bureau, and I believe we get value received from the expenditure of this $10,000, and I know it has led me to cut ten times as much as that out of the bill.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Surely.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will not the gentleman, for the benefit of some of us who work only in the daytime and not all night, like the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], and therefore do not get time to go through all these reports, tell us something about what this commission is doing? Unfortunately I have not read the report.

Mr. SNYDER. The duty of this commission is to go into the field and investigate every matter tending to the interest and the uplift and well-being of the Indians, as to education, sanitation, and so forth, and to make report to the bureau. It has no authority whatever.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman says that they are high-grade men.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. They are men like Gen. Scott, for instance, who has probably had more to do with Indians than any other one man.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. And they get no salary?

Mr. SNYDER. They receive no salary. Their only emolument is traveling expenses.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. What has he reported lately?

Mr. SNYDER. Not anything yet, but he will when he has opportunity.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Now, these men get no salary, but they pay salaries and wages, $5,842, and traveling expenses, $3,180. These gentlemen travel, anyway. They are also interested in the Indians, and they will write about them just the same. And there you are.

Mr. SNYDER. They do not exceed the appropriation, and, in the judgment of the chairman of the committee, it is money well spent.

Mr. HASTINGS. And the only salaried employee is the secretary?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Surely.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 4, noes 34.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

PAY OF INDIAN POLICE.

For pay of Indian police, including chiefs of police at not to exceed $50 per month each and privates at not to exceed $30 per month each, to be employed in maintaining order, for purchase of equipment and supplies, and for rations for policemen at nonration agencies, $200,000.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, simply for the purpose of calling the attention of the committee to the inconsistent position that we take here from time to time. Here we have a provision to pay Indian policemen not exceeding $50 a month for a chief of police.

Mr. DEMPSEY. And privates not to exceed $30.

Mr. BLANTON. And privates not to exceed $30, as my good friend suggests.

If you compare that with the last District of Columbia police bill we had here before the House you will see the difference between the poor, unorganized Indian and the stronger, organized white policeman, with the American Federation of Labor behind him. Compare the proposed salary of an Indian police chief of $50 a month and the salary of an Indian police private of $30 per month with the salaries in the bill that the gentleman from California brought in here and the House passed not long ago by such an overwhelming vote, to pay the negro janitors in the buildings of Washington, who clog up the passageways and make it almost impossible to find the heads of the departments, not $50 but $110 a month, for seven hours' work per day. Compare them! Is our position consistent? What is it that makes us pay one police private $30 a month, because he is an unorganized Indian, and another police private four or five or six times as much, because he is a member of a union? Is it merely the union influence behind it?

I want to tell my colleague something that I heard while I was at home. Some of my good friends told me, "The reason you fellows up there keep your ears open so often to the commands of organized labor is because you hear from them every day. You receive commands from them, not requests. You do not hear from the people." But my people told me that the time you are going to hear from the people is when they go to the polls, and it is going to be too late for you to rectify your votes then, because you will not have any more votes left. You will not have a chance to vote here any longer then. When the people take action at the polls our votes here may stop. Why not consider the people occasionally?

I merely made the pro forma motion, Mr. Chairman, to call attention to the great inconsistency of our acts here on the floor. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

DETERMINING HEIRS.

For the purpose of determining the heirs of deceased Indian allottees having any right, title, or interest in any trust or restricted property, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, $100,000, reimbursable as provided by existing law: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to use not to exceed $30,000 for the employment of additional clerks in the Indian Office in connection with the work of determining the heirs of deceased Indians, and examining their wills, out of the $100,000 appropriated herein: And provided further, That hereafter upon a determination of the heirs to any trust or restricted Indian property of the value of $250 or more, or to any allotment, or, after approval by the Secretary of the Interior of any will covering such trust or restricted property, there shall be paid by such heirs, or by the beneficiaries under such will, or from the estate of the decedent, or from the proceeds of sale of the allotment, or from any trust funds belonging to the estate of the decedent, the sum of $15 where the appraised value of the estate of the decedent does not exceed the sum of $1,000. Where the appraised value of the estate of decedent is more than $1,000 and less than $3,000, $20; where the appraised value of the estate of the decedent is $3,000 but not more than $5,000, the sum of $25; and where the appraised value of the estate of the decedent is $5,000 or over, the sum of $50, which amount shall be accounted for and paid in the Treasury of the United States; and a report shall be made annually to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior on or before the first Monday in December of all moneys collected and deposited as herein provided: Provided further, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the Osage Indians nor to the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Perhaps somebody can explain this language. It may have been in the law before. It states:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to expend not less than $25,000 out of applicable funds in the work of determining the competency of Indians by competency commissions on Indian reservations outside of the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma.

We frequently provided that a Secretary shall expend not more than so much money for a particular purpose. I recall no other instance of appropriation where we say he must spend a certain amount of money, whether it is needed or not.

Mr. SNYDER. I will do the best I can to explain to the gentleman why we did it. In the bill of 1916 we provided a certain amount of money to be used by a competency commission, and we found the money was only partially expended, and we believed it was because the bureau did not want to separate itself from the Indians. Therefore we have written into this bill that they shall expend not less than the $25,000 available. This is not an appropriation. It is from other available appropriations, and must be spent by the competency commission in making the Indians who are eligible competent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This requires the expenditure of $25,000, whether there is any work to be done or not.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. You may have the men loafing, but the Secretary violates the law if he does not spend the money. It does not make any difference whether it is needed or not.

Mr. SNYDER. The only check we have on it is the report eventually of the competency commission itself. I am willing to have it amended if somebody can fix it so that we can spend $25,000 and make them get rid of some of the Indians. That is what we are trying to do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Of course, there is no way that we have of making the administration part of the Government spend it advantageously. They may waste it. They spend it under this, of course. It requires it. They may do nothing; I do not know. I assume that they will spend the money properly. I assume that if the work ought to be done, they would spend the money properly if we give them authority to do it. I do not undertake to say; I am not going to propose a change in the bill, which has been duly considered.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman from Oklahoma and I had considerable argument in the hearings in regard to this last provision. He was fearful that $10,000 was not sufficient for the work he wanted done in the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma, but the committee was anxious to spend all that it could out of available appropriations in the labor of preparing Indians for competency, and this was the way they thought it best to bring that about

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion there is no appropriation in this or any other bill for the Indian Bureau which is so essential for the accomplishment of the purpose so often expressed by Congress as this appropriation of $25,000 for the competency commission. What object does this appropriation propose to serve? The money is used for the purpose of ascertaining the fitness of Indians for United States citizenship. It offers a service for actually releasing from supervision such Indians as are found to be competent, and it does it in this way.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Is it not a fact that at least $25,000 can be advantageously expended for this purpose; that there is enough work of this kind to do to use up $25,000 or more than $25,000 to the great advantage of the Indians and to the advantage of the country?

Mr. CARTER. In my opinion, Mr. Chairman, not $25,000, but $75,000 could be used advantageously for this purpose. We have something over 300,000 Indians, and something over 200,000 restricted Indians. The bureau can never be eliminated, and the House can never be through with Indian affairs until each one of these Indians is declared competent and assumes United States citizenship. That is what these commissions do.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I will wait until the gentleman from New York [Mr. DEMPSEY] gets through.

Mr. DEMPSEY. So that if there is work that would use up advantageously, as the gentleman has outlined, much more than $25,000, by this requirement that $25,000 shall be expended, the House runs no risk of wasting the money? The money is certainly to be used to advantage?

Mr. CARTER. I do not think there is any doubt about it, and that is why we have directed the Secretary to spend not less than $25,000. We were trying to make the expenditure of that much money from other appropriations mandatory for this purpose. Of course, this money could all be used and nobody declared competent, just as a Congressman might fritter away his time without getting any results for his people or his country. In that event, of course, the money would be squandered; but it is hardly fair to assume that this will be done, and if it is done your Indian Committee will know of the fact, and then we will find out another way to carry out the purpose of Congress. But as long as they continue even as well as they have in the past year—and they did not use a great amount of money during the past year—so long as they continue to declare Indians competent and release them from supervision, even to that degree which has been done within the last 12 months, then it can not be charged that this money is not justly expended.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think we have carried this item for some time, have we not?

Mr. CARTER. No; we never carried it before. We carried before an item for a competency commission in the Five Civilized Tribes. Competency commissions have been appointed and paid from this item, but without specific authorization carried in this paragraph.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. How much more does it cost the Government to support an Indian who is declared competent than it costs to support one who still remains incompetent under the law?

Mr. CARTER. If an Indian is declared competent and the tribal estate is settled, then the Federal Government is through with him.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, no. We constantly increase the amount of appropriations in proportion to the number of Indians declared competent.

Mr. CARTER. I will say this to the gentleman: The reasons why the Indian bill increases in amount I have gone over twice. It is a long story. One principal reason I can give you. It is because not enough of these competent Indians are declared competent. I have in mind one Indian who is completely released from the Federal Government and does not cost the Federal Government a single cent of money to maintain. That is my friend from Oklahoma, Mr. HASTINGS.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, he is a theoretical Indian. [Laughter.]

Mr. CARTER. He and his entire tribe, those of the tribe who have been declared competent—and they number about three-fourths if I remember correctly—all of those who have been declared competent are now not costing the Government a cent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, we are helping to educate his children by the appropriations carried in this bill to the extent of $200,000, to educate Indian children in Oklahoma in white public schools.

Mr. CARTER. No; we are appropriating to educate restricted children in the Five Civilized Tribes. The children of parents who have restrictions, or who themselves have restrictions are educated in the public schools, and $200,000 for that purpose is carried in this bill. But for the children of such men as Mr. HASTINGS and myself no part of this fund is used.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The fact is that the more we release the restrictions the greater the gratuities are in the appropriation bills.

Mr. CARTER. That can be obviated by turning more Indians loose from our supervision, and that can be best accomplished by providing competency commissions, as experience has shown.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We have increased the amount of appropriations rapidly enough.

Mr. CARTER. That may be; but we do not sufficiently remove the restrictions from the Indians to reduce the expenditures of the bureau. That is why we want this amount for the competency commission.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I know that, of course, the restrictions ought to be removed, but a large number of people have been trying for many years to get all the restrictions removed, so as to get the property of the Indians a little quicker. Of course, that is not the case with my friend from Oklahoma, or with any of the Members from that State. That is not their view. But still many of their constituents do hold that view.

Mr. CARTER. However that may be, this competency commission of which the gentleman speaks would not work in Oklahoma.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes; but the other one would.

Mr. CARTER. Let me just explain, if the House will indulge me a moment, how this work is done by the competency commission. The competency commissioner goes among the Indians; as a rule he goes to the house and finds out how they live. He finds out how many the Indian has in his family. He finds out what means he has——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. I ask for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks that his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Does the competency commissioner go all over the United States?

Mr. CARTER. Wait a moment till I finish my statement. He ascertains how many there are in the family, what the resources of the Indian are, what are his capabilities for taking care of himself, what are his liabilities, and upon the facts which he ascertains he makes a report direct to the Secretary of the Interior. If he recommends favorable action and the Secretary agrees with him, the restrictions of the Indian are removed and he is turned loose from the bureau. Now, when he is turned loose from the Indian Bureau, if he has an interest in tribal property, that property must be supervised, and as long as it is administered by the Government it is going to cost somebody something, either the Federal Government or the Indian. With the Five Civilized Tribes all of the expenses of administering the tribal property are paid from the tribal funds. The administration of the individual Indian is paid for from the Treasury.

Now, unless we can get restrictions removed from the Indians who are competent, we can not expect any lessening of the expense of Indian supervision. There is a great deal in what the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] said a few minutes ago about local influences surrounding Indians, but the restrictions should be removed from those who are competent. Unless this is done we can never expect to be through with the Indian, but must continue to supervise him eternally. It is a perpetual job, like Tennyson's Brook, something that will never end; but if we can get these competent Indians relieved from restrictions, and let them sustain themselves and take care of themselves, naturally the expenses of the Indian Bureau can be very materially reduced.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Is it not true that before the committee the fact was brought out that the policy of these competency commissions simply reflects the policy of the Indian Bureau and carries out exactly what the Indian Bureau desires?

Mr. CARTER. They carry out what the Indian Bureau asserts its policy to be.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. There is some question whether the real policy of the bureau is what it says it is.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. This has reference to the issuance of certificates of competency to Indians holding fee patents, does it not?

Mr. CARTER. This refers to the issuance of fee patents upon certificates of competency.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The number for 1919 being 94 and the number for 1911 being 92. That is all it amounts to. Now, whoever heard of a competency commission coming out West and considering the cases of the Indians out there?

Mr. CARTER. There was one that went to the gentleman's own State within the last three years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. On the Colville Reservation?

Mr. CARTER. Yes. I think so.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. When is this fellow coming again?

Mr. CARTER. I do not know. There has been one in Oklahoma. The gentleman from Washington ought to have got hold of them while they were there and had his friends make application.

Mr. HUSTED. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. Is there any fund from which the expenses of the competency commission could be paid if this direction that $25,000 be expended was not carried in the bill?

Mr. CARTER. Oh, yes; as the gentleman knows, this simply makes that amount available from other funds in the bill. It is not an appropriation.

Mr. HUSTED. That being true, is there any reason to suppose that this competency commission will not expend all the money that is necessary for this purpose without any specific direction that a certain amount shall be expended? If that is true, I think it is very unwise to carry such a provision. It does not seem to me to be good and businesslike practice to direct any commission or board to expend not less than a definite amount.

Mr. CARTER. The belief of the committee was that this money could not be more appropriately or better spent in any other capacity than that of relieving competent Indians from the supervision of the Government; and it has been charged—and I have not time now to either affirm or deny—that the bureau is reluctant to turn the Indians loose, that it wants to keep them under its supervision; and therefore in answer to that sentiment, which has been expressed on the floor of the House time and again, the committee thought it better to make this provision mandatory.

Mr. HUSTED. Does the gentleman think that is the attitude of the Indian Bureau?

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman is not going to give me the third degree on that. I will leave him with his own opinion.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. TILSON. Is there a limited amount available for this expenditure?

Mr. CARTER. Yes; any part of this $135,000 and portions of several items are available for that purpose.

Mr. TILSON. But can it be expended for something else if it is not expended for this?

Mr. CARTER. It can be, and very likely will be.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. I ask unanimous consent for two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that his time be extended two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TILSON. If this direction to expend $25,000 in this way is not carried in the bill will not the entire amount available be expended for some other purpose?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly. This will not increase either the appropriation or expenditure at all.

Mr. TILSON. So that if this direction is stricken out there will not be any money saved, but it will be spent in some other way?

Mr. CARTER. It will be spent in some other way. This simply makes provision that this amount of money shall be taken from applicable items and expended for this purpose.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Would it not be better to have a specific provision of law, mandatory, in fact, covering this subject than to try to accomplish it by this questionable provision in an appropriation bill?

Mr. CARTER. It is always better to have a specific law; but my friend knows the long, circuitous route it takes to pass a law with reference to matters of this kind, and we are attempting here not exactly to legislate, but to get around the necessity of legislating by means of this provision in the bill.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Do we not have a department of the Government that is diligent and efficient in discovering illicit distilleries in the United States?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. What the committee hopes to do is to make the competency commission function properly.

Mr. CARTER. Precisely.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Why can not the Government be as efficient in hunting up competent Indians, meaning Indians qualified for citizenship, as it is in hunting up moonshine distilleries?

Mr. CARTER. I think they can be equally efficient.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. It is through the competency commission alone, I understand, that Indians can be removed from governmental care and elevated to the status of citizenship, after which they are no longer a burden and expense to the United States.

Mr. CARTER. The only way on earth that an Indian can ever, outside of the competency commission, get the restrictions removed is to go before a local agent or a field clerk and have an application filed. That application is sent to the agent, the agent sends it to Washington, and on cross-examination two or three years ago of the assistant commissioner, he admitted that it must pass through nine different hands before there was any final action, and when it was finally acted upon such final action was in effect taken not by the commissioner at all, but by a clerk who never saw the Indian and knew nothing about him or his capacity.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the value of this provision to compel the Indian Bureau to utilize the service of competency commissions is in showing clearly the policy of Congress. The Indian Affairs Committee has spent three months in making a thorough investigation of Indian affairs generally, and as one member of that committee I have been convinced that Congress must act firmly if we are ever to get rid of the "orphan asylum" system of dealing with the Indians.

Commissioner Sells stated before the committee that there are now under the administration of the Indian Bureau practically 220,000 Indians. About 9,000 have been declared competent within the past five or six years.

At that rate the task of making free American citizens of these original owners of all America will never be completed. It will go on and on through generations, with resultant evil effects to the people of this country and to the Indians themselves.

The Indian Bureau is a wonderful institution—for self-perpetuation. It is a government within a government. Under the commissioner there is an assistant commissioner and a chief clerk, and under these are five grand divisions—education, purchase, law, finance, and land. Under these again are 24 separate and distinct sections, covering every activity under the sun.

It required days for the Committee on Indian Affairs to get even a brief outline of these multitudinous activities. It is astonishing to know the growth of this bureau and to note its ever-expanding activities. Its work would naturally be expected to decrease, but instead it has been increasing with constant growth in expenditures. I believe this growth has been largely artificial and self-stimulated and that it is high time to call a halt.

During the committee hearings Commissioner Sells made the following statement:

> I conceive that when the Indian Bureau was established it was the idea of Congress that it was not a permanent institution, but that as fast as the Indians could be educated and conditions developed to make them self-supporting that they would go out from under the control of the Government and the bureau's activities correspondingly reduced. I look forward to the time when the bureau will not only be materially reduced but when it will be absolutely abolished.

Now, I agree with that statement in its entirety. But the fact remains that after fourscore years of the bureau's existence the claim is made that there is more need for its services than ever before. We are asked to appropriate more money than ever before. For my part, I am convinced that it is time to begin that long-looked-for elimination instead of constant additions.

It was more than a hundred years ago that President Jefferson said:

> My children, I shall rejoice to see the day when the red man, our neighbor, shall become truly one people with us, enjoying all the rights and privileges we do, and living in peace and plenty as we do, without anyone to make them afraid, to injure their persons, or to take their property without being punished for it according to fixed laws.

That statement was made to the Indians in the dawn of the nineteenth century, and yet in the twentieth year of the twentieth century we are still dealing with these Indians as helpless wards with increasing expense to the Government.

This Congress should emphatically declare for justice to the Indians and to the taxpayers of this country. I am in favor of these competency commissions, for they have the power to hasten the day when this branch of bureaucracy will be ended. At the same time I can see that the make-up of the commission itself might hinder the action desired. As we learned during the hearings, these commissions consist of a departmental inspector appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, a special agent of the Indian Service, and the superintendent of the reservation being visited. It is to be expected that such a commission will not go much faster than the policy of the Indian Bureau deems advisable.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Certainly I will yield to my colleague.

Mr. CARTER. Can the gentleman tell the difference between the procedure of removing restrictions by the competency commission and without the competency commission?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. There is a difference in procedure, but, after all, it amounts to the same in the end since the source is the same.

Mr. CARTER. Oh, the competency commission goes from house to house and it does not have to report to the agent, but reports directly to the Secretary of the Interior. You get direct action. The Secretary acts upon the report himself. On the other hand, when you undertake to have the restrictions removed by the local agent, according to the statement of the assistant commissioner himself, that application passes through nine hands before finally acted upon, and when finally acted upon it is by a clerk who never saw the Indian.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Of course, the gentleman knows I am in favor of the competency commission procedure. My objection is that the Indians have not been declared competent as rapidly as they should be, and I was suggesting that the tardiness might be due to the make-up of the commission. I want to see every restriction removed at the earliest moment possible, so that the red men of America may take their place in American civilization as American citizens to learn the lessons which come from self-help and self-reliance.

If the same wall of race and national segregation were placed upon the aliens from Europe who come to my district, if they were herded into reservations and compelled to shape every action to the order of a superintendent, if they were shut off from intercouse with the other element of the community, you would make them incompetent, too, to the end of time. But when they are given the rights of human beings and a chance to become full-fledged American citizens in five years and to learn through association with their neighbors, with few exceptions, they shed their helplessness and their incompetency, and the second generation is ready to face the race of life on equal terms with their neighbors.

Let these competency commissions go to work. Let them err on the side of freedom rather than bondage. Frank La Flesche, an Omaha Sioux Indian, now an ethnologist in the Smithsonian Institution, declares that the Indian who is turned loose to shift for himself succeeds fairly well, and he further says that the well-educated Indian sometimes is cheated in business dealings more easily than the ones we call incompetent, because he thinks he knows too much to be swindled.

If we will establish a just policy and insist upon its being carried out, we can end speedily this century-old guardianship, which produces incompetency instead of independence, and will be able to accomplish what is universally admitted to be the mark of the successful conclusion of the task—the writing of finis to the history of the Indian Bureau.

The Clerk read as follows:

DETERMINING HEIRS.

For the purpose of determining the heirs of deceased Indian allottees having any right, title, or interest in any trust or restricted property, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, $100,000, reimbursable as provided by existing law: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to use not to exceed $30,000 for the employment of additional clerks in the Indian Office in connection with the work of determining the heirs of deceased Indians, and examining their wills, out of the $100,000 appropriated herein: And provided further, That hereafter upon a determination of the heirs to any trust or restricted Indian property of the value of $250 or more, or to any allotment, or, after approval by the Secretary of the Interior of any will covering such trust or restricted property, there shall be paid by such heirs, or by the beneficiaries under such will, or from the estate of the decedent, or from the proceeds of sale of the allotment, or from any trust funds belonging to the estate of the decedent, the sum of $15 where the appraised value of the estate of the decendent does not exceed the sum of $1,000. Where the appraised value of the estate of decedent is more than $1,000 and less than $3,000, $20; where the appraised value of the estate of the decedent is $3,000 but not more than $5,000, the sum of $25, and where the appraised value of the estate of the decedent is $5,000 or over, the sum of $50, which amount shall be accounted for and paid in the Treasury of the United States; and a report shall be made annually to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior on or before the first Monday in December of all moneys collected and deposited as herein provided: Provided further, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the Osage Indians nor to the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the last two provisos. What is the reason that this should not apply to the Five Civilized Tribes and to the Osage Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. This service does not apply within that section of the country.

Mr. HASTINGS. The heirs are determined by the courts and not by the department.

Mr. CARTER. The courts have jurisdiction.

Mr. WALSH. I know, but why should they have the opportunity of having a judicial determination by the courts, and not these other tribes?

Mr. CARTER. This pertains to the payments of fees. The fees, of course, in the cases in the courts in Oklahoma are taken out by the courts, and there are no fees in connection with the probate cases of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Is that the State court?

Mr. CARTER. Yes. The State courts have jurisdiction in probate matters in the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Then we would not have jurisdiction over them.

Mr. CARTER. No.

Mr. SNYDER. This is entirely outside of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. WALSH. You are fixing a maximum scale of fees where the estates do not go through the courts.

Mr. CARTER. Where the Secretary must determine it.

Mr. WALSH. Why do they not go through the courts in these other States?

Mr. CARTER. To speak frankly to the gentleman, I am not so sure but that would be the best procedure, but the Congress has always taken the position, outside of the Five Civilized Tribes, that they should be determined by the Secretary.

Mr. WALSH. Why in Oklahoma do they go through the courts and not the department?

Mr. CARTER. They go through the courts because the enabling act of the State gave us jurisdiction of Indian probate matters.

Mr. HASTINGS. And for the further reason that they are all citizens.

Mr. SNYDER. This has to do with the heirs of incompetent Indians, and heretofore there has been a universal fee of $15 without regard to the value of the estate. There has been a return of about $30,000 of the $100,000 appropriated. This does not change the law in any way except to make the estates which are worth more pay more for the service, and to reimburse the total amount of the appropriation.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the second proviso, beginning with line 19, on page 14, and ending with line 13, on page 16. It is new legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentleman would reserve the point of order.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, if the point of order is sustained it will not accomplish the object the gentleman seems to have in view. His object is to throw the administration of estates of restricted Indians into the local probate courts of the particular States where the Indians reside. As to the policy of that, it is hardly a matter to be discussed here. The effect of sustaining the gentleman's point of order, if he makes it, will be to merely reduce the fees charged by the United States Government for the administration of these Indian estates. There is now a level charge of $15 for every estate, whatever its value, and the bill seeks to establish the graduated scale, which is calculated to at least return to the Government the amount of $100,000 which it takes out each year for this work.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I think if the gentleman is intent on changing the policy of the administration of the estates of restricted Indians, he can much better bring about that result by introducing a special bill on the subject for the amendment of the law, but if his point prevails, or if he insists upon the point of order, it is going to lose the Government about $70,000 a year, and it is going to result in no particular gain in respect to the point the gentleman seems to have in mind.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. I yield to the gentleman, although I want to make some other observations, because I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. My understanding of the situation is this: Originally, following the allotment act of 1886, all Indian estates went to the ordinary probate courts of the jurisdictions in which they resided, and then the department, as they said, in order to save money and in order to more thoroughly control these Indians, secured the passage of a law which gave the Secretary of the Interior exclusive jurisdiction to determine the heirs of Indian decedents, fixed $15 as the amount to be charged in each estate, and that was in the nature of a contract, as a matter of fact, with these Indians. The Five Civilized Tribes, which are excepted, were taken out because the representatives from that State insisted that it be so. It was a departmental policy, just as these other methods, which have been discussed here, are departmental policies, and the department now ought not to have control of these estates. The estates languish for years unsettled, and the additional amount which would be used to pay those fees in State courts, as was suggested by the gentleman from California, would much better be paid, and the individual Indians would be much better off if they could pay the additional amount and get their estates settled. But since the department has assumed—because that is the correct term—charge of these Indian estates they ought to continue the administration of them at the same price they agreed to in the first place.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. This is not at the same price as in the first instance, because in the first instance there was no price at all.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. No; no price at all.

Mr. CARTER. But the Burke Act provided for a flat fee of $15 in these cases.

Now, the only notion the committee had was this, that it was hardly fair to charge a man the same price for the settlement of a $30 estate as for a $10,000 estate; that there ought to be some graduated scale. The only effect of the point of order would be that stated by the gentleman from California, to wit, to change from the graduated scale back to the flat scale of $15. It would not accomplish what the gentleman is undertaking to accomplish at all. It would not take it back even to the original charge, because the original charge was nothing, but the subsequent charge was $15 for each case. Now we have made the charges graduated in the bill.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to give the gentleman an illustration of the probating of the estate of a restricted Indian in California where the estate would be worth in the amount of $10,000. Now, I know the probate fees of the State of Califoria in the case of a $10,000 estate would be about $500. Now, that is the law. In the administration of a $2,000 or $3,000 estate in the State of California the minimum would be $100. A $50,000 estate would cost the Indians concerned possibly $2,000 or $3,000. This involves only probate fees regulated by law. It does not go into the matter of representation by attorney or the various ways of unlimited charges they can make in the way of attorney fees. Now, the reason why this whole subject matter was taken under the control of the Indian Bureau was because of the abuses and frauds worked upon the Indians in the matter of the probating of their estates. It was found in local jurisdictions in the matter of fees the Indians were taken advantage of by lawyers, and their estates were frittered away in the local probate courts, where the gentleman knows fees are much larger than under the Government charge. Now, I sincerely hope that the gentleman will not make his point of order. If he is intent on this matter I hope he will bring it in in the form of a bill before the committee, and the whole matter can be gone into regularly. The only result of his point of order to-day, if he persists in it, will be to bring about the loss of $70,000 a year to the Government and not help matters out at all along the line which he desires.

Mr. CARTER. It now costs the Government about $70,000 more to do this work than the fees amount to.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Is not this the fact, that the expense, or a very large part of the expense, is that of persons traveling from Washington around to the different agencies?

Mr. CARTER. I do not think from Washington, but it is for the expenses of the agents and their travel; I think that is part of the expense.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. And is it not also a fact that the only thing they do is to determine heirs and not settle their estates?

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman is absolutely correct about that; they do not settle the estate but simply determine the heirs.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. And the expense which the gentleman from California has just mentioned is the expense which comes in the ordinary course of the settlement of the estate?

Mr. CARTER. The determination of heirs would be, of course, a part of the probating of the estate.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. One further question, if I may.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will yield.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. The gentleman has as large experience as any of us. Is it not a fact that it would be no more than a reasonable fee on the average for determining the heirs to fix it at $15?

Mr. CARTER. Well, the only way I can answer is that the bureau has stated to us that there is a loss every year of about $70,000—$65,000, to be exact, as I am advised by my friend from Missouri [Mr. RHODES], last year on account of this flat rate of $15 and not being able to charge on the graduated scale proposed by this language.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. I would like to answer——

Mr. CARTER. Speaking of expense, the expense was $6,868.78, and the salaries were $62,315, so only a very small part of the appropriation was spent in traveling back and forth.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this is the situation: There are men appointed by the department who visit the different reservations. They go there when they please. The Indian estates are held up for years while the department controls their money, and finally, when the inspector comes, or one of those who determine the heirs, they visit the agency, take up those cases there present, go away, and perhaps do not come back again for several years. The only thing they do is to find out the heirs. I have in mind a case just now of one of the Indians on the reservation within the jurisdiction that I represent. There is no one left but a widow and a son, and yet you can not get those heirs determined. This is only one case. I hear the chairman say it is only one case, but it is the rule, and when they get there promptly it is the exception, and there is no question with any person who is familiar with this but what they are well paid if they get $15.

Mr. CARTER. But the gentleman's point of order does not do away with the system. It merely makes the Government Treasury pay for it.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. The point is this: That the service the Government renders is worth but $15. If the department squanders money and loses $65,000, the Indians' estates should not be made to pay for it. That is the point. There is no merit in it. If the department wishes to go on record that they can take care of these Indians' estates and determine the heirs, let it be done sensibly and not foolishly, as they have done it, and let them act promptly.

I wish to impress on the department the fact that they are not doing right, and that is the reason I am insisting on the point. I do not think it is a good policy, because you can take, by reason of your power, the money away from the Indians and so save the face of the department that is absolutely inefficient in this matter.

Mr. CARTER. I sympathize fully with what the gentleman says, because if there is any district that has been burdened or embarrassed with delays or departmental red tape it is the district that I have the honor to represent in Oklahoma. I know there is much virtue in what the gentleman says, and I will join with him at any time to cut out the red tape and to expedite and facilitate the settlement of these matters to the satisfaction of the Indians and all others concerned.

But, if my friend will permit, he is not accomplishing here in any wise what he seeks to do. In fact, if anything, he is going to make the procedure a little bit more slow and tardy, because he is allowing less money for the settlement of these estates, and the only thing we had in view, the only purpose I tried to serve here, was to save the additional expense of $65,000 which will be brought upon the Government unless this paragraph remains in the bill. I hope my friend from Nebraska, whom we will be very glad to straighten out on these matters, will bring all his powers of forbearance and consideration to bear and withdraw his point of order and let this good provision remain in the bill.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Will you get the committee to say that they will support such a bill?

Mr. CARTER. I can speak for myself only; I can not speak for the committee; but I am sure the committee will give the gentleman's bill consideration any time he will bring it in, and I will be glad to help get it.

Mr. SNYDER. The chairman of the committee will be glad to call the committee together and give the gentleman all the time he wants in order to be heard on the question.

Mr. CARTER. I think the chairman will agree, further, that we will take some kind of action on it? [Laughter.]

Mr. SNYDER. Certainly we will.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. I do not think there is any danger of anybody dying of an enlargement of the heart as to that.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman withdraw his objection?

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. If I withdraw the objection, I wish it to be understood it is not because of the promise that has been made. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska make the point of order?

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. I have reserved the point of order, as the gentleman from Missouri wishes to discuss the provision, and I have agreed to that.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I desire to remind the gentleman from Nebraska of one point which he seems to have overlooked. I concede in all frankness that the first impulse I had with regard to the position the committee should take on this proposition was to do exactly the thing which the gentleman suggests. But in the course of the discussion before the committee I was soon led to see that the Government of the United States through various acts of Congress had been appropriating the sum of $100,000 a year for the determination of Indian heirs, and we have the positive statement, coming from Mr. Meritt, assistant to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, that there was an annual deficit in the sum of $65,000 arising to the Public Treasury every year on account of these appropriations. Then the question turned upon the equity in the case, and it was clear to every lawyer on the committee and to every man of experience in dealing with matters of that sort that there was no equity in a case involving a small estate carrying a charge of $15, when a large estate would only be subject to the same charge. Therefore I concluded that if by putting the increased charge upon an equitable basis we could save the Government this $65,000 annually, this provision should go into the bill, and therefore I consented.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Why should you charge for finding the heirs of a $25,000 estate more than for finding the heirs of a $100,000 estate?

Mr. RHODES. I say that the equities of the case would justify the charge upon the same ground that a $100,000 estate should pay an attorney's fee of $10,000 when in the same court a $1,000 estate would perhaps not justify more than a $50 fee.

Mr. MacCRATE. What was the value of deceased Indians' estates last year?

Mr. SNYDER. It was $34,000,000.

Mr. RHODES. As a member of the committee I earnestly trust that the gentleman from Nebraska will withdraw the point of order. And for the further reason that the gentleman offers no remedy. His argument goes rather to the criticism of a practice for which neither you nor I nor the gentleman is responsible. The Indian Office is proceeding under existing law, and in the absence of some practical way by which the reform might be accomplished I take it the gentleman could not in good conscience urge his objection upon that ground.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska insist on the point of order?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman making the point of order asks to have the section passed over until to-morrow. The chairman of the committee has no objection to that, unless some one else has, and it can be done. I ask unanimous consent that the provision be passed over.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that this paragraph be passed over and not be considered until to-morrow. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Reserving the right to object, it seems to me it is wholly impossible to suppose the Government will permit the estates of any competent Indians to be settled without having some Government official pay attention to the subject.

Now, the heirship is found by the Government. If the heirship should be determined by probate or local court, the Government would still have the duty of protecting the Indian by examining the question of the heirship, because it could not trust the attorneys or other people connected with any court; sometimes could not trust the judge, as was the case a number of years ago in a number of specific cases, where the judges were in collusion with other people to rob the Indians. It seems to me, however, that instead of making a direct appropriation of $100,000 or any other sum for this purpose out of the Treasury, it ought to be an appropriation out of funds received from the work that is done. There is no reason why the Federal Government should pay out of its General Treasury the expense of probating or settling the estates of Indians who have property or of determining their heirship. It ought to be paid out of the funds received from the estate.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Is it not a fact that in no estate handled by the department there is any money received but what has already been received under law from the sale of land, or something of that kind, and of which they have already had control?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not know, and I could not answer the question. I do not know how they get the money. I know this, that it does not do anybody any good in this world to have them go along with the idea that they pay nothing themselves, but that it all comes out of Uncle Sam's Treasury. We hear that the Indians on the average probably have larger incomes, if not more property, than the white people of the United States. I do not know whether that statement is true or not, but many of them are very wealthy. Why on earth should the Government do all this work for them at the expense of the poor whites of the United States? [Laughter.] They are willing and able to pay the expense, yet it is proposed that we prevent their having the opportunity. However, I do not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the paragraph is passed over without prejudice.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

INDUSTRY AMONG INDIANS (REIMBURSABLE).

For the purpose of encouraging industry and self-support among the Indians and to aid them in the culture of fruits, grains, and other crops, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, which sum may be used for the purchase of seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, and other equipment necessary, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, to enable Indians to become self-supporting: Provided, That said sum shall be expended under conditions to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior for its repayment to the United States on or before June 30, 1930: Provided further, That not to exceed $20,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be expended on any one reservation or for the benefit of any one tribe of Indians, and that no part of this appropriation shall be used for the purchase of tribal herds.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill what is the reason for the extension from 1925 to 1930 of the time for the repayment of the sums expended for encouraging the Indians to become self-supporting?

Mr. SNYDER. There can be no defense for that except that much of the money that has been loaned to these Indians for the purpose of buying stock and implements and tools with which to operate their farms has not been returned, and all this money is loaned to the Indians on a contract to be paid back within five years.

Mr. TILSON. In the bill you require the Secretary of the Interior to make a contract for its repayment on or before June 30, 1930. Last year you used a six-year limit, 1925. This year you have raised the limit to 10 years, making it 1930.

Mr. SNYDER. In my judgment you might just as well make the limit 2179 as to make it 1930.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. They will not pay back any of it, anyway.

Mr. RHODES. Oh, Mr. Chairman, the statement that they never will pay it back is entirely incorrect, because the only respectable sum that has been reimbursed has been a sum appropriated for an industrial purpose.

Mr. SNYDER. But the gentleman does not mean to convey the idea that all of them will be by any means returned. It is a fact that this is the one branch of reimbursables that is a respectable proposition. Much of the money that has been loaned on these contracts will never come back, because the Indians fail, just as anybody else fails, and it will never be paid back. I imagine that this extension was put in here for the purpose of giving some delinquent a little more time, to see if he can pay or not.

Mr. TILSON. What do the last two lines of the paragraph mean, "Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the purchase of tribal herds"? Was there abuse heretofore?

Mr. SNYDER. The splendid efficiency of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs led him to have a penchant for purchasing tribal herds. We have already too many tribal herds and do not want any more, so that we put in here the proviso that no part of this appropriation should be used for the purchase of tribal herds until we get rid of some of those we have got.

Mr. TILSON. You do, however, provide that the money may be used for the purchase of animals.

Mr. SNYDER. That is, where the farmer has to have a horse, or a team of horses, to work his farm. It does not mean that we will purchase a herd of horses or a herd of cattle.

Mr. TILSON. Does it not mean the purchase of animals for individuals, whereas heretofore the purchases were made for the tribe?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; to purchase a sheep or a cow or a horse.

Mr. TILSON. For an individual?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. But not for the tribe?

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. He owns a farm.

Mr. SNYDER. With reference to the tribal herds, that would be a tribal arrangement; it would not be for any one individual Indian. But in this case there are certain Indians that have allotments that they operate as a farm, on which they keep one or two head of cattle or a team of horses, the same as an ordinary farmer.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. The Government can not have a lien on it, can it?

Mr. SNYDER. Oh, yes. The Government has an absolute lien on each one of these items; but of course if an Indian dies, or if his cattle die, or his horses die, and he is unable to pay, he has to have an extension, just the same as anybody else.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut withdraws the pro forma amendment. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

VEHICLES FOR INDIAN SERVICE.

That not to exceed $200,000 of applicable appropriations made herein for the Bureau of Indian Affairs shall be available for the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles for the use of superintendents, farmers, physicians, field matrons, allotting, irrigation, and other employees in the Indian field service: Provided, That not to exceed $15,000 may be used in the purchase of horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles, and not to exceed $40,000 for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles, and that such vehicles shall be used only for official service.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. What is the necessity of this apparently large fleet of automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles that $200,000 is provided for? You could buy several gross of automobiles from the War Department for such a sum as that, I could imagine, if they should succeed in selling them. What is the necessity of any such amount as that for 300,000 Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman reserves the point of order on the provision, but I understand it is not subject to a point of order. I would call attention to the fact that there are something like 6,000 Indian employees in the Indian Bureau outside the city of Washington—6,135, to be absolutely correct. Among that number are many farmers, stockmen, doctors, matrons, and mechanics who have to travel from one end of a reservation to the other. It used to be done by horse-drawn vehicles or on horseback; but since it has been discovered that a Ford can go anywhere a horse can go, or where a buggy can be drawn, and perhaps three times as quickly, it has been deemed advisable by the department to supply as many of them as possible with "tin Lizzies." I will say to the gentleman that one of the things we have tried to do is to be able to show to the House the next time we come before it with this bill a report that will contain what each one of these men purports to have done with his automobile, where he has been, how many Indian families he has visited, and what good he has done. That is not available to-day. This is no increase over the amount allowed last year. It is not an appropriation; it comes from available funds in other items appropriated for in a general way.

Mr. WALSH. But it is an appropriation.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. There are 230,000 Indians in the United States?

Mr. SNYDER. Two hundred and twenty-nine thousand.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. And one employee to every six or seven Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. I have stated the number of Indians and the number of employees; I am not a lightning calculator.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. In the Quinault district the Indian agent advised them to buy horses. The agent told them that the automobiles would rust, but he forgot to tell them that the horses would starve to death, and that is what they did the following winter. [Laughter.]

Mr. WALSH. How many of these vehicles does the bureau own? It had $200,000 available last year.

Mr. SNYDER. The number of employees for 1918 in the schools was 2,630; agents, 2,391; field investigating and supervising force, 36; irrigation, 277; forestry, 115; probate work, 19; warehouse, 29. I am unable to tell the gentleman how many automobiles were used in each one of these services, but I think we may assume that there is a fair distribution of cars throughout the service.

Mr. WALSH. They have not all been furnished them.

Mr. SNYDER. Not yet; but they expect to be soon.

Mr. WALSH. If they have $200,000 made available every year, they soon will be. I would like to know whether the chairman of this committee, who has given his usual careful consideration to the matter, and a thorough investigation, is satisfied that there is any necessity for permitting the expenditure of this sum of money?

Mr. SNYDER. This, as the gentleman knows, is not an appropriation in itself. Of course, it is money to be spent, but it must be taken from the gross amount of other items in the bill.

Mr. WALSH. Have the other items in the bill been made large enough so that this $200,000 can be taken from them?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Then it comes pretty near being an appropriation. Will the gentleman point out what particular item they can take this $200,000 out of?

Mr. SNYDER. In the general fund for school support there is an amount included for the purchase of such automobiles as would be used for school service. The amount for health carries in it an item, in a general amount, for the purchase of these vehicles, and from each one of these funds a certain amount is drawn upon for the purchase of vehicles, and so forth.

Mr. CARTER. At each agency they have one or more automobiles, according to the size of the agency. Estimates are brought in for the support of the agency, and the upkeep, maintenance, and repair of the automobiles are included. Up until about 1915, as I now recall it, it had not been necessary to place this provision in the Indian bill, for the reason that prior to that time the law authorized the use of money for this purpose at each agency throughout the country where they had automobiles. At that time the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fitzgerald], chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, had an amendment put in the sundry civil bill, I think, or perhaps the legislative bill, which precluded the use of funds for the maintenance and purchase of automobiles and other passenger-carrying vehicles, so that the comptroller ruled that the fund could be used for that purpose under the Fitzgerald amendment. So the next year it was necessary for the Indian Bureau and other bureaus of the Government to bring in this provision authorizing the expenditure from the funds of applicable appropriations.

Mr. SNYDER. In this bill $15,000 is for horse-drawn vehicles and $40,000 for motor-propelled vehicles. That is a small percentage of the total amount appropriated here, and I do not think more than is necessary.

Mr. ELSTON. I have an analysis of the amount that was spent last year if the gentleman would like to have it.

Mr. WALSH. I would like to have it if the gentleman will answer this question first. Why should not the committee provide that the motor-propelled vehicles shall be obtained from the War Department that has many thousands of them now on hand?

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts if he has discovered anybody able to pry one of them loose from the War Department?

Mr. WALSH. I have not looked for anybody that has accomplished it.

Mr. SNYDER. I have had some experience in trying to secure an opportunity for some constituents of mine to purchase some of them, and have been unable to.

Mr. WALSH. If we provided by law that they should furnish these automobiles to the Indian Bureau, while they might not obey the law, still we might save a little money.

Mr. SNYDER. I do not think the Indian Service would suffer much if they did not buy a horse or an automobile for these purposes for a year, but this is only a small per cent of new vehicles as compared to the total amount of the appropriations which have been put in here, and if we took this out, we ought, in justice to the service, to go back and reduce each one of the items we have passed over; and we do not know just how much to take out of them, because this is spread over the whole service.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to have the information which the gentleman from California was going to give me.

Mr. ELSTON. In the justification for this item by the assistant commissioner he said that last year approximately $36,000 was spent for the purchase of new motor-propelled vehicles.

Mr. SNYDER. That is for the whole service.

Mr. ELSTON. That approximately $1,400 or $1,500 was spent for horse-drawn passenger vehicles and approximately $17,000 of the first-named amount, that is of the $36,000, was taken from tribal funds, so that it was not an expenditure out of the Government Treasury; and finally, that about $108,000 of the total amount was used for maintenance and operation of the vehicles. Now, in a total expenditure of about $170,000 that reduces the outlay out of the Treasury of the United States to the sum of about $17,000 for purchase of new motor-propelled vehicles.

Mr. WALSH. While I am not certain that this item is subject to a point of order, still I am inclined to think it is; but in view of the information given by the members of the committee, while I think it is rather dangerous to have too many automobiles running around loose out on those prairies, and I think it is just as dangerous to have them out there as it is to bring the Indians into the cities and let them be run over by the street cars, I do not think we ought to make so large an amount of money available for this purpose. Still the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] has given the matter consideration, and I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The reservation of the point of order is withdrawn.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALSH: Page 17, line 17, after the word "service," insert "Provided, That such motor-propelled vehicles shall be purchased from the War Department."

Mr. SNYDER. As far as the chairman of the committee is concerned, he is willing to accept that.

Mr. ELSTON. I offer an amendment to that amendment, to add to the last word of the amendment the words "where possible." There may be absolute disposition made of these Ford automobiles, and I understand that is the kind that is purchased.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I suggest that the gentleman use the words "if practicable" instead of "where possible."

Mr. ELSTON. That is a good suggestion—if practicable.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "Department," insert "if practicable."

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Let us have the whole amendment reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That such motor-propelled vehicles shall be purchased from the War Department if practicable.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. ELSTON].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. TILSON. I suggest to the gentleman from Massachusetts that he add the word "further" after the word "Provided."

Mr. WALSH. I ask to modify my amendment by inserting after the word "Provided" the word "further."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the modification.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALSH: After the word "Provided" insert the word "further."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPPRESSING CONTAGIOUS DISEASES AMONG LIVE STOCK OF INDIANS.

For reimbursing Indians for live stock which may be hereafter destroyed on account of being infected with dourine or other contagious diseases, and for expenses in connection with the work of eradicating and preventing such diseases, to be expended under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, $50,000.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 17, strike out lines 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that this appropriation is carried in the Agricultural appropriation bill. At any rate, the Agricultural appropriation bill carries an amount for this trouble, except that it does not appropriate money to pay for the destroyed animals.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TINCHER. Yes.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. To what trouble does the gentleman refer?

Mr. TINCHER. Dourine.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Will the gentleman please describe that disease, tell us something about it?

Mr. TINCHER. Not being a veterinarian, I shall decline to yield for that purpose. I will say, however, that I listened attentively to a couple of days' testimony in the Agricultural Committee, given by men who explained that they had practically eradicated this disease in the United States. That is one appropriation that the Department of Agriculture was willing to see reduced. This simply illustrates the fallacy of two committees appropriating money for the same purpose and shows the injustice that will result. No white man receives pay from the Government for any animal that is destroyed by reason of its being affected with this disease, and it is not right for the Government to appropriate money to pay for the old Indian pony that is killed before it dies naturally to keep it from spreading the disease further.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TINCHER. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. An attempt was made to destroy animals belonging to Indians without paying for them, and in one instance I know it resulted in the murder of the live-stock inspector who attempted to do so, because the Indian, not understanding that this is a very contagious disease——

Mr. TINCHER. Oh, I think the time has arrived in the United States when it is not necessary to appropriate money to give to the Indian to keep him from murdering officers of the United States, thus treating him differently from what we treat the white people. I do not think that argument in favor of this discrimination on this double appropriation ought to prevail.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TINCHER. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman understand that in the appropriation bill there will be carried an item to reimburse the Indians for the loss of horses or cattle under this provision?

Mr. TINCHER. Absolutely not; and there will not be an item to reimburse the whites for the loss of their horses under this provision. But the item appropriating money to eradicate the disease will be carried in the Agricultural appropriation bill, and it should apply to the Indians and the whites alike, and will apply alike, except this discrimination to pay the Indian for his horse because it is hard to explain to him that the horse is no good, when we do not pay the white man for his horse. That is the reason that the item ought to go out, and there ought not to be that discrimination, and there ought not to be the double appropriation. There will be two men to see these horses of the Indians, and one man to pay for them, and the Department of Agriculture has been honest enough with the Committee on Agriculture to admit that this disease is so nearly eradicated that they are asking for only a nominal amount for the whole United States; but here we are undertaking to pay $50,000 for old Indian ponies; and, of course, any one that is sick in any way will have this disease. I think we ought to stop it. It is time for economy, and here is an economy that will not work an injustice to any man, and this item ought to be stricken out of this bill.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the experience of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the Department of Agriculture in combating this disease on Indian reservations was that it was practically impossible to induce the Indians to round up their stock and have their horses killed if found diseased. The only practicable way of eradicating the disease in the entire United States is to stamp it out everywhere. So this has to be done on the Indian reservations as well as on the farms and ranges of white men. The white stockmen understand the nature of the disease, how contagious it is, and that if it is not eradicated a great loss will result to them. Consequently they are willing to have their stock sacrificed without compensation. The Indians do not and can not be expected to understand the gravity of the situation. In order to accomplish the final elimination of dourine this committee began an appropriation some years ago to pay the Indians for their horses when killed. The testimony at the hearings was that in the Northwest and practically all over the United States this disease is under control, and that this appropriation will eradicate it in the remaining Indian reservations where it is still prevalent.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Who determines this? Is not this law a little weak; should it not be legally determined?

Mr. HAYDEN. Whether an animal is diseased is determined by officials of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. This does not say so; but anybody may determine.

Mr. HAYDEN. The hearings state that the work is carried on by representatives of the Department of Agriculture who are engaged in the general dourine eradication work. When they kill an Indian horse the horse is appraised and paid for by the superintendent at the Indian agency. It therefore requires no extra number of officials to carry on the work.

Mr. TINCHER. They have diseased horses all over the United States that have this disease. Does the gentleman think it right to permit money to be paid for the Indian pony and not in other cases?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is impossible to induce the Indians on a large reservation to gather their horses and drive them in to have them killed unless they receive pay for the animals. Without rounding up and examining the stock the disease can not be stamped out. The only practical way to accomplish effective results is to pay for the Indian ponies when they are killed.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield to my good friend fro[illegible] Mo.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. I would like to hear some[illegible] this disease. What is it; something like tuberculosis in cattle?

Mr. HAYDEN. The gentleman will have to ask some veterinarian for an accurate description of this very contagious disease.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 17, line 25, strike out the figures "$50,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$20,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the testimony before the Committee on Indian Affairs is that last year there was expended on this work $70,000, and that the sum requested in this bill is absolutely necessary to complete the work. What is the advantage of taking two or three bites at a cherry, why not perform this service and be done with it? With an appropriation of $20,000 this year and an appropriation of $20,000 next year and an appropriation of $20,000 the following year to carry on this work no one knows how long it will take to eradicate dourine. Certainly much less can be accomplished by reducing the appropriation.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Animal Industry, testified before the Committee on Agriculture within 10 days that this disease was practically eradicated. Of course, they can find enough dead Indian ponies to expend the money. This Congress can appropriate the money and, of course, you can find enough worn-out Indian ponies to spend it on. I would not for a moment hinder the progress of the eradication of this disease, but when I hear a chief of a bureau testifying, in asking for an appropriation for the whole of the United States, for all the people, that the disease is practically eradicated, and I know this appropriation is a duplicate, I think it is time, if we are ever going to economize, that we should economize. I understood from the chairman of the committee they did not have any opposition to this reduction, and that is how I happened to offer the amendment. I know from the discussion by the Bureau of Animal Industry that this $20,000 will be sufficient, and what is the use——

Mr. HAYDEN. Does the gentleman know how much the Department of Agriculture asked for dourine work for the entire United States?

Mr. TINCHER. I do not remember the exact figures, but I will say this, that it is one of several items in which there was a large reduction.

Mr. CARTER. Has the gentleman noticed the fact that this does not apply only to dourine, but it applies to other contagious diseases as well?

Mr. TINCHER. I say if we appropriate $50,000 to pay for dead Indian ponies, of course it will be spent, and it is not right to do it.

Mr. CARTER. It is hardly fair for the gentleman to make such a statement as that. This money might be used for a great many things, for tick eradication in cases where Government funds could not be used on the reservation.

Mr. TINCHER. If you are going to use it for tick eradication it is more subject to my point than ever, because we are still appropriating more and more for tick eradication in other committees.

Mr. CARTER. We are still removing the quarantine line north every year. Practically the whole State of Oklahoma is now below the quarantine line, where a few years ago it was above the quarantine line.

Mr. TINCHER. The gentleman is on the committee. Do you state that you want to appropriate this money to be used for tick eradication?

Mr. CARTER. Yes; if necessary. I stated that I wanted it to be used for anything necessary for the purposes expressed in the paragraph; that is, for reimbursing Indians for live stock which may be hereafter destroyed on account of being affected with dourine or other contagious diseases, and for expenses in connection with the work of eradicating and preventing such diseases.

Mr. TINCHER. The tick is not a contagious disease.

Mr. CARTER. But it causes the Texas tick fever.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the House should be guided by the evidence obtained at the hearings before the Committee on Indian Affairs, and according to the testimony submitted to us there every dollar of this appropriation is necessary. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER] brings to us not facts as substantiated by the record before the Committee on Agriculture, but only his recollection of what was said there with respect to the general conditions in the United States. We are all glad to hear that this disease of horses is about under control, but that does not controvert the testimony submitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs that if the full amount of this appropriation is not made the disease will not be eradicated.

Mr. HASTINGS. How much was expended last year?

Mr. HAYDEN. Seventy thousand dollars, and the year before $100,000.

Mr. HASTINGS. And this is a reduction of $20,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. In 1917 we appropriated $100,000 for this purpose, showing that it is a diminishing appropriation, which will not have to be continued indefinitely.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield? There is some objection to duplication.

Mr. HAYDEN. There is no duplication in this appropriation. The work of detecting dourine is done by the Bureau of Animal industry. When it is found, the horse has to be killed, and the animal is paid for out of this appropriation by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. So there is no duplication of work.

Mr. FESS. There is an amount provided in the Agricultural bill?

Mr. HAYDEN. No, sir. The amount provided for in the Agricultural appropriation bill is for the detection of dourine. The amount called for in this bill is to pay for animals killed when they have that disease.

Mr. FESS. There is no duplication?

Mr. HAYDEN. No, sir; none whatever.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. I understood your statement to be that in the last bill the appropriation was $70,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. No. My statement was that the appropriations have varied. The amount actually expended during the fiscal year 1919 was $70,000, which included a balance from a former appropriation.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. The appropriation in the last bill was $50,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. TINCHER. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 20, noes 22.

Mr. BLANTON. Tellers, Mr. Chairman.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to be sure that our Republican chairman on the other side was not overlooking any bets.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

ADVERTISEMENT FOR SALE OF INDIAN LANDS (REIMBURSABLE).

There is hereby appropriated, from any fund in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, $6,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the payment of newspaper advertisements of sales of Indian lands, reimbursable from payments by purchases of costs of sale, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word to ask the chairman of the committee if the word "purchases" in line 17 should not be "purchaser"?

Mr. SNYDER. What it means is that the party to whom the land is sold must pay the cost of the advertisement.

Mr. WALSH. So the reimbursement is from the payment by the purchaser?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes, sir.

Mr. WALSH. If that is so, I will offer an amendment to strike out "purchases" and insert the word "purchaser."

Mr. SNYDER. There is no objection to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will make the correction.

The Clerk read as follows:

INDIAN SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS.

That hereafter the Commissioner of Indian Affairs may authorize the printing and issuing by Indian schools of such journals, magazines, periodicals, and other publications as, in his judgment, will aid in the education and civilization of the Indians: Provided, That no new publications shall be printed or issued at any Indian school.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a point of order against the paragraph, beginning on line 20 and ending on line 26.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman from Washington will reserve his point of order for a moment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I will reserve it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, this item affects 17 publications at Indian schools, only 4 of which are published oftener than monthly. Under a law passed during the war, when a number of Government bureaus in Washington were having their printing done away from the Government Printing Office, directing that all printing for the various departments should be done at the Government Printing Office unless authorized by the Joint Committee on Printing, the Joint Committee on Printing, not having in mind these field publications, issued a general order which stopped the printing of publications at all the Indian schools.

The value of these publications is not only in the dissemination of news and intelligence among the students but at every Indian school there are Indian boys who are learning the printer's trade in connection with the preparation of their school magazines. I know of a number of Indian boys who have graduated from the Phoenix Indian School in Arizona and who are now employed as printers by the newspapers throughout the State. If this authority is refused, such instruction can no longer be given. Neither would it be desirable to have the manuscript of these Indian school magazines sent to Washington to be printed in the Government Printing Office.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I may say to the gentleman that I think all these publications, provided they do not cost in excess of $1,500 a year, can go on as heretofore; but this is new legislation. It is not proper to give such a blanket authorization for Indian school printing.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will observe that it is provided in the proviso that no new publications shall be printed or issued at any Indian school. This applies only to those schools which have printing appliances for the purposes of vocational training, and it is to enable them to start up again.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I supposed that something like that would come up at the request of the Indian Bureau. I may say that during the war authority was given to the Committee on Printing to do certain things in the endeavor to reduce the amount of Government printing, and it was provided that Indian-school publications may be continued as authorized heretofore, provided the annual cost did not exceed $1,500 in any one instance.

Mr. HAYDEN. Do I understand that such is the existing law?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. No. It is a regulation of the Joint Committee on Printing, provided they print without advertising. That is why some of them can not go on.

Mr. HAYDEN. Why should not an Indian-school publication be permitted to solicit advertisements in order to encourage the production of a decent sized publication?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I will tell the gentleman why. Here, for example, is the Indian News, published at Genoa, Nebr.; 600 copies; annual cost, $832; subscription money received as income, $24. Now, you run that along through the entire number of Indian schools and it simply adds to the mass of Federal printed matter. They do not go outside and print it and conduct it as a self-sustaining concern. They are looking to the Government.

Mr. HAYDEN. But under the regulations of the Joint Committee on Printing, of which the gentleman from Washington is a member, they could have expended $1,500 in that manner at the Genoa Indian School.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is true; but it seems that only four or five of them were able to come up to that.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, practically every State in the Union, as I understand, with respect to its wards has provided for compulsory education. Concerning these 17 publications, affected by this reservation of a point of order, I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that while the United States Government, with respect to the only ward it has concerning education, Indian children, has a compulsory education law, it is absolutely unenforced, and consequently many of the Indians remain just as we found them, ignorant and uneducated.

How long is this going to continue? Of course, a great many Indians are sending their children to school, but you will still find grown-up Indians now who can not speak the English language.

Mr. SNYDER. Is the gentleman talking to this amendment or to the point of order?

Mr. BLANTON. What is the use of having these publications continued unless we are going to provide for the education of the Indians so that they can read them?

Mr. SNYDER. All we are trying to do here is to reestablish the same provisions and rights as to these publications in the Indian schools that they had previous to the operation of some law passed during the period of the war. It was pointed out to the committee that during the period of the war these publications which were carried on at the schools, had to be sent here to Washington and printed at a much greater expense than it could be done in the schools. It took away from the schools the advantage of the vocational training the people received who worked upon these publications in the schools. All the committee is trying to do is to put the publications back in the schools with the same rights they had before this law took it away from them.

Mr. BLANTON. I merely want to ask the chairman of the committee why should not this compulsory education law be enforced with regard to the Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. I attempted to have it enforced in this bill, but unfortunately it was subject to a point of order, and some gentleman made that point.

Mr. BLANTON. Why not put in a provision which will cause it to be enforced?

Mr. SNYDER. Because the legislation was subject to a point of order, and some gentleman made the point of order, and it was stricken out.

Mr. BLANTON. If there is a law providing for compulsory education of the Indians, then a provision in the appropriation bill requiring the appropriation to be used only when that existing law is put in force would not be subject to a point of order, I take it.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman does not want this committee to put the Indian Bureau entirely out of business at once, does he?

Mr. BLANTON. No; but what is the use of having a law on the statute books if it is not enforced?

Mr. SNYDER. We have endeavored here in many ways to put just such a restriction on appropriations.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman withhold his point of order a minute longer?

Mr. SNYDER. Has the gentleman from Washington made his point of order finally?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. HASTINGS. I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I want to discuss the influence of these Indian publications.

Prior to the Declaration of Independence, when we were yet colonies, there was an Indian born of a full-blood woman down here in the State of Georgia. His mother could not speak a word of English and neither could he. When he grew up to young manhood he invented an alphabet. He was the Cadmus of the Indian tribes. Later on a newspaper was established in Georgia, printed in the Indian language, which newspaper was called the Phoenix. Later, when the Indians removed west, this paper was removed west also and printed there. It had a wholesome influence among the Indians where the paper circulated. Religious tracts and documents of various kinds and songs were published in the Indian tongue and circulated among them. It had a very great civilizing influence among the Five Tribes and contributed very largely to their uplift. What that Indian paper accomplished for the Cherokee Indians and the Five Civilized Tribes these publications accomplish, in a lesser degree, in stimulating education and enlightenment among the Indians. Some three or four years ago the State of Oklahoma, recognizing the great services of Sequoyah, passed a resolution as a result of which his statue is now out here in Statuary Hall. I deply regret that the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] has seen fit to make a point of order against this provision.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield for a statement?

Mr. HASTINGS. I will be glad to.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It will interest the gentleman to know that the entire circulation of the 17 Indian school papers is not to exceed 9,000 copies. They all grew up without authority of law, and have cost the United States Government a pretty penny.

Mr. HASTINGS. We appropriate in one item in this bill, I believe, $1,600,000 for the education of the Indians of the country. I do not know of any more beneficial appropriation that is contained in this bill than that for the education of the youth of the Indians of the country, and I believe that these Indian school publications, like the publications in the white schools throughout the United States, have a very beneficial effect upon the schools. I think it is a sad mistake that the point of order should be made and this item eliminated.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the gentlemen have been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. FESS. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I sympathize with the effort to minimize the evils that grow out of so many agencies in the Government and divisions of activity, but I very deeply sympathize with what the gentleman from Oklahoma has just said. I think that if any member of the committee will run back over his memory as to what he did in the way of editing a college publication or a high-school publication, that that Member will confess that it was one of the best trainings that he ever received in all of his school career. It is not so much for the information that is given as it is for the practice of the student or the pupil—a student if a college and a pupil in the high school.

The membership of this committee will be interested in a little incident that occurred about six years ago when I happened to be in the composing room of one of the greatest religious thinkers in America, at the head of one of the greatest religious publications of the country, edited in Boston. He called the head printer to show the first page of the Christian Endeavor World. The printer brought two copies, and immediately the editor said this is much the better, and I remarked that I did not see the difference, that it must be the eye of a trained printer that could see the difference. Then he began to show me what was on one that was not on the other, to show the advantage or the superiority of the one over the other. He incidentally remarked to me that when he was the editor of a college paper in Yellow Springs, Ohio, in Antioch College, he got his training for the work that he was then doing. The statement of that editor of one of the greatest religious publications in the world, one of the finest critics in the country, indicates the training that a publication will give to individuals if it is properly conducted.

I sympathize with what the gentleman from Oklahoma has said. But these publications are being abused, and as to these numerous publications in the departments, I think we ought to take a meat ax to them. I am not sure, however, that this is not a mistake in cutting this particular feature out of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

That hereafter in the sale of all Indian allotments, or in leases, or assignment of leases, covering tribal or allotted lands for mineral, farming, grazing, business, or other purposes, or in the sale of timber thereon, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, under such regulations as he may prescribe, to charge a reasonable fee for the work incident to the sale, leasing, or assigning of such lands, or in the sale of the timber, or in the administration of Indian forests, to be paid by vendees, lessees, or assignees, or from the proceeds of sales, the amounts collected to be used for defraying in whole or in part the administrative expenses of the Indian field service of the particular reservation where such lands, or the timber thereon, are sold, leased, or assigned.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I would like to hear from the chairman or some member of the committee as to what they think of the propriety of arranging that these fees shall be apparently placed entirely at the disposal of the Indian Service rather than to have them turned into the Treasury, as I think has been generally acknowledged to be the better practice.

Mr. ELSTON. That matter was discussed with the assistant commissioner as a practical administrative concern. He stated that the various fees that would be charged under this paragraph would be collected in various reservations scattered all over the country; that it would be much easier to apply them for authorized purposes for which appropriations had been made, and to that extent reduce the authorized appropriation, leaving at the end of the fiscal year a surplus which would lapse into the Treasury.

Mr. CRAMTON. Is the gentleman sure that the language in the bill would accomplish that result? It looks to me as if the section provides that the Secretary of the Interior may fix the fees wherever he desires. The bureau, instead of turning them into the Treasury so that Congress may know what is going on, could make use of this in defraying the administration expenses of anything for that service; not necessarily expenses that have been authorized by Congress, but perhaps additional expenditures and additional services that Congress has not authorized.

Mr. ELSTON. I will read an inquiry that I put to the assistant commissioner respecting this very thing. I said to him:

Do you not think it would be better to rephrase that to say that this amount should be covered into the Treasury, so that the committee would know just what the additional needs would be for which you expected to use these collections and in that way have some control over the use of additional funds by the bureau? These collections may amount to several hundred thousand dollars, and if they come into your hands they might be used on the reservations in addition to the appropriations made for particular purposes for those reservations.

I made another reference to this same matter, asking whether the clause would not have the effect of authority for the expenditure of these collections in addition to appropriations made for this purpose on the reservations, being in fact a reappropriation of the amounts collected instead of being covered into the Treasury, so that the matter was fully brought out in the discussion of that very clause when it was before the committee. The assistant commissioner's reply was in effect that the provision as it now appears would afford a much easier and more direct way of taking care of these collections.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, that is always the attitude that any branch of the Government will take. If they can keep their hands on the money and have it freely at their disposal, they prefer to have it in that way. Here in the District we collect fees. I know the last provided for was for the inspection of elevators, and instead of letting the commissioners use that money to hire as many elevator inspectors as they desired we specify the amount that they may use for the hiring of inspectors and require that the fees be turned into the Treasury. I think that is the universal practice.

Mr. ELSTON. I would say that I have read very rapidly the responses to Mr. Meritt to my inquiry, and the effect of what he says is that the use of these funds will reduce the amount of the appropriations, and that the surplus will lapse into the Treasury.

Mr. CRAMTON. I have the greatest confidence in the gentleman from California, and so great is that confidence that I agree with him entirely in what was his first interpretation of the section.

Mr. ELSTON. I hope if the gentleman desires to do anything with the paragraph that he will agree to modify it rather than make the point of order. I suggest that he propose an appropriate amendment. This section is a very good piece of legislation, in my opinion.

Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman does not have to argue with me about that. I agree with him entirely. The only thing in my mind is the proper disposition of the money, and I am agreeable if the gentleman suggests an amendment that the amount collected be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. SNYDER. I will accept that.

Mr. CRAMTON. Then I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, then, as a committee amendment, I move that, in line 11, after the word "be," we strike out the rest of the paragraph and insert the words "covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 19, line 11, after the word "be," strike out the remainder of the paragraph and insert the words "covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 100 pupils at the Indian school at Truxton Canyon, Ariz., and for pay of superintendent, $24,300; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $29,300.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled joint resolution of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. J. Res. 263. A joint resolution, extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public, No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 2902. An act to amend section 5182, Revised Statutes of the United States.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CULLEN, for 10 days, on account of the death of his mother.

To Mr. BELL, for 15 days, on account of official business in connection with the Official Postal Commission.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 22 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, January 8, 1920, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. VOLSTEAD, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10700) to authorize the judges of the United States Court of Customs Appeals to be assigned to any district or circuit court of appeals of the United States and conferring the jurisdiction of said courts upon them while so assigned, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 532), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. SELLS, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred sundry bills of the House, reported in lieu thereof the bill (H. R. 11554) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, accompanied by a report (No. 533), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HARRELD: A bill (H. R. 11537) to provide for an appropriation for the payment of special assessment for paving, curbing, and guttering Nineteenth Street, Oklahoma City, Okla., adjacent to real estate owned by the United States and used and occupied by the Weather Bureau; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. FULLER of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 11538) to repeal certain provisions of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1379), relating to widows' pensions; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11539) to define the term "honorable discharge" in the administration of the pension laws; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 11540) providing for cooperation in the enforcement of the immigration laws; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MAPES: A bill (H. R. 11541) providing for a survey of Grand Haven Harbor in the State of Michigan, with a view of securing increased depth in the entrance channel; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WHALEY: A bill (H. R. 11542) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Walterboro, Colleton County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11543) for the purchase of a site for a public building at St. George, Dorchester County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11544) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Summerville, Dorchester County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11545) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Manning, Clarendon County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. EVANS of Nevada: A bill (H. R. 11546) to treat the transportation of mails between Palisade, Nev., and Eureka, Nev., as other than railroad service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MARTIN: A bill (H. R. 11547) to organize the civilian engineers in the service of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 11548) for the consolidation of forest lands within the Clearwater, St. Joe, and Coeur d'Alene National Forests; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GRIEST: A bill (H. R. 11549) providing for the erection of a public building at the city of Lancaster, Pa.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11550) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Columbia, Pa.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. RAMSEYER: A bill (H. R. 11551) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend and modify the war-risk insurance act," approved December 24, 1919; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HAYS: A bill (H. R. 11552) to authorize the acquisition of a site and the erection of a Federal building at Ozark, Christian County, Mo.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KETTNER: A bill (H. R. 11553) for the relief of the Imperial Valley, Calif., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. SELLS: A bill (H. R. 11554) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; committed to the Committee of the Whole House and ordered to be printed.

By Mr. HASTINGS: A bill (H. R. 11555) prohibiting the bringing into the United States and the carrying and transporting therein, from one State, Territory, or District to another State, Territory, or District, of pictures, films, moving-picture film or films purporting to show or to simulate the acts and conduct of ex-convicts, desperadoes, bandits, train robbers, bank robbers, or outlaws in the commission or attempted commission of crime or acts of violence; and to prohibit the use of the mails in carrying communications relating to the same, and providing punishment therefor; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 11556) making the 11th day of November in each and every year a legal public holiday; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HARRELD: A bill (H. R. 1157) prohibiting the bringing into the United States and the carrying and transporting therein, from one State, Territory, or District to another State, Territory, or District, of pictures, films, moving-picture film or films purporting to show or to simulate the acts and conduct of ex-convicts, desperadoes, bandits, train robbers, bank robbers, or outlaws in the commission or attempted commission of crime or acts of violence; and to prohibit the use of the mails in carrying communications relating to the same, and providing punishment therefor; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 11558) providing for the erection and completion of a public building in the Borough of the Bronx, New York City, in the State of New York; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BAER: A bill (H. R. 11559) providing for appropriation for the purpose of making examinations and surveys and preparing plans and estimates of cost and for constructing projects for regulating the stream flow and controlling the flood waters of the Red River of the North and its tributaries; to the Committee on Flood Control.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 432) for an additional clerk to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. CRAMTON: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 42) for the discharge and return to America of all American citizens now serving in the military forces of Poland, upon application of such soldiers for discharge; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 11560) for the relief of William A. Duff; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COPLEY: A bill (H. R. 11561) granting a pension to Mary Davis Silveira; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CRAMTON: A bill (H. R. 11562) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Henry; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DENISON: A bill (H. R. 11563) granting a pension to Allen H. Wilson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. IGOE: A bill (H. R. 11564) granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Christy; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. IRELAND: A bill (H. R. 11565) granting a pension to Mary F. Douglas; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11566) granting a pension to Martha B. Sipes; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 11567) granting a pension to Elizabeth Yeates; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KENDALL: A bill (H. R. 11568) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Dupont; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMPERT: A bill (H. R. 11569) granting a pension to Emerson Safford; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OGDEN: A bill (H. R. 11570) for the relief of the National Laundry Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RIORDAN: A bill (H. R. 11571) for the adjudication by the Court of Claims of the claim of George Chorpenning under contract with the United States for carrying the mails; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ROWE: A bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of the John E. Moore Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VAILE: A bill (H. R. 11573) granting a pension to Anson T. Lazier; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. VOIGT: A bill (H. R. 11574) granting an increase of pension to Charles J. S. Arey; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WATSON: A bill (H. R. 11575) for the relief of August Herzer; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WINGO: A bill (H. R. 11576) granting an increase of pension to Robert C. Abel; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WOOD of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 11577) granting a pension to Sarah Keys; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

688. By Mr. KEARNS: Petition of sundry citizens of Winchester, Ohio, favoring the modification of the revenue act of 1918, regarding season tickets to theaters; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

689. By Mr. MAPES: Petition of E. J. Flemming, general secretary of the Church of the Nazarene, favoring the amendment of the preamble of the National Constitution; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

690. By Mr. MORIN: Petition of members of Railroad Men's International Benevolent Industrial Association, Local No. 6, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging elimination of Anderson amendment in the Esch-Cummins bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

691. Also, petition of Steel City Lodge, No. 591, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Pittsburgh, Pa., urging Government control of railroads for full period of 21 months after formal declaration of peace in order to have time for a thorough investigation of railroad legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

692. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the General Shunk Post, No. 23, Grand Army of the Republic, of Marion, Ind., appealing for the Andersonville prisoners of the Civil War; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

693. By Mr. ROWAN: Petition of president and secretary of Dairymen's League of New York City, favoring passage of the Capper-Hersman bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

694. Also, petition of four citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring passage of the Johnson soldier bill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

695. Also, petition of National Farmers' Union, favoring development of nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala.; to the Committee on Agriculture.

696. Also, petition of Twenty Year Club of the Watervliet Arsenal, expressing gratitude for work on civil-service retirement bill; to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

697. Also, petition of Carroll Dunham Smith Pharmacal Co., of New York, opposing Siegel bill (H. R. 8315); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

698. Also, petition of Flint (Mich.) Board of Commerce, asking legislation to remove income tax on mortgages up to $40,000 owned by individuals; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

699. Also, petition of the Syrian Arabian Independence Committee, advocating an American mandate for Syria; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

700. Also, petition of Rust Products Co. of America, advocating revision of income tax on corporate products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

701. Also, petition of S. G. Rosenbaum, in connection with return of railroads; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

702. Also, petition of Elbert Miller, for National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, asking protection of their interests in the return of the railroads to private ownership; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

703. Also, petition of Guaranty Post No. 104, American Legion, New York, N. Y., favoring universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

704. Also, petition of Spokane Chamber of Commerce, in connection with irrigation of western lands; to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

705. Also, petition of County Sligo Men's Social and Benevolent Association in connection with foreign loans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

706. Also, petition of O. F. Taussig, of New York, favoring constructive railroad legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

707. Also, petition of Isaac Schorr, of New York, submitting brief in favor of aliens now being investigated for deportation as undesirable; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

708. Also, petition of Good Railway Service Association, of California, in connection with the return of the railroads; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

709. Also, petition of Knowles-Bradley Co., of New York, protesting against passage of the Kahn bill (H. R. 10329) in connection with the Muscle Shoals cyanamid plant; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

710. By Mr. SNELL: Resolution of Saranac Lake Post, No. 447, New York, American Legion, indorsing the home-for-soldiers bill (H. R. 5345) introduced by Representative MORGAN; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

711. Also, resolution of Saranac Lake Post, No. 447, American Legion, declaring itself opposed to all radical movements by any organization or individual, and to any expression of anarchistic or un-American sentiment on the part of any organization or individual; also condemning the Centralia outrage, and favoring any movement or legislation which may tend to destroy the organization whose agents participated in it; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

712. By Mr. TAGUE: Petition of Eugene R. Kelley, M. D., commissioner of public health, Boston, Mass., opposing the Calder bill, S. 3011; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

713. Also, petition of employees of the Boston Navy Yard, opposing the antistrike clause in the Cummins bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

714. By Mr. TINKHAM: Petition of Louis W. Stotesby, of New York, favoring retention of the National Guard on a militia basis; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

715. Also, petition of employees and personnel of Boston Navy Yard, requesting additional work for that establishment; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

716. By Mr. VAILE: Petition of the board of directors of the Denver Civic and Commercial Association, opposing House bill 9038; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

717. Also, petition of the Denver (Colo.) Civic and Commercial Association, indorsing the Jones-Reavis bill providing for the unification of the engineering activities of the Government in a department of public works; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department.

718. By Mr. WATSON: Petition of Friends of Irish Freedom, John Mitchell Branch, favoring the sending of a minister and consuls to Ireland; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

719. Also, petition of Musicians' Protective Association, Local No. 211, American Federation of Musicians, of Pottstown, Pa., against the strike clause of the Cummins bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

720. By Mr. YATES: Petition of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., Chicago, Ill., urging the passage of Congressman MADDEN'S bill for the reduction of letter postage; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

721. Also, petition of E. V. Price & Co., Chicago, Ill., urging the passage of House bill 8581; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

722. Also, petition of Canton Gas & Electric Co., Canton, Ill., and Sterne & Klein Co., Chicago, Ill., favoring Congressman MADDEN'S bill for 1-cent letter postage in cities, towns, and rural routes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

723. Also, petition of the Amboy News, Amboy, Ill., urging congressional action relieving country newspapers from high prices of print paper due to extraordinary shortage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

724. Also, petition of Board of Commerce, Flint, Mich., by E. B. Linabury, urging passage of a bill rescinding the income tax on mortgages owned by any individual up to $40,000; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

725. Also, petition of W. P. McKinney, Chicago, Ill., advocating a certain method of assessing the income tax on corporations by assessing the tax on gross sales instead of corporate profit; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, January 8, 1920.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, the path of peace and of privilege and of blessing has been marked out for us in Thy Holy Word and Thou dost send forth Thy spirit into the hearts of men to guide them in the way of all truth. We present ourselves to Thee, we trust, with open hearts, that we may be inspired to think Thy thoughts after Thee, to work out the plan of life Thou hast committed to us, that we may glorify Thy name and help with our lives to lift men to higher levels of life. We ask Thy blessing to this end. For Christ's sake. Amen.

On request of Mr. CURTIS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

REPORT OF GEN. PERSHING.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War calling attention to the concurrent resolution providing for the printing of 100,000 copies of Gen. Pershing's official report, without charts or maps, and requesting that in the printing of the report the charts and maps be included. The communication will be printed and referred to the Committee on Printing for action.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House agrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5818) for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolution, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

S. 2902. An act to amend section 5182, Revised Statutes of the United States; and

H. J. Res. 263. Joint resolution extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

THE FOREIGN POLICY OF ANDREW JACKSON.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, to-day is the anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans and will be duly celebrated in divers parts of the United States. In view of the fact that Gen. Jackson died June 8, 1845, thirty years afterwards, and as we are now engaged in an effort to more or less connect ourselves with the British Empire by diplomacy and by financial underwriting of great burdens, I have deemed it proper to present on behalf of a constituent certain extracts from the messages and public papers of Gen. Jackson when he was President of the United States, from 1829 to 1837. I ask that they be printed in the RECORD at length, without reading, for the enlightenment of the gentlemen who will animadvert upon that subject this evening.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE FOREIGN POLICY OF ANDREW JACKSON.

December 6, 1830: "The important modifications of their government, effected with so much courage and wisdom by the people of France, afford a happy presage of their future course, and have naturally elicited from the kindred feelings of this Nation that spontaneous and universal burst of applause in which you have participated. In congratulating you, my fellow citizens, upon an event so auspicious to the dearest interests of mankind, I do no more than respond to the voice of my country, without transcending in the slightest degree that salutary maxim of the illustrious Washington, which enjoins an abstinence from all interference with the internal affairs of other nations.

"The negotiations in regard to such points in our foreign relations as remain to be adjusted have been actively prosecuted during the recess. Material advances have been made, which are of a character to promise favorable results. Our country, by the blessing of God, is not in a situation to invite aggression, and it will be our fault if she ever becomes so. Sincerely desirous to cultivate the most liberal and friendly relations with all, ever ready to fulfill our engagements with scrupulous fidelity, limiting our demands upon others to mere justice, holding ourselves ever ready to do unto them as we would wish to be done by, and avoiding even the appearance of undue partiality to any nation, it appears to me impossible that a simple and sincere application of our principles to our foreign relations can fail to place them ultimately upon the footing on which it is our wish they should rest." (Second annual message to the Senate and House of Representatives, in The Statesmanship of Andrew Jackson, pp. 83 and 90, by Francis Newton Thorpe, Ph. D., LL. D.)

December 6, 1831: "The pacific and wise policy of our Government kept us in a state of neutrality during the wars that have at different periods since our political existence been carried on by other powers; but this policy, while it gave activity and extent to our commerce, exposed it in the same proportion to injuries from the belligerent nations. Hence have arisen claims of indemnity for those injuries. England, France, Spain, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, Naples, and lately Portugal had all in a greater or less degree infringed our neutral rights. Demands for reparation were made upon all. They have had in all, and continue to have in some cases, a leading influence on the nature of our relations with the powers on whom they were made.

"I have great satisfaction in making this statement of our affairs, because the course of our national policy enables me to do it without any indiscreet exposure of what in other governments is usually concealed from the people. Having none but a straightforward, open course to pursue, guided by a single principle that will bear the strongest light, we have happily no political combinations to form, no alliances to entangle us, no complicated interests to consult, and in subjecting all we have done to the consideration of our citizens and to the inspection of the world we give no advantage to other nations and lay ourselves open to no injury." (Third annual message, Ibid., pp. 135 and 146.)

December 4, 1832: "Nor have we less reason to felicitate ourselves on the position of our political than of our commercial concerns. They remain in the state in which they were when I last addressed you—a state of prosperity and peace, the effect of a wise attention to the parting advice of the revered Father of his Country on this subject, condensed into a maxim for the use of posterity by one of his most distinguished successors, to cultivate free commerce and honest friendship with all nations, but to make entangling alliances with none. A strict adherence to this policy has kept us aloof from the perplexing questions that now agitate the European world and have more than once deluged those countries with blood. Should those scenes unfortunately recur, the parties to the contest may count on a faithful performance of the duties incumbent on us as a neutral Nation, and our own citizens may equally rely on the firm assertion of their neutral rights." (Fourth annual message, Ibid., p. 178.)

"In the view I have given of our connection with foreign powers allusions have been made to their domestic disturbances or foreign wars, to their revolutions or dissensions. It may be proper to observe that this is done solely in cases where those events affect our political relations with them, or to show their operation on our commerce. Further than this it is neither our policy nor our right to interfere. Our best wishes on all occasions, our good offices when required, will be afforded to promote the domestic tranquillity and foreign peace of all nations with whom we have any intercourse. Any intervention in their affairs further than this, even by the expression of an official opinion, is contrary to our principles of international policy and will always be avoided." (Fourth annual message, Ibid., p. 184.)

March 4, 1833: "The foreign policy adopted by our Government soon after the formation of our present Constitution, and very generally pursued by successive administrations, has been crowned with almost complete success and has elevated our character among the nations of the earth. To do justice to all and to submit to wrong from none has been during my administration its governing maxim, and so happy have been its results that we are not only at peace with all the world, but have few causes of controversy, and those of minor importance, remaining unadjusted." (Second inaugural address, in Messages and Papers of the Presidents, p. 1222, Vol. III.)

December 3, 1833: "Our condition abroad is no less honorable than it is prosperous at home. Seeking nothing that is not right and determined to submit to nothing that is wrong, but desiring honest friendships and liberal intercourse with all nations, the United States have gained throughout the world the confidence and respect which are due to a policy so just and so congenial to the character of the American people and to the spirit of their institutions." (Fifth annual message, in The Statesmanship of Andrew Jackson, p. 282.)

December 1, 1834: "Our institutions are essentially pacific. Peace and friendly intercourse with all nations are as much the desire of our Government as they are the interest of our people. But these objects are not to be permanently secured by surrendering the rights of our citizens or permitting solemn treaties for their indemnity, in cases of flagrant wrong, to be abrogated or set aside." (Sixth annual message, in Messages and Papers of the Presidents, p. 1324, Vol. III.)

December 7, 1835: "A convention with Mexico for extending the time for the appointment of commissioners to run the boundary line has been concluded and will be submitted to the Senate. Recent events in that country have awakened the liveliest solicitude in the United States. Aware of the strong temptations existing and powerful inducements held out to the citizens of the United States to mingle in the dissensions of our immediate neighbors, instructions have been given to the district attorneys of the United States where indications warranted it to prosecute without respect to persons all who might attempt to violate the obligations of our neutrality, while at the same time it has been thought necessary to apprise the Government of Mexico that we should require the integrity of our territory to be scrupulously respected by both parties." (Seventh annual message, in Messages and Papers of the Presidents, p. 1370, Vol. IV.)

"The people of the United States are justly attached to a pacific system in their intercourse with foreign nations. It is proper, therefore, that they should know whether their Government has adhered to it. In the present instance it has been carried to the utmost extent that was consistent with a becoming self-respect. The note of the 29th of January, to which I have before alluded, was not the only one which our minister took upon himself the responsibility of presenting on the same subject and in the same spirit. Finding that it was intended to make the payment of a just debt dependent on the performance of a condition which he know could never be complied with, he thought it a duty to make another attempt to convince the French Government that whilst self-respect and regard to the dignity of other nations would always prevent us from using any language that ought to give offense, yet we could never admit a right in any foreign Government to ask explanations of or to interfere in any manner in the communications which one branch of our public councils made with another; that in the present case no such language had been used, and that this had in a former note been fully and voluntarily stated before it was contemplated to make the explanation a condition; and that there might be no misapprehension he stated the terms used in that note, and he officially informed them that it had been approved by the President, and that therefore every explanation which could reasonably be asked or honorably given had been already made; that the contemplated measure had been anticipated by a voluntary and friendly declaration, and was therefore not only useless but might be deemed offensive, and certainly would not be complied with if annexed as a condition." (Seventh annual message, in Messages and Papers of the Presidents, p. 1378, Vol. IV.)

December 5, 1836: "It is already known to you by the correspondence between the two Governments communicated at your last session, that our conduct in relation to that struggle is regulated by the same principles that governed us in the dispute between Spain and Mexico herself, and I trust that it will be found on the most severe scrutiny that our acts have strictly corresponded with our professions. That the inhabitants of the United States should feel strong prepossessions for the one party is not surprising. But this circumstance should of itself teach us great caution, lest it lead us into the great error of suffering public policy to be regulated by partiality or prejudice; and there are considerations connected with the possible result of this contest between the two parties of so much delicacy and importance to the United States that our character requires that we should neither anticipate events nor attempt to control them. The known desire of the Texans to become a part of our system, although its gratification depends upon the reconcilement of various and conflicting interests, necessarily a work of time and uncertain in itself, is calculated to expose our conduct to misconstruction in the eyes of the world. There are already those who, indifferent to principle themselves and prone to suspect the want of it in others, charge us with ambitious designs and insidious policy. You will perceive by the accompanying documents that the extraordinary mission from Mexico has been terminated on the sole ground that the obligations of this Government to itself and to Mexico under treaty stipulations have compelled me to trust a discretionary authority to a high officer of our Army to advance into territory claimed as part of Texas if necessary to protect our own or the neighboring frontier from Indian depredation." (Eighth annual message, in Messages and Papers of the Presidents, pp. 1456 and 1457, Vol. IV.)

March 3, 1837:

"To the Senate of the United States:

"In my message to Congress of the 21st of December last I laid before that body without reserve my views concerning the recognition of the independence of Texas, with a report of the agent employed by the Executive to obtain information in respect to the condition of that country. Since that time the subject has been repeatedly discussed in both branches of the Legislature. These discussions have resulted in the insertion of a clause in the general appropriation law passed by both Houses providing for the outfit and salary of a diplomatic agent to be sent to the Republic of Texas whenever the President of the United States may receive satisfactory evidence that Texas is an independent power and shall deem it expedient to appoint such minister, and in the adoption of a resolution by the Senate, the constitutional advisers of the Executive on the diplomatic intercourse of the United States with foreign powers, expressing the opinion that 'the State of Texas having established and maintained an independent government capable of performing those duties, foreign and domestic, which appertain to independent governments, and it appearing that there is no longer any reasonable prospect of the successful prosecution of the war by Mexico against said State, it is expedient and proper and in conformity with the laws of nations and the practice of this Government in like cases that the independent political existence of said State be acknowledged by the Government of the United States.' Regarding these proceedings as a virtual decision of the question submitted by me to Congress, I think it is my duty to acquiesce therein, and therefore I nominate Alcee La Branche, of Louisiana, to be chargé d'affaires to the Republic of Texas.

"ANDREW JACKSON."

(Messages and Papers of the Presidents, pp. 1500 and 1501, Vol. IV.)

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. GRONNA. I present a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, requesting the speedy ratification of the peace treaty with only such reservations as are compatible with a binding and bona fide participation by the United States of America in the covenant of the league of nations. I ask that the resolution lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD.

The concurrent resolution was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, William J. Prater, secretary of the senate of the special session of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, do hereby declare and certify that the following concurrent resolution was introduced in the senate by Senator Thorwald Mostad; was passed by the senate December 10, 1919, and concurred in by the house of representatives December 10, 1919.

Dated at Bismarck, N. Dak., this 10th day of December, A. D. 1919.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM J. PRATER,
Secretary of the Senate.

Concurrent resolution.

Be it resolved by the senate, the house of representatives concurring, Recognizing and commending the splendid service President Wilson rendered to his country and to all mankind through his untiring efforts as a statesman to secure world peace, we regret that his health and physical strength became exhausted before his work for peace of the world was completed.

We ask a speedy ratification of the peace treaty with only such reservations as are compatible with a binding and bona fide participation by the United States of America in the covenant of the league of nations. The honor of our arms and our devotion to the principles of democracy demand that Congress take action to bring about peace to a war-weary world at the very earliest date possible.

Be it further resolved, That the secretary of state send a copy of these resolutions to President Woodrow Wilson and to each Senator and Member of Congress from North Dakota.

Mr. KNOX presented petitions of Local Lodge No. 134, of Lancaster; Local Lodge No. 103, of Sharon; Local Lodge No. 329, of Kane; Local Lodge No. 170, of Butler; Local Lodge No. 751, of Duquesne; Local Lodge No. 1196, of Pittsburgh; Local Lodge No. 123, of Scranton; and of Local Lodge No. 631, of Lebanon, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; and of Post No. 84, Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, of Lancaster, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the suppression of anarchy and the deportation of undesirable aliens, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of New Brighton and Pittsburgh, in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the retirement of superannuated Government employees, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Public School Nurses' Association, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the incorporation of relative rank for Army nurses in the proposed Army reorganization legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Local Lodge No. 170, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of Butler, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the purchase of Mammoth Cave, Ky., by the Government and its conversion into a national park, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of the Wayne County Organization of the Dairymen's League, of Pennsylvania, praying for the adoption of the so-called Capper-Hersman amendment to the antitrust law fostering cooperative collective bargaining by farmers, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Central Labor Union of Scranton, Pa., favoring the freedom of Ireland, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the faculty and students of the Perkiomen School, Pennsburg, Pa., expressing sympathy with the Korean people in their effort for a free government, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MCKELLAR (for Mr. SHIELDS) presented a petition of sundry citizens of Madisonville, Tenn., praying for the ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE. I present certain resolutions from the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts, and ask that they may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE ROOSEVELT CLUB,
Boston, January 6, 1920.

In the matter of the league of nations, the executive committee of the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts, at a meeting January 6, 1920, herewith respectfully and unanimously urges upon the President and his representatives in the Senate to recede from their positions and to make such concessions as will enable the immediate ratification of the treaty.

CHARLES SUMNER BIRD.
R. M. WASHBURN.
HARCOURT AMORY, Jr.
GASPAR G. BACON.
GEORGE P. DRURY.
WALTER H. FOSTER.
GEORGE V. L. MEYER.
B. LORING YOUNG.

The following action was taken by the members of the club by an affirmative vote of 542 to 92:

Moved: In the matter of the proposed league of nations, in the interest of an agreement and immediate ratification, that the Roosevelt Club herewith respectfully urges upon the Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE and the Hon. DAVID I. WALSH, Senators from Massachusetts, such concessions as may be made consistent with the so-called Americanization of the covenant and the safety of the people of the United States.

R. M. WASHBURN,
Vice President.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 730) to amend chapter 559 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1891 (Rept. No. 356); and

A bill (H. R. 2950) to authorize a preference right of entry by certain Carey Act entrymen, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 357).

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

H. R. 348. An act to add certain lands to the Ochoco National Forest, Oreg.;

H. R. 8028. An act to add to the Oregon, Siuslaw, and Crater National Forests in Oregon certain lands that were revested in the United States pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Oregon & California Railroad Co. against the United States, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8508. An act restoring to Amy E. Hall her homestead rights and providing that on any homestead entry made by her she shall be given credit for all compliance with the law on her original homestead entry and for all payments made on same.

Mr. STERLING, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 2442) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to convey to the trustees of the Yankton Agency Presbyterian Church, by patent in fee, certain land within the Yankton Indian Reservation (Rept. No. 358); and

A bill (S. 2786) authorizing the sale of lands in Gregory County, S. Dak. (Rept. No. 359).

LUMBER RIVER BRIDGE, NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 8661) to authorize the Kingsdale Lumber Corporation to construct a bridge across the Lumber River, near the town of Lumberton, N. C., and I submit a report (No. 349) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Kingsdale Lumber Corporation, its lessees, successors, and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across Lumber River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, near the town of Lumberton, Robeson County, N. C., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GREAT PEEDEE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably, without amendment, the bill (H. R. 9947) to authorize J. L. Anderson and H. M. Duvall to construct a bridge across Great Peedee River at or near the town of Cheraw, S. C., and I submit a report (No. 350) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That J. L. Anderson and H. M. Duvall, their successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across Great Peedee River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation and at or near the town of Cheraw, Chesterfield County, S. C., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROCK RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 10135) for the construction of a bridge across Rock River, at or near East Grand Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis., and I submit a report (No. 351) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Beloit, in the State of Wisconsin, be, and the same is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Rock River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the point where East Grand Avenue, in said city of Beloit, crosses the said Rock River, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONNECTICUT RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 10558) granting the consent of Congress to the Connecticut River Railroad Co., its lessees, successors, and assigns, to construct a bridge across the Connecticut River, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and I submit a report (No. 352) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Connecticut River Railroad Co., its lessees, successors, and assigns, be, and they hereby are, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Connecticut River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, one end of said bridge being in the city of Holyoke and the other in the city of Chicopee, Mass., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PEARL RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 10847) granting the consent of Congress to Marion County, State of Mississippi, to construct a bridge across the Pearl River, in Marion County, State of Mississippi, and I submit a report (No. 353) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to Marion County, State of Mississippi, and its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Pearl River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near "the Branton old ferry," in Marion County, State of Mississippi, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TOMBIGBEE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 11025) to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the Tombigbee River, near Iron Wood Bluff, in Itawamba County, Miss., and I submit a report (No. 354) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the board of supervisors of Itawamba County, Miss., is hereby authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Tombigbee River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation near Iron Wood Bluff, in Itawamba County, Miss., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RURAL HOMES.

Mr. SMOOT. From the Committee on Public Lands I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 3477) to increase, without expenditure of Federal funds, the opportunities of the people to acquire rural homes, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 355) thereon.

Mr. President, I wish simply to say that this bill is following out the recommendations made by the Secretary of the Interior in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919. It is of vast importance to the people of the United States, and is not sectional in character in any respect whatever, as it contemplates the establishment of rural homes in all parts of the United States, with no expense whatever to the Government of the United States. I am therefore going to ask at the very earliest possible date for the consideration of the bill.

In this connection I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD and that there also be printed in the RECORD a portion of the report of the Secretary of the Interior referring to the bill.

Mr. KING. I desire to ask my colleague if there is a report made by the committee accompanying the bill?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say there is a report accompanying the bill, which I also desire may be printed in the RECORD in connection with the bill.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A bill (S. 3477) to increase, without expenditure of Federal funds, the opportunities of the people to acquire rural homes, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, through the Reclamation Service, is authorized to investigate and determine the feasibility of developing tracts of land in private ownership, by reclamation and otherwise, for the purpose of subdividing the land and disposing of the same in farms and parcels at reasonable prices.

SEC. 2. That after the Secretary of the Interior has determined the feasibility of a project, he is authorized, through the Reclamation Service, to develop the land to such extent, and dispose of the same in farms and parcels in such manner and upon such terms as to him shall be deemed most feasible and practicable.

SEC. 3. That no moneys of the United States shall be expended for any of the purposes of this act, nor shall either the investigation or development of any project be commenced or any obligation incurred therefor until a contract shall have first been made by the Secretary of the Interior with the owner or owners of the land, providing for the payment in advance of sufficient moneys to meet the cost of such investigation or development. The moneys provided by every such contract shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as a trust fund, and shall be disbursed by a duly authorized fiscal officer of the Government under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior and in accordance with the terms of such contract.

SEC. 4. That every contract for development of a project shall provide, among other things, that the developed farms and parcels shall be sold to persons who desire to occupy the same as homes, at the actual cost of the land and the development thereof plus a definite reasonable profit to the owner or owners stated in advance therein. All contracts for the purchase of lots and farms shall be made payable to the owner or owners of the land or their assigns.

[Senate Report No. 355, Sixty-sixth Congress, second session.]

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3477) to increase, without expenditure of Federal funds, the opportunities of the people to acquire rural homes, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon, with the recommendation that the bill do pass with amendments.

Page 1, line 5, after the word "ownership," insert the words "within any State or Territory."

Page 2, lines 19 to 21, amend the last sentence to read: "All contracts for the purchase of farms and parcels shall be made for, and the moneys due thereunder shall be payable to, the owner or owners of the land or their assigns."

This bill has the hearty approval of the Interior Department, as is evidenced by the following letter from the Secretary of that department:

DECEMBER 10, 1919.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I am in receipt of your letter of December 5, transmitting copy of bill S. 3477, and requesting report thereon.

The bill is entitled: "A bill to increase, without expenditure of Federal funds, the opportunities of the people to acquire rural homes, and for other purposes."

The bill authorizes the use of the Reclamation Service, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in the development of reclamation projects to be entirely financed by private capital or by the sale of local district bonds, and is applicable not only to the West but to all parts of the United States.

There can be no doubt that the work of continental conquest, which has very largely made the greatness of America, must go on during the coming years, at least, to the extent of increasing the cultivable area in approximately the same ratio to the increase in population.

When the fertile prairies of the West were open to settlement the Nation had no difficulty in keeping its agriculture even in advance of its rapidly growing population. The conditions to-day are such as to require aggressive leadership on the part of the Government, although private initiative and capital are the best dependence for enterprise. The demands upon the National Treasury are now so great that it is not only prudent but essential that private capital should be enlisted so far as possible to meet the needs of the time.

The primary object of the measure is to safeguard and promote the interests of that portion of our people who seek to obtain prosperous homes upon the land and who must often begin with slender resources. A serious factor in the general trend from the farm to the city at the present time is the high cost of small tracts favorably located with respect to markets and transportation, together with the size of initial investment required.

There are millions of acres of potentially rich lands which may be purchased in large tracts at a very low price in their present condition; but, nevertheless, small parcels suitable for immediate cultivation can seldom be had excepting at greatly increased figures, due to large selling expenses, interest accruing until disposition of subdivided areas, and speculative profits. The short period allowed to complete full payments is an added handicap to the settler.

It is clearly in the interest of the Nation that the people should be assisted and encouraged to own rural homes. This can be done by assuring them of thorough and scientific investigation of lands and their improvement by some process of reclamation, such as irrigation, drainage, clearing, or refertilization made by trained engineers, economists, and administrators in the service of the Government. The extent of wasted effort and human tragedy resulting from settlers buying poor land, badly located, at unreasonable prices, and upon such terms of payment as seriously to jeopardize their ultimate success has in recent years been appalling.

Under the operations of this bill it is believed settlers will be able to effect savings equaling as much as one-half and more of the prices they ordinarily pay for small rural holdings. This would be the case, first, because landowners would enter into contracts for the sale of their property on a prereclamation basis; second, because the heavy charges of sale agencies and interest accruing until disposition of subdivided areas could be practically eliminated. Settlers would probably save enough on the first cost of the land to pay for all their improvements and live stock. These savings would aggregate tens of thousands and possibly millions of dollars; and further, the terms of payment could be made such as to give purchasers at least a reasonable chance of success.

All that has been said applies with equal force to protection of the investor in securities, who has often been the victim of avoidable mistakes.

It will be possible also for the Government, under the terms of this measure, to lend substantial assistance in the organization of communities, and this condition should favorably affect both their commercial and social life.

The bill is intended to be country wide in its application, but as the language provides for administration through the Reclamation Service, there is danger of an interpretation that it would apply only to the arid States of the West. It is therefore suggested that on page 1, line 5, there be inserted, after the word "ownership," the words "within any State or Territory."

In line 20, page 2, the expression "lots and farms" is used, while elsewhere in the bill the expression for describing the land is "farms and parcels." To correct this discrepancy and also to make it entirely clear that the purpose of the last sentence of the bill, lines 19 to 21, page 2, is that the United States shall act only in a representative capacity and not as a principal, and that any contracts for the sale of the improved lands are to be made for the benefit of the owner thereof, who has advanced the price of their reclamation or improvement, I suggest that the said last sentence be amended to read:

"All contracts for the purchase of farms and parcels shall be made for, and the moneys due thereunder shall be payable to, the owner or owners of the land or their assigns."

With these slight changes I recommend the passage of this bill.

Cordially, yours,

(Signed.) FRANKLIN K. LANE,
Secretary.

Hon. REED SMOOT,
Chairman Committee on Public Lands,
United States Senate.

[Extract from annual report of the Secretary of the Interior for 1919.]

"We must go forward with the development of natural resources as we have done for the past three centuries. And we must recognize at the outset that conditions have changed with the depletion of the public domain to the point where it offers comparatively little in the way of cultivable lands.

"We have now to deal principally with lands in private ownership. This calls for a new point of view, and for the application of a somewhat different principle than that which has governed our reclamation policy heretofore. Moreover, reclamation is no longer an affair of one section of the United States. The day has come when it must be nationalized and extended to all parts of the Republic.

"To the deserts of the West we have brought the creative touch of water, and we must find a way to go on with this work. But it is of equal importance that we should liberate rich areas now held in bondage by the swamp, convert millions of acres of idle cut-over lands to profitable use, and raise from the dead the once vigorous agricultural life of our abandoned farms.

"One more fundamental consideration—we have outlived our day of small things. Whether we would or not, we are compelled by the inexorable law of necessity arising out of existing physical conditions to cooperate, to work together, and to employ large-scale operations and on this principle we should move: Not what the Government can do for the people, but what the people can do for themselves under the intelligent and kindly leadership of the Government.

"We have an instrument at hand in the Reclamation Service which has dealt with every phase of the problem which now confronts us, and with such high average success as to command the entire confidence of Congress and the country. It has turned rivers out of their natural beds, reared the highest dams in existence, transported water long distances by every form of canal, conduit, and tunnel; installed electric power plants, cleared land, provided drainage systems, constructed highways and even railroads, platted town sites, and erected buildings of various sorts. In this experience, obtained under a variety of physical and climatic conditions, it has developed a body of trained men equal to any constructive task which may be assigned to it in connection with reclamation and settlement in any part of the country."

LANDS IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. SMOOT. From the Committee on Public Lands I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 8084) granting to certain claimants the preferential right to purchase certain alleged public lands in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill just reported by the Senator from Utah. A similar bill passed the Senate at the last session.

Mr. BORAH. I do not desire to object, but I wish the Senator would state the object of the bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. The bill proposes to give a preferential right to certain persons to purchase certain areas of alleged public lands in the State of Arkansas, the lands being a portion of what are known as the "sunk land" areas. Titles to these lands were acquired by the preferential purchasers designated in the bill under State law, the Interior Department having in two formal opinions disavowed any claim of title to the lands. Subsequently, however, the Interior Department asserted title to the lands, and a decree or opinion was rendered that the legal title to the lands was in the Government. In the meantime, however, and under the title acquired from the State the preferential purchasers had drained the lands, cleared and improved them, and placed them in a high state of cultivation. This bill simply proposes to give them the right to purchase at a nominal sum the lands designated. As I have stated, a similar bill has previously passed the Senate during the last session, but reached the House too late for consideration there.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That G. W. House, Oliver Douglas, J. W. Rhodes, W. K. Harrison, and J. W. Rhodes, jr., named in the decree of the chancery court of Mississippi County, Ark., Osceola district, at the February, 1913, term thereof, as the same appears in the records of said court, book 7, pages 43 to 54, inclusive, their heirs, administrators, or assigns, are hereby granted a preferential right at any time within 90 days after the passage of this act and the filing of the plats of said corrected survey in the United States land office in Little Rock, Ark., to purchase said lands of the United States and to pay for the same at the rate of $1.25 per acre in accordance with the divisions and allotments to said person or persons, respectively, named in said decree: Provided, however, That if the parcel of land awarded to said person or persons in such decree does not conform to the legal description of lands as returned by the corrected survey, then the person to whom the major portion of any legal subdivision was awarded by said decree may purchase all of such subdivision from the United States at the price herein named, and said purchase shall be in trust for that portion of land awarded under said decree to the person named therein, his heirs or grantees, and such purchaser, upon the issuance of said patent to him, shall forthwith convey to said cestui qui trust such land as was awarded by the terms of said decree to said person upon payment by said cestui qui trust of his proportionate part of the purchase price and entry fees for the same.

Said lands herein authorized to be purchased are all that part of said sections 29, 30, 31, and 32, township 11 north, range 10 east, fifth principal meridian, Mississippi County, Ark., not included as land in the survey made in February, 1846, which was designated upon the township plat approved December 23, 1846, as "Goldens Lake."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask that the report of the House Committee on the Public Lands on the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The report is as follows:

[House Report No. 346, Sixty-sixth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred H. R. 8084, a bill affecting certain lands in Mississippi County, Ark., report the same with certain amendments, with a recommendation that as amended it do pass.

Amendment No. 1: Strike out the preamble.

Amendment No. 2: Strike out line 3, page 2, and insert: "That G. W. House, Oliver Douglas, J. W. Rhodes, W. K. Harrison, and J. W. Rhodes, jr., named in the decree of the chancery court of Mississippi County, Ark., Osceola district, at the February, 1913, term thereof, as the same appears in the records of said court, book 7, pages 43 to 54, inclusive, their."

Amendment No. 3: On page 3, lines 17 and 18, strike out the language following "1846" and insert "which was designated upon the township plat approved December 23, 1846, as 'Goldens Lake.'"

The committee having carefully considered other suggested amendments in the report of the Secretary of the Interior, thought it unwise to accept those amendments.

The committee was especially moved to reject the suggestion of $6 an acre, because of additional expense that had been incurred by those in whose behalf this bill was introduced, in agreeing with would-be homesteaders on these lands.

These lands, as it appears from the report of the Department of the Interior, were by the present claimants taken possession of, drained, and improved in good faith. The Government had repeatedly disclaimed any title to or interest in them. These lands, by reason of drainage and other improvements made by these parties by whom this measure is proposed, are now valuable.

There are no conflicting or adverse claimants. Mr. A. J. Tellier, assistant to the Attorney General, who has had charge of the litigation of the Government affecting these lands, recommends that this measure pass. It is but an act of simple justice.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior is herewith printed as a part of this report:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, August 21, 1919.

Hon. N. J. SINNOTT,
Chairman Committee on the Public Lands,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. SINNOTT: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your request of August 2, 1919, for a report upon H. R. 8084, introduced by Hon. T. H. CARAWAY, July 31, 1919, entitled "A bill granting to certain claimants the preferential right to purchase certain alleged public lands in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes."

The particular lands referred to in the bill comprise an area of 1,099.51 acres that was shown upon the official plat of township 11 north, range 10 east, fifth principal meridian, Arkansas, approved December 23, 1846, as a portion of a meandered lake designated "Golden Lake." The Land Department rendered a decision on August 2, 1917, asserting title on behalf of the Government to the lands within the so-called Goldens Lake area and directed the survey thereof. The lands have since been surveyed and the area which is described in H. R. 8084 is now shown as portions of sections 29, 30, 31, and 32 upon a supplemental plat of township north, range 10 east, approved February 7, 1919.

H. R. 8084 appears with a few exceptions to be similar to bills H. R. 13400 and S. 5492 which were introduced in the House of Representatives and in the Senate during the third session of the Sixty-fifth Congress by Hon. JOHN E. RAKER and Hon. JOE T. ROBINSON, respectively. On January 7, 1919, and February 12, 1919, I submitted reports upon those bills to the chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands and to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Public Lands. I am inclosing herewith copies of said reports.

At the time that I reported upon H. R. 13400 I was advised by the Commissioner of the General Land Office that certain of the parties for whose relief the bill was introduced had represented to him that there were then no bona fide settlers upon the lands described in the bill. In order that the interests of all parties should be duly safeguarded, however, it was suggested that the following worded proviso be inserted:

"Provided, however, That this act shall not be applicable to any lands embraced within valid homestead entries heretofore made, or upon which any valid settlement had been made, and which at the date of the passage of this act was being maintained and perfected pursuant to law; but the terms of this proviso shall not continue to be applicable to any entry or settlement claim, with reference to which the entryman or settler shall hereafter fail to comply with the law under which said entry or settlement claim was made; and further."

(See committee printed Reports Nos. 1007 and 721 on H. R. 13400 and S. 5492, Sixty-fifth Congress, third session, which remained unenacted when Congress adjourned on Mar. 4, 1919.)

With reference to this proposed legislation, I will state that I still adhere to what I said in my previous reports; that is, that I am not opposed to the enactment of the legislation, provided that the rights of bona fide settlers, if there be any, are properly safeguarded. After the introduction of the above referred to bills during the Sixty-fifth Congress, a number of petitions were received by the Land Department from persons who alleged that they had endeavored to settle upon the lands that were to be affected by the proposed legislation, and they strenuously protested against its passage. Copies of these protests were submitted by me to the Senate Public Lands Committee.

The price which the lands were to be sold for, according to the provisions of H. R. 13400 and S. 5492, was fixed at $6 per acre. The price has been placed at $1.25 per acre in the present bill. It was my understanding at the time that I submitted my previous reports that the persons for whose benefit the proposed legislation was introduced were willing to pay what the lands would be reasonably worth at the present time if they had not been improved. It appeared at that time that $6 per acre was probably a reasonable price. The price fixed in the present bill appears to be somewhat arbitrary without taking into consideration the actual value of the lands. I am not aware of any reason why the prospective purchasers should not be required to pay at least the amount incorporated in the original bills.

It is stated in the last paragraph of H. R. 8084 that the lands authorized to be purchased are all of those portions of sections 29, 30, 31, and 32, township 11 north, range 10 east, Arkansas, that were not included as land in the survey made during February, 1846. I desire to call to your attention the fact that portions of sections 29 and 30 were shown upon the plat approved December 23, 1846, as being within the area of "Round Lake." An act of Congress (Private No. 48, 65th Cong., 3d sess.) was approved March 4, 1919, authorizing the Government to sell the so-called Round Lake area at $12.35 per acre. It is obvious that the present bill does not propose to embrace any lands within the so-called Round Lake area. I suggest, therefore, that after the words, "in February, 1846," line 17, page 3, the words, "and approved December 23, 1846," be stricken out and that the following words be inserted: "which was designated upon the township plat approved December 23, 1846, as 'Golden Lake.'"

As the plats of the corrected survey have not yet been filed, to avoid ambiguity and misunderstanding section 1 should be changed so as to provide for the exercise of the preferential right at any time within 90 days after the passage of the act and the filing of the plats of the corrected survey in the United States local land office at Little Rock, Ark.

In this connection your attention is invited to my report of July 21, 1919 (copy inclosed), on S. 2231, which is a general bill that would cover not only the case of Golden Lake, but other similar cases in the State of Arkansas. The department has heretofore expressed a preference for the more general legislation as represented by said S. 2231. Since my report on that bill, however, attorneys representing practically all of the interested parties, both settlers and riparian owners in the Golden Lake area, have conferred with the Land Department and have stated that a compromise agreement has been reached between the riparian claimants and the settlers as to the lands constituting the subject matter of this bill (H. R. 8084), while the riparian claimants to the balance of the Golden Lake area do not contemplate receiving any benefits from any legislation, either general or special, as represented by the pending bills herein referred to, but will, rather, depend entirely on opposing the Government's claims to the lands in question in suits that will be brought in the Federal court to quiet the title to the Goldens Lake area in the Government. Under these circumstances this bill (H. R. 8084) will doubtless serve to dispose of the Goldens Lake area as completely as would a general bill, and therefore this department will interpose no objection thereto if amended as herein suggested.

Cordially, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 7, 1919.

Hon. SCOTT FERRIS,
Chairman of the Committee on the Public Lands,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. FERRIS: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your request of December 17, 1918, for report upon H. R. 13400, introduced by Hon. JOHN E. RAKER, December 14, 1918, entitled "A bill granting to certain claimants a preference right to purchase certain public lands in the State of Arkansas."

The particular lands referred to in the bill comprise an area of approximately 1,100 acres that was shown upon the official plat of township 11 north, range 10 east, fifth principal meridian Arkansas, approved December 23, 1846, as a portion of a meandered lake designated "Golden Lake." If the said area had been surveyed, it would have comprised portions of sections 29, 30, 31, and 32 of that township.

The so-called Golden Lake area is one of a number of similar so-called lake areas situated in the northeastern part of Arkansas which have been involved in cases in which the Government has asserted title to the lands, on the ground that said areas were lands in place at the dates of the original surveys and were erroneously or fraudulently meandered as bodies of water, when they should have been surveyed as portions of the public domain. The Land Department rendered a decision August 2, 1917, in which it held that the title to the land within the area of so-called "Golden Lake" is vested in the Government. The lands have since been surveyed. The entire area embraces approximately 5,000 acres situated in townships 10 and 11 north, ranges 9 and 10 east.

The above-referred-to bill, if enacted, will affect that portion of the so-called lake area which is situated in township 11 north, range 10 east.

Certain of the so-called lake areas, the title to which has been asserted by the Land Department decisions, have been involved in suits to quiet title instituted on behalf of the Government against the alleged riparian owners and others who were claiming adversely to it. Some of said suits have been decided in favor of the Government and others are still pending. One of the suits was taken to the United States Supreme Court and a decision favorable to the United States was rendered by that court November 5, 1917. (Lee Wilson & Co. v. United States, 245 U. S., 24.) The so-called Golden Lake area has not been involved in any of the above-referred-to suits.

It seems that the purpose of H. R. 13400 is to grant to the persons specifically named in the bill a preferential right to purchase from the Government the unsurveyed lands in sections 29, 30, 31, and 32, township 11 north, range 10 east, at $6 per acre.

I am advised that said parties acquired the title to the adjoining surveyed lands many years ago, in fact, before the Land Department took steps to assert title to any of the erroneously meandered areas in northeastern Arkansas; that, being in doubt as to whether the unsurveyed lands belonged to them or to the Government, they upon two separate occasions endeavored to ascertain the attitude of the Land Department with reference thereto, whereupon opinions were rendered by two former Secretaries of the Interior to the effect that the Government had no interest in or title to any unsurveyed lands in Arkansas which had been meandered as sunk lands or lakes; they, relying upon those opinions, the riparian claimants, in good faith, believing that they had a valid title, took possession of certain of the lands within the so-called "Golden Lake area" and proceeded to clear and drain them at their own expense and have since cultivated them together with the lands included within their private holdings; that before being drained the lands were of little value, but that they have since become greatly enhanced in value.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office advises me that while an actual appraisal of the lands has not been made by him, yet he is of the opinion that the price fixed in the bill probably represents approximately what the lands would be reasonably worth if they had not been drained and otherwise improved at the expense of the riparian claimants. The Commissioner of the General Land Office further advises me that the greater portions of the so-called lake area are embraced within claims initiated by settlers who are claiming under the homestead laws; that certain of the parties for whose relief H. R. 13400 has been introduced have represented to him that there are no bona fide settlers upon the lands described in said bill, and that consequently their equities, which have in good faith been established, should be entitled to due consideration to the extent that they should be awarded a preference right to purchase the lands.

While the riparian claimants to the so-called lake areas in northeastern Arkansas doubtless had reason to suppose that they had valid title to those areas, yet it subsequently developed that they had no title that could be recognized by the courts, and, not being qualified to make entry under the public-land laws, the Land Department can not grant them relief.

It is apparent that certain of the owners of surveyed lands adjoining that portion of so-called Golden Lake which is situated in township 11 north, range 10 east, have equities that ought to be recognized to the extent that they should be awarded to preferential right to purchase the lands at a reasonable price. Congress alone has the authority to say how the public lands should be disposed of. It, therefore, seems to be a subject for appropriate legislation. See the concluding paragraph in the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Lee Wilson & Co. v. United States.

I therefore approve of the purpose sought to be accomplished by this bill, but in order to safeguard the rights of persons that may have settled upon the lands pursuant to the homestead laws with the intention of entering the same when the lands shall be made subject to entry, if there be any such persons, I have to suggest that the following be inserted as a new proviso after the word "decree," line 10, page 2, of the bill as now drafted.

"Provided, however, That this act shall not be applicable to any lands embraced within any valid homestead entry heretofore made, or upon which any valid settlement had been made and which at the date of the passage of this act was being maintained and perfected pursuant to law; but the terms of this proviso shall not continue to be applicable to any entry or settlement claim with reference to which the entryman or settler shall hereafter fail to comply with the law under which said entry or settlement claim was made; and further."

If your committee is not satisfied as to the sufficiency of the price fixed in the bill it might be further amended by providing that the persons named should be permitted to buy the land at the appraised value thereof, exclusive of any added value resulting from drainage or improvements.

Cordially, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE,
Secretary.

—

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, February 12, 1919.

Hon. HENRY L. MYERS,
Chairman Committee on Public Lands,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a request, dated February 1, 1919, for a report upon S. 5492, introduced January 31, 1919, by Hon. JOE T. ROBINSON, which proposes to grant to certain claimants a preference right to purchase certain public lands in the State of Arkansas.

S. 5492 appears to be a companion bill to H. R. 13400, which was introduced during the present session of the Sixty-fifth Congress by Hon. JOHN E. RAKER, December 14, 1918. On January 7, 1919, I submitted a report upon that bill to the chairman of the House Committee on the Public Lands, in which I set forth my attitude relative thereto. I am inclosing herewith a copy of my report of January 7, 1919.

At the time that the report was made upon the House bill I was advised by the Commissioner of the General Land Office that certain of the parties for whose relief the bill was introduced had represented to him that there were then no bona fide settlers upon the lands described in the bill. In order that the interests of all parties should be duly safeguarded, it was suggested in the report that the following worded proviso be inserted after the word "decree," line 10, page 2, of the bill as drafted: "Provided, however, That this act shall not be applicable to any lands embraced within any valid homestead entry heretofore made or upon which any valid settlement had been made and which at the date of the passage of this act was being maintained and perfected pursuant to law; but the terms of this proviso shall not continue to be applicable to any entry or settlement claim with reference to which the entryman or settler shall hereafter fail to comply with the law under which said entry or settlement claim was made; and further."

On January 29, 1919, H. R. 13400 was committed to the Committee of the Whole House and ordered to be printed in the form in which it was originally drafted. A printed report (No. 1007, 65th Cong., 3d sess.) was submitted on behalf of the House Public Lands Committee by Mr. TILLMAN, in which the greater portion of my report of January 7, 1919, was published verbatim. That portion of my report, however, which suggested the insertion of the above-quoted proviso was omitted.

On January 25, 1919, T. E. Allyn, attorney at law, Marked Tree, Ark., addressed a letter to the President with which he inclosed a petition executed January 23, 1919, by a so-called settlers' association composed of persons who alleged that they had settled upon the lands within the Golden Lake area; a petition signed by the settlers individually; and a petition signed by persons who alleged that they had endeavored to settle upon the particular lands that will be affected by H. R. 13400 (S. 5492) if enacted. The petitioners strenuously protested against the enactment of the bill. The correspondence was referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office and he has directed that an investigation be made with the view of ascertaining the facts relative to the claim asserted by the petitioners. I am inclosing herewith copies of the petitions protesting against the proposed legislation.

While I approve of the purpose sought to be accomplished by S. 5492, yet in view of the protests that have been submitted with reference to this proposed legislation, I am convinced that the rights of persons that may have settled upon the lands pursuant to the homestead laws with the intention of entering the same when the lands shall be made subject to entry, if there be any such persons, should be safeguarded and I am strongly of the opinion, therefore, that the proviso suggested by me in my report of January 7, 1919, to the chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands, ought to be inserted.

Cordially, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary.

—

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, July 21, 1919.

Hon. REED SMOOT,
Chairman of Committee on Public Lands,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a request, dated July 1, 1919, for a report upon S. 2231, introduced June 23 (calendar day, June 24), 1919, by Hon. JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, entitled "A bill granting to certain claimants the preference right to purchase unappropriated public lands in the State of Arkansas."

The proposed legislation contained in S. 2231 had its inception during the third session of the Sixty-fifth Congress. During that session a bill (S. 5566) was introduced by Senator ROBINSON authorizing the Department of the Interior to sell an unsurveyed area, locally known as "Round Lake," situated in Mississippi County, Ark., to certain riparian claimants thereof, who alleged that they had, under the belief that they were the owners of said area, in good faith drained and otherwise improved the lands. Inasmuch as that bill was in the nature of special legislation, pertaining only to that particular area, it was mentioned in the report which was submitted at the request of the Senate Public Lands Committee that there were doubtless other areas similarly circumstanced in the State of Arkansas, and it was suggested, therefore, that a bill more in the nature of general legislation be substituted in order that relief might be extended to claimants of such areas where they could show that they are entitled to receive it. Subsequently during the same session other bills, S. 5492 and S. 5611, were introduced proposing to grant similar relief to riparian claimants of certain lands within an area locally known as "Golden Lake," also situated in Mississippi County, Ark. S. 5566 was approved March 4, 1919 (Private 48). The other bills remained on the calendar when Congress adjourned.

It appears that when the original surveys were made in Arkansas many years ago numerous areas were meandered as lakes and rivers. Within recent years a number of cases have been presented to the Land Department, as a result of which decisions were rendered to the effect that the surveys were in many instances erroneous or fraudulent. The title to areas that had been shown on the official plats as water-covered areas which were involved in those cases is still vested in the United States. Other cases of similar character are being constantly presented. A number of suits have been instituted on behalf of the Government against alleged riparian owners, and others, claiming adversely to it, with a view to quieting title to certain of the so-called lake areas, and some of said suits have been decided in favor of the Government, and others are still pending. Lee Wilson & Co. v. United States (245 U. S., 24) is the leading case on the subject.

I am advised that in certain instances persons acquired title years ago to some of the originally surveyed lands adjoining the erroneously meandered areas; in fact, before the Land Department took steps to assert title to the unsurveyed lands; that, being in doubt as to whether the unsurveyed lands belonged to them or to the Government, they, upon two separate occasions, endeavored to ascertain the attitude of the Land Department with reference thereto, whereupon opinions were rendered by two former Secretaries of the Interior to the effect that the Government had no interest in or title to such meandered areas in the State of Arkansas; that, relying upon those opinions, they, in good faith, believing that they had valid titles, took possession of certain of the unsurveyed lands shown on the plats as lakes and rivers, and drained and cleared them at their own expense and have since cultivated them, together with the lands included within their plantation; that before being drained the lands were of little value, but that they have in some instances now been reduced to a high state of cultivation and have become quite valuable; that in a few cases buildings have been constructed by riparian claimants upon unsurveyed lands, the title to which has been asserted by the Government.

I am also advised that a few years ago certain prospective entrymen claimed that the so-called lake and stream areas constituted public lands and attempted to take possession of them; that in some cases said prospective entrymen were ejected by riparian claimants; that other cases are being presented where persons are attempting to settle upon meandered stream areas, the title to which is in doubt, and with reference to which the Land Department has not yet had an opportunity of rendering decisions. Numerous protests against the enactment of any legislation that will grant preference rights to riparian claimants are being received.

While some of the riparian claimants to so-called lake areas in Arkansas doubtless supposed in good faith that they had title to those areas, yet it subsequently developed that they had no title that could be recognized by the courts, and not being qualified to make entry under the public land laws, they can not obtain relief through the Land Department. There are still other cases where the validity of their claims to unsurveyed lands within meandered lake and stream areas situated within their holdings is uncertain. Under the circumstances it appears to be only equitable that their claims be accorded attention to the extent that they be granted preferential rights to purchase the lands at a reasonable price where they can show that, prior to the initiation of valid claims by qualified homestead settlers, they have in good faith taken possession of the lands and have placed valuable improvements upon or reduced them to cultivation. The existing public land laws are inadequate to afford relief in such instances.

Inasmuch as Congress alone has the authority to say how the public lands shall be disposed of, this seems to be an appropriate subject for legislation. (See concluding paragraph in the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Lee Wilson & Co. v. United States, 245 U. S., 24.) Furthermore, I am of the opinion that S. 2231 is sufficiently broad in its scope to enable the Land Department to administer its provisions in such manner that the interests of all parties, including homestead claimants, be properly safeguarded. I therefore approve of the purpose sought to be accomplished by the bill, and have the honor to recommend that it be enacted.

Cordially, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HITCHCOCK:

A bill (S. 3681) to amend section 848, chapter 16, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to witness fees; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A bill (S. 3682) to regulate the filling of vacancies in the Corps of Cadets at the United States Military Academy not otherwise provided for by existing law, and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 3683) to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LODGE:

A bill (S. 3684) for the repair, alteration, etc., of the Federal Building at Boston, Mass.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. ELKINS:

A bill (S. 3685) for the relief of Bessie Reese; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 3686) to prevent deceit and profiteering that result from the unrevealed presence of substitutes for virgin wool in woven fabrics purporting to contain wool, and in garments or articles of apparel made therefrom, manufactured in any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or transported or intended to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce, and providing penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. HARRIS:

A bill (S. 3687) providing for an appropriation of $25,000 to be used by the Department of Agriculture for the development of the peanut industry; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

PURCHASE OF LIBERTY BONDS.

Mr. KING. I introduce a bill and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. Perhaps the bill ought to go to the Committee on Finance; and if so, I have no objection to that reference being made.

The bill (S. 3680) to provide for the purchase and redemption of Liberty bonds in denominations of $50 and $100 was read twice by its title.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the bill should go to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that whole subject matter is before the Committee on Finance, and the bill ought to go to that committee.

Mr. KING. Then, I ask that the bill be so referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE SHIPPING BOARD.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3451) authorizing the United States Shipping Board to adjust the equitable claims of wooden-ship builders arising out of the prosecution of the war, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McNARY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3451) authorizing the United States Shipping Board to adjust the equitable claims of wooden-ship builders arising out of the prosecution of the war, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

WATER SUPPLY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. SWANSON. I submit an amendment to the bill (H. R. 1713) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to appoint a commission to investigate and report upon the available sources of water supply for the District of Columbia, which is now on the calendar. I ask that the proposed amendment be read and lie on the table, to be considered when the bill is taken up.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the proposed amendment.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. SWANSON to the bill (H. R. 1713) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to appoint a commission to investigate and report upon the available sources of the water supply for the District of Columbia: In line 12, after the comma following the word "commission," insert the following: "the Alexandria County, Va., suburbs of the city of Washington lying south of the Potomac River."

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I wish to say in connection with the amendment that the bill has passed the House providing for an investigation as to additional sources of water supply for Washington, including the suburbs of Washington north of the Potomac River. The amendment is to include Alexandria County, Va., in the scope of the investigation to be reported upon by the commission created to make a survey or surveys for Washington and its suburbs and to accord to the suburbs across the Potomac the same privileges as are extended to the suburbs north of Washington when the report of the commission is submitted for the consideration of Congress in the future.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the matter?

Mr. SWANSON. No; I have simply stated what the amendment proposes and that I desire to have it pending for consideration when the bill referred to is taken up.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will lie on the table and be printed.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to give written notice of an amendment of the rules, which I ask to have read.

The Reading Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SHEPPARD. I hereby give notice that I shall move to amend Rule XXV, Standing Rules of the Senate, by changing the paragraph therein reading as follows:

"A Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, to consist of 12 Senators," so as hereafter to read: "A Committee on Pacific Islands, Porto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, to consist of 12 Senators."

The purpose of the amendment is to include the recently acquired Virgin Islands within the jurisdiction of the committee mentioned.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, Howard University, in the District of Columbia, is partially maintained by appropriations from the Treasury of the United States. I have had handed to me one of the books of the library of Howard University. I notice that the book is by Albert Rhys Williams. The title of it is "Seventy-six Questions and Answers on the Bolsheviks and Soviets." I simply rise at this time to express my opinion of this work and also to express the hope that if Howard University intends to keep such literature in their library to be read by the students attending that university they will not ask for future appropriations from the Treasury of the United States.

I understand that the book is being used not only by the students but by some of the professors of the university. I think it would be a very good thing, if I had the time, to read some of the statements in it, but I have not the time this morning. I simply rise at this time to give notice that if such literature as that is to be used in Howard University, as far as I am concerned, I shall never vote for the appropriation of another dollar for the institution.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah if this Albert Rhys Williams is the same Williams who held a meeting in Washington some year and a half ago, which meeting was the occasion for a resolution for the investigation of Bolshevism?

Mr. SMOOT. I am not positive whether he is or not, but I will say to the Senator that I think he is.

TREATY OF PEACE WITH GERMANY.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask leave to read a letter received from the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts and my reply to it. It is signed by Charles Sumner Bird, R. M. Washburn, Harcourt Amory, jr., Gaspar G. Bacon, George P. Drury, Walter H. Foster, George v. L. Meyer, B. Loring Young, and reads, as far as I am concerned, as follows:

In the matter of the league of nations, the executive committee of the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts, at a meeting January 6, 1920, herewith respectfully and unanimously urges upon the President and his representatives in the Senate to recede from their positions and to make such concessions as will enable the immediate ratification of the treaty.

My reply, Mr. President, is as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN RELATIONS,
January 8, 1920.

Mr. R. M. WASHBURN,
Vice President Roosevelt Club,
89 State Street, Boston, Mass.

DEAR SIR: I acknowledge receipt of your letter signed by the members of your executive committee in which they unanimously urge the President and his representatives in the Senate to make such concessions as will enable the immediate ratification of the treaty.

In reply I beg to assure you that Democratic Senators generally, with probably two or three exceptions, are ready to make concessions and meet Republican supporters of the treaty halfway in an honorable compromise of differences. I beg to say, however, that so far as can be ascertained, there are not over a dozen or fifteen Republican Senators who have shown any desire to take this course. The others continue to hold with Senator LODGE that the resolution which he presented and which received only 41 votes represents an irreducible minimum in treaty ratification so far as they are concerned.

On a reasonable compromise of existing differences on reservations I feel justified in saying that of the 64 votes necessary, the Democratic Senators will be able to furnish more than two-thirds of the number.

Yours, very sincerely, G. M. HITCHCOCK.

Mr. SMOOT. From whom is the letter?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I may say furthermore that at the bottom of the letter addressed to me the following resolution is given as having been addressed to Senator LODGE and Senator WALSH of Massachusetts:

The following action was taken by the members of the club by an affirmative vote of 542 to 92:

"Moved: In the matter of the proposed league of nations, in the interest of an agreement and an immediate ratification, that the Roosevelt Club herewith respectfully urges upon the Hon. HENRY CABOT LODGE and the Hon. DAVID I. WALSH, Senators from Massachusetts, such concessions as may be made consistent with the so-called Americanization of the covenant and the safety of the people of the United States."

R. M. WASHBURN, Vice President.

Did the Senator from Utah ask me a question?

Mr. SMOOT. I did ask the Senator who was the author of the letter, but I take it for granted that the writer of the letter is the person whose name has just been given by the Senator.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. It is from the eight members of the executive committee of the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts.

THE HOUSING CORPORATION.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, on yesterday there was a news item in both the Post and the Star to the effect that the chairman of the Housing Corporation was protesting against the recommendation made by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds that the rates of board should be increased at the Government dormitories. As a member of that committee I desire to state that the committee did not make a recommendation that the rates of board should be increased from $45 to $50.50 per month, nor did the committee make a recommendation that any increase whatever should be made. I think the chairman of the Housing Corporation is just a little too zealous and too eager in that matter, desiring to bring into question the action of the committee on this particular point.

The committee did report in its findings of fact that if 5 per cent interest was charged on the investment at its salvage value it would require a raise of $5.50 per month, but the committee most emphatically refused to make a recommendation that such raise be made, and the report does not carry with it any such recommendation.

I desire in this connection to offer for the RECORD the article which appeared in the Star, and also a letter which I addressed to Mrs. Harlean James, of the Government dormitories, on the 6th instant, and a letter which I addressed to Mr. Sherman, president of the United States Housing Corporation, on the 7th instant, in which I set forth that the committee did not entertain the view that the rate of board should be increased, that I emphatically opposed the idea before the committee, and I felt confident that a majority of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds entertain similar views to myself upon that subject. The committee refused to ask for the raise, and that is why no such recommendation was embraced with other recommendations made by the committee.

I ask that my letter addressed to Mrs. James, the article appearing in the Evening Star, and my letter to Mr. Sherman be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., January 6, 1920.

MRS. HARLEAN JAMES,
Manager Government Hotels, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MRS. JAMES: It having come to my notice that you are probably contemplating making an advance of $5.50 per month in the charge for board to be paid by the young ladies domiciled at the Government hotels, I beg most respectfully, as a member of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to advise that in the report made by the committee neither the subcommittee nor the committee recommended such advance. In the first draft of the report of the subcommittee it was suggested by one member of the committee that the advance be recommended, but after a consideration of this suggestion the recommendation that an advance be made was stricken from the report. I stated to my associate members of the committee that I was opposed to the price of rooms and meals being advanced above $45 per month, and I feel reasonably sure that a majority of the committee entertained the same views upon this subject. I trust that you do not contemplate making the raise and that my information is incorrect. Kindly advise me at your early convenience.

Most respectfully,
PARK TRAMMELL.

[From the Washington Star, Jan. 7, 1920.]

OPPOSES ROOM RATE RAISE—HOUSING CORPORATION HEAD WRITES OF DORMITORY SITUATION.

Opposition to an increase in the rates charged at the Government dormitories for woman Government employees on the Union Station Plaza was voiced in a letter sent to Chairman FERNALD, of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, by L. K. Sherman, president of the United States Housing Corporation. The Public Buildings and Grounds Committee recently reported to the Senate that the rate should be raised from $45 to $50 in order to prevent the Government from losing money on the investment.

Until the salaries of the Government employees are "made commensurate with expenses," Mr. Sherman wrote, "the Government would be in a poor business to underpay its employees with one hand and collect full commercial rates from them with the other."

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., January 7, 1920.

Mr. L. K. SHERMAN,
President United States Housing Corporation,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Acknowledging receipt of a copy of your letter to Hon. BERT M. FERNALD, chairman Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, I beg to advise that the committee did not recommend that the board for girls at the Government hotels be increased $5.50 per month. If you will read the report you will find that it contains no recommendation of this character. I am very much opposed to any raise being made, as indicated by copy of my letter to Mrs. Harlean James of January 6, hereto attached.

Very respectfully,
PARK TRAMMELL.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Florida a question. An investigation was had by the Senate some months ago, and it was, as I recall, unanimously recommended by the committee that the buildings on the Plaza be not completed. Instead of complying with that recommendation the buildings were completed. Another investigation has been had, and I understand the last investigation resulted in a recommendation that the corporation should be wound up or that its functions should cease, and that the administration of the work of the organization should devolve upon some other instrumentality of the Government.

Can the Senator tell me what is the reason why the recommendations of the committee were not carried into effect, and what is the reason why this organization, which has been so extravagant and wasteful, perpetuates itself and spends very much of its time in assailing, directly or indirectly, Members of the Senate and the House?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I am heartily in sympathy with the suggestion, as I gather it, of the Senator from Utah, but to go into detail in regard to the matter would require considerable discussion. Of course, the reason which the Housing Corporation would give for not discontinuing the work would be that the bill passed only the Senate and went to the House, but did not receive a favorable report from the House committee. Therefore the Housing Corporation continued its operations and its expenditures, a great many of which I think were very useless and very wasteful of the public funds. I thought at the time that the work which had not progressed to a very great extent should have been discontinued. The committee has now made the recommendation that the Housing Corporation be dissolved and that its functions be transferred to some other department, and I think the chairman of the committee will offer a bill upon that subject at a very early date.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article on the constitutionality of the league of nations, by Frederick E. Kip, of Montclair, N. J.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

LEAGUE OF NATIONS COVENANT ILLEGALLY CHANGES THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

[By Frederic E. Kip, Montclair, N. J.]

"The administration Senators and some of the newspapers are advocating a compromise on the peace treaty when it is again brought before the Senate.

"Is it a compromise of American independence they desire?

"Do they not know that the original treaty of Versailles illegally and detrimentally changes the form of government of the United States and vitiates the Constitution thereof?

"In order to better understand this important subject it might be well to revert to the making of the Constitution and its provisions.

"England has no written constitution; therefore all things are possible to the English Government, as nothing is forbidden to it. The Constitution of the United States is just the reverse. It is a written Constitution, and all things not granted by this written document are forbidden. When we won our independence after the War of the Revolution we existed from 1782 to 1787 as a Federation of States. The powers were so limited and the conditions became so chaotic that George Washington, Alexander Hamilton, and other great minds of that time plainly stated that unless we could have a Federal Government with increased powers the then existing form of government was doomed to dismal failure. The Constitution was thereupon drawn and finally adopted in 1789, and its different articles stated the functions that the Federal United States Government could perform, and to be absolutely sure that all rights not given in the written Constitution were reserved to the original authority—the Colonies or States—they make doubly sure thereof by adding Article X to the Constitution, reading as follows:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people.

"All forms of government previous to the American Republic had been democratic (rule of the masses) or autocratic (rule of the kings), and all, as far as the uplift of humanity was concerned, had been failures.

"Our forefathers and the framers of our Constitution had one great cardinal idea in view in the formation of our Federal Government, namely, because of these previous failures they must create a new and different government from any in the past, and this they did by our present form of government, viz, a government of representatives of the people, and they then put such checks upon these representatives as, in their opinion, would forever prevent a dictator, an autocrat, an emperor, or a king becoming the ruler of the new Republic. This was their one great fear, and they fortified the Constitution by every safeguard which they could possibly create and by every check which they could devise to make such a calamity impossible. In addition to the history of the forming of the Federal Government, a study of the functions of our Government itself proves this conclusively.

"Congressmen are elected for two years, Senators for six—the Senate checking any sudden impulse of the people—the President is elected for four years.

"The legislative branch of the Government (Congress) passes legislation. There is a check upon it by the veto of the President. If his veto is specially obnoxious, there is a check on him by Congress passing over his veto by a two-thirds affirmative vote. The laws when finally passed by the legislative and executive branches can again be checked, if unconstitutional, by a decree of the Supreme Court.

"Again, in the functions of a treaty, a check is placed upon the Executive by the provision that he shall have power only 'by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.' Again, you will note this is a two-thirds affirmative check, and the wisdom of this check has been amply justified in the recent action of the Senate on the un-American treaty of Versailles.

"Now (and here comes the vital attack on the foundation of our Government itself), does not the administration, and do not these administration Senators and these newspapers, know that the original 'treaty of Versailles' (by a method directly contrary to the law of our land) changes our form of government and vitiates the greatest document for the uplift of humanity that the world has ever known, namely, the Constitution of the United States?

"Article 10 of the league of nations covenant, calling upon the United States to guarantee, for all time, the present territorial integrity of every nation all over the world, is atrocious in the extreme and in all conscience is bad enough, but bad as that is and bad as other parts of this un-American treaty are, there is nothing quite so appalling as the attempt of this treaty (contrary to the law of our land) to create in the Government of the United States a new governmental function in the person of a representative to sit in the 'league of nations' with power to vote and bind the United States.

"To-day there is one power and one power only that by its vote can bind the United States and that power is the representatives of the people themselves, viz, the Congress; the President can not bind the United States (except by special authority from Congress). The ambassadors, consuls, ministers, or other officers can not bind the United States under the Constitution.

"The power of the Congress, by its vote to bind the United States, it derives from its original possessors (viz, the States and the people) through their Constitution, and therefore there is no legal means (other than the method provided for by the States and the people themselves in their Constitution) that can take this power from the Congress and give it to anyone else, much less to any one man who is to sit on a foreign board and by his vote to bind the United States.

"The possessors of this power (viz, the States and the people) provided, at the time of the formation of our Federal Government, the only legal method to change the form of our government, viz, by a constitutional amendment, to wit, that the Congress (the States' and people's representatives) should pass by a two-thirds affirmative vote a bill incorporating the changes of government desired. After this bill has been passed by the Congress, without any action whatever of the President, and after three-fourths of all the States by a favorable vote concur therein, the same becomes legally the law of the land.

"Kindly note these two significant facts, that the President is not to sign such bill or be a party to the matter at all, and that it is the only one of all the functions of the Government requiring a three-fourths affirmative vote.

"Such a bill would have to provide for the introduction into our Government of a new function therein. It would have to create an 'ambassador supreme,' who would have the power to bind our Government to war, to the supply of troops, to raise vast funds of money for war purposes, and as the Federal Constitution (by-laws of the States and people) distinctly now vests this power in the Congress only, such a bill would also have to provide that the powers of Congress would be abrogated to that extent.

"In all fairness I ask you what possible chance would there be of such an amendment passing by a two-thirds vote, even the House and Senate, to say nothing of being passed by three-fourths of all the States?

"The President can not by treaty, even by the consent and favorable vote of the Senate, legally transfer this power from the Congress, and if the treaty should so pass the Senate, the Supreme Court of the United States must undoubtedly declare same unconstitutional.

"The Supreme Court, through Chief Justice Marshall's celebrated decision early in the life of our Government, established for all time the principles, never until then fully acknowledged—in fact, actually denied by the political party then in power—that the Constitution was, as it itself declared, the supreme law of the land, to the provision of which all laws of Congress and of the States must conform—and that the Supreme Court was the ultimate and indisputable judge of such conformity.

"To-day, as in 1800, the Supreme Court (not the political party which at present disputes the question) will be the ultimate and indisputable judge if it is in conformity to the Constitution for the treaty-making branches of the Government to make a treaty which vitiates and changes, contrary to the provisions thereof, the very Constitution and Government itself. Article VI of the Constitution reads:

"This Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The framers of our Constitution considered the function of a treaty limited to agreements and understandings with a foreign State, and in nowise or under no circumstances to have anything to do with a change in the form of our own domestic Government, which they had so amply covered by the Constitution itself with its numerous checks, provisions, and safeguards. Note that all laws of Congress that are in accordance with the Constitution shall be the supreme law of the land, but to be legally the supreme law of the land they must be in pursuance of the Constitution; similarly all treaties made 'under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land,' but to be legal they must also be made under the legal authority of the United States, or, in other words, in pursuance of the Constitution. A treaty created to do something outside its proper legal function, the operation of which would nullify the most important and best safeguarded provision of all the provisions of the Constitution—equivalent to overthrowing the Constitution and hence the Government—could not have been created by the legal authority of the United States and would undoubtedly have to be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. If this were not so, the treaty-making powers of the Government (the President and Senate) could enter into a treaty with England, or even with a small country like Nicaragua, or with a country hostile to the United States, like Mexico, to bring about any change in our form of government, such as, for instance, to elect Senators for two years instead of six, or to establish a monarchical form of government instead of our Republic, and the same would be the supreme law of the land, notwithstanding that such a treaty would destroy our republican Government itself. The very contemplation of such possibility reveals the complete absurdity of a contention that the treaty need not be in conformity to the Constitution.

"In 1787, when New York State was debating whether to join the Federal Government or not, Alexander Hamilton asked advice of Chief Justice Marshall upon the following:

"'Could a State once adopt the Constitution and then withdraw from the Union if not satisfied?'

"Marshall's reply was prompt and decisive, No! Such a thing could never be done. A State which had once ratified was in the Federal bond forever. The Constitution could not provide for, nor contemplate, its own overthrow; the answer, therefore, to those who are now attempting to clothe the treaty-making power of the Government with the assumed authority to change the form of our government is the same now as it was then—No! Such a thing could never be done. The Constitution could not provide for, nor contemplate, its own overthrow!

"We have seen that a constitutional amendment is the only power that legally can change the form of our Government, and that a two-thirds affirmative vote of the people's Representatives in both the House of Representatives and the Senate is first required, and in addition thereto the concurrence of three-fourths of all the States is required, and that the President shall have no function therein.

"Kindly take full cognizance of this most significant provision imposed by the framers of our Constitution, viz, that a change in the form of our government requires, first, a two-thirds affirmative vote of the Congress (House and Senate) and in addition thereto a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States (and through them the people), and that it is the only one function of all the Government machinery that does require a three-fourths affirmative vote.

"All of our legislation requires simply a majority vote of Congress.

"All vetoes require a two-thirds affirmative vote of the Congress (House and Senate).

"All treaties require a two-thirds affirmative vote of the Senate, but—

"A change in the form of our government requires a two-thirds vote of the Congress (House and Senate), a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States, and not only requires a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States but in addition thereto eliminates the President and prohibits him from having anything whatsoever to do therewith.

"Now, why did our forefathers, of all the representatives of the people, prohibit only the President of the United States from having anything to do with a change in our Constitution; and why, of all the functions of the machinery of the Government, did they require for this one thing only a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States (or the people)? Because of the one great controlling fear that possessed their souls, namely, that it might be to the President's interest and advantage to change the form of our government and thereby remove the people's safeguards that they had placed in their Constitution, and by such change make it possible for a dictator, an emperor, or king to rule over our Republic; so they developed an effective check upon any such possible ambition of the President and removed any such possible temptation by prohibiting the President from having anything to do with or functioning in a change of their form of government, and they further checked it by requiring for this one thing only a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States of the Union.

"Yet, notwithstanding this intended elimination of the President, and notwithstanding the special requirements of a two-thirds vote of the Congress and of a three-fourths affirmative vote of all the States (all made purposely and expressly for the safeguarding of the very life of our beloved Republic), the President of the United States is now endeavoring, through an entirely different instrumentality (which avoids referring this vital matter to any of the States at all, or even to the people's Representatives in the House)—namely, a treaty—to illegally change the form of our government, which he otherwise could not possibly do.

"If any one man, even with the consent of the Senate, can change the form of our government in direct opposition to the method provided for by our forefathers in the Constitution, then one man can also change the form of our government in other respects and the death knell of the great American Republic is sounded.

"Our forefathers' great efforts and carefully developed safeguards will then have availed us nothing, and in spite of all their safeguards and their truly wonderful Constitution it would be possible then that we may one day see a dictator, an emperor, or a king ruling over our great liberty-loving 'Republic.'

"A short consideration of the manner in which this un-American treaty was framed might be enlightening. From all accounts the American draft of the treaty was never seriously considered at Versailles. From authentic accounts the treaty was drawn mainly by the English general and legal adviser, Gen. Smuts, by Lloyd-George, President Wilson, and his adviser, Col. House. That Lloyd-George and Gen. Smuts should desire the great power of the United States to back up England's present territorial integrity in all corners of the earth and for all time is not to be wondered at, and one must admire them for their astuteness in endeavoring to bring to their support this great, wealthy Republic, with its money and with its manhood, wherewith to defend for all time their territorial integrity.

"In view of the significant fact that the Versailles peace treaty threatens the continued existence of our constitutional government itself, it might be well for the public to know the attitude of the President's adviser, Col. House, on the Constitution of the United States.

"Senator SHERMAN, in his remarks on the floor of the Senate on June 6, 1919, made the following statement:

"The man who writes a book to portray a new and perfect government he assures us he has invented, sufficient for the salvation of the entire earth, is more dangerous to his country than the anarchist who seeks to usher in the rule of dynamite as a cure for every ill.

"Col. House foreshadowed the destruction of constitutional government in the United States in his work of fiction published in 1912. It is a textbook for the peace conference in Paris. This novel exhibits his disregard of laws and his belief in revolution. It throws a steady light upon his acts in the Paris conference and explains why President Wilson chooses him as his chief adviser in navigating the uncharted seas.

"It would seem, therefore, that instead of article 10, or the appointment of 'an American ambassador supreme' to vote, together with foreigners, in a foreign country to bind the United States, being an accident, as many have imagined, it is a deliberate plan of internationalists to illegally change the form of the United States Government and destroy the greatest document of history—the Constitution of the United States—and with it the greatest Government in the world for the uplift of humanity.

"What can be said of those sworn to uphold the Constitution of the United States endeavoring to foist upon the United States a treaty which attempts unconstitutionally to change our Federal Government and vitiate our great Constitution?

"How, therefore, can the administration Senators and the newspapers call for a compromise on something which strikes at the very heart and lifeblood of this great Nation and spells disaster for us and the possible end of our representative Government?

"It would certainly be a calamity beyond the power of expression if our form of government, which has existed for so many years and prospered so wonderfully, should now be changed and destroyed, not by a foreign foe but by the very heads of our own Government, who have taken their oaths to uphold and not destroy the Government and the laws.

"It may be contended, and some Senators have contended, that the American representative in the league of nations' council would not have the powers just described, and that in such matters as binding our Government to war, supplying troops, and raising money for war purposes he could in any event bind the country only with the consent of the Congress and in the usual manner prescribed by the Constitution. Unfortunately, however, there is absolutely nothing in the league of nations covenant that provides or even suggests that any action of his should have the consent of Congress before becoming effective. If such a contention on the part of the advocates of the treaty is, however, founded on fact, why, then, all this tremendous opposition of the President and administration Senators to the committee's amendment, which, after all, only makes clear both to the American people and our Allies that which they claim to be the fact, viz, that America's representative on the league can not by his vote bind the United States without the sanction of the Congress? It is inconsistent, for example, to argue on the one hand that a reservation to article 10 which would define the limits of our obligations relative to guaranteeing territorial integrity of European nations would take the heart out of the treaty and in the same breath to argue that such a reservation is unnecessary because the limitations of our obligations are clearly understood. Either these limitations are understood and such a reservation could do no harm and would be acceptable to all of the parties to the league of nations covenant or they are not understood and should be so clarified that all the American people and our allies understand them beyond any shadow of a doubt.

"Would any honest business man sign a contract which he knew he could not perform? Would he hesitate to let the other parties to the contract know, before it was signed, the limits of the obligations he could perform? This is all that the Senate committee's reservations do, and yet they are persistently and vigorously rejected by the administration and the administration's Democratic Senators.

"Can we argue with any honor that a thing which is honest for individuals need not be honest for a great nation? No! The standard of our morality in our relations with foreign nations must at least be as high as that of our individual relations.

"It may also be contended that the fears expressed with respect to the possibility of executive usurpation under the treaty are not well founded, since if the executive department, through the representative on the league of nations council, should attempt to assume such powers as those herein described, the Supreme Court would interfere. Unfortunately, we have already seen in our foreign affairs, under the present administration, executive usurpation on such a scale as the framers of the Constitution would never have dreamed possible, without the acts of the executive department having come before the Supreme Court for review. Moreover, it would be wholly unjustifiable to enter into a contract knowing that as it is written the Supreme Court would have to declare it unconstitutional, since we would be placed in the unfortunate position of having assumed obligations which we could not perform, and instead of cementing our friendship with other nations such a procedure would only tend to dissipate such friendship.

"It is to be hoped therefore that this great matter will be brought to the attention of the American public in such a way that we will hear less of this talk of compromise of the autonomy of the United States.

"The American people therefore should certainly give fervent thanks to the great American Senate, to the Republican Party, and to the great Senator from the State of Massachusetts, that they in their keen wisdom have seen through the deceits of the Versailles peace treaty and are demanding and will force upon an unwilling President and administration Senators an Americanized treaty or none at all."

SEDITIOUS ACTS AND UTTERANCES.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3317.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3317) to prohibit and punish certain seditious acts against the Government of the United States and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Borah	Harris	McKellar	Sherman
Calder	Harrison	McLean	Simmons
Capper	Henderson	McNary	Smith, Ga.
Chamberlain	Hitchcock	Nelson	Smoot
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	New	Spencer
Culberson	Jones, N. Mex.	Norris	Sterling
Cummins	Kellogg	Nugent	Sutherland
Curtis	Kendrick	Overman	Swanson
Dial	Kenyon	Page	Trammell
Dillingham	Keyes	Phipps	Underwood
Elkins	King	Pittman	Wadsworth
France	Kirby	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Frelinghuysen	Knox	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
Gerry	Lenroot	Ransdell	Watson
Gronna	Lodge	Robinson	Wolcott
Hale	McCormick	Sheppard

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My colleague, the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], is absent on important business.

Mr. GERRY. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GAY], the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH], and the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on official business. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] is absent on account of illness, and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained on account of illness in his family.

Mr. SWANSON. I desire to state that the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is detained from the Senate and from the city, and has been since the reconvening of the Senate, on account of illness in his family. I have a pair with him. I will let this announcement stand until his return.

Mr. GRONNA. I have been requested to announce that the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is absent on account of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-three Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I submit an amendment to the pending bill, which I ask to have printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That order will be made. The bill is in the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, on yesterday I offered an amendment to this bill. I have made some changes in the amendment, at the suggestion of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX]. I offer the same amendment as modified, and ask to have it printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That order will be made.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator have the amendment read?

Mr. BORAH. I think I had better read it, for I have interlined it, and I do not think anyone else can read it. It is to be offered as a proviso to section 3, which is the mailing clause:

Provided, That any author, publisher, or party affected or aggrieved by the action of the Postmaster General in excluding materials from the mails under this section shall, upon filing a bond to cover the actual cost of such proceeding, be entitled to a hearing de novo before a judge of the Federal court of the district or circuit in which the party affected or aggrieved resides. But in case the party aggrieved or affected is successful in securing the admission of his mail matter to the mails he shall not be liable for the cost of the proceedings, and the court shall have power during the pendency of the proceedings in court to suspend the order of the Postmaster General: Provided further, That no such court proceedings shall bar or interfere with any criminal prosecution under the terms of this act.

Mr. NORRIS addressed the Senate, and before concluding the morning hour expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota in the chair). The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is House bill 3184.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, in view of the fact that we are making such progress in the discussion of the sedition bill, I wonder if the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] will not allow us to proceed with the further consideration of that measure?

Mr. FRANCE. That requires unanimous consent, and I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ball	Gronna	McKellar	Smoot
Borah	Hale	McNary	Spencer
Capper	Harrison	Myers	Sterling
Chamberlain	Henderson	Nelson	Sutherland
Colt	Hitchcock	New	Trammell
Culberson	Johnson, S. Dak.	Norris	Underwood
Curtis	Kellogg	Nugent	Walsh, Mass.
Dillingham	Kendrick	Page	Walsh, Mont.
Elkins	Keyes	Robinson	Wolcott
Fernald	King	Sheppard
Fletcher	Lenroot	Simmons
France	McCormick	Smith, Md.

Mr. GRONNA. I was requested to announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is absent, due to illness. I wish that this announcement may stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present. The Secretary will call the roll of absentees.

The Assistant Secretary called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. LODGE, Mr. OVERMAN, Mr. POMERENE, Mr. SMITH of Georgia, and Mr. WADSWORTH answered to their names when called.

Mr. HARRIS and Mr. CALDER entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

TREATY OF PEACE WITH GERMANY.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a solemn responsibility rests upon the Senate to dispose of the treaty of peace with Germany which is now before it. The defeat of the various resolutions of ratification offered by Senators was not a disposition of the treaty. It is still an issue of transcendent importance. Indeed, it is the paramount question before the Senate and before the country at the present time. No juggling of words, no finesee, no attempts—regardless of the source from which they come—for strategic political advantage, no sophistical arguments or rhetorical exhibitions, can or will convince the country that this overshadowing question has been disposed of. The country is stirred as it seldom has been by reason of the issues involved in the pending treaty. The question of ratification of the treaty appeals to no one section or no particular class of our citizenship, but it grips the people in every part of our land and addresses itself with as appealing force to the laborer and the artisan as to the business man and the intellectual. Any everywhere it is felt that no more important question has ever been presented to the American people for determination than the one which we have been considering for many months. The American people, in my opinion, have given the questions involved in the treaty with Germany most earnest and serious consideration. The judgment which they now have is not the product of hysteria or the result of propaganda; neither have political or party considerations influenced them in reaching the conclusions which now guide them. Seldom has an issue of such overwhelming and transcendent importance been determined by a great people with so little of partisan spirit as the issue presented in that part of the treaty known as the covenant of the league of nations. Frequently domestic questions affecting the welfare if not the vital interests of the Republic have been determined because of the partisan aspect which the question presented.

International questions of tremendous importance have often been determined by the American people with reference to party advantage or disadvantage; but be it said to the credit and honor of the American people, they have approached the consideration of the covenant of the league—its consequences, its effect upon our country and upon the world, and all other cognate and material matters—from a patriotic and American standpoint, and without thought as to the consequences, or the effect their action might have upon the fate of any political party. There are questions so great, so vital, so important to the welfare of a people and the perpetuity of free government and the triumph of civilization, that it is almost an act of sacrilege to consider them with reference to the advantage or disadvantage which will accrue to a political party by reason of the judgment formed by the people and action taken by them with respect thereto. In great crises in this Nation as well as in other countries, party spirit and factional strife have been forgotten and patriotic devotion to country has guided the people in heroic and mighty struggles culminating in the triumph of the right and the preservation of liberty and national independence.

There have been some sinister figures in the land who have sought to convert the question of the treaty and its ratification into a purely partisan political issue. There have been a few who have desired to make it a political issue and to seek party advantage by reason of the defeat or success of the treaty. No one denies but that in a republic such as ours political parties are not only advantageous but they are necessary. Strong and virile political parties contesting with zeal and spirit for those principles which their respective adherents regard as essential for free government and for the reign of justice and righteousness are imperatively needed in this Republic; but political parties are made for the people and not the people for political parties. If parties become subversive of principle and liberty and good government, they should be destroyed. If political organizations become corrupt or more interested in success and in power than in maintaining good government and the preservation of this Republic, they should meet with ignominious defeat, and upon their ruins more worthy organizations should arise. In my opinion, the American people while they perceive the importance of political organizations, at the same time appreciate the infirmities of political parties and the inevitable tendency of political organizations to become tyrannous and oppressive, and if unchecked to depart from accepted and honored and patriotic principles to follow selfish and too often destructive policies. As a result, though there is a due and proper regard for political organization and a due appreciation of the value of party, there is being developed more and more a spirit of political independence and a growing conviction that the interests of our country are higher than the interests or welfare of any political organization. Party names and symbols and creeds are not as appealing now as in the past. The American people are studying their form of government. They are seeking to understand our Constitution and to comprehend those fundamental and, indeed, elemental principles upon which free government and enduring civilization must rest. In the factory, upon the farm, in the mine, in the school room, indeed everywhere throughout our broad land, men and women are weighing our Government, are studying its spirit and form and institutions; they are seeking to understand its mission in the world, and the high obligations which rest upon the citizens of the freest and greatest nation that the world has ever seen. They are appreciating the fact that a free people must be a thinking people and that liberty will only live among those who are worthy to enjoy freedom. No political formula submitted by statesmen or politicians and no cut-and-dried political platform will determine the attitude of the American people upon the problems, domestic and international, which now lie in their pathway.

I have said that the question whether the peace treaty should be ratified and this Nation should become a member of the league of nations is the most important and momentous one that the American people have ever been called upon to decide. They have not blinked the issue nor have they refrained from reaching a conclusion. They have approached the consideration of the question as Americans and not as partisans; they have refused to make the issue a partisan one. Those who have attempted to do so have been rebuked by the people. In every political subdivision of our country men of all political parties and those who are members of no political party have been found side by side fighting to secure the ratification of the pending treaty. That this treaty should have provoked controversy and violent discussion might have been expected; indeed it would have been discreditable to the intellectual powers of the American people if it had not provoked earnest and serious discussion and a divergence of views. But after months of earnest consideration the great jury of our country have reached a conclusion. That conclusion is that there is so much of good in the covenant of the league that the treaty with Germany should be ratified, and that any delay in its ratification will be attended with serious consequences.

The American people appreciate, in part at least, the titanic labors that rested upon the peace conference at Versailles; they appreciate the conflicting interests of the various nations and the rivalries and jealousies necessarily existing. They feel that an instrument perfect in form and unobjectionable in substance is impossible.

The treaty contains some provisions that are not satisfactory to many of the American people. In its structure there are sins of omission and commission. It bears evidences of compromises and of the storms and the furious tempests through which it passed; but with all of its defects, the American people believe that it possesses so much of merit, and that its potentialities for good are so real and genuine, that it would be a national mistake, if not an international tragedy, for the treaty to be defeated and for our Nation to refuse membership in the league of nations. I am not oblivious to the fact that many of the American people, in their desire for ratification of the treaty, with a sincere insistence demanded that certain reservations shall constitute part of the resolution of ratification. Some of the reservations urged in various parts of our country and presented to the Senate for consideration I think are wise and eminently proper. There are others which have received consideration here, as well as throughout the land, which I regard as highly objectionable and inconsistent with the fundamental principles upon which the treaty rests. The protracted discussion in the Senate and before the bar of public opinion has, in my opinion, demonstrated that the treaty can not be ratified without reservations. The defeat of amendments to the treaty was a great victory, but that result does not foreshadow a defeat of reservations. That fact is apparent to the stoutest defenders of the treaty and to those who have been courageously battling for ratification without amendment or reservation. It is obvious that the treaty, if ratified by the Senate, must contain reservations. To secure ratification of the treaty concessions must be made and a spirit of conciliation exhibited. If I had the power I should be unwilling to take the responsibility of defeating the treaty because some reservations were attached which did not meet my approval. Of course, there might be such material and fundamental reservations or amendments adopted as to destroy the foundations and the very structure of the league provided by the treaty. In that event a different course of conduct might and probably would be required. There are some, of course, who would excise from the treaty all provisions relating to the league of nations. There are some Senators uncompromising in their hostility to the league who would not vote for ratification of the treaty if any part preserving the league of nations were retained in the treaty; but the overwhelming majority of the Members of this body sincerely desire, in my opinion, a speedy ratification of the treaty. There are sharp differences between some of the Senators who desire that the treaty should be ratified, but substantially all Senators have voted for some reservations.

There are some Senators who are opposed to any reservations, but I believe a majority of the Members of the Senate prefer that reservations shall be incorporated in the resolution of ratification. I believe it is the duty of the Members of this body to compose their differences and to reach a common ground and promptly ratify the treaty.

I decline to accept the view that the failure to ratify the treaty is solely attributable to the majority party in this body, nor do I approve the suggestion that failure to take affirmative action rests alone upon the Republican Party. As I have stated, the ratification of the treaty presents no partisan question. The obligation to secure early action rests as heavily upon Democratic Senators as it does upon Republican Senators.

With that thought in view, I have submitted for the consideration of the Senate a resolution of ratification. It contains reservations which are objectionable to me and which I should support with the utmost reluctance. However, I have been ready, and am still willing, to concede propositions and to support reservations with which I am not in accord if by so doing the full act of ratification may be consummated. I have appreciated that if I expected concessions to be made by others I must in turn surrender some points for which I had contended.

Mr. President, the treaty is before us and the world awaits our action. I refuse, as I believe the American people refuse, to regard the vote of November 19 as decisive or as conclusive. By that vote we merely determined that the resolutions submitted did not meet the views of a sufficient number of Senators to effectuate the ratification of the treaty. We ourselves do not regard the action of that date as a finality. What obstacle now interposes to prevent action, and prompt action? Certainly it can not be pride of opinion that delays action. It is no lack of patriotism that chains our feet. Certainly it is not the result of insensibility to the supreme importance of immediate action. Let us act, and act now. Let us give hope and courage to the peoples of the world in order that the beginning of this new year may bring to them voices of cheer and gladness and inspiration that will enable them to bear the burdens which se heavily press them down.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] has submitted a resolution which declares the existence of a status of peace between the United States and Germany. It is a cold and lifeless gift which he offers. The American people, in my opinion, do not desire that we forsake our allies. The flag of this Republic, side by side with the flags of the allied nations, victoriously waved over the bloody fields of Europe. The sons of America lie in their final resting places near the graves of the martyred dead who came from France and Great Britain and Belgium and Italy and other nations to meet the common foe and to establish liberty and preserve freedom and justice for the world. We want no separate peace with the Central Empires. We were proud to be associated with the brave and gallant peoples who so valiantly fought to prevent Prussianism from dominating the world. We were united in a common cause. Jointly we triumphed over the common enemy. We shall not now separate from those with whom common dangers united us.

There were some partisan voices raised in our land against what they pretended to believe as to the purposes of President Wilson to negotiate a separate peace with Germany and one which they denominated to be a "soft" peace. There never was any intention upon the part of President Wilson to make peace with our enemies other than in concert with our allies. The armistice rested upon the 14 points which had been announced by President Wilson, and the allied nations understood that in the negotiations with the Central Powers and the defeated nations that the principles embodied in the 14 points should be recognized and constitute the basis of the terms of peace. The Allies appreciated the powerful influence of President Wilson in bringing the war to a successful issue and were desirous of his presence at the peace conference. The distinguished leader of the Republican Party in the Senate has condemned any effort to make peace except in company with our allies.

Mr. President, the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], in an article written by him and published, as I recall, in December, 1918, in The Forum, the article being entitled "War work of Congress," said:

> The President who delivered the war message and the Congress who voted for war would be guilty of the blackest crime if they were willing to make a peace on the status quo ante bellum and re-create the situation which existed before the war. If we send our armies and our young men abroad to be killed and wounded in northern France and Flanders with no result but this, our entrance into war with such an intention was a crime which nothing can justify. The intent of Congress and the intent of the President was that there could be no peace until we could create a situation where no such war as this could recur.

What does the Senator mean when he speaks of creating a "situation where no such war as this could recur"?

Was he not thinking of a "situation" which would be brought about through the establishment of a league of nations?

It is manifest that he hoped for a "situation" which would prevent war. If no peace was desired "on the status quo ante bellum," it is certain that the Senator had in mind the view that the final terms of peace must provide some organization or force or authority that would not only create new nations in Europe but defend them, if necessary, against assaults which would restore the conditions and situations existing prior to the war.

I submit that the Senator offers a strong argument in favor of the league of nations:

> We can not make peace in the ordinary way. We can not, in the first place, make peace except in company with our allies. It would brand us with everlasting dishonor and bring ruin to us also if we undertook to make a separate peace.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. The quotation which the Senator has read should be attributed to the Forum of June, 1918. The newspaper made a mistake in assigning the month.

Mr. KING. I thank the Senator. I had read the article at the time, but was not certain as to the number in which it appeared. And yet, Mr. President, as I recall, the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, the leader of the majority, voted for the proposition submitted by the able Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX]—a proposition which called for a "separate peace"; a proposition which called for the desertion of our allies; a proposition which, if it had triumphed, would have involved us in serious complications, and, in my judgment, would have made for a continuation of the unfortunate, if not to say disastrous, conditions which now prevail in Europe.

In the light of the position taken by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] it is incomprehensible to me how he can support a resolution calling for an abandonment of our allies and the making of a separate peace with Germany.

The reasons which forbade a separate peace at the time the Senator wrote the article referred to, and which if made would have "branded us with everlasting dishonor," exist now; indeed, there are stronger reasons now against such an ignoble and perfidious course.

Mr. President, in this connection I invite attention to a statement made by the late Col. Roosevelt. In an address which he delivered on September 6, 1918, Col. Roosevelt discussed in a general way the league of nations and some of the obligations which would rest upon our Nation when the war was over. He had the broad vision to see that having entered into this conflict, the termination of the war would devolve upon us responsibilities which we could not in honor avoid. He could see, as every patriotic American could see, that it would be an act of cowardice for the American Nation, when the war was over, to scuttle out of Europe and to abandon to their fate the new nations that would be created and to abandon our allies in meeting the great and tremendous issues which the culmination of the war devolved upon the victorious nations. Col. Roosevelt said:

> The Austrian and Turkish Empires must both be broken up, all the subject peoples liberated, and the Turk driven from Europe. We do not intend that German or Magyar should be wronged by others or oppressed by others, but neither do we intend that they shall oppress and domineer over others.

Let me pause long enough in the reading to inquire how could we manifest that intention to preserve those that were liberated from domination and tyranny unless by united action with the allied nations in a league for the preservation of peace and to make secure the great results of this World War?

> France, as you have said, Mr. Chairman, must receive back Alsace and Lorraine. We can not go into any peace conference where everybody did not accept that before we entered it. Belgium must be restored and indemnified.

Who, let me pause to inquire, is to guarantee indemnification? Who is to protect Belgium and see that the indemnity prescribed shall be paid according to the letter and the spirit of the treaty? It is obvious that Col. Roosevelt understood that this Nation would be a party to this guaranty and to the enforcement of the terms of the treaty.

> Italian Austria must be restored to Italy and Roumanian Hungary to Roumania. The heroic Czecho-Slovaks must be made into an independent commonwealth and the Southern Slavs must be united in a great Jugo-Slav commonwealth. Poland, as a genuinely independent commonwealth, must receive back Austrian and Prussian Poland, as well as Russian Poland, and have her coast line on the Baltic. Lithuania, Livonia, and Finland, and the Baltic Provinces must be guaranteed their freedom and independence—and when I speak of independence I mean independence of Germany as well as of Russia—and no part of the ancient Empire of Russia must be left under the German yoke or subject in any way to German influence, even the slightest.

I inquire of Senators how is the freedom and independence of Lithuania and Livonia and Finland and these new nations that are to be set up to be guaranteed? It is certain that Col. Roosevelt appreciated that the victorious nations would be compelled to protect, at least for some period, the independence of the new nations that were to be established. What did he mean by the words "must be guaranteed their freedom and independence"?

Such guaranty could only be enforced by a league of nations or by treaties binding and specific in terms. Who shall say that Col. Roosevelt ever conceived the possibility of a separate peace with Germany? The "guaranty" described by him called for joint action by the allied and associated Governments and for a peace in which the victorious nations could join.

He proceeds:

> Northern Schleswig should go back to the Danes. Britain and Japan should keep the colonies they have conquered.

I am afraid that statement of Col. Roosevelt does not quite harmonize with the views of some of the distinguished Senators who have been so bitter in their denunciations of Japan and Great Britain. Let me say in passing that in my opinion we have not pursued the part of wisdom or statesmanship, and certainly not the part of justice, in the discussion concerning some of our allies.

Britain and Japan should keep the colonies they have conquered.

For myself, I believe the provision in the treaty providing for mandates is a far more just method of disposing of these colonial possessions than a complete cession without limitations or restrictions.

Armenia must be free, Palestine made a Jewish state, and the Syrian Christians liberated.

In this speech Col. Roosevelt assumed a proper attitude in respect to nationalism and declared that the duty which we owe to international questions should not abate our devotion to our own country and to the cause of nationalism. The strong and trenchant statements of the colonel relating to the sphere of national authority and action meet my own views, and in a speech made by me some time ago I quoted approvingly from this address of Col. Roosevelt. However, our devotion to country does not call for an abatement of our interest in the great international problems that to-day affect the world.

It has been interesting to witness the attempted apothesis of Mr. Roosevelt since his death by so many who in his lifetime were his bitter opponents. Eloquent Senators have appealed to him in support of their opposition to the covenant of the league. His spirit has been invoked to give strength to the forces marshaled against all efforts to bring peace, enduring peace, to the world. It has repeatedly been declared that he would have exerted his influence to prevent the treaty's ratification.

Mr. President, I submit that some of the greatest and most patriotic Americans earnestly desire a concert of the free nations of the earth for the purpose of promoting justice and maintaining peace. The principles of liberty upon which this Republic is founded will realize their highest development and most perfect fruition when the world is at peace.

Col. Roosevelt upon a number of occasions emphatically declared for a league to enforce peace, for a union of nations to establish and maintain international justice and righteousness.

In a book written by President Roosevelt and published, as I recall, in January, 1915, entitled "America and the World War," Mr. Roosevelt says:

I earnestly hope that we shall ourselves become one of the joint guarantors of world peace under such a plan as that I in this book outline, and that we shall hold curselves ready and willing to act as a member of the international comitatus to enforce the peace of righteousness as against any offender big or small.

Let me pause to remark that that sounds strikingly like some of the views expressed by President Wilson. Certainly there is a harmony between the views expressed by Col. Roosevelt and the views expressed by Mr. Wilson as to the functions of this league and as to the great mission which it is to serve in the world for the preservation of international peace.

Col. Roosevelt proceeds:

This would mean a great practical stride toward relief from the burden of excessive military preparation. It would mean that a long step had been taken toward at least minimizing and restricting the area and extent of possible warfare. It would mean that all liberty-loving and enlightened peoples, great and small, would be free from the haunting nightmare of terror which now besets them when they think of the possible conquest of their land.

In the same volume Mr. Bryan's peace treaties are fiercely denounced, but at page 202 Col. Roosevelt states that—international peace will only come when the nations of the world form some kind of league which provides for an international tribunal to decide on international matters, which decrees that treaties and international agreements are never to be entered into recklessly and foolishly, and when once entered into are to be observed with entire good faith, and which puts the collective force of civilization behind such treaties and agreements and court decisions, and against any wrongdoing or recalcitrant nation.

The book contains a striking chapter entitled "Utopia or Hell?" Therein the author concedes that the project of a league of nations may be Utopian for a time, but expresses the hope that—after the war has come to an end the European contestants will be sufficiently sobered to be willing to consider some such proposal, and that the United States will abandon the folly of the pacifists and be willing to cooperate in some practical effort for the only kind of peace worth having—the peace of justice and righteousness.

He further proceeds:

My proposal is that the efficient civilized nations, those that are efficient in war as well as in peace, shall join in a world league for the peace of righteousness. This means that they shall by solemn covenant agree as to their respective rights, which shall not be questioned; that they shall agree that all other questions arising between them shall be submitted to a court of arbitration; and that they shall also agree—and here comes the vital and essential point of the whole system—to act with the combined military strength of all of them against any recalcitrant nation, against any nation which transgresses at the expense of any other nation the rights which it is agreed shall not be questioned, or which on arbitrable matters refuses to submit to the decree of the arbitral court.

In his final chapter, summing up the argument, at page 253, he says:

It is because I believe our attitude should be one of sincere good will toward all nations that I so strongly feel that we should endeavor to work for a league of peace among all nations rather than trust to alliances with any particular group. * * * The prime necessity is that all the great nations should agree in good faith to use their combined warlike strength to coerce any nation, whichever one it may be, that declines to abide the decision of some competent international tribunal. Our business is to create the beginnings of international order out of the world of nations as these nations actually exist. We do not have to deal with a world of pacifists, and therefore we must proceed on the assumption that treaties will never acquire sanctity until nations are ready to seal them with their blood.

More than one year after these words from Col. Roosevelt, he gave to the world another volume entitled "Fear God and Take Your Own Part." In this work he reproduces passages from his address before the Nobel Prize Committee May 5, 1910:

Something should be done as soon as possible to check the growth of armaments, especially naval armaments, by international agreement. No one power could or should act by itself, for it is eminently undesirable from the standpoint of the peace of righteousness that a power which really does believe in peace should place itself at the mercy of some rival which may at bottom have no such belief and no intention of acting on it.

Finally it would be a master stroke if those great powers honestly bent on peace would form a league of peace not only to keep the peace among themselves but to prevent by force, if necessary, its being broken by others.

The supreme difficulty in connection with developing the peace work of The Hague arises from the lack of any executive power, of any police power, to enforce the decrees of the court. Each nation must keep well prepared to defend itself until the establishment of some form of international police power competent and willing to prevent violence as between nations. As things are now, such power to command peace throughout the world could only be assured by some combination between those great nations which sincerely desire peace and have no thought themselves of committing aggressions. * * * The combination might at first be only to secure peace within certain definite limits and certain definite conditions, but the ruler or statesman who should bring about such a combination would have earned his place in history for all time and his title to the gratitude of all mankind.

Mr. President, do Senators upon the other side of the Chamber desire to make a separate peace with Germany? If so, they bring upon their heads the condemnation of their distinguished leader. If we adopt the resolution of the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, we are contravening the admonitions of the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. The Senator from Massachusetts, as I recall, declared after the defeat of the resolution of ratification submitted by him that the treaty was dead. I have stated and I repeat again "the treaty is not dead." It is a vital, living presence. It is here in this Chamber. It looks into our faces. It demands that we shall act and act now. Certainly the Senator from Massachusetts would not have us bring "everlasting dishonor and ruin" to us by urging the negotion of a separate peace with Germany. If the treaty is not ratified then there must be a separate peace treaty with Germany. Does the Senator from Massachusetts stand sponsor for such a proposition? Does he desire the Chief Executive of the United States to begin negotiations with the Ebbert government, looking to a separate treaty with our former enemy?

During the sanguinary struggle between the allied nations and the Central Empires the distinguished leader of the Republicans, in eloquent terms, pleaded for the independence of Poland, Czechoslovakia, and the Jugo-Slav nations. With clear vision he saw what the condition of Europe would be when the Central Empires were defeated and when the victorious powers would meet to draw the terms of peace for submission to the defeated foe. His broad statesmanship impelled him to take the position that the new nations which would be created must be preserved. He did not urge or predict that this Nation, when the war was won, should flee from Europe or abandon our allies or make a separate peace.

Mr. President, the peace treaty before us is not wholly an European product, but it bears evidence that it is in part of American origin and American spirit. It is in part the result of American handiwork, and the American people will not repudiate it. By this statement I do not mean to express the view that it is not marred by serious imperfections. Indeed, in my opinion, it contains provisions that should be modified by reservations clearly and explicitly phrased. But, considering the stupendous problems presented and the conflicting interests involved, it is not too much to say that the work of the peace conference will commend itself to impartial historians and secure the commendation of those who come after us. The presence of the Chief Executive of our country at the peace conference, in my opinion, was a fortunate event for this country and for the world. His great contribution to the cause of democracy and to the peace of the world is not fully known at this time even to his own countrymen.

Let me pause here to say, Mr. President, that Woodrow Wilson is still the titular head of a great, militant democracy. No man can wrest the scepter of authority from his hand. Upon a sick bed his clear brain has given expression to the policies of this Republic, and his judgment has guided, and guided well, the American people and this Nation. There may be those who think his leadership is ended. He still is a powerful figure in the world. He is guiding the destinies of this Republic, and with honor occupies the titular headship of a great and an undying political organization, and his influence now and his influence in the future upon his party and upon the Nation will be great and potential, and the years to come will pay homage to Wilson and to his great work for his country and for humanity.

When the full light of history shines upon the proceedings of the peace conference, the work of President Wilson will be acclaimed and his moral leadership there, as well as elsewhere, will be recognized. His influence was powerfully exerted for the weak nations—for people everywhere who were seeking to struggle from darkness into light. His views were set against imperialistic policies, against lust for territorial gains, and for the assertion of autocratic power. He endeavored to interpret the hopes and aspirations of the struggling masses and to speak for the submerged and inarticulate peoples not only in Europe but throughout the world. He believed in the solidarity of the human race, in the ultimate triumph of justice, and that liberty and peace were the patrimony which all nations and all peoples should enjoy. As a student of history he knew that the forces operating in the world were making for progress and for a higher civilization; and he also recognized that there were influences and forces manifesting themselves in the world, perhaps ultrarational or superrational, not cognized by the materialistic teachers nor the synthetic philosophy of Spencer and others who find in the evolutionary developments of the world no manifestations of an omnipotent and omniscient power. Woodrow Wilson in the years to come will be regarded with affection and reverence as the spokesman of the plain people, of the toiling masses, of the inarticulate children of the darkness and of the night, in the period in which he lived.

Jefferson had a passion for peace and an indestructible love for the people. He believed in them, in their capacity for self-government, and in the future which they were to possess.

Mr. President, President Wilson did his duty. He presented the treaty to the Senate of the United States. We have failed to discharge our duty. Thank God, the Democratic Party from the days of Jefferson until now has possessed great men, guided by his philosophy and his spirit, and who exemplified in their lives and in their labors those principles for which Jefferson pleaded with matchless power. His spirit is abroad in the land to-day, and his influence exerts an ever-increasing power throughout the land.

The horrors of this mighty conflict impressed President Wilson, as they did all lovers of humanity, with the awful horrors and the wickedness and the cruelties of war. He went to the peace conference determined that if it were within his power the cause of peace should be advanced and the possibilities of war diminished. President Wilson has been denounced as an idealist. He saw what prophets and sages and poets have seen—that the day must dawn when law and justice would rule the world and not the evil passions of men and the dark and sinister forces that have so powerfully operated in the ages of the past. No more opportune time to lay the foundations of a league for the peace of the world was ever presented to the world. The representatives of the allied nations at the peace conference would have been not only derelict to their countries but would have been untrue to humanity if they had not attempted to devise some plan that sought to secure an enduring peace and to prevent the recurrence of devastating conflicts. America at the peace conference had no thought of gain; she desired no territory. Without passion or prejudice she attempted to abate selfish demands, imperialistic ambitions, and as a residuum of the conflicting and selfish interests give to the world peace and a treaty which would be the basis for a new order under which liberty and justice would be enjoyed by all.

The obligation rests upon us now to take this treaty from the table and to proceed to the consideration of a resolution calling for its ratification. There ought to be prompt and speedy action. The condition of Europe demands it; the world demands it. The gains of the war may be lost if we hesitate and refuse to deal with this matter which still hangs over the world.

What could President Wilson do other than to present the treaty to the American people, a treaty for which he had fought and to which he had pledged his best efforts? He has been criticized because it has been said that he opposed amendments or reservations. Mr. President, suppose Woodrow Wilson, contending as he did for this treaty, having labored to secure it, had come to the American people and, while presenting the treaty, had said, "I will consent to amendments, reservations, modifications, and qualifications." In what attitude would it have placed him with the allied nations? He had insisted that the representatives of those nations should make concessions. France, bleeding at every pore, terrified, even in the defeat of her enemy, by the fear of a possible recrudescence of her power, demanded that the Rhine should be fixed as the boundary between Belgium and France and Germany. President Wilson wanted that there should be no seeds sown that would bring forth another war. He wanted no Alsace-Lorraine provisions in the treaty, and with the earnestness of a crusader and with the vision of the true statesman he insisted that they should yield upon that proposition, and they did yield. If he had brought the treaty here, having wrung concessions from the Allies in the making of the treaty, and had stated that he was willing to accept amendments and reservations changing, modifying, altering, and qualifying it, I repeat he would have subjected himself to the charge of having betrayed his allies.

There was only one thing for Woodrow Wilson to do, and that was to urge that the treaty be ratified. He could say, "I have done my work as best I could; I have preserved the honor of and vindicated my country; I have fought for world peace and for a treaty which will preserve the fruits of victory and advance the cause of justice in all the world." The responsibility, when he presented the treaty to us, became ours. We have not discharged the duty which under the Constitution is ours. It is our duty to act. If we believe reservations should be made, let us attach them to the treaty, and then, having discharged our duty, return the treaty to President Wilson, and the responsibility then will rest upon him to determine whether, with the reservations imposed by the Senate of the United States, he will accept it and transmit it to the nations with which the treaty was negotiated. But until we act Woodrow Wilson can do nothing else than to stand by the terms of the treaty. It would be regarded as a mistake for the President to consent, before we have acted, to modifications of the treaty, and I have no criticism to offer concerning the position which President Wilson has taken in relation to the treaty's ratification.

He has exhibited to the allied nations a rectitude of purpose and a devotion to his conception of duty and an inflexible purpose to adhere to policies and principles agreed upon that furnish indubitable proof of his sincerity and fidelity. Whatever the fate of the treaty may be, no allied nation can charge that Woodrow Wilson was false to his associates at the peace conference or that he betrayed the nations whose representatives participated in that memorable and most important conference.

Mr. President, I repeat that our duty is plain. The treaty now before us must be acted upon. We can not longer postpone an overpowering duty. The interests of our own country demand that the treaty be ratified. The political welfare of our people, as well as the industrial and economic interests of our Nation, cry aloud for immediate action. Moreover, our moral leadership in the world will be lost and the crown of glory and honor which this Nation should wear will be placed upon the brows of other peoples and other nations. Parts of Europe are aflame, and hunger, starvation, and death are found in nearly every State of that unhappy land. The new nations created under the peace treaty are struggling to maintain their integrity and to resist the surging tides which threaten their destruction.

The highest ecclesiastical prelate of Poland has just stated that every soldier that poor and impoverished and suffering Poland can raise has been placed upon her eastern border to prevent the destructive forces of bolshevism that are now knocking at the gates of nearly every nation in Europe. If Poland should be destroyed by bolshevism and Czechoslovakia should be engulfed by this horrible and hideous stream of barbarism and death, other nations would go down before its devouring forces and the future of Europe and the world would be grave indeed.

Mr. Frank H. Simonds, in a most discriminating article communicated to the press only yesterday, states that the bolshevists have reached the Baltic and that the power of resistance of the Letts and Lithuanians is exhausted. He further states that Poland and Roumania alone of the border States remain. But speaking of Poland, he shows that it has to face the bolshevik peril because of the failure of the allied nations to give Poland the city of Danzig and the title to the mineral districts of Silesia. He points out the fact that "Poland can not long maintain an army without allied subventions, and that Poland's army is the single remaining bulwark against bolshevism." His criticism of the Allies in failing to recognize that Poland is the "single wall" against the Russian Reds and that the Allies are following their old policy of procrastination is searching and convincing.

Attention is also called by him to the danger to Germany of bolshevism. If Poland should fall by bolshevik invasion, Germany might be crushed. Bolshevism would then stand face to face with France and Belgium. He pertinently inquires "What would be the situation if bolshevism should sweep all of central Europe? What if the armies of Lenin and Trotski should presently acquire the cohesion necessary to repeat the achievements of revolutionary France? Does anyone suppose that the domestic manifestations would be less disturbing than now? Would we be able permanently to escape the duty of joining with Britain and France in the new struggle against a foe far more menacing than Germany was, against a doctrine far more destructive of our ideas and our civilization than the Prussian?"

He further declares that "actually the world situation at the present hour is such that a bolshevist supremacy in Europe is by no means out of the range of possibilities. Peace can only be restored when we have restored a common basis of cooperation between the great masses of men who are now separated by old and by new as well as old intellectual, moral, and racial animosities. Bolshevism is a state of war against organized society as we know it. We can not make peace effectively with a state of war, even though we sign endless papers and retire our influence to our own territory. American liberals fill the world with denunciation of the western governments for their 'invasion' of Russia, but what of the Russian invasion of America, Italy, of all western countries?" In conclusion, he states "Europe can not continue half bolshevist and half democratic, nor can Europe, left to itself, find the moral or material strength to defeat bolshevism. The situation is the situation of the war—when the western nations were only saved from defeat by the enlistment of America. I confess that every shred of evidence that comes to me in Washington from European sources, save in the case of Britain and France, points straight toward the triumph of bolshevism on the Continent, or else to the restoration of German militarism to full strength and vigor as the opponents of the reds. Either solution is hardly less dangerous for America than for Britain and France. As between Ludendorff and Trotski, what is there for us to choose?"

If the views of Mr. Simonds are sound, this Nation is in danger from the conflagration which threatens Europe. The sea which divides us becomes but a narrow stream when convulsions occur, such as Germany brought to Europe in 1914 and the bolsheviki bring to the world in this year of grace. We did not escape the menace of Prussianism, and the red glare of bolshevik destructiveness illumines the skies over our heads as it brings terror to the hearts of the affrighted and suffering peoples of Europe.

The policy of the allied and associated powers in dealing with the Russian situation has been a chapter of blunders and a volume of tragedies, the blunders are still being multiplied and the tragedies are still being written. The situation may be relieved if we ratify the peace treaty and if our Nation, taking her part with the free nations of the world, shall use the forces and machinery of the league of nations to defend humanity against the dangers which are so threatening and imminent. In helping Europe we are aiding ourselves. We can not sit by with chilled hearts and cynical looks and behold the sorrows and sufferings of the people of Europe. When enemies are defeated and when starvation and sufferings overwhelm them, the victorious nations by every law of humanity and chivalry should give succor and relief. Millions of people in Austria, in Poland, in Germany, and in other parts of Europe will meet death from starvation and exposure before the warming sun of the coming spring can revive their broken spirits. And the terrible situation and conditions obtaining create opportunities for bolshevik success and lead to instability and national destruction. From a moral and a humanitarian standpoint, as well as from selfish and purely national reasons, we should demand that the peace treaty be disposed of.

It is important, in my judgment, that Germany should soon be admitted into the league of nations. The maintenance of the new nations created under the peace treaty, the stabilization of European conditions, the restoration of economic and industrial conditions, which will permit development and progress upon the part of the nations of the earth, the establishment and maintenance of the peace of the world, all these important desiderata can only be realized when the treaty is effective and the league of nations becomes operative.

As I have suggested, Senators have a solemn duty resting upon them. They can not evade responsibility. If action is not taken by other Senators within a short time, I shall appeal to the Senate to consider in open executive session the resolution now pending for the ratification of the treaty with Germany.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I had the distinguished honor in December, 1908, I believe it was, of addressing, on behalf of the governors of the several States, the national conservation congress which was held in this city, at which meeting the then distinguished President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, presided, and the President elect, Hon. William Howard Taft, was one of the speakers. All of us, I believe, were of one mind with regard to the conservation of natural resources.

Ever since that date I have favored the conservation of the natural resources of our country, but I did not then and do not now believe that true conservation consists in locking up from the people resources the development of which is so vital to the welfare of our country. Because I entertained that opinion then, and because I entertain it now, I am in favor of the pending measure known as the water-power bill.

I shall briefly address myself to the subject generally, though not to the specific provisions of the bill itself. I may do that a little later on, but shall content myself now with at least having in the RECORD the views which I entertain with reference to the general subject of water power.

Less than 3 per cent of the coal of the United States is contained in the Pacific coast States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and California, and yet while these eight States contain 44,000,000 horsepower, or 70 per cent of the total water-power resources of the Nation, but 2.8 per cent has been developed. And this, while enormous quantities of coal are being shipped in from other far distant States, and being imported every day in train and shiploads from Canada.

Those States are like children stunted of growth because of lack of exercise. They contain the energy, the wherewithal to make themselves of stature as great as their eastern sister States which have been given free use without cost of the parent Federal Government's harbors and other properties. And yet, through withdrawals and restrictive laws and conditions, those younger States of the far West have been unable to utilize the water powers and other property of the Federal Government. Congress has not treated the younger States with the generosity accorded to the older ones. But Congress has been very short-sighted in this. The development of the water powers of the far West would be of enormous benefit to the property of the Federal Government located in that region.

The total land-surface area of the 11 public-domain States of the West is 755,915,560 acres, of which 471,033,227 acres is in public ownership and 284,882,333 acres in private ownership. That is, the public domain comprises 62 per cent of the total area of these States, or an area approximately as large as the entire United States east of the Mississippi River.

Over 60 per cent of the wasting water powers of the United States are located in streams in the undeveloped portions of the public domain in the far West. The electric energy which could be produced from these water powers would be within easy reach by transmission lines of vast areas of lands, mineral deposits, and other natural resources owned by the Federal Government. These great properties, at present idle and in their present condition almost worthless, could be utilized and made of great value through the development of the water powers in their midst. The land would be brought under cultivation through electrically operated pumping plants, and power would be available to open up mines, operate smelters, and for other purposes.

Cities, towns, and villages all over the country offer free sites and cash bonuses to induce the building of manufacturing plants, because they bring increased population, increase taxable values, and enhance the value of all near-by property.

Why, therefore, would it not be good business for the Government to render the development of these water powers as attractive as possible? Why is it not manifestly in the public interest that Congress enact such legislation as will encourage men and capital to undertake the development of this great national resource, which would vastly increase the value of the public domain, would increase the national wealth, and would be accomplished without taxation and by private capital?

Under the railroad right-of-way act of March 3, 1875, any incorporated railroad may obtain free right of way through any of the public lands of the United States by merely filing a map of its proposed line. The same is true for telephone and telegraph lines, and in the oil-producing public-land States for oil pipe lines. These free rights of way are granted because their building is pioneer work often through localities practically uninhabited, and because their installation means the development and increased value of the Government lands through which they pass. The development of water power is to an equal extent pioneer work, and of a much more hazardous nature than the building of railroads and installation of telephone and telegraph lines, and the benefits accruing to the public through enhancing the value of the public domain are fully as great, and therefore the Government in the public interest should encourage the development of the now wasting water powers of the country to the fullest extent possible.

For these reasons and because our far Western States can not increase much further in wealth and population until they are allowed to utilize the national resources in their midst, I do not want to see the bill which we have under consideration made so restrictive in its terms as to make it impossible to secure capital for development purposes, and thus continue the present stagnation in water-power development. I have been making a plea for Oregon and her sister States, but water-power legislation can not be considered a local or a sectional question. To encourage water-power development is a national duty. It concerns every citizen of the United States, whether he dwells in the vicinity of a water power, in a city, or upon the plains of Iowa. Power is now one of the big items in the high cost of living. It has been figured that $2 out of the price of a suit or overcoat represents the amount paid for coal alone. Food costs are up because of the high cost of transporting them from the source of supply to the markets, and the transportation rates are high because of the abnormal cost of power, and it looks as though the rates were still further to be increased before this Congress adjourns.

The things used and consumed in every household are affected by the price of which those things can be produced under the cheapest of conditions. The cost of food, of clothing, of fertilizers, of explosives, and the convenience and facility of transportation would all be beneficially affected by the development of water power to the utmost extent of its usefulness.

To meet the necessities and requirements of the citizens of every State of the Union, and to promote their prosperity and the comfort of their living, the Federal Government should be generous with the Western States in this matter, and it can not afford not to be generous.

Coal shortage brings up again the folly of leaving unused the Nation's vast resources of water power. The more these are developed the less desperate will be the fuel stringency. The waste is not alone one of money. It extends in its final direct results to public health and life itself as these are affected by the inability to get coal for heating and for the production of the necessaries of life.

It is estimated that $5,000,000,000 worth of potential water power is lost every year. This may or may not be accurate. The simplest reasoning shows that the amount lost is enormous.

May I say here that on the Columbia River alone, between The Dalles and Celilo, a little station up river a distance of 8 miles, there is a fall of 89 feet where the whole of the Columbia River, accumulating its power and strength from its upper waters in British Columbia, flows and would furnish power that would operate the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Co. along the south bank of the river and the Northern Pacific Railroad on the north bank of the river, besides furnishing power and light and heat to adjoining cities.

An authority has said that "enough hydroelectric energy is running to waste in the United States to equal the daily labor of 1,800,000,000 men, or thirty times the adult population of the Nation."

Some experts estimate that our coal supply at present consumption and with the increase that will come with increased population will exhaust all our anthracite coal deposits and all of our high-grade deposits of bituminous coal within 100 years. I know that that statement has been denied more than once, but it is as strenuously affirmed on the other side of the question.

The United States, possessing more than one-half of the total coal deposits of the earth and mining more coal than any other nation, is also the heaviest coal consumer. Every year there is mined three-quarters of a ton of coal in the world for every man, woman, and child on the face of the globe. But the United States burns 4½ tons for each inhabitant. England burns 3½ tons per capita each year, while France consumes but a ton and a half for each inhabitant. Although America has 1 out of every 15 of the earth's people within its borders and mines 2 out of every 4 tons of coal produced, nearly all of our production is consumed in our own homes and industries.

Only one-sixth of our coal consumption is for heat production. Another one-sixth goes into the making of coke and gas. The other two-thirds goes into the production of power, with which our manifold industries are kept going. During the last 20 years the population of the United States has increased 42 per cent, yet in this same period of time our consumption of coal has increased 172 per cent. New industries, the employment of more mechanical means for doing the world's work, and constant world demand for more and more of America's goods have swelled the coal consumption to an enormous figure. Early this year it was estimated that the total coal needs of the Nation for the year 1919 amounted to 530,000,000 tons, of which 33,000,000 tons were held in reserve.

If our population shall continue to increase during the next 20 years as it has in the last two decades, and industrial expansion shall call for coal on the same scale that it has since the beginning of the new century, it is likely that our total consumption by the year 1940 will have reached the astounding figure of 1,400,000,000 tons.

Another matter to be considered is the quantity of coal being exported to other countries. Our total coal exports are increasing by leaps and bounds. Back in 1900 they were a negligible quantity, but by 1913 they had jumped to 20,000,000 tons; last year they had climbed to 26,000,000 tons; and this year the demands are greater than ever before. China needs more than 3,000,000 tons; France, 17,000,000 tons; Belgium, 12,000,000 tons, and the Netherlands 8,000,000 tons. Denmark, Switzerland, South America, the British Isles, Scandinavia, Greece, Portugal, and the North African countries have their hands—or their empty bunkers—outstretched toward the United States.

But it is bituminous coal that is the burning question of the day. It is the basis of our industrial life. Government geologists tell us that we have in the United States close to fourteen hundred billion tons of soft coal. This sounds good, but it is not. Less than 5 per cent of our bituminous deposits are first-class coal. Almost all our production to date has been of the best grades of soft coal. There remain inferior grades of coal. The prediction that by 1940 we will be using close to a billion and a half tons of coal is therefore conservative, since the falling back upon inferior grades of coal will likely entail a greater consumption in order to get the required number of energy units.

Since the 1st of January, 1919, in New England alone, fuel oil from Mexico has replaced nearly 2,000,000 tons of coal. New England takes the initiative in the matter for very definite reasons. She produces not a ton of coal of her own, being entirely without native supply; yet New England consumes more than 5 per cent of all the coal mined in the United States.

The railroads are one of the greatest coal-consuming agencies. Out of every 100 tons of coal mined it takes 5 tons of coal to run the transportation agencies that put that coal on the market. In 1914 our railroads hauled about 1,000,000,000 ton-miles and consumed an equivalent of 140,000,000 tons of coal. Had all this work been done electrically, 100,000,000 tons of coal or its equivalent in oil could have been saved in 12 months. It has been repeatedly pointed out that solution of the problem of fuel waste by the railroads can be solved by the electrification of all carriers. Cost of motive power amounts to 30 per cent in the operation of a steam railroad. One ton of coal converted into electric energy for an electric railway locomotive will do as much work as 4 tons of coal burned under steam boilers.

I presume there is not a Member of the Senate who at some time has not taken a trip west from St. Paul over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad and seen how that road is electrically operated for hundreds of miles, the power being generated by the mountain streams along the railway right of way.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I yield.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator gives 100,000,000 tons of coal a year as the saving to be realized if the water power that is available were developed.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Yes; 100,000,000 tons.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That, at the rate of $3 a ton, would amount to $300,000,000 a year.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. So that we are practically losing $1,000,000 a day every day we delay this legislation.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I think we are; I do not think there is any question as to that, and that is the reason I am addressing myself to the subject generally rather than to the specific provisions of the bill, in order to call attention to these matters. I am particularly anxious to have the Senator listen to what I shall say now as to what the countries that have just gone through the devastations of war are doing to meet this very situation. The United States has an opportunity now to do likewise and is in a much better position to do so, not having suffered much from the war as compared with her allies. Now, notice what France and Sweden are about to do in the way of utilizing their water powers.

Notwithstanding her present disastrous financial and economic situation, there is ample evidence that France, with characteristic courage, has determined to surmount her momentary difficulties and take that position in the world which her magnificent natural advantages have placed within her reach.

Since Alsace and Lorraine have been restored to her the industrial situation of France is largely explained by two fundamental facts: France has an abundance of iron ore and a shortage of coal. In normal times France consumes about 60,000,000 tons of coal per annum, and her coal mines produce about 40,000,000 tons.

Practical economists in France long ago realized that by utilizing the rapid current of the Rhone, which is one of the swiftest rivers in Europe, France would be able not only to provide herself with sufficient motive power largely to compensate for her chronic deficit in coal, but also greatly to improve her internal transport facilities, and at the same time to develop a system of irrigation that would bring a large amount of hitherto sterile land under cultivation. Throughout the war, in spite of all the obstacles in the way, this dream of harnessing the Rhone has been steadily pushed toward fulfillment, with the result that during the last weeks of the parliamentary session a bill to provide the necessary facilities passed and has now become law. The plan, briefly stated, is to construct a canal from the Swiss frontier to the Mediterranean. In the construction of this canal the bed of the Rhone itself will be utilized whenever possible, the swiftness of the current being modified by means of a series of locks and dams, the latter being utilized to generate electric energy and for irrigation purposes. It is estimated that as a result of the plans provided some 585,000 acres of agricultural land at various points of the river's course will be brought under irrigation. Nineteen large generating stations are to be provided, which will furnish electrical energy ranging from 12,000 to over 70,000 horsepower per station. This is all done by private capital. Those having the scheme in hand estimate that the river is capable of generating energy equivalent to 760,000 horsepower, which is equal to a saving of 4,500,000 tons of coal. By the terms of the agreement 300,000 horsepower of the energy generated is reserved for the use of consumers in Paris, and the balance of 460,000 horsepower will be utilized by metallurgical, electrochemical, and other industries in the Rhone Valley, for electric traction on the river Rhone, for the electrification of railroad systems, for pumping irrigation water, and so forth. From the point of view of international transport the development of the plans in prospect is obviously of the highest importance, as it will render possible a vast internal system of waterways connecting Marseille and the great industrial region around Lyon directly with the channel and North Sea ports, as well as with the Rhine and central Europe. The cost of carrying out the plans provided for under the act is estimated at $500,000,000, as compared with a prewar estimate of $200,000,000.

It is also proposed to develop the French bank of the Rhine as a source of electrical power. It is proposed to construct a canal between 75 and 80 miles long, to run parallel to the Rhine between Hunigen and Strassburg. This canal will be 65 feet in width and will have a navigable depth of 20 feet, which will be sufficient for the largest vessels that are used on the Rhine. Plans are included for the transformation of Strassburg into a great river port. Ten hydroelectric power stations are to be constructed along this canal, each capable of generating 70,000 horsepower. The cost of carrying out this scheme is placed at $200,000,000. Another canal project which has received parliamentary sanction recently is for the construction of a waterway from Longwy, the capital of the Lorraine iron fields, to Dunkirk on the North Sea, with a branch canal to Cologne. Work on this canal, which will place the great French ore beds and ironworks in direct connection with British ports, is to be begun in the near future.

Mr. President, if France, having been bled white in the loss of her young manhood, and having become almost bankrupt in the ordinary acceptation of that term, is yet willing, or her citizens are willing, to undertake these great schemes for the betterment of the people of France, why should not those in the United States who are willing to invest in water-power projects, if only the Government will permit them to do so, be allowed that privilege by appropriately safeguarded legislation?

Sweden has given up hope of getting coal either from England or Germany in the quantity she did before the war, and has determined to develop every ounce of hydroelectric energy possible in the kingdom. She was so short of coal in 1917 that she burned 825,000,000 cubic feet of the country's wood supply in her railroad locomotives. This would deforest Sweden if continued, for the annual growth of timber is only 600,000,000 cubic feet.

Under the strange conditions of recent times the costs of fuel in 1918 represented nearly 70 per cent of the expense of transportation in Sweden as against 30 per cent in the United States.

In 1917 the Swedish railways paid $20 a ton for coal. Last year the price was $46.90 per ton, and ever since then it has been rising. Therefore Sweden is proceeding with the work of developing as near as possible the entire 5,000,000 horsepower contained within that country.

The United States must not fall behind European countries in conserving its coal deposits, and in developing the vast amount of cheap electric energy contained in its wasting water powers.

All the available water power should be developed, and in the quickest time possible, in the interest of the economic uplift of the country, of its social regenaration, and of its wealth, and in order to permit it to secure its share of the markets of the world. Hydroelectric energy gives us the means of saving our coal, enables us to obtain electricity at a low price, to lower in many cases our industrial costs of production, and to improve our agriculture. It will become the surest weapon in the economic struggle which faces us.

And, Mr. President, I believe that with appropriate legislation the time is not far distant when practically every railroad west of the Mississippi River will be electrically operated, just as the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad is now electrically operated for a distance of over 700 miles. Not only could the western railroads be so operated because of the magnificent water powers and streams in that section but there are many sections of the East were electrical energy could be developed as cheaply as it can be developed in the West, if we but had appropriate legislation to permit private capital to be invested in such projects.

Therefore, Mr. President, I shall vote for this bill cheerfully, and I hope that nothing may happen to retard its progress. It may be that some amendments may have to be adopted, but upon the whole it seems to me that the rights of the public, the rights of the Government, are amply protected under the general provisions of the bill.

WORK OF THE SPECIAL SESSION.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I understand it is the intention to adjourn early, and it is not likely that the pending bill will be acted upon this afternoon. I wish to take a few minutes of the time of the Senate to discuss another matter.

The great newspapers of the country were so full of news about the treaty of peace, the league of nations, and the illness of the President that I fear they did not carry as much information about the work of the extra session of Congress as they usually carry about a session of Congress.

An examination of the record will show that a large number of important measures were enacted into law, and that as much or more was accomplished as is usually the case during an ordinary session, and there was much more saved to the taxpayers.

When the session opened there were seven great supply bills which had failed to pass during the last regular session, in which the Democrats had a majority in the House and Senate. These seven measures, as passed at the extra session of Congress, carried, in round numbers, $940,000,000 less than the Democratic measures which had failed at the regular session, and the actual appropriations were $1,685,000,000 less than the amount estimated by the heads of the various departments. The reductions were largely in the Army, Navy, and sundry civil appropriation bills, the decreases in these measures being as follows: Army, $468,000,000; Navy, $208,500,000; and the sundry civil, $246,000,000.

During the session other measures were taken up and finally disposed of. The constitutional amendment providing for woman suffrage was passed and submitted to the States for ratification. The women of the country have been working for the passage of this amendment for more than 50 years, and while the question was nonpartisan, I am confident that a majority of the people of the United States were pleased when success came, and they will thank the Republican majority in the House and Senate for acting upon this important measure so soon after the session opened.

Then, there was the act for the enforcement of national prohibition; this measure was vetoed by the President and was repassed over his veto. This was very important legislation, as the amendment had been ratified by three-fourths of the States.

The so-called daylight-saving act was repealed, and the act was vetoed by the President and repassed over his veto.

The bill to restore to the Interstate Commerce Commission its prewar powers of rate fixing was passed, but it was vetoed by the President. A measure was enacted amending and strengthening the Lever food and fuel control law; its provisions were enlarged, and severe penalties were imposed upon those found guilty of hoarding and profiteering. The law was amended so as to enable the Department of Justice to prosecute those who are responsible for the high cost of living. The telegraph, telephone, and cables were returned to their owners by proper legislation.

An appropriation of $750,000,000 was made for the Railroad Administration to enable it to take care of the roads under Government control and operation. The administration asked for $1,250,000,000, but the sum was reduced to $750,000,000. The administration had been given $500,000,000 in an appropriation bill which passed in the previous Congress. The Railroad Administration has had the sum of $1,250,000,000 appropriated for its use.

In addition, the following measures were enacted:

A joint resolution temporarily to protect the dye industry of this country.

A bill to regulate the entry of aliens into the United States, and authorizing the President to prescribe rules and regulations and fixing severe penalties for the violation of the provisions of the act.

An act making it unlawful to transport stolen automobiles and other motor vehicles in interstate commerce.

An act providing for the completion of the Alaskan Railroad and making a part of the required appropriations.

An act to incorporate the American Legion.

An act to provide for vocational rehabilitation and the return to civil employment of disabled persons discharged from the military or naval forces of the United States. This law will be of the greatest benefit to the brave men who entered the service and offered their lives to their country and who were disabled while performing such service.

An act providing for additional compensation for employees of the Postal Service. This act did not go as far as it should, but it gives partial recognition to these men who have been underpaid for years.

An act to provide for the payment of travel pay to men upon discharge who enlisted in the Regular Army prior to April 2, 1917.

The following legislation was carried in various appropriation bills:

In the sundry civil act:

A limitation on the appropriation for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. This was to prevent the expenditures of the appropriations for reimbursements to Government-owned hospitals.

To prevent the duplication of public-health activities. It was shown that in the city of Washington there were over 40 different branches engaged in public-health activities, many of which involved an unnecessary duplication of work.

Provision for naturalization service and appropriating approximately $390,000 for Americanization work.

To exclude certain radical classes of aliens from the United States, and provisions for the enforcement of the immigration law.

Requiring heads of departments to purchase from other departments materials and supplies no longer needed because of the cessation of war activities.

Post Office act:

Directing the Post Office Department to purchase, as far as practicable aeroplane machines, supplies, and so forth, from the War and Navy Departments.

Adjustment of salaries of clerks in first and second class post offices.

Classification of salaries of railway postal clerks.

Providing for a commission to investigate the salaries of postmasters and employees. Transferring of road-construction machinery and supplies to the Post Office Department by the War Department. Additional appropriations for road work.

By the Army appropriation act:

The disposal of real property acquired during the war by sale or lease.

Placing certain medical and surgical supplies at the disposal of the American Red Cross.

Preventing Government employees from representing those who have claims against the Government.

By the first deficiency appropriation act:

Providing for the transportation of alien enemies to places of internment and to remove them to the countries of which they are citizens.

Provisions for the detection and prosecutions of enemies.

Investigation of the scope and character of statistics needed by the Government to prevent the duplication of work.

By the Indian appropriation act:

Authorizing the leasing of mineral lands within Indian reservations in certain States.

By the third deficiency appropriation act:

Legislation concerning the duties of the Alien Property Custodian and authorizing that officer to dispose of certain property in his custody.

Requiring records, books, and papers to be transferred to the Bureau of Efficiency, so as to enable that bureau to make an investigation as to the duplication of work.

Prohibiting the payment of propaganda by executive departments from public funds. This will lead to prohibiting an abuse of the use of Government funds by heads of departments. There was covered into the Treasury unexpended balances to the amount of $95,000,000.

I have not attempted to enumerate all the acts and joint resolutions passed at the extra session, but have given a few of the most important. Nor have I traced all the legislation carried in the various appropriation bills, but have called attention to enough to show that much-needed legislation was enacted in some of them.

There were 93 public laws and 18 joint resolutions passed at the last session. It will be seen from the data furnished that some very important legislation was enacted. Then, there were a number of very important bills which passed one House or the other and some measures were acted upon by both bodies and are now in conference.

A very good start has been made by the new Congress. Many bills are pending, more will be introduced, many of which will be enacted into law before the end of this Congress.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

Mr. HARRISON. I offer an amendment to the pending bill, which I send to the desk, so that it may be printed and be considered at the proper time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That order will be made.

Mr. HARRISON's amendment proposes to add the following proviso:

Provided, That this act shall not apply to the waters of the St. Lawrence or Niagara Rivers.

Mr. NELSON. I ask that the reading of the bill be resumed; and I desire to state that at 4 o'clock, at the instance of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], I shall move an adjournment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed, beginning with section 20, page 31, line 15.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 20, page 32, line 15, after the word "section," to insert "and securities issued by the licensee subject to such regulations shall be allowed only for the bona fide purpose of financing and conducting the business of such licensee," so as to make the paragraph read:

That when said power or any part thereof shall enter into interstate or foreign commerce the rates charged and the service rendered by any such licensee, or by any subsidiary corporation, the stock of which is owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such licensee, or by any person, corporation, or association purchasing power from such licensee for sale and distribution or use in public service shall be reasonable, nondiscriminatory, and just to the customer and all unreasonable, discriminatory, and unjust rates or services are hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful; and whenever any of the States directly concerned has not provided a commission or other authority to enforce the requirements of this section within such State or to regulate and control the amount and character of securities to be issued by any of such parties or such States are unable to agree through their properly constituted authorities on the services to be rendered or on the rates or charges of payment therefor, or on the amount or character of securities to be issued by any of said parties, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the commission, upon complaint of any person aggrieved, upon the request of any State concerned, or upon its own initiative to enforce the provisions of this section, to regulate and control so much of the services rendered, and of the rates and charges of payment therefor as constitute interstate or foreign commerce and to regulate the issuance of securities by the parties included within this section, and securities issued by the licensee subject to such regulations shall be allowed only for the bona fide purpose of financing and conducting the business of such licensee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 9, before the word "such," to strike out "of" and insert "to," so as to make the paragraph read:

The administration of the provisions of this section, so far as applicable, shall be according to the procedure and practice in fixing and regulating the rates, charges, and practices of railroad companies as provided in the act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended, and that the parties subject to such regulation shall have the same rights of hearing, defense, and review as said companies in such cases.

In any valuation of the property of any licensee hereunder for purposes of rate making, no value shall be claimed by the licensee or allowed by the commission for any project or projects under license in excess of the value or values prescribed in section 14 hereof for the purposes of purchase by the United States, but there shall be included the cost to such licensee of the construction of the lock or locks or other aids of navigation and all other capital expenditures required by the United States, and no value shall be claimed or allowed for the rights granted by the commission or by this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 21, page 33, line 21, after the word "thereto," to insert "in conjunction with an improvement which in the judgment of the commission is desirable and justified in the public interest for the purpose of improving or developing a waterway or waterways for the use or benefit of interstate or foreign commerce," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 21. That when the licensee is a municipal corporation, or a political subdivision of a State, or a public-service agent of a State, or a public utility or service corporation, and can not acquire by contract or pledges the right to use or damage the lands or property of others necessary to the construction, maintenance, or operation of any dam, reservoir, diversion structure, or the works appurtenant or accessory thereto, in conjunction with an improvement which in the judgment of the commission is desirable and justified in the public interest for the purpose of improving or developing a waterway or waterways for the use or benefit of interstate or foreign commerce, it may acquire the same by the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the district court of the United States for the district in which such land or other property may be located, or in the State courts. The practice and procedure in any action or proceeding for that purpose in the district court of the United States shall conform as nearly as may be with the practice and procedure in similar action or proceeding in the courts of the State where the property is situated: Provided, That United States district courts shall only have jurisdiction of cases when the amount claimed by the owner of the property to be condemned exceeds $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 22, page 34, line 17, before the word "approval," to strike out "joint," and after the word "approval" to strike out "of the commission and," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 22. That whenever the public interest requires or justifies the execution by the licensee of contracts for the sale and delivery of power for periods extending beyond the date of termination of the license, such contracts may be entered into upon the approval of the public-service commission or other similar authority in the State in which the sale or delivery of power is made, or if sold or delivered in a State which has no such public-service commission, then upon the approval of the commission; and thereafter, in the event of failure to issue a new license to the original licensee at the termination of the license, the United States or the new licensee, as the case may be, shall assume and fulfill all such contracts.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in section 23, page 35, line 4, after the word "as," to strike out the word "revoking" and insert the word "affecting," and in line 5, after the word "as," to strike out the word "revoking" and insert the word "affecting," so as to read:

That the provisions of this act shall not be construed as affecting any permit or valid existing right of way heretofore granted, or as affecting any authority heretofore given pursuant to law, but any person, association, corporation, State, or municipality holding or possessing such permit, right of way, or authority may apply for a license hereunder, and upon such application the commission may issue to any such applicant a license in accordance with the provisions of this act, and in such case the provisions of this act shall apply to such applicant as a licensee hereunder.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 23, page 35, line 13, after the word "hereunder," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That when application is made for a license under this section for a project or projects already constructed, the fair value of said project or projects, determined as provided below in this section, shall for the purposes of this act and of said license be deemed to be the amount to be allowed as the net investment of the applicant in such project or projects as of the date of such license, or as of the date of such determination, if license has not been issued. Such fair value may, in the discretion of the commission, be determined by mutual agreement between the commission and the applicant, or, in case they can not agree, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the district court of the United States in the district within which such project or projects may be located, upon the application of either party, to hear and determine the amount of such fair value.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, to strike out line 3 to line 20, inclusive, in the following words:

As to all streams or parts of streams, other than streams the use of which is herein authorized to be licensed, over which Congress has jurisdiction under its authority to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, permission is hereby given to construct dams therein: Provided, That any applicant who proposes to construct a dam in any such last-mentioned stream or part of stream may at his option make application to the commission and if the contemplated improvement is, in the judgment of the commission, desirable and justified in the public interest for the purpose of improving or developing a waterway or waterways for the use or benefit of navigation in interstate or foreign commerce, the applicant may receive a license under the conditions with all of the rights and privileges herein provided for streams or parts of streams used for the transportation of persons or property in interstate or foreign commerce in their ordinary, natural, or improved condition.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, after line 20, to insert:

That any person, association, corporation, State, or municipality intending to construct a dam or other project works across, along, over, or in any stream or part thereof, other than those defined herein as navigable waters, and over which Congress has jurisdiction under its authority to regulate commerce between foreign nations and among the several States, may in its discretion file declaration of such intention with the commission, whereupon the commission shall cause immediate investigation of such proposed construction to be made, and if upon investigation it shall find that the interests of interstate or foreign commerce would be affected by such proposed construction, such person, association, corporation, State, or municipality shall not proceed with such construction until it shall have applied for and shall have received a license under the provisions of this act. If the commission shall not so find, and if no public lands or reservations are affected, permission is hereby granted to construct such dam or other project works in such stream upon compliance with State laws.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, this disposes of all except two or three controverted items in the bill. In view of the fact that it is nearly 4 o'clock, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, January 9, 1920, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, January 8, 1920.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in heaven, we stand before Thee as servants and wait upon Thy commands. Inspire us with wisdom, courage, fortitude, that we may divest ourselves of inordinate desires, selfish ambitions, and unholy purposes, that we may love mercy, do justly, and walk humbly with Thee.

Thou hast given us a Government through our fathers, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal—a stupendous trust—and we pray that we may hold sacred those eternal truths, live them, and thus prove ourselves worthy of such preferment. In the spirit of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. DUPRÉ. Mr. Speaker, under a special order my colleague, Mr. O'CONNOR, was given consent to address the House for 20 minutes on the Battle of New Orleans. He is unavoidably detained in Louisiana, and I ask that the order be vacated, and I trust that the House will at some subsequent time permit him to deliver the address which, I understand, he has prepared.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the governor of my State, J. A. E. Robertson, dealing with the question of the reorganization of the State militia. At the governors' conference held in Utah last year he was appointed, with one other governor whose name I do not recall, to make an investigation of the reorganization of militia, and this embodies the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to report the annual Post Office appropriation bill with a report thereon.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11578) making appropriations for the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas reserves all points of order on the bill, and it is referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to prefer a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that should the same become necessary and it is not objected to by the minority leader, the distinguished gentleman from Missouri, there be held an all-night session in the city of Washington to-night in the interest of all the people of the United States.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the request.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I will withdraw it.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a resolution passed by representatives of several counties of Illinois, consisting of county superintendents of highways, chairmen of county boards, and chairmen of committees on State-aid roads, assembled in convention at Quincy, Ill., December 5, 1919, on the subject of Federal distribution of auto trucks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on February 12, after the reading of the Journal and disposition of business on the Speaker's table, that 20 minutes be allowed to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WEBSTER] to address the House on the life and character of Abraham Lincoln.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that on February 12 the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WEBSTER] be allowed to address the House for 20 minutes on the life and character of Lincoln. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to direct the attention of the gentleman from Wyoming to this request, so that he may have warning that such requests are likely to come up in the future. I do not know whether he intends to get through this session in time for us to get home in June or July or not, but if he does he must begin to understand now that these unanimous requests for opportunity to speak at some future date are likely to interfere with the pressing business of the House.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I have not changed my mind with regard to requests of the character to which the gentleman refers. I do not believe it is good policy for the House to grant such requests. I do not think we ought to get in the habit of setting dates for speeches on one subject and another; but gentlemen constantly approach me in regard to the matter, insisting that no one Member of the House should insist upon his view in regard to all these matters, and of late the insistence has been that we should make an exception of speeches on the anniversaries of great happenings. For instance, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. O'CONNOR] was to have spoken this morning on the Battle of New Orleans. The gentleman from Washington now desires to discuss on the Lincoln anniversary matters connected with the life and character of that great man, I assume.

Mr. FESS. The gentleman from Washington made no such request. The gentleman from Ohio has made the request in the interest of the country in the life of Lincoln. That day is a holiday, and we will not likely adjourn, but certainly we would not refuse to take a little time to consider the present-day lessons of the life and character of that great man.

Mr. GARNER. If the gentleman will yield, I only drew the attention of the gentleman from Wyoming to this matter for the reason I drew his attention the other day—for the protection of the RECORD. The gentleman from Wyoming has been selected to lead on his side of the House. The gentleman from Missouri has been selected as leader on our side of the House. These onerous duties—and some of them are very disagreeable—belong to those two gentlemen, and, if they are to have the honor and plaudits to which I think they are entitled as leaders on the respective sides of the House, they must assume the responsibility of caring for the RECORD and caring for the future progress of the House of Representatives; and especially is that duty on the gentleman from Wyoming. I agree that these unanimous consents ought not to be granted, but if we should grant them in one case we will be forced to in another, else we bring about great friction.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, having agreed that the gentleman from Louisiana should have the opportunity of discussing the Battle of New Orleans, having agreed to the discussion of the Irish republic and discussion of the anniversary of the statehood of the State of Maine, I do not feel I can object to a discussion of the life and character of one of the greatest men in all time on the anniversary of his birth.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 11368.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the construction of five new pumping plants, including the sinking of wells, installation of pumping machinery, construction of tanks for domestic and stock water, and necessary structures for the development and distribution of a supply of water for Papago Indian villages in southern Arizona, $35,000; for operation and maintenance of constructed works for these villages, $17,000; in all, $52,000.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Dudley, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 10137) to amend an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. WALTER ALLEN WATSON, late a Representative from the State of Virginia.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of deceased the Senate do now adjourn.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

For completing the construction by the Indian Service of a dam with a bridge superstructure and the necessary controlling works for diverting water from the Gila River for the irrigation of Indian land and Indian allotments on the Gila River Indian Reservation, Ariz., as recommended by the Board of Engineers of the United States Army in paragraph 217 of its report to the Secretary of War of February 14, 1914 (H. Doc. No. 791), $150,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, reimbursable as provided in section 2 of the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. L., p. 522): Provided, That the limit of cost of the said dam and bridge fixed by the act of May 25, 1918 (40 Stat. L., p. 569), is hereby changed from $250,000 to $400,000.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the language on line 7, page 24, by striking out the words in lines 6 and 7, "to be immediately available."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] anticipated the chairman in that request. That language got into the bill without the knowledge of the chairman, who followed the bill as carefully as he knew how. We ask to have the words on page 24, beginning in line 6, after the item of $150,000, "to be immediately available," striken out.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has already been sustained.

Mr. SNYDER. I am striking out the language——.

Mr. MADDEN. That strikes it out.

Mr. SNYDER (continuing). "To be immediately available and to remain available until expended."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

For completing the construction by the Indian Service of a diversion dam and necessary controlling works for diverting water from the Gila River at a site above Florence, Ariz., as provided by the act of May 18, 1916 (39 Stat. L., p. 130), $75,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That the total cost is hereby changed from $175,000 to $250,000, to remain available until expended, reimbursable as provided by the aforesaid act of May 18, 1916.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the words "to be immediately available," in line 17, page 24.

Mr. SNYDER. That is agreeable.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. SNYDER. We do not care to discuss it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to make an investigation of the conditions on the Papago Indian Reservation in Arizona, with respect to the necessity of constructing a road between Ajo and Tucson, across said reservation, and to submit his report thereon to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1920, which report shall include a recommendation by the said Secretary as to what proportionate part of the construction of said road should be paid by the United States on behalf of the Papago Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday we passed over the item on pages 15 and 16, referring to heirship matters, and I desire to take that up now and ask unanimous consent to return to those pages to complete the section with regard to the matter contained therein.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks unanimous consent is not necessary.

Mr. SNYDER. I desire to offer a committee amendment, which was presented, pending the point of order raised yesterday.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order was reserved on the amendment, and before the amendment is offered the point of order would have to be withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands, the point of order was reserved, and unanimous consent was given to pass it over.

Mr. SNYDER. The point of order was reserved, and the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. EVANS] has presented an amendment to the committee, which is agreeable so far as the committee is concerned, and which it is willing to accept.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska. And the reservation of the point of order is withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 16, line 13, after the words "as herein provided," insert the following: "Provided further, That in the absence of any good-faith contest on question of fact material and relevant to the determination of the heirs of an Indian decedent, no fee shall be charged against the estate of such Indian decedent under the provision of this paragraph unless final order determining the heirs of such decedent shall have been made within one year after the death of such decedent, and if such decedent dies subsequent to June 1, 1920; if such decedent dies prior to June 1, 1920, then such final order must be made prior to May 1, 1921, or no fee shall be chargeable against the estate of such decedent."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Where is it proposed to insert the amendment?

The CLERK. Page 16, line 13, after the words "as herein provided."

Mr. BEE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to strike out the last word to ask the gentleman from New York a question for information only. Why do the provisions of this paragraph exclude the Osage and the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma?

Mr. SNYDER. Because the affairs of this kind are taken care of wholly by the courts in the State of Oklahoma by treaty arrangement.

Mr. BEE. Of these two tribes?

Mr. SNYDER. Of those two tribes.

Mr. CARTER. The Five Civilized Tribes are all citizens of the United States, and all of their matters, such as the determination of heirship, are settled by the probate courts and the fees taken out of the estate.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the purchase of lands for the homeless Indians in California, including improvements thereon, for the use and occupancy of said Indians, $10,000, said funds to be expended under such regulations and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. We have been carrying this item in the appropriation bill, I think, for many years. Are they still proceeding to purchase lands for the homeless Indians in California under the item or is this for the purpose of making improvements?

Mr. SNYDER. California seems to be infested in certain sections with a lot of hopeless and homeless Indians who ought to be cared for by the State of California itself, on the same theory that the Seminoles ought to be taken care of by the State of Florida itself, in the judgment of the chairman of the committee. But this amount has been carried in the bill for several years, and great pressure was brought to bear upon the committee to keep it in, and under such pressure we left it in, believing that perhaps for a year or two, on account of the hopeless conditions of those Indians, they should have this assistance.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I do not remember the date, but I recall this item first coming up in the appropriation bill, and if I remember correctly we were told that probably with $10,000 they could provide sufficient homes to meet the necessities of the case, and year after year we make the same appropriation. Now, in the very nature of things, it is not one of those things that run from year to year. If there are homeless Indians there for whom it is our duty to provide homes, we ought to do it. If there are not, we should stop it.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that we cut in two the appropriation of last year. Where they had $20,000 last year we are giving them only $10,000 this year.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. My impression was that it started at $10,000 some years ago.

Mr. CARTER. It did.

Mr. SNYDER. We hope to cut it out next year entirely.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The truth is we give certain Indians their lands, and let them squander them, and let the people of the States get them away from them, and after that is done we proceed to buy more lands for the Indians. It is an endless chain.

Mr. SNYDER. Let me read this extract from the statement furnished by the Indian Bureau:

Prior to 1913, there had been expended $144,470.45 in the purchase of 6,420 acres of land in behalf of 3,291 landless Indians of California. Between 1913 and the beginning of the present fiscal year there had been expended $16,231.59 in the purchase of 1,317 acres for approximately 1,082 Indians. This makes a total expenditure of $160,702.04 for the benefit of approximately 5,003 Indians. At the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919, negotiations were pending for the purchase of three separate tracts, involving a total expenditure of $15,950. One of these purchases has been fully consummated, and it is believed that the other two will be completed. The records of this office show that the per capita expenditure for land purchased for the landless Indians of California is about $15. There remain about 2,600 homeless Indians to be provided for, and upon a per capita basis of $15 each it would require about $39,000 for land alone, without any margin for expenses and incidentals. It is estimated that the appropriation asked for will meet the requirements of less than one-half of the homeless Indians, leaving the others to be provided for by future appropriations.

We gave them one-half of what they asked for.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Do I understand that you can buy a home in that great State of California for an Indian and equip it for $15? I did not suppose you could look at anything in California for that small amount of money.

Mr. ELSTON. We have an unusual range of land values there, running from $15 up to $15,000 an acre.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. No; $15,000 is a small sum to be expended in California for a home.

Mr. SNYDER. We feel that that item is justified, and we would be pleased to see it left in the bill. But we are willing to agree that after next year we shall try to cut it out entirely. In the meantime the State of California ought to be forced to take care of its own paupers, and every other State which has helpless Indians ought to be compelled to pick up and care for them, the same as any other State cares for its helpless and homeless people. It will be much more difficult to get through an item of this kind next year than it is this year and has been up to this year. I have served notice several times in these matters on the States which have helpless Indians who have heretofore been wards of the Government and then have been separated that they should be cared for by the State, and California is sufficiently rich and able to care for its own Indians.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to make any remarks on the observations just made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER], because I know that if he knew all of the facts and appreciated the conditions he would probably not be so severe in his strictures about this situation in California.

As a matter of fact the appeal that the Indians in California can make to the National Government for gratuity appropriations is stronger than the appeal which can be made by almost any other group of Indians in any other State. Strangely enough, the California Indians, when the whites went there, were not looked after as the Indians were looked after in other States. The Indians elsewhere were accorded by treaty rights lands very valuable and tremendously rich, under which now they are enjoying prosperity. In California similar treaties were negotiated, but by some unfortunate events they have never been ratified, and the California Indians were never provided for; and since 1848 they have been wandering, homeless, uncared for, and penniless, and only recently has the United States Government given them any material aid. A total appropriation of a little over $100,000 has been made to provide them with homes, principally upon large tracts of land which can be managed in the form of colonies. I maintain that we have no apologies to make for asking of Congress this very, very inconsequential item of $10,000 to provide homes for wandering bands of Indians who once owned that tremendously rich country, and who were never accorded the rights in that country that they were entitled to.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELSTON. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. Can the gentleman say whether these homeless Indians are the Indians whose reservation we recently turned over to the city of San Diego under certain agreements?

Mr. ELSTON. I can say positively that the Indians that the gentleman refers to are not included among these particular Indians. And I think the gentleman is a little wrong in his statement that the homes were taken away by ceding the land to the city of San Diego.

Mr. CRAMTON. We authorized the city to take it over for water-supply purposes, on the understanding that other homes would be furnished them. Seeing this item of Indians in California, I wanted to be sure that they were not the same Indians.

Mr. ELSTON. I can assure the gentleman that they are not.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, regarding this item, it is unfortunate that we do not have all of the data that were prepared at this time to present to the committee. This data should have been presented to the Committee on Indian Affairs in their hearings. Part of the testimony last year was presented to the Senate committee, and in addition to the item here they placed two other items on the bill for the purpose of assisting these Indians.

I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that the Board of Indian Commissioners have sent to California, at the request of the members of the delegation, this year men of their board to investigate and report on the condition of the homeless Indians of California. Within the last two weeks I have discussed the matter with the board and with the clerk, Mr. McDonald, and the report is not yet ready in consequence of the enormous amount of work involved.

I want also to call the attention of the committee to the fact that the Bureau of Indian Affairs has had two men in California for the last three months, two of their most capable and trusted agents, investigating this matter, so that they might report fully to the House and to the Senate, for the purpose of extending to these Indians in California that which honestly and rightfully belongs to them, aside from the fact that they are homeless; what, in fact, is theirs in right.

I want to call the attention of the committee to the further fact that no class of Indians in the United States has been so unjustly treated for the last 50 years as the Indians who had rights in the State of California. There lie to-day in the files of the Senate some 23 treaties entered into by the representatives of the Government, duly accredited to negotiate them, and signed by the various tribes of Indians in California from the north to the south of that great State, by the terms of which treaties these Indians would have been granted over 3,000,000 acres of the finest land in California. They ceded the remainder, but retained about 3,000,000 acres of land as well as personal property. In spite of the fact that these treaties have been long negotiated, they have not been ratified, simply because of the silent but effective opposition of the various interests that wanted to hold the land, to keep it from these Indians. They have been deprived of that land, while Indians in every other State in the Union have been granted the land to which their treaties entitled them. The Indians of these other States hold reservations, and are wealthy, even more so on an average than the white people. These treaties ought to be disposed of, and these Indians ought to be given the rights of which they have so long been deprived.

The facts relative to these homeless Indians in California ought to be presented to the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House and Senate, to the end that Congress may know what belongs to these Indians. It will be found upon an examination of the facts that after taking out every dollar that this Government has expended in their behalf in the way of building a few schools, in the way of superintendence, even charging them up with the cost of superintendency, there is about $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 belonging to these Indians in that State which the agents of this Government stipulated that they should have, but which up to this time has not been granted to them by the Government.

Mr. KNUTSON. May I suggest to the gentleman from California that objection to this item in the bill has been withdrawn?

Mr. RAKER. I am not talking about this item in the bill. I am calling attention of the House to the injustice which is being done to these Indians in California in withholding from them that which rightfully belongs to them.

Mr. BEE. Will the gentleman from California ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] how to resurrect these treaties that have been buried over in the Senate?

Mr. RAKER. We have got onto it lately, and Dr. FESS will help us.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Have these treaties been rejected by the failure of a two-thirds vote?

Mr. RAKER. No; they have not been rejected at all.

Mr. FESS. Then they are not buried.

Mr. RAKER. No; they are not dead, but sleeping, and I know Dr. FESS will assist us in getting these treaties considered and in helping to give these Indians what they are entitled to.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 100 Indian pupils at the Fort Bidwell Indian School, California, including pay of superintendent, $24,000; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $29,000.

Mr. BEE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the gentleman from New York if this school at Fort Bidwell is a nonreservation or a reservation school?

Mr. SNYDER. It is a nonreservation boarding school.

Mr. BEE. Then, what becomes of it under the provision that we had up yesterday abolishing these schools?

Mr. SNYDER. Under that provision, of course, the Fort Bidwell school would be abolished.

Mr. BEE. Then what is the necessity for carrying this item in the bill?

Mr. SNYDER. We have provided in the bill that any appropriation made for a school which is to be eliminated is to be returned to the Treasury of the United States upon the elimination of the school.

Mr. BEE. Will this Fort Bidwell School be abolished?

Mr. SNYDER. No one can tell. If the school authorities, between now and the time this bill takes effect, can succeed in bringing the average attendance of that school up to a point where it will meet the requirements of the bill, then the school will remain in existence.

Mr. BEE. If it is abolished, what will become of those Indians who are now attending the Fort Bidwell School? Where will they go?

Mr. SNYDER. They would naturally go to the Sherman Institute, where there is plenty of capacity for them.

Mr. BEE. In the State of California?

Mr. SNYDER. In the State of California.

Mr. CARTER. First they would have the opportunity of going to the public schools?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. And then next into the day schools?

Mr. SNYDER. The first idea would be to take into the public schools those who were eligible, next into the day or reservation boarding schools, or into the nearest adjacent nonreservation boarding school, in which there is ample capacity for all.

Mr. BEE. There will be no neglect of their education by reason of this, then?

Mr. SNYDER. On the contrary, this provision will force the department to pick up the children and put them into these schools in order to keep the schools in existence.

Mr. RAKER. I move to strike out the last word. I looked into this matter, and I came to the conclusion, and I believe yet, that they have more than 100 pupils and therefore the school will not be abandoned. If I am wrong about it, of course I will have to go over to the Senate in order to get that language amended if possible. I have been familiar with that school in the neighborhood of 25 years. Now, I want to say one word further. The gentleman says that the pupils of this school will be provided for. Riverside is in the neighborhood of 700 miles from where the pupils live. Their parents live within 3 to 10 miles of the Fort Bidwell School. They have lands and homes upon the land. Three-quarters of the children can stay at home or go home on Saturdays.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER. I will, for a question.

Mr. CARTER. If they are that near the school, why should not the school be made a day school instead of a boarding school?

Mr. RAKER. Because it is all right as it is. If you take into consideration the benefits to the Indian, if you take into consideration the fact that you are trying to give him some real education, you will sustain these small schools. You can not give him the same education in the large school that you can at the Fort Bidwell Schcol. You can not make him any better citizen in a large school than you can in a small school.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman knows the committee appreciates the fact that this will receive opposition from every Member in the House who has a school in his district, without regard, in most cases, to whether or not it is the economical thing to do, whether or not it is the right thing to do, whether or not it is in line with economy for the Indian, or whether it is in line of better care and education of the pupil.

Mr. RAKER. I only yielded for a question.

Mr. SNYDER. We will give the gentleman more time. The gentleman must know that there is absolutely no comparison as to the education given the scholar at Riverside as compared with the school at Fort Bidwell. The gentleman ought to know, further, that the cost of maintaining the school at Fort Bidwell is $100 per capita more than it is at the large school.

Mr. RAKER. I want to say from personal observation—and I have visited the Riverside School from the blacksmith shop and the cow shed through every room in the building, and I have been through the Fort Bidwell School and other schools in Oregon and Nevada—that the Indian who attends the school at Fort Bidwell becomes a better Indian, receives an equal education, is qualified for American citizenship equally with those pupils who are turned out of the Sherman School.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. RAKER. I ask for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks tha his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. KNUTSON. Reserving the right to object, I suggest that the gentleman extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. RAKER. Oh, no.

Mr. KNUTSON. I object.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 100 Indian pupils at the Greenville Indian School, California, including pay of superintendent, $24,100; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $29,100.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The chairman said that he would give me further time.

Mr. KNUTSON. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. RAKER. Now, you say that you want to make these men competent, capable, and give them a practical education. You can do that at the smaller schools better than you can do it at the large ones. We all know that. You can not dismiss it by saying that you have got finer buildings and finer grounds. The Indian learns farming at this small school; he learns the method of handling horses; he learns how to handle cattle; he learns agriculture in all its phases. He becomes a farmer or a blacksmith; he gets a chance to go home once or twice a month, which is a benefit to his parents, and the extra cost to the Government is infinitesimal compared with the good that you do to the Indian pupil by making him a good man and a good citizen.

So every question, except the lone, sole question that it will cost a little more at the smaller school, is in favor of the small school against the large one.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman, if he will yield, that we found we had a surplus of nonreservation boarding-school capacity of nearly 2,000; that is one-third of all the pupils who now attend. Does the gentleman think that for the purpose of making it more convenient for the few pupils that that tremendous unused capacity should be ignored?

Mr. RAKER. If there is an unused capacity, that is one thing, and a used capacity is another. I am speaking of the schools that are filled to their capacity, that are properly used; the same kind of teachers teach the Fort Bidwell School that teach schools at the reservations. They have the same kind of a matron in charge of the pupils at Fort Bidwell as they do at the large schools. I have visited them and I know what I am talking about. The man that has charge of the blacksmith shop at the small school has the same experience and is a better blacksmith than at the large school, for at the large school he is simply a superintendent. At the Fort Bidwell School they teach children to become real blacksmiths, farmers, and so forth.

Mr. SNYDER. I desire to know what the gentleman is driving at. The question of the elimination of the schools was passed some time ago.

Mr. RAKER. No.

Mr. SNYDER. And the gentleman's argument should have been made at that time in regard to this matter and not now.

Mr. RAKER. That is true, but this is the first opportunity that has come up.

Mr. SNYDER. But we must confine ourselves to the regular order of the bill, and therefore I demand the regular order.

Mr. RAKER. I have a minute left, have I not?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. We all know what an active Member of this body the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER] is. I want to congratulate the State of California upon having one of the most active, vigorous, and importunate Representatives that there is in the Congress. I think there is less reason for the school that the gentleman has been discussing being carried in this bill than almost any school in the bill. The gentleman and I are good friends, but we have always disagreed about this school. But for the activities, the vigilance, and the intelligent pursuit of the gentleman from California, perhaps this school would never have been carried in the bill at all. The gentleman from California says this ought to be a boarding school, because that is a better school for Indians than a day school. A great many of us take issue with him upon that, a great many of us who have given close study to Indian schools, not only on account of the increased expense of boarding schools but for the reason that the Indians actually in many ways get more benefit from a day school than from a boarding school. In a day school the Indian child goes back home every night to its parents, and as the child becomes educated and civilized it takes a part of that education and civilization back to the home whence it came, and therefore the civilizing influence is not only exerted upon the pupil but it is also exerted upon the mother and the father of the pupil, who goes back home and lives with the mother and father.

Mr. RAKER rose.

Mr. CARTER. Just a moment, and then I shall yield to the gentleman. Not only that, but it has been charged with some measure of accuracy and truth that in the past a great many of the Indian children who attended reservation schools have gone back to the reservation and taken up the blanket and the paint and the feather. That practice is disappearing, of course, but it was very prevalent in the past. When the Indian child goes to the day school he goes back home every night; there is no returning from one condition to another; the same condition goes right along, and the Indian civilization stays with him. He is clad in those habiliments during the vacation days, the same as he is during the time that the school is going on. I now yield to the gentleman.

Mr. RAKER. Just for that reason I stated that in practically all of these schools the Indian pupil can go back Saturday and Sunday to visit his parents, and he even goes 20 and 30 miles.

Mr. CARTER. Then, taking the gentleman's own argument, if it does the parents good for the child to go back on Saturday and Sunday, how much more good would it do those parents to let the child go back on Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday?

Mr. RAKER. And now you want to abandon this and send them 700 miles away?

Mr. CARTER. Oh, no; we do not want to abandon them at all. We propose that all nonreservation boarding schools with an average attendance of less than 100 pupils shall be discontinued on or before the beginning of the fiscal year 1921. Let me say to the gentleman right there that his school last year had an average attendance of only 54, and if they do not make a better showing in the coming year the school will have to be discontinued. What will transpire then? The pupils in the schools so discontinued are to be transferred, first, if possible, to Indian day schools or to State public schools, and, second, to adjacent reservation or nonreservation schools to the limit of the capacity of the said schools. What will happen then? The Indian Bureau has the right at any time to establish a day school any place on the reservation, but if the gentleman's boarding school is stopped the thing that will take place at Bidwell, the school the gentleman talks about, where he says the children live within 2 or 3 to 10 miles from the school, will be that a day school will be established, and the gentleman will have a better school and it will not cost the Federal Treasury nearly so much money as it does now.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing the construction of a road from Hoopa to Weitchpec, on the Hoopa Valley Reservation, in Humboldt County, Calif., in conformity with plans approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $10,500, to be reimbursed out of any funds of the Indians of said reservation now or hereafter placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States, in accordance with the Indian appropriation act of May 25, 1918 (40 Stat. L., pp. 570, 571).

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I notice in this paragraph that $10,500 is appropriated for the construction of a road. In New York State, as well as in Pennsylvania, as the chairman of the committee well knows, we can not construct half a mile of road for that amount. I appreciate that California is not within the frost district. Will the chairman explain the construction of the road and the length to be built for the amount appropriated?

Mr. SNYDER. The nature of the construction of all those roads is entirely different from that which would be known as a "State or county road" in either the State of Pennsylvania or the State of New York. It is not much more than a trail. It is more of the nature of a good sand road. They go through and cut down the trees and pull out the stumps and make a reasonable road over which light traffic can be conveyed.

Mr. WATSON. It is wide enough for an automobile?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. This is a full-width road, and this appropriation is to conclude its construction. Certain moneys have been appropriated, and this is simply a sufficient amount to complete the construction.

Mr. WATSON. How many miles?

Mr. SNYDER. Twenty miles.

Mr. WATSON. For $10,500?

Mr. SNYDER. No; there was a previous appropriation of $10,000.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, I am familiar with this road. The distance covered is 12 miles, but the difficult portion, so far as the construction is concerned, is 6 or 7 miles. A remarkable success has been had in constructing this road. As a matter of fact, the road has been constructed at one-third of the price of road operations in this community. I have pictures of the road in my pocket, which I would be very pleased to show the gentleman.

Mr. WATSON. Is the road being constructed under contract or by the Indians?

Mr. LEA of California. It is being constructed by day labor under the supervision of a very competent practical engineer.

Mr. WATSON. Do the Indians work on the road?

Mr. LEA of California. They do. The work is performed by Indian labor. I have an amendment that I desire to offer in reference to it, which I will be glad to explain.

Mr. WATSON. Is the road sufficiently well constructed for the use of automobiles?

Mr. SNYDER. No; except possibly for a Ford.

Mr. LEA of California. This is a mountain country, but you can go on it with any automobile made.

Mr. SNYDER. Unless it is a wet day.

Mr. LEA of California. This is largely a rocky country, but the road is constructed most of the way on a 3 per cent grade.

Mr. SNYDER. I am very glad the gentleman can give some information about this, because we were unable to get from the hearing very much enlightenment except that a certain amount of money had been spent and this was required to finish the road.

Mr. LEA of California. Well, they have had great success with the road.

Mr. WATSON. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 26, line 8, after the figures "$10,500" insert "to be immediately available."

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Chairman, the adoption of this amendment will not increase the expenditure, but I believe it will increase the results secured. The engineer informs me that it is a matter of some importance in getting better results to have this money available. If this bill should go into effect two months before the beginning of the fiscal year, it would permit the present organization to continue to completion.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. Certainly.

Mr. SNYDER. To save time, I have personally no objection to this amendment going in, but it has been the rule to decline to accept that language in appropriations. The gentleman has noticed that points of order have been made on several of the same character, and the possibilities are, while we are making fair headway on this measure, it will not make very much difference in regard to getting the money at present, because the bill, probably if it has good luck, will not become law much before the 1st of July. Under those circumstances, Mr. Chairman, while I dislike to do it, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LEA of California. Will the gentleman reserve the point of order?

Mr. SNYDER. I will reserve the point of order for a moment.

Mr. LEA of California. I think this point of order, Mr. Chairman, comes too late, but, however, I want to call the attention of the chairman to this fact. The engineer writes me that for the same amount of money he can secure much better result if the work is continued in the spring than in the fall. In addition to that the Indian labor that is employed in constructing this road is engaged in seasonal labor beginning along in July and continuing until fall, and the extra supply of labor is available in the spring and not in the fall. So it makes a material financial difference if this work can proceed in case the bill does go through.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman spoke of the engineer having charge of this. Is this the engineer who has charge of the construction work of the Indian Bureau?

Mr. LEA of California. No; he is a local man.

Mr. RHODES. Under whose authority?

Mr. LEA of California. He is employed through the department.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York insist upon the point of order?

Mr. SNYDER. I insist upon the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. For relief of distress among the Seminole Indians in Florida, and for purposes of their civilization and education, $15,000, including the construction and equipment of necessary buildings.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph. Under this provision is the gentleman from New York able to say what it is proposed to do in the way of construction of buildings?

Mr. SNYDER. My understanding is that about four years ago the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SEARS] began the proposition of taking back in under the enfolding and outstretched arms of the Government a few Seminole Indians down in Florida.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Well, I think it commenced earlier than that.

Mr. SNYDER. Well, he was the man who really forced the issue and got the first appropriation in the bill. That is my recollection in the five years that I have been here, and that this is the third or fourth appropriation which has been made for that purpose. They have now succeeded, I think, in getting a superintendent down there, and a matron, and they propose to build a schoolhouse and some buildings.

Mr. RHODES. And a hospital?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; a hospital; and it is the intention to erect down there a full complement of buildings the same as they would have in any reservation of this sort. But my judgment is, as it has been all along, that it is not proper legislation and ought not to have been enacted in the first place. It was started and some money has been spent. It is contrary to what I believe should be done. I think when Indians have been discharged from the Government and have no longer any right under the Government of the United States except as any other citizens they become part of the State in which they reside, and the State should be forced to take care of its own poor, whether they be Indian or white.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, doubtless the gentleman from New York speaks from some sort of record, and it may be a correct record, as to how this item got into the bill and when. However, my recollection is not in accordance with the statement, quite. I think the first item for the Seminole Indians occurred in the bill several years ago for $5,000.

Mr. SNYDER. The Seminoles of Florida?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes; that is the only place they are; but the first time it occurred I think I made a point of order on it. I do not remember whether the point of order was sustained or overruled, but there was quite a controversy over it, and this item, or one like it, has been carried in the bill for some years and has been increasing. There is not the slightest excuse for it. It is doing no good. When the first appropriation was made they could find no way to spend it on the Indians. I do not think they have ever spent any of it on the Indians. Of course, they can employ some good white citizen to go down there and be paid a salary, and they could construct buildings whether any Indians ever saw them or not.

These Seminole Indians quite live unto themselves. A few of them are guides and speak English and give some aid to visitors to Florida in the Everglades. Most of them live back in the Everglades, and will have nothing whatever to do with the white people, and they do not want to have. They live very well. The excuse was made at first that because the Everglades were being drained we were preventing these Indians from making a livelihood. The Indians are not to blame. They are not asking for this. They have resisted every effort of the Indian Service to bring them under the control of that service. They do not want it. They are satisfied.

Now, it may be that it is our duty to grab up a man and civilize him, so that he will get consumption or some other disease and die off. These Indians live in the open air, and do well and are satisfied. It is proposed to construct a hospital, I understood the gentleman to say. They have no need for a hospital now, but, doubtless, if the Indian Service can get hold of them and put them inside of buildings for a while they will need one.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to say to the gentleman that I think he is wrong about the beginning of this appropriation. There is a tribe of Seminole Indians in Oklahoma. The first appropriation, which was not a continuing appropriation, was made three years ago, and there was no part of the money spent. Two years ago, when the Committee on Indian Affairs were authorized to make an investigation, a part of the committee went to Florida. No money had been spent there up to that time. When they returned some members of the committee were imbued with the idea that these Indians should be taken back. The chairman has been opposed to it all the way through, and I would like to read a short section showing the position I took in the investigation before the committee when this appropriation was being considered. I said:

> This is the most indefensible item in the bill, in my judgment. It is a small thing; it has been grafted onto us in the last three or four years—when I say "grafted" I do not mean "grafted" so far as any particular party is concerned. But here, Mr. RHODES, is a case where we actually picked up a remnant of a tribe of Indians who had been without the care of the Government for—I don't just remember how many years now, but 80 or 90 years—and because they were a roving band of poor Indians, paupers of the State of Florida, for whom Florida would do nothing except give them a lot of land in the jungles, we went down and again took them back into the arms of the Government, and are now starting a system here which will probably continue for all time.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Now, I would like to say to the gentleman that I was not here two years ago when the Indian bill was under consideration and was not here a year ago when it was under consideration. While I do not like to question what is being read from the book and set my own memory up against it, I feel very confident that I have been here on several occasions when this item was in the appropriation bill. So I venture to say that this did not appear in the bill three years ago.

Mr. SNYDER. I think if the gentleman will look it up he will find that it did.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I am sure if my friend from New York will look it up, he will find that I am right.

Mr. SNYDER. I am always willing to accept the superior judgment of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LITTLE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. SNYDER. I will.

Mr. LITTLE. Years ago during a similar discussion we were told that one of those Seminole boys had been given some education. How is he getting along?

Mr. SNYDER. I can not give the gentleman any information about that one particular boy. I doubt very much whether they did not make a mistake and got an alligator in place of a boy. There are more alligators in this 100,000 acres in Florida than there are Indians.

Mr. LITTLE. This was the only one they claimed they had done anything with, and I was wondering what they did.

Mr. TILSON. I note in the disbursements of the fiscal year 1919 there was a little over $8,000 disbursed. The bill of last year carried $20,000. We have not yet a statement as to the disbursement under that law, but it seems that was quite a growth in one year, from $8,000 in 1919 to $20,000 in 1920.

Mr. SNYDER. Of course, I am following the advice of gentlemen that they were only getting started under the 1919 appropriation, and they are getting further under way this year. There will be less surplus when the year is over, but we have reduced the estimates this year from $20,000 to $15,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Now, Mr. Chairman, notwithstanding my friend from New York, I venture to say from recollection that this item first appeared in the Indian appropriation bill nearly or quite 10 years ago. It probably has been carried every year since, in some form or other. And during all that time whatever money has been expended has been simply wasted. Nothing has been accomplished so far as the Indians are concerned.

Mr. HASTINGS. That is not the fault of Congress. That is the fault of the administration.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. No; that is the fault of Congress seeking to direct the Indian Office to do something which they had no occasion to do. Although they have the appropriation, they can not find any way of expending the money on the Indians. Of course, if we keep on making the appropriation it will become their duty to spend some of it in some way. Doubtless they will have a superintendent and a clerk and a typewriter and an office, although they will not find an Indian who will come to the office.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Certainly.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois is correct, and I do not wonder, because he remembers several very pointed discussions about this matter prior to the time the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] was in Congress. This item was placed in the bill in about 1909 or 1910 the first time.

Mr. SNYDER. But discontinued afterwards.

Mr. CARTER. The thing the gentleman from New York has in mind is that when the item was put in two or three years ago there was authorization then given to the department that had not been given theretofore, and the fight was not so much over appropriating the amount as it was as to giving authorization to the bureau to do certain things which they had not been permitted to do before.

Mr. SNYDER. They have just gotten a fair start.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. They have not done a thing. Now, I understood my distinguished friend yesterday to say that he had read the recent report of the Board of Indian Commissioners?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes; I have.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Well, if he has, he must have misread the report of the commissioner who went to Florida and made an examination of this subject, and, startling to say, the impression I derived from reading the report of the gentleman—I do not recall which commissioner it was who went to Florida—was decidedly against the futile effort of the Government to take possession of these Indians. As I recall, the impression at least was that his judgment was that the Indians ought to be left to themselves, where they were much better off than they would be in trying to be dragged around by the Indian Service.

Mr. SNYDER. The Indian commissioners and myself absolutely agree on the matter. And my statement in the investigation will show that I agree entirely with them on that. I did not go to Florida and did not see the situation, but I was influenced by the Members who went to Florida and who agreed that some appropriation should be made.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I understand that the Members who went to Florida did not see any of these Seminole Indians, unless it was a few acting as guides.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, before the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] makes the point of order, I would like to have a few moments.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois reserve his point of order?

Mr. SNYDER. I understand the gentleman has reserved it but has not made it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], as usual, is correct about his statement of things that occur in the House. Without any flattery, I want to say that I have often marveled at the information which the gentleman from Illinois has with reference to the various activities of this Government. I have at times in the past given study to matters in my home State and district, having had a knowledge of them to start with, having given what I thought was intense study to the matter, and then when the proposition came up on the floor of the House I have been astounded to have the gentleman from Illinois tell me something about that matter that I had failed to look up, information which I was not at that time in possession of myself. His career in the House has been marvelous. I have wondered, as every other Member has wondered, at his marvelous collection of data and facts, and the wonderfully retentive powers of his memory after he had accumulated those facts.

The gentleman now makes a statement about the Indians in Florida. I went to Florida in 1917 as chairman of a special committee and made an investigation of the affairs of the Seminole Indians. Knowing about some of those things, as I do, it is not strange to say that one listening to the statement just made by the gentleman from Illinois would think that not I, but he, had been chairman of the committee which obtained that information, because he has stated the facts exactly as they are.

The Seminole Indians in Florida are the most primitive people in the United States to-day, I believe; yet they are people of strong character. The very fact that they have lived right up against the white man for generation after generation and yet have refused to take on the white man's civilization, have refused to accept his religion, have refused to have anything to do with his mode and manner of life, speaks in itself for their strength of character.

What the gentleman says about the Indian Bureau being unable to do anything for these people is also true. When our committee made its trip to Florida in 1917, I think this appropriation had been in effect some seven or eight years, and, if I mistake not, the sum total of accomplishment during that time amounted to getting three Seminole Indians into the white schools. They had not succeeded in getting the Indians even to accept a white-man doctor when sick.

While in Florida we met a Creek Indian from the Creek Nation, which is a kindred tribe to the Seminoles, speaking practically the same language, who went down to Florida to assist in the uplift of these Indians. He was a Baptist preacher, and had been working for months and months trying to get these people, whose language he spoke fluently, whose customs and ways he knew as well as he knew the ways and customs of his own family, to take an interest in his religion. He had gone into their settlements and announced his preaching; he had gone among them and stayed all night; but his statement on the stand was that he had never yet been able to get one Seminole to enter his place of worship to hear him speak.

I have no doubt that under favorable conditions they will make good citizens. What the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] stated is true, however, that practically nothing has been done for them. I would not say to a certainty that anything can be done for them. Certainly it will be difficult to do anything for them as long as the Everglades remain in their present condition, for as long as they remain they furnish a resource for the eking out of a pitiable existence by these unfortunates. But the Everglades are being drained, and when they are drained we will have left some 400 or 500 of the aborigines of this country, who I believe are of as strong a character as any tribe that has been in existence in the past or that is in existence to-day, who will be paupers and penniless, uneducated and uncivilized, and the natural result will be their extinction. I think that will be inevitable.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. What about the land on which they live? Is there an Indian reservation, or has it been entered and reduced to ownership by the white man?

Mr. CARTER. I am glad the gentleman mentioned that. At the present time those Indians live in the Everglades on land that either belongs to the State of Florida, which has not been drained, or upon land that belongs to some white man. When the white man commands them to go there is nothing for them to do but move on. They do practically no farming. They live chiefly by hunting and fishing and, as the gentleman from Illinois says, by acting occasionally as guides.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. LITTLE. I understand the State of Florida has given them 100,000 acres.

Mr. CARTER. I will get to that point in a moment. When we reached Florida we found our visit hailed by the people of that beautiful State as the forerunner or advance notice of the fact that the Federal Government was going to purchase a lot of land from Florida and give it to the Seminole Indians. After we had finished the investigation at Jacksonville I thought that impression ought to be corrected, and I had the mayor of the city call in a reporter of the leading paper, and I gave him an interview, in which I stated that those people had better get that idea out of their heads; that the Federal Government had no notion of buying land from the State of Florida to give it to the Indians; that the Federal Government had transferred its public lands in that State to Florida; and that if the Indians had any claim against anybody for any land on which to live, it was against the State of Florida and not against the Federal Government. I did state, however, that so far as my feeble ability went as a Member of Congress, if the State ever undertook to furnish land and the matter came up in Congress, I would give my support to some kind of proposition for educational facilities, and so forth. I think Congress is under an obligation to do that.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. CARTER. In a moment. After I came back to Washington I began to get letters from people in Florida who wanted me to retract that statement.

But I had letters also from some persons who were very much interested in the Seminoles, telling me that if I stood by that statement—and I had no idea of retracting it—the Legislature of the State of Florida would donate these lands to these Indians, but that otherwise it might never be done; that the understanding to the effect that the Federal Government was not going to purchase the land and pay Florida for it had had the effect of inducing more members of the Legislature of Florida to support the bill to give the Indians this land.

Prior to that time a small reservation had already been set aside for them in the State of Florida, and after that time the legislature passed a bill granting to the Florida Seminoles about 100,000 acres of land, if I remember correctly. I think that is what my friend from Missouri was asking me about. It is, in fact, several reservations aggregating about 100,000 acres. So they have two grants of land on which they can live, and if the time comes when the Everglades are all drained and settled by white settlers. so that the Indians have no longer the opportunity to make a living by fishing and hunting and acting as guides, then some opportunity will be given to the Government to give them assistance.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman tell me what is meant by this statement made by Mr. Meritt in the hearings?—

There have been 15,000 acres set aside by the Federal Government on which some of these Indians live.

Mr. CARTER. That was the reservation that I spoke of as being first set aside. I said there had been a reservation set aside first. I did not remember the acreage.

Mr. TILSON. Was it public land?

Mr. CARTER. That was public land in the State of Florida; but the gentleman from Connecticut will recall that most of the public lands in the State of Florida were turned over to the State of Florida in order that they might be drained and made habitable. I take it this 15,000 acres was not turned over, but was set aside for these Indians when it was found they needed a home, after which time the State of Florida made a reservation and set aside for them some 100,000 acres of land.

Mr. TILSON. The State of Florida set aside for these Indians 100,000 acres of land, and then very modestly asked the Federal Government to drain it. Doubtless it was valueless land to start with. The State of Florida very generously gave to the Indians 100,000 acres of worthless land and then asked the Federal Government to make it valuable.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will permit, my information about that, which comes from persons interested in the Seminole Indians, who do not live in Florida, is that sufficient hummock and other land above water can be found on this reservation to maintain these four or five hundred Indians, and that drainage may not be necessary.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, let us see if we can not get this matter closed up.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I make a point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. SNYDER. There is no argument on the point of order, as far far as the chairman of the committee is concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

MICHIGAN.

SEC. 7. For support and education of 350 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., and for pay of superintendent, $80,750; for general repairs and improvements, $10,000; for new power and heating plant, $30,000; in all, $120,750.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Chairman, I want to inquire how much of that item of $80,750 is for the pay of the superintendent?

Mr. SNYDER. The pay of the superintendent is $2,000 a year.

Mr. WATSON. What is the balance for?

Mr. SNYDER. The balance is the regular support of the number of children, prorated on the basis of the average attendance or the capacity of the school.

Mr. DUNBAR. I want to ask the chairman of the committee why it is that so much money per pupil is requried for educational purposes. I notice that the sum amounts to $225, and in some cases $375, per pupil. In Kansas 750 pupils cost $207,000. In Michigan the cost of the education of 350 pupils is $120,750. That makes the average something like $300 per pupil, which seems to me to be an exorbitant amount. What are the conditions that make the cost of educating the Indian so large?

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman includes in the Michigan total, for instance, the sum of $30,000 for a new power and heating plant. Under the law, where the attendance at a school is 400 or more, the bureau is permitted to expend $225 per capita, and on schools where the attendance is below 400 the bureau is permitted to expend $250 per capita. In these bulk items the gentleman will note that the amount is based upon the multiplication of either the average attendance or the capacity of the school, on a $25 lower basis. The smaller the school the higher the amount required to operate it, and, in the judgment of the chairman of the committee, the smaller the school the less efficient the management.

Mr. DUNBAR. In many of the items I notice provisions for power and heating plants.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. DUNBAR. The one in Michigan to cost $30,000. What is the necessity for power and heating plants on so large a scale? It seems to me that the very nature of the Indian enables him to endure hardships, and that these new provisions requiring investments of large sums of money are unnecessary.

Mr. SNYDER. In this particular case the bureau has been urging us for several years to make an appropriation to install and complete a new heating system. There are probably 25 or 26 buildings connected with this Mount Pleasant school. It is not only an ordinary school, but it gives vocational training in farming and stock raising and that sort of thing. The heat has to be distributed to the various buildings, and this is for the purpose of a central heating plant from which the buildings can all be heated. After considerable discussion and quite against the policy of the committee, we decided that we ought at least to give them an opportunity to keep warm.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to propose to this section.

Mr. SNYDER. What section is that?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. The first section on the top of page 31. There are also several other proposed amendments to other sections affecting the Chippewa items. I would like to have an understanding or agreement to be allowed to offer one amendment after we have passed beyond line 9, page 31, and come back to it after the other Minnesota items have been finished. My purpose is that if these others can be taken up first and have them disposed of it may save the time of offering the other and explaining it.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the amendment increase the amount appropriated or decrease it?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Some to be offered will be to decrease or cut out the amount to be taken from the tribal fund, and another will ask that an amount be taken from the tribal funds which has heretofore been taken from them but has been left out in this bill. Taking them all together, they will decrease the amount of money to be expended from the tribal funds and from the Treasury, not affecting those in the Treasury, and will eliminate bureau control in the future and establish the Indian on his own responsibility.

Mr. SNYDER. Would the gentleman be willing to present his amendments in sequence, without debate, and after the amendments are all in agree to a time for discussion?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I would prefer to offer the first amendment. I can not speak for other members of the delegation who may have some other amendments to offer; but, so far as I know, there are none contemplated which would affect these items in the bill. That being the case, if the chairman and Members do not object, I would like to offer the amendment to the section just read and follow that with a motion to strike out the fourth paragraph.

Mr. SNYDER. I think we had better proceed in the regular way and let the gentleman offer his amendment to the section referred to and see what comes of that.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Would the gentleman have any objection to allowing us to pass line 9, and then go back——

Mr. SNYDER. Let us go ahead and see what it is.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the section just read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 31, at the end of line 3, add the following:

"Provided, That all of said appropriation, together with one-third of the funds arising under section 7 of the act of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 643), and set aside by said act of 1889, exclusively for the 'establishment and maintenance of a system of free schools among said Indians,' shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in aiding in the establishment and maintenance of public schools in connection with, and under the control of, the public-school system of the State of Minnesota at places where such schools are needed for the proper education of Chippewa children."

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to require the Indian Bureau to use the funds which are from the Chippewas of the Mississippi, being provided under a treaty in 1867 before the two Chippewa Bands became divided into the Chippewas of Wisconsin and the Chippewas of Minnesota—to use the funds in the way and manner prescribed by the treaty that it should be used, namely, for educational purposes.

The justification of this item on page 454 of the estimates show that $3,888.34 of the $4,000 is spent for salary of superintendent, $2,000; engineer, $800; assistant engineer, $600; watchman, $600; laborer, $600; all employees at the general Indian agency, at which there was at one time a school, but none at the present time. The school at the agency where the superintendent, watchman, engineer, and laborer are has been taken over by the State, and since July 1 has been run by the State. So there is no reason for appropriating the $4,000, unless the appropriation is to be misused for purposes other than provided for by the treaty. It has been in the bill for a number of years, and it was put in the bill notwithstanding the fact that the only possible institution in which it could have been spent for educational purposes has been discontinued since the 1st of July. The superintendent has two or three small schools, I believe, but this is spent mainly for administrative expenses.

Mr. SNYDER. Is the effect of this amendment to eliminate the item?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. No; but to specify that it shall be used for educational purposes and also the interest of the principal fund. This agency only has something incidentally to do with education, and the bureau will have to apply these funds to some other purpose.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman understands that this is a treaty item, and whether or not we can direct the bureau to treat it differently from what they see fit to do, I do not know.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. It is not a matter of the interpretation of the treaty. The language here follows the language of the treaty, just what the treaty expresses should be done, but it directs the administration under the words of the treaty.

Mr. SNYDER. What does the gentleman expect it will do; will it do away with the superintendent and these other employees he speaks of?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. No; not at all. The superintendent is paid out of the general fund, just as the superintendents are paid out of general funds in all other agencies affecting all other tribes.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to advance to the executive committee of the White Earth Band of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota the sum of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended in the annual celebration of said band to be held June 14, 1920, out of the funds belonging to said band.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and I do so for the purpose of proposing at this time that we be allowed to return to line 9, page 31, for the purpose of offering an amendment, after amendments have been offered to the third paragraph on this page and the second one on the next page. By so doing logically we can discuss the others, and then without further explanation can see the necessity for the introduction of the amendment to be offered later.

Mr. SNYDER. What is the objection to this particular paragraph that has just been read? Why not permit the Indians to spend $1,000 of their own money on a celebration which they have had for years.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. There is no objection at all to that. The gentleman misunderstands my purpose. I have made the pro forma amendment merely to make the statement that I would like to introduce later another amendment at this point.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman is not seeking to amend this particular paragraph?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. No.

Mr. SNYDER. I have no objection to going ahead upon that understanding.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to prefer a request for unanimous consent?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes; I ask unanimous consent to return to line 9, page 31, after finishing the Minnesota items, for the purpose of offering an amendment at that point.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that he be permitted to return to line 9, on page 31, after certain other sections have been agreed to. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States the sum of $20,000 of the tribal funds of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, and to expend or pay the same, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, for the construction and repair of roads on the Chippewa and ceded Indian reservations in the State of Minnesota.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out all of lines 14 to 20, inclusive, being the fourth paragraph on page 31.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 31, strike out lines 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, my understanding is that the principal reason that this item is included in the bill is because it was included in the bill providing appropriations for the last fiscal year. There is not any specified place where this road is to be built. It is not to be built on any particular reservation, for the purpose of affording a public service, for any particular tribe of Indians. It is not to be put in any particular town or over a particular river, but it is simply $20,000 to be expended for roads, out of the funds of the Chippewa Indians, simply because there was such an item in the bill before. There is no more reason for having an item of this kind—$20,000—to be taken out of the Chippewa funds, as I understand it, for the purpose of building roads, than there would be to appropriate $20,000 out of the treasury of the conference of the Methodist Church in Minnesota to build a road somewhere in Minnesota, simply because members of that denomination like all others might travel over that road.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. How will the Chippewas get reasonable roads built unless something of this kind is done?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad that the chairman of the committee has asked that question, because it gives me an opportunity to explain something which I think ought to be explained to this House. So far as the State of Minnesota is concerned, you can not tell when you get into the Indian country and when you get out of it. You can not tell when you get onto Indian reservations. Perhaps four-fifths or five-sixths of the farms on the Indian reservations for which we are appropriating are owned by white men, and once in a while you find an Indian. If you took away all of the Indian appropriations coming to the State of Minnesota out of the Chippewa fund or out of the Treasury, the Indian people would go on just the same and be put upon their own responsibilities, and the townships and the towns and the counties would go on and run their governments and provide every public facility—schools, roads, and everything else.

Mr. SNYDER. But under the restrictions they are not permitted to do that. The Chippewa Indians have an abundance of money. They should be declared competent to have a right to operate their own business, but they do not have that right, and unless money is appropriated in their method there can not be any roads built at all.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I will state to the chairman that on the Red Lake Indian Reservation, where the allotments have not been made, there might be some reason for building a road, and there is in this bill an appropriation for a road or a bridge, or something of that kind, in a specified place like the Red Lake Reservation. The objection to this is that it does not specify the road to be built in any particular place, that there is no particular community that will suffer if this goes out, and if there is some particular place where there are Indians where they should have a road, in future years they can come in and ask for it and we will make no objection to it.

Mr. SNYDER. There is no question as to the gentleman's argument being logical, and perhaps it ought to prevail, but the fact is, the suggestion he makes is the reason for this appropriation. There must be roads that need repair and overhauling, and some new pass ways must be built, and there is no other way that it can be done except through an appropriation of this kind, which is without limit, so far as expenditure of money is concerned. It would be difficult for the bureau to particularize just where this money was to be spent.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Let me ask the gentleman how much was spent out of this fund last year.

Mr. SNYDER. We can give that to the gentleman in just a moment.

Mr. CARTER. While that is being done may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. What is the language the gentleman proposes to strike out?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. It is the fourth paragraph on page 31.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Twenty thousand dollars would only build about 1 mile of road, would it not?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Of ordinary surface road. I presume that it is contemplated that this might be to repair ordinary turnpike dirt roads; I do not know.

Mr. DEMPSEY. What would that cost a mile in Minnesota?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. In some of the Indian country you could build a mile of dirt road for $10,000, I presume.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman is aware that this same amount was appropriated last year for the same purpose?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Exactly. And appropriated now because it was appropriated last year.

Mr. SNYDER. Here is the justification for this item:

The Chippewa country comprises six different reservations, with a total area of 1,089,637 acres inhabited by 11,839 Indians. One of the greatest needs of these reservations is better road facilities, and no better use could be made of the tribal funds of the Chippewa Indians than to devote a portion thereof to this purpose. A similar amount was authorized by the Indian act for the current fiscal year; however, based on reports from superintendents, the construction of absolutely necessary roads will cost nearly $40,000; therefore, an additional authorization of $20,000 is recommended.

I judge from that no specified amount has been spent, and I do not think a cent has been spent.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. No part has been spent.

Mr. SNYDER. Undoubtedly waiting so as to get funds to have sufficient to start with.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will yield. Do I understand the gentleman wants to strike out the $20,000 for a road?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes; I want to strike it out, but it is not for a road. It is not specified for any particular road. No one in the department has stated that they expect to build any particular road anywhere or repair any road or roads. In fact, they did not use any of it for any particular purpose the last time this appropriation was made, and it is now in the bill simply because it was in the bill before and gives the department $20,000 more to expend and keep these Indians under the surveillance of the bureau.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman was a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs and the gentleman knows what a time the Committee on Indian Affairs has had in resisting the expenditure of tribal funds for roads. The pressure always comes from the State and district where the road is to be built.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. I ask that the gentleman have five minutes additional.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CARTER. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not know how the gentleman in charge of the bill feels, but I, of course, feel it my duty to support his contention, because I have agreed to this; but, individually, if the Congressman from the State comes and says that there is not any necessity for the expenditure of $20,000 out of the tribal funds in his State for roads in the State, I do not think we should insist on having the money spent.

Mr. SNYDER. Well, it would seem to me if there is one place where the money could be justifiably spent on a reservation where the tribe of Indians have plenty of money no better use could be made of the money than to build roads, bridges, and so forth, for them.

Mr. CARTER. That is true, Mr. Chairman, but if the State is the one to take care of these roads and there is no pressure upon the State for the expenditure, why I think we might leave it out, but, of course, my intention is to support the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SNYDER. I have not convinced myself yet as to what is the right thing to do.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the gentleman will permit, I will ask the gentleman from Minnesota if it is true that these Indian lands are not taxable and the lands of the white people adjacent there are taxable, and that this is an effort to even things up, so as to make the Indians pay a small part of the repairs?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. In reply I should say yes and no. There are some allotments that have been made and allotments sold, and land that belonged to the original allottee in the hands of the purchaser is taxable. It seems to me that these communities are exactly like any other community. It is not proposed in the bill to build a road upon the reservation to serve the Indians on the reservation where the Indians raised anything to haul over them to market, but——

Mr. TILLMAN. But the fact remains that those lands are not taxable at all, and the lands of the white people are. Both the white people and the Indians use these roads.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. The lands have been allotted to a great portion of the Chippewas of Minnesota, I will say to the gentleman from Arkansas, and sold, and it is not a matter of the Indians being served by a road at all. In one place there will be a reservation and there may be no Indians on the reservation. In another place where allotments have been made there may be quite a number of Indians, but there is no place where you can specifically build a road with $20,000 of appropriation, to simply build and repair roads, to serve the Indians on the reservation. The sole purpose and effect is simply to discourage the general development of the country that ought to be encouraged. We should take away the control of the bureau over these public improvements, so that the State shall thoroughly understand they should not wait for the Indian Office to improve the northern and central part of the State of Minnesota. They never have done it; they never will do it. They simply keep control, simply continue the discouragement of the progress of that part of the State, which is a discouragement of the progress, material, moral, and intellectual of the Indians themselves. It is only part of the general plan. This whole plan of amendments, I might say, is for that purpose, to correct it now, and in the future eliminate the bureau control and to put the Indians upon their own feet, so that they may become independent, self-respecting American citizens. That is the general purpose, I will say to the chairman.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. It would be difficult after hearing the explanation from probably the next governor of Minnesota [applause] to resist the temptation to agree with him, but since there does not seem to be any other Member from the State of Minnesota to object, it would seem as though the committee ought not to object, inasmuch as it would show a further reduction in the amount appropriated in the bill. Therefore, so far as the chairman is concerned, he is willing to accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division. I am in favor of the amendment, however.

The committee divided; and the Chair announced the ayes were 41.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, I think the RECORD should show that a great many are present who did not vote, so that the RECORD will not convey the impression that only 41 Members are present.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I knew we would hear from the gentleman from Minnesota.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order until the vote is announced. On this vote the ayes are 41 and the noes are none.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, at his discretion, the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the principal sum on deposit to the credit of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, arising under section 7 of the act of January 14, 1889, entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," and to use the same for the purpose of promoting civilization and self-support among the said Indians in manner and for purposes provided for in said act.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I move to strike out the paragraph just read, in its entirety, from line 6 to line 15, inclusive.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. ELLSWORTH: Page 32, strike out the paragraph from line 6 to line 15, inclusive.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I think, perhaps, that we might gain time if we had an agreement as to the debate to be taken upon this item.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, this item is one that has been in and out of the bill several times the past few years. It has had the support of one part of the delegation from Minnesota and the opposition of another. My understanding is that they now all agree that the provision should be stricken out, and in view of that agreement, and in the interest of the saving of time and money, I see no objection to the amendment as offered. Therefore, I am willing that the vote should be taken on it now.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 49, noes 0.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The last word has been stricken out.

Mr. BLANTON. Then the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the paragraph has been stricken out. There is nothing before the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I will wait until the next item is read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For payment to Hattie A. McKusick for land purchased for allotment to homeless nonremoval Mille Lacs Indians, described as the west half of the northeast quarter of section 8, township 41 north, range 17 west, in Pine County, Minn., containing 80 acres, being the difference between the consideration for said land of $880 and the amount $236.34 available for its purchase remaining unexpended of the appropriation under the act of August 1, 1914 (38 Stat. L., p. 591), and for recording fees and expenses incident to said purchase, $645, to be immediately available.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I do this for the special purpose of preventing any possible camouflage of the RECORD. A moment ago when the Chair counted about 41 Members here on a division call, my good friend from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON], who is one of the most active whips I ever saw in any legislative body, and I presume is as active a man as you can find anywhere in the United States—and I admire him for his activity—would have had us believe that there were others in the Hall who were not counted, because he said some gentlemen did not stand. Now, I happened to take a count of the floor at that time, and there were just 45 men on the floor, and there are now, counting my good friend from Illinois [Mr. MANN], who is always here—and he really ought to be counted for more than one—counting him, there are only 48 Members on the floor at this time.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order that the gentleman is out of order and is not talking to the item under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. BLANTON. I will proceed in order.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Just a moment until I get back in order.

I had reason to believe that with the small membership present I could have stricken out at least the last word of the former paragraph, merely to tally the Members present. But with the small number present here I do not believe that there is any possible chance to strike out the last word of the present paragraph, and so I will withdraw the pro forma amendment and yield the floor.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, under a previous arrangement we are to turn back now to line 9, page 31, to which the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ELLSWORTH] wishes to offer an amendment.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. ELLSWORTH: On page 31, at the end of line 9, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"That the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the tribal funds of the Chippewa Indians of the State of Minnesota, is hereby appropriated to pay the expenses of the general council of said tribe to be held at Bemidji, Minn., beginning the second Tuesday in July, 1920, pursuant to the constitution of the general council of said Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, organized in May, 1913, and to pay the expenses of said general council in looking after the affairs of said tribe, including the actual and necessary expenses of its legislative committee in visiting Washington during the second session of the Sixty-sixth Congress, said sum to be immediately available, said expense to be approved by the president and secretary of the general council and certified to the Secretary of the Interior and so approved and certified to be paid."

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I think the best way to illustrate what this is for would be this: Three sessions back, the appropriation was $185,000, and when the committee reported this bill to-day it was $100,000. The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs to-day, without any protest whatever, allowed the other $100,000 to come out as a useless expenditure after understanding the situation, as explained in three or four succeeding Congresses upon the Indian appropriation bill being introduced into the House.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman from Minnesota must know, I presume, that at the suggestion of the delegation from Minnesota this item was once before taken completely out of the bill by the House, but was reinserted by the Senate.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. And it was reinstated by the Senate, and when the conferees, consisting of myself, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER], and several others went into the Senate, we found that a part, at least, of the delegation from Minnesota had agreed that the amount could be restored in the bill, and therefore we had to bring back to the House what the House had already eliminated.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. What I say now is that I hope the delegation from Minnesota is so united on this item that we can make the evidence on this point so strong that it will be thoroughly understood in the future that in conference, when we strike out $100,000 in the House it will be kept out. I think the conferees will understand it.

Mr. Chairman, I started to speak about this particular amendment by saying that on this particular amendment alone a considerable sum of money has been saved in a matter which no Member of Congress from Minnesota understands and no Member from any other State understands unless they have obtained the information concerning it from the attorneys or representatives of those Indians who held a convention up there, to which members were elected through purely primary elections and thoroughly representative conventions. Those people have their own Government and their own council, and it is because they came here and explained to their Representatives in Congress these matters that we are able to take out of this bill items like this $100,000, which we took out to-day, thus saving it to the Chippewa Indians. It is because these men came here and favored the elimination of bureau control and are fighting the Indian Bureau that this result has been obtained.

The Indian Bureau undertook to put in an antagonistic council among those people on the ground that this other was not a representative delegation. The bureau challenged these men, and the tribe went in and elected these men again, and by a letter dated last August, 1919—which I will put in the RECORD—the Indian Bureau now specifically recognizes these men as representatives of a proper council, and there is no conflict between them and these delegates who came here to represent that council. There is not any contention against its authority whatever.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. In a moment. But because these reforms have been accomplished and items put in that ought not to have been put in, because this work that these men are doing threatens the bureau, and because the Blackfeet and Crows and other tribes all over the country are watching the Chippewa council of Minnesota in its efforts to commence the reform of eliminating bureau control over the Indians all over the country, this incident is noteworthy. Minnesota is the place where the battle rages the strongest against the Indian Bureau. These men are accomplishing things, and it is done through not allowing the appropriations asked for by the bureau.

This appropriation was in the bill three years ago, and two years ago, and then the bureau started a back-fire on these men, alleging that these men were not accredited representatives of the tribe. But last August they recognized them as the properly accredited representatives, and then they took away from them the appropriation of $10,000. Out of the Treasury? No. Out of their own funds. They have $6,000,000 in the Treasury. They do not want to allow them $10,000 for holding this representative convention which they say they should not hold. They want to take it away from them because they were forced, being beaten in popular elections by the Chippewas of Minnesota, to recognize them, and now they propose to disarm them by taking away from them their finances.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly willing to agree to an appropriation of $10,000 out of the funds of the Chippewa Indians for a general council to manage the affairs of those Indians; but I have some doubt about that part of the amendment which includes the expenses of the delegation in Washington at the second session of the Sixty-fifth Congress. The impression I gathered from meeting these Indians who were delegates from Minnesota was that no one of them is as able to represent the tribe as effectively as the Members from that State in this House. The truth is that without any representation from them the House has just done exactly what ought to have been done, and the work being accomplished I can not see the propriety of spending the funds of the Indians for a junket for a commission that has nothing to do.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. The thing I mentioned was a mere bagatelle as compared with the things that this council or legislative committee has accomplished in Washington. Seven hundred thousand acres of land, including in it 140,000 acres of the most fertile land in Minnesota, was patented to the State of Minnesota by the Federal Government, and to-day the Indian Bureau, because these Indians hired their own attorneys and forced the bureau to do so, has requested the Department of Justice to commence an action to recover from the State of Minnesota that 700,000 acres of land which was improperly classified as swamp land when in fact it was agricultural land. They saved from a million and a half to $3,000,000 in that item alone.

If I had the time I could go on and recite a great number of things that this council has done for the Chippewa Tribe in Minnesota, things for which any attorney, doing the same things, would have charged $500,000 a year. They saved in one instance to the children—every single child born in the Chippewa Reservation, and there were some 11,000 when the agreement of 1889 was entered into—they saved the allotment of 160 acres of land or more to every single child born since 1889. It was on the proposition of the Sarah Kedrick case, where an Indian moved to Canada and had four children born, where the bureau denied them their allotments, thinking it could keep them under control of the bureau if it could show that these children had not the right to receive allotments, having left the reservation. They got a decision from the court in which they saved to the Indians of Minnesota $3,000,000 worth of property. If the Government does not want the Minnesota Indians to have property that belongs to them, very well. But it ought to prevent the robbery of these Indians.

I want to say that if this matter is left out, it is simply an attack upon representative government by reference to the way in which the Chippewa Indians have their representation.

Mr. HAYDEN. I want the gentleman to understand that I do not object to the representation of this council and to the appropriation of money to carry it on, and I do not object to the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary to employ attorneys for the tribe. But I am speaking simply from my own experience, which is probably like that of other gentlemen, when I say that the Minnesota Representatives on the floor of the House are in a position to represent the facts to the House, and to do it in such an able manner that it is not necessary to send delegations of Indians here, because, in my judgment, they can accomplish nothing because of their conflicting statements.

Mr. SNYDER. I move to strike out the last word. I should like to correct the idea that there was any propaganda or influence used upon the committee by the Bureau of Indian Affairs or any particular number of Members from Minnesota or anywhere else. For several years the committee has been perplexed about this particular item, in view of the fact that there have been two conflicting delegations claiming to represent the Indians of Minnesota. For several years the department has withheld the expenditure of this money because it could not determine who were the legal representatives. The committee said, "We will leave out this item, and perhaps we will be able to ascertain who are the legal representatives," but up to the time of bringing in the bill no one appeared who could satisfy us he was eligible to urge the expenditure of this money as the legal representative of the Chippewas of Minnesota. I have no doubt the credentials brought down by a committee headed by certain Indians and certain lawyers have been presented to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ELLSWORTH], and that he believes they are the legal representatives of those Indians and that this appropriation should be made; but the chairman of the committee and other members of the committee are not convinced that this is correct. Therefore I am inclined to oppose the amendment until such time as it can be shown definitely that these representatives of the Indians have been duly and legally authorized, by a vote of a fair number of the Indians involved, to expend this money.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I want the Members of the House to understand a few things concerning this matter. First, this council is a representative council. This bill recognizes that fact by appropriating $1,000 for a celebration at White Earth by the same delegates who constitute this council. It is a democratic government in itself, thoroughly representative. This money is not to be taken from the Treasury but from their own funds. We simply ask you to reinstate it. It has been in for three years, and now that the Indians are actually accomplishing something the bureau wants to discontinue it. It is their own money that they want to spend. It is a tribal fund.

Mr. FESS. What does the gentleman say about the statement of the chairman of the committee that there are two delegations contending about this, and that we do not know which is the legally representative delegation?

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I tried to explain that before. The bureau has by letter recognized that this is the regularly authenticated council of the tribe. There are not two factions now.

Mr. SNYDER. There was no such letter presented to the committee.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. I will put the letter in the RECORD. I am sorry it was not presented to the committee. I think it was very short-sighted on the part of those who appeared before the committee, having that letter dated last August, that they did not present it to the commitee, so that the committee could see that at this time the council has been recognized.

As to what the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has said, if it will help the Indians, and I think it will, I will say, so far as I am concerned, frankly—and I think I can speak for the entire Minnesota delegation—we would not know a thing about these items if these men did not hunt us up day after day and week after week and advise us about them. I am glad they did, because I believe it will assist in settling the affairs of these Indians, and I believe it will help in settling the affairs of all the Indians satisfactorily in the end. I think it is the most valuable body in existence outside of Congress, so far as Indian matters are concerned.

There was a contending council organization encouraged by the Indian Bureau. For three years it was claimed that the regular council, which now is recognized, did not have authority, but that another and contending faction had authority to represent the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota. Then this item was carried in the bill and authority was disputed. Now, when the question of authority is finally settled, this item is left out and the council stands recognized, but with their own sinews of war taken from their own funds withdrawn.

It is to this council and to their duly authenticated legislative representatives that the other Indian tribes which are without representation are looking to lead them in their fight against encroachment upon their rights and their property and their funds by the Indian Bureau, which is constantly reaching out and attempting to extend its control over the Indian and the Indian's property. This council of the Minnesota Chippewas are the leaders in the fight for elimination of bureau control and the establishment of a policy which will prevent the Indians from gaining their actual independence and becoming self-respecting citizens of the Republic for which they have fought.

The letter to which I have referred is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, August 28, 1919.

Mr. JOHN G. MORRISON, JR.,
Red Lake, Minn.

DEAR MR. MORRISON: I am in receipt of a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the General Council of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, held at Cass Lake, Minn., July 8, 1919; also reports from Supt. Walter F. Dickens and Supervisor L. F. Michael, who attended this council at my request. I have given this matter very careful consideration and hereby recognize your election as president of the council, Paul H. Beaulieu as secretary thereof, and the organization effected thereby under the constitution and by-laws of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota.

I exceedingly regret, however, to note from the record that the factional differences among the Chippewa Indians were not adjusted at this council and a compromise effected, so that this election would be an expression of the entire Chippewa Tribe.

Sincerely, yours,

CATO SELLS, Commissioner.

Therefore it will be seen that the legislative committee, consisting of John G. Morrison, president of the council, Ed Rogers, Frank and Paul Beaulieu, Ben L. Fairbanks, and John Arten have authority to represent their people.

Mr. SNYDER. Since the gentleman states that he has a letter from the bureau, and that they have recognized this delegation as the legal delegation, and since he has agreed to put the letter in the RECORD, and since this money belongs to the Chippewas themselves, I withdraw my objection to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment as a new paragraph. Before having it read I will say that I received this amendment this morning from the so-called General Council of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians. I have not had time to investigate the merits of it, and yet at the same time I feel that this is the proper time and place to offer it, and probably the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs can throw some light on it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KNUTSON: Page 32, after line 26, insert the following as a new paragraph:

"Beginning with the calendar year of 1920, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay annualy to the enrolled members of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota the sum of $50 per capita from the proceeds of the sale of timber and lumber within the Red Lake Indian Reservation in Minnesota according to the provisions of the act of May 18, 1916 (39 Stat. L., 137): Provided, That only such enrolled members of the Red Lake Band as are alive and in being on the 1st day of April of each year shall be entitled to share in the payment for that year: And provided further, That the shares of competent Indians, including the shares of their dependent minor children or wards, shall be paid to such competent Indians directly, and the shares of incompetent Indians shall be placed to the credit of each Indian, subject to the expenditures under the individual-money regulations: And provided further, That the shares of dependent minor children or wards of incompetent Indians shall be placed to the credit of such minors or wards, subject to expenditure in like manner."

Mr. CARTER. I reserve a point of order against that amendment.

Mr. SNYDER. I make the point of order to save time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

MISSISSIPPI.

SEC. 9. For the relief of distress among the full-blood Choctaw Indians of Mississippi, including the pay of one special agent, who shall be a physician, one farmer, and one field matron, and other necessary administration expenses, $7,500; for their education by establishing, equipping, and maintaining day schools, including the purchase of land and the construction of necessary buildings and their equipment, $15,000; for the purpose of encouraging industry and self-support among said Indians and to aid them in building homes, in the culture of fruits, grains, cotton, and other crops, $7,500, which sum may be used for the purchase of seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, and other equipment necessary, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, to enable said Indians to become self-supporting, to be expended under conditions to be prescribed by the said Secretary for its repayment to the United States on or before June 30, 1925; in all, $30,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I trust that the gentleman from Illinois will not make the point of order on this paragraph, for the following reasons: When the Choctaw Indians removed from Mississippi to Oklahoma as a tribe, there were left about 1,200 of them, and there are now something over 1,200 full-blood Choctaw Indians in Mississippi. The Indians who remained in Mississippi were given lands in lieu of those that they would have had in Oklahoma, and at a later time were given scrip. The result has been what might have been expected, namely, that these Indians now have neither land nor money, nor the requisite knowledge to make a livelihood. The Government, we will say, wanted to be generous and just, but it was not wise. It brought the Indian in contact with a higher civilization, with which he was unfitted to cope. It turned over land to the Indian when he had no sort of conception of private ownership of land or any experience in dealing with it. The Indians did not know the value of what they had; because of their inability and incompetency, for which they were not to blame, they were fleeced and robbed on every hand, with the result that to-day the Mississippi Choctaw has nothing. It was a consequence of the white man's civilization coming in contact with a primitive people. That, as I understand it, is the basis of the moral obligation of the white people of this country to look after the Indians, because the Indians must conform to the white man's standard of policy. It is certainly a moral obligation on the part of the white people, who impose a white standard for the Indians, to furnish facilities to the Indians so that they can conform to that standard. That is true of the Mississippi Indian, a full-blooded Choctaw. If he is not helped he will perish.

A year or two ago they started a movement. All we ask for the Mississippi Choctaw is that he be furnished with facilities, that his children may be so equipped that the second generation can be self-sustaining.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VENABLE. I will.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to ask how the Indians were provided for from 1898——

Mr. VENABLE. Prior to 1898.

Mr. SNYDER. Eighteen hundred and ninety-eight was the last year in which they could participate.

Mr. VENABLE. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Since that down to the last year, how did they live and who provided for them?

Mr. VENABLE. They had a very precarious existence, indeed.

Mr. SNYDER. Did the State do anything toward it?

Mr. VENABLE. They fished and hunted and lived in cabins with cracks so large that you could throw a dog through them. They had no schools, their struggle was for existence. When the subcommittee went to Mississippi one old Indian said that he had not had anything to eat for three months except a little corn meal. They existed largely on the charity of the general public. The white neighbors gave them things to eat, and it was a state largely of mendicancy, you might say of charity. The next generation is going to be in the same condition. All we ask is that you send the Indian children to school and give them a fair chance to equip themselves for the white man's civilization.

Mr. SNYDER. One further question; since 1898——

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will yield, I want to straighten out that date.

Mr. VENABLE. Eighteen hundred and ninety-eight had nothing to do with the land, but that was the last time that they opened the rolls, when an agent went there for the purpose of making up the rolls.

Mr. SNYDER. Starting at that time, all connection with the Government of the United States was severed.

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; prior to that.

Mr. SNYDER. Why is it that such a resident of the State of Mississippi who holds no claim on the Government does not become a charge on the State of Mississippi?

Mr. VENABLE. One reason is because there is an obligation upon the General Government of the United States, which is discharging its obligation in relation to other Indians. In this very bill the bulk of the bill is a pure gratuity; over $7,000,000 is carried in this bill, where there is no legal obligation to pay it. We are doing that for other Indians in the United States. They solely and alone are supported under that moral obligation. We are doing it rightfully; I voted for it. I do not make a point of order against them.

Mr. SNYDER. Did not these same Indians have a right a long time ago to come under that same moral obligation?

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; Mr. Chairman, they had the right. These Indians loved their native land and they took land in Mississippi in lieu of it. The Government took these primitive people and turned over to them something that they could not handle, which they wasted and dissipated, just as if I gave money to a 5-year-old child. Now, when the result has come that would be expected naturally and reasonably, it does not lie in the mouth of the Government to say that because we gave you these things and you dissipated them you are forever estopped from asking further aid.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VENABLE. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman tell me, since two years ago we appropriated $75,000 and only a part was used, if the Indians were in this terrible state that the gentleman speaks of, why was it that the bureau did not see fit to do more?

Mr. VENABLE. I do not know. I think they are in a better condition now than they were then, for many of them did not have enough to eat. But the sins of the bureau should not be charged up to the Indians. I have begged the bureau to spend it all. I begged them to put the plan in operation, and begged them to go down there and locate schools and build them. I thought that when Congress started the project, two years ago, that it meant to carry it out. I asked the man in charge down there, who has been in charge of Indians in several parts of the United States—Dr. McKinley, I think his name is—and he told me that he never worked with any Indians in the world in America that were more deserving of help and that were more anxious to avail themselves of facilities to equip themselves for life under the white man's civilization than were these Indians. If we withdraw this appropriation from these Indians now, when they are full of hope for themselves and their children, you are going to produce a deal of sadness down there in Mississippi.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman knows that the estimates brought to us amounted to $65,000?

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; I have read the hearings.

Mr. SNYDER. And the committee having been convinced of the deplorable condition these Indians were in, and seeing that so little had been spent where so much had been offered, we were convinced that the amount we put in would be ample, or at least would be all that could be spent for this time, if we were justified in spending anything.

Mr. VENABLE. I can appreciate that, and I have been importuning the bureau myself. I have been down there to beg them to go ahead. Understand, I want to deal in perfect good faith. I do not say that the condition of those Indians now is as hard as it was when this project was first started, so far as actual food is concerned. Many of them have gone to work under direction and management, and they have done better. They are putting their children in schools where they can get to the schools, but the educational needs of their children are just as great now as they ever were. The other thing is but a means to an end.

Mr. SNYDER. I see that considerable money has been spent for live stock; $5,713 of the $15,000 has been spent for live stock.

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; so that they can have cows and get milk and butter.

Mr. SNYDER. And for equipment and miscellaneous matters, $1,400.

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; for plows and such things.

Mr. SNYDER. And they are not a band of Indians located in any particular locality.

Mr. VENABLE. They are scattered over about three counties. Most of them are in the counties of Neshoba and Winston, and some of them are in Leake County.

Mr. SNYDER. While I am of the same frame of mind in respect to the Seminoles, I think it was wrong to take them back. The State of Mississippi should have been forced to care for its own poor—whites, blacks, or reds—the same as does New York or Ohio. Yet, since we have entered into this proposition and we have encouraged those Indians to believe that we are going to do something for them, so far as I am concerned I am willing to stand on the bill as it is, and permit the matter to stay in.

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. VENABLE. What difference is there between the obligation to help the Mississippi Indians and the obligation to pay the gratuities to the various Indians in other parts of the United States?

Mr. SNYDER. The only difference I know is that these Indians in Mississippi had the right to come in under regulations which would permit legal gratuities to be made to them, but they did not see fit to take advantage of that.

Mr. VENABLE. If the chairman was familiar——

Mr. SNYDER. I am familiar with that part of it.

Mr. VENABLE. Let me show the gentleman the difference. They took the Mississippi Indians and they turned over this land to them, men who had never had any experience with the private ownership of land, while they took the Choctaw Indian who went to Oklahoma and the Government looked after his land and other things until such time as he was fit to handle it for himself. The sin against the Mississippi Indian was in turning over to a man a thing he knew nothing about, the value of which he did not appreciate, and letting him handle it himself. I hope the gentleman will not make the point of order.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. What became of this land that was turned over to those Indians?

Mr. VENABLE. The Indian would get in hard straits and he would sell it, and sometimes dissipated the money. At other times he would get in hard straits, and, being an Indian, he liked to fish and hunt and did not want to work, and he found out that he could go to a merchant and mortgage his land, give a deed of trust, then he would be in default in payments and he would finally lose the land under the sale.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And his white neighbors got possession of his land?

Mr. VENABLE. In a great many instances; yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Is there not some obligation on their part?

Mr. VENABLE. Yes; I grant you that. But the poor and the weak and the ignorant are taken advantage of the world over. Human nature is no different in Mississippi from what it is in Illinois.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The difference is this: Illinois is not seeking an appropriation out of the Federal Treasury to take care of its poor, while Mississippi is. That is the distinction.

Mr. VENABLE. There is no distinction in what I am talking about, and that is that the Federal Government in dealing with these Indians put them in an attitude where a certain result would come about, which the Government must have known, under a white civilization and in contact with a white man. There is a moral obligation resting upon the whole people of the United States to take care of the Indians in the United States. There is no more obligation from a moral viewpoint upon the part of Mississippi to take care of those Indians, exclusive of the other citizens, than there is of the State of Illinois to take care of her Indians or Minnesota to take care of her Indians, exclusive of the people of Mississippi.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. As I understand the gentleman's position, if the Government of the United States gives an Indian land, declares him to be competent to dispose of those lands, and they are disposed of and the Indian loses his property, then it is the duty of the Federal Treasury to take care of the Indian for the rest of his life.

Mr. VENABLE. The gentleman does not state my position correctly.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Perhaps I state it a little strong, but that is what it is.

Mr. VENABLE. Oh, no.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It is conceded that these Indians had the land; that they have squandered their substance; and, having squandered their substance, they do not recognize the doctrine which has always controlled the human race—that by the sweat of their face they shall live. If the gentleman's contention is correct, then we ought not to remove incompetency from any Indians, for fear they may lose their competency, because, whether Indian or white, a large proportion of the people of this world do lose their competency, and then it becomes the duty of the Federal Government to take care of them out of the Federal Treasury. I can not subscribe to that doctrine myself.

Mr. VENABLE. Neither do I, as stated by the gentleman. The doctrine is this, that the white man who settled America brought with him a white man's civilization and brought a primitive people in contact with it. The difference in the civilizations was so radical that the red man would go down under it unless he went through a period of tutelage and care. There was, therefore, a moral obligation upon the part of the white people to see to it that the Indian was furnished with facilities for this tutelage. In other words, the white people of America, the Government of America, must exercise reasonable care to the end that those facilities be furnished, and the Government is under an obligation to do that.

Now, after it has done that to the best of its ability, if the Government decides that a certain set of Indians who have had the use of these facilities have so far progressed as to be able to live under white civilization, and if after that for any reason the Indian should lose his property, there would certainly be no obligation on the part of the Government to take further care of them, because the Government has exercised its duty when it has taken reasonable pains and means to furnish the facilities.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. But who is going to determine that?

Mr. VENABLE. Necessarily the white Government.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The Government thought it did that with those Indians, but they still lost their subsistence, the gentleman says.

Mr. VENABLE. I do not think any official on God's green earth thought——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, yes; a great many people thought the best thing they could learn was to learn that they should work if they wanted to eat.

Mr. VENABLE. Then let us strike out the whole Indian Bureau; let us not give gratuities. If it is going to be abolished, all right; my Choctaws can starve with the others in America. But as long as we recognize that obligation there is no distinction between the Mississippi Indians and any other Indians. Now, then, I say there is a moral duty on the part of this Government to furnish to the Indians reasonable facilities for conformation with the white man's standard of living. That is a duty. Now, then, if the Government has done that it has performed its duty. There is no further moral obligation. In the case of the Mississippi Choctaw it has not furnished him any facilities whatsoever in the history of the Government and the Government's dealing with them; not one. It has turned over to him some land. He had absolutely no experience in private ownership, all his lands having been held under the communal system, lands on which he could go and fish and hunt. Every agent sent down there, almost without exception, was a scoundrel and a blackleg. One made an enrollment of the Choctaws, a drunken fellow, who afterwards used the roll for shaving paper. That is the history of the treatment of the Mississippi Choctaw, and I am pleading as a humanitarian proposition, as a moral obligation, to do for the Mississippi Indians what we are doing for the other Indians, give him a fair chance, and that is all I ask.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. If the contention of the gentleman is correct, we freed a great many black men from slavery?

Mr. VENABLE. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Who had not been accustomed to holding property. We had not attempted to educate them to the necessity of the individual ownership of property, to take care of——

Mr. VENABLE. He had from 150 to 200 years of tutelage in private ownership in slavery and had an object lesson from that.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. He might have had an object lesson, but he was not permitted to participate in the object lesson. And the same reason the gentleman makes would put upon the Federal Government the duty of taking care of any improvident black who was freed from slavery.

Mr. VENABLE. There are two answers to that. One is that he is a negro with the negro's characteristics, and the other is the Indian with his characteristics. Another answer is that I personally believe that what the gentleman contends for should have been done. I think the personal and political crime against the negro was to make him a citizen.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. All this has nothing——

Mr. VENABLE. He should have had the tutelage of the Government.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This has nothing to do with the question of citizenship. These Choctaws are citizens.

Mr. VENABLE. The gentleman is talking about the negro, and I say it is a crime——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I asked whether it was the duty of the General Government now to provide out of the Federal Treasury for the care of all improvident Indians and negroes, and I might add whites. Most of us are improvident. However, I make the point of order against the paragraph. There is no authority of law for most of the items in the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not familiar with the law and he will ask the chairman of the committee if this is authorized?

Mr. VENABLE. I would like to be heard on the point of order, if the Chair pleases.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, all I desire to say on the point of order is that, of course, these items now contained in the bill were in the previous bill, and, of course, that makes the items germane to the question.

Mr. VENABLE. What about the continuation of these schools? I am not a parliamentarian.

Mr. SNYDER. I am not a parliamentarian. I prefer to have some one else argue the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman contend that all the appropriations contained in this paragraph are authorized?

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Chairman, I wish to submit some statements to the Chair. Undoubtedly this matter was subject to the point of order before the project was started, but the question I want to submit to the Chair—I do not pose as a parliamentary expert at all—is that certain schools have been established down there and certain contracts have been made and the matter is now being conducted. It does not look to me as though those projects would be subject to the point of order, but that they are continuing projects.

We have a certain number of schools down there, and I understand they are now in session. The hearings disclose that. I submit it to the good judgment of the Chair. I do not pose as a parliamentary expert.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sees in this paragraph a number of other things besides schools, and he will ask the gentleman if those appropriations are authorized.

Mr. VENABLE. In my judgment most of the appropriations are gratuitous, like the seven million and some thousand and odd dollars in this bill, and subject to a point of order, because they are not continuing projects. The Chair has asked me, and that is my candid opinion about it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE], as I understood him, stated that in his opinion this paragraph was subject to a point of order when first inserted in the appropriation act, but that it was now a continuing project. Of course, the rule authorizes an appropriation made for the purpose of continuing projects under construction, or something to that effect. But it has always been held that it did not apply to general propositions of this character; that it only applied to a particular thing that was being constructed, like a building, or hospital grounds, or something of that sort. There is no authority of law for any of the items in this bill anywhere. The appropriation in the current law is not an authorization for an item in this bill, but this specifically provides for the construction of buildings, and the purchase of lands, for which there is no authorization of law, and the chairmen have always held that items of that character were subject to a point of order unless there was an authorization of law for such purposes. And there is no such authorization.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the circumstances, and in view of the fact that there is no existing law authorizing these appropriations, the Chair is compelled to sustain the point of order.

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the section, as follows:

Page 33, line 2, insert: "For the relief of distress among the full-blood Choctaw Indians of Mississippi, $30,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VENABLE offers the following amendment: Page 33, line 2, insert: "For the relief of distress among the full-blood Choctaw Indians of Mississippi, $30,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. VENABLE. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 33, noes 4.

So the amendment was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. DALLINGER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Dudley, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 11025. An act to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the Tombigbee River near Iron Wood Bluff, in Itawamba County, Miss.;

H. R. 10135. An act for the construction of a bridge across Rock River at or near East Grand Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.;

H. R. 10558. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Connecticut River Railroad Co., its lessees, successors, and assigns, to construct a bridge across the Connecticut River in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts;

H. R. 10847. An act granting the consent of Congress to Marion County, State of Mississippi, to construct a bridge across the Pearl River in Marion County, State of Mississippi;

H. R. 8661. An act to authorize the Kingsdale Lumber Corporation to construct a bridge across Lumber River near the town of Lumberton, N. C.;

H. R. 8084. An act granting certain claimants the preferential right to purchase certain alleged public lands in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 9947. An act to authorize J. L. Anderson and H. M. Duvall to construct a bridge across Great Peedee River at or near the town of Cheraw, S. C.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

MONTANA.

SEC. 10. For support and civilization of the Indians at Fort Belknap Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, $20,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, in the print I have the section appears as "Section 10." It was read as "Section 9."

Mr. SNYDER. The number of the section in the star print of the bill is "10."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must also state, in view of the fact that one section went out on a point of order, the sections were renumbered.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, that is not a matter to be done by the reading clerk, but by the engrossing clerk.

Mr. WALSH. There was an amendment adopted to that section.

Mr. CARTER. As I recall, there was no section in the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The sections will have to be renumbered.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing construction, maintenance, and operation of the irrigation systems on the Flathead Indian Reservation, in Montana, $100,000 (reimbursable), to remain available until expended.

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Montana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EVANS of Montana: Page 35, line 5, after the word "Montana," strike out "$100,000" and insert "$1,000,000."

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Chairman, as I attempted to explain to the House two or three days ago when this bill first came up, this item is for the continuation of the construction of the irrigation project on the Flathead Indian Reservation. The Secretary of the Interior has recommended $1,000,000 for this year's progress of that work. The committee, as the bill discloses, has cut it to $100,000. It appears to me that it is quite imperative that that work should go on. You have a corps of men out there—engineers and others—with an equipment of steam shovels, and all that sort of thing. That organization must be dissipated, the horses and mules sold, the supplies on hand stored, and perhaps lost, and it seems unjust that you should stop a six or seven million dollar project right in the midst of it, after having spent four millions, and let it stand for a year. And that will be the result of the adoption of this bill without the amendment. I therefore appeal to the House to make such an appropriation as the Secretary of the Interior asks, in the sum of $1,000,000.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. In justification of the reduction of the estimate from $1,000,000 to $100,000, I desire to say that upon this project at the present time there are under construction 91,000 acres. The area actually irrigated is 27,128 acres. The area of irrigable land cultivated by Indians is 3,267 acres; the area of irrigable land cultivated by lessees, who, of course, are white men, is 6,534 acres; the area of irrigable land cultivated by white owners, 22,870 acres. So it will be seen that there are nearly 60,000 acres ready for the water ahead of cultivation.

Many days of hearings were taken up on this question, and we even had the Secretary of the Interior before us. We had the Director of the Reclamation Service, a very able and competent man; we had his assistant, and the assistant to the commissioner, as well as the commissioner himself. It was determined that no serious deterioration would take place if this proposition was held up until such time as the land is more nearly taken up in the progress of the project. Therefore the committee decided to write into the law that it would appropriate an amount sufficient to maintain and operate this land and keep such parts of it as were in condition to deliver water, from undue deterioration. We even went to the extent of calling Mr. Davis back to the committee the second time. Or, in other words, the bureau called the Director of the Reclamation Service back the second time without the request of the committee, and the question was whether or not $100,000 would operate and maintain the plant and keep it from harmful deterioration until the matter could be more fully determined. Mr. Davis stated that it would be a sufficient amount. Now, in connection with this, as was stated here yesterday, this is a two-fold proposition. There has been already spent over $4,000,000 in construction and upkeep on this proposition. It is 50,000 acres ahead of the requirements. The Secretary of the Interior has stated that it is not good policy to carry on these projects far ahead of the necessity, and, further than that, as has been stated, no penny has yet been paid back to the Government upon any of this land—money which has been expended either upon this project or any of the others.

Now, we have written into this bill, in addition to reducing the appropriation, language which will make it impossible for any part of this $100,000 to be spent for the further development of the plant unless the Secretary of the Interior makes an arrangement with the users of the water whereby a pro rata per acre charge shall be paid into the Treasury to reimburse the Government for such moneys as have already been expended, and for such moneys as will be expended in the future.

It is the mature judgment of this committee, and notwithstanding the fact of having listened to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. EVANS] and to a gentleman by the name of Harbart, who was brought on here from out there, and to several gentlemen represented in another body, that we are justified in our course. Having considered their arguments, the views of the committee were unchanged. We believe that this project will not suffer from the reduction of the appropriation, and we believe that in a year from now there will still be at least 20,000 acres of land ready to be provided with water ahead of the land which has been taken up. Therefore I sincerely hope that this amendment will be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. EVANS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the purchase of land for the Navajo Tribe in the States of New Mexico and Arizona, $100,000, to remain available until used, and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, reimbursable to the United States from any funds now or hereafter placed in the Treasury to the credit of the Navajo Indians in the States of New Mexico and Arizona, and to remain a charge and lien upon the lands and funds of said tribe of Indians until paid: Provided, That not exceeding $10,000 of the appropriation may be used in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior in leasing grazing lands for the benefit of the said Indians.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I think we ought to have a quorum. I make the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas makes the point that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Sixty-eight gentlemen are present—not a quorum. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Anderson	Flood	Kennedy, R. I.	Rowan
Aswell	Fordney	Kettner	Rowe
Ayres	Fuller, Mass.	Kincheloe	Rubey
Bacharach	Gallagher	Langley	Sanders, Ind.
Barkley	Gandy	Lesher	Sanders, La.
Begg	Gard	Linthicum	Sanders, N. Y.
Bell	Garland	Luhring	Sanford
Benson	Garrett	McAndrews	Schall
Bland, Ind.	Glynn	McCulloch	Scully
Bland, Mo.	Good	McDuffie	Sears
Bland, Va.	Goodall	McKeown	Siegel
Booher	Goodwin	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sims
Britten	Gould	McPherson	Sisson
Brooks, Pa.	Graham, Ill.	Mason	Slemp
Browning	Hamill	Merritt	Smith, Idaho
Brumbaugh	Hamilton	Moon	Smith, Ill.
Burke	Hardy, Colo.	Morin	Smith, N. Y.
Burroughs	Haugen	Mott	Steele
Campbell, Kans.	Heflin	Mudd	Strong, Kans.
Candler	Hill	Newton, Minn.	Sullivan
Cannon	Holland	Nicholls, S. C.	Taylor, Ark.
Carew	Houghton	Nichols, Mich.	Thomas
Clark, Fla.	Hulings	O'Connor	Thompson
Copley	Hull, Tenn.	Oliver	Tinkham
Crago	Humphreys	Peters	Upshaw
Crisp	Hutchinson	Phelan	Vare
Crowther	Igoe	Platt	Voigt
Cullen	Ireland	Porter	Wason
Dickinson, Mo.	Jefferis	Rainey, J. W.	Welty
Dooling	Johnson, Ky.	Randall, Calif.	Wilson, La.
Doremus	Johnson, Miss.	Rayburn	Wilson, Pa.
Dunn	Johnson, S. Dak.	Reber	Winslow
Eagle	Johnson, Wash.	Reed, N. Y.	Wood, Ind.
Emerson	Johnston, N. Y.	Riordan	Woodyard
Esch	Jones, Pa.	Robinson, N. C.	Wright
Evans, Nev.	Kahn	Rodenberg
Ferris	Kennedy, Iowa	Rouse

Thereupon the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having under consideration the bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and finding itself without a quorum, he had directed the roll to be called, whereupon 280 Members, a quorum, had answered to their names, and he reported a list of the absentees for printing in the RECORD and in the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The names of the absentees will be recorded. The committee will resume its session.

Thereupon the committee resumed its session.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I understand the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] reserved a point of order on the paragraph on page 40, line 13. The paragraph, as I understand it, is clearly subject to a point of order.

The justification for this item is that there are about 7,000 Navajo Indians who have gradually gotten off a reservation which contains about 13,000,000 acres of land upon the public domain; and so, not to disturb these Indians who have gotten that far away from home, the bureau proposes to buy this additional property in order that the Indians may remain where they are.

This provision was not under discussion during the time that the appropriation bill was being made up. The chairman of the committee is familiar with it only as having been brought to him after the bill was completed, with the request from the bureau that it be inserted, and the chairman will not feel particularly hurt and will not think that anybody will be in any way distressed if the paragraph goes out.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether this item in the bill is connected in any way with the proposition concerning land along the right of way of one of the railroad companies which has every alternate section, which may possibly have been disposed of. I think this is a case where a lot of Indians down there ought to be taken care of.

Mr. HAYDEN. The bureau has authority for the remainder of this year to make exchanges with the railroad company. The basis of this legislation is that the Navajo Tribe of Indians of the State of Arizona have enough land. They have 370 acres for each man, woman, and child, and that, according to the manner of grazing live stock in Arizona, is enough to support each family. In New Mexico an equal number of Navajos have a much less area, with the result that the Indians, who have greatly increased in number, have left the reservation, 7,000 of them, and have been living on the land that they have been occupying for a number of years. In order to get title to the land it is necessary to purchase it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. How many of these Indians are there?

Mr. HAYDEN. About 30,000. It is the largest tribe in the Southwest. They are multiplying very rapidly.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Of course, $100,000 will not buy enough land for 30,000 Indians.

Mr. HERNANDEZ. I may say that the Indians themselves on their own account have been heretofore leasing part of these lands and paying for the leases out of their own pockets.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Why do they not continue to do that?

Mr. HERNANDEZ. As to that I do not know.

Mr. SNYDER. As I stated, Mr. Chairman, this matter was not of enough importance to be brought to the attention of the committee, and the committee had no opportunity to look into it, because the item was brought up after the chairman was instructed to report the bill to the House. We have no knowledge other than what we are getting here now, beyond what came to us in the form of a letter to justify the item.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have no desire to do any injustice to these or any other Indians. I am surprised at the statement that there are 30,000 of these Indians that are not on the reservation and not on lands of their own. I supposed there were not more than 30,000 in the entire tribe.

Mr. HERNANDEZ. Some of them are on land adjoining the reservation—close to it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Are there 30,000 Indians who are off the reservation?

Mr. HAYDEN. The total membership of the tribe is 30,000, of whom about 7,000 are off the reservation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. One hundred thousand dollars will not go very far toward providing for grazing lands for 7,000 Indians, I take it.

Mr. HAYDEN. The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. HERNANDEZ] can give a better idea of the value of such land than I can. Its value is not very high, because it is used only for grazing purposes.

Mr. HERNANDEZ. It is nothing but grazing land. I suppose the idea is to lease the land from the railroad.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Authority is given here to use only $10,000 of the $100,000 for leasing. There will be an opportunity elsewhere to correct the matter if an error be made here, and I make the point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make allotments from the surplus and undisposed of lands on the diminished portion of the Fort Berthold Reservation, North Dakota, to any living children on said reservation entitled to rights thereon but who have not yet been allotted not exceeding 160 acres of agricultural land or 320 acres of grazing land, and to issue trust patents for the selection so made, as provided by article 4 of the agreement of December 14, 1886, as ratified by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. L., pp. 1032, 1033), such allotments to be made under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That where selections are made on lands reported to contain coal or other mineral, such selections shall be approved and the allottee shall receive a patent therefor, under the aforesaid act, with a reservation, however, of the coal or other mineral for the benefit of the tribe: And provided further, That allotments herein authorized may be made to persons qualified to receive such allotments so long as there are any surplus lands suitable for the purpose.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. What is the particular necessity for this provision of the bill with reference to this Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak.?

Mr. HAYDEN. This legislation is urged by the Indian Bureau because the Indians of that tribe requested that the children born since the last distribution of land be given allotments. It has been customary for Congress, from time to time, where there were surplus lands on an Indian reservation, to authorize the allotment of land to children born after the date when the previous allotments were made; but the tribe are interested in retaining the coal if any in the land, and therefore this is a surface allotment, reserving to the tribe as a whole the minerals in the land. It is very similar to the provisions of the desert land and homestead laws, which allow an entry on the surface, reserving to the United States the coal in the land.

Mr. WALSH. It says any living children on said reservation. That, of course, means Indian children?

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly; children entitled to rights thereto. No one but Indian children would be entitled to allotments.

Mr. SNYDER. This would authorize allotments to newborn children on the Fort Berthold Reservation, from the surplus land on that reservation.

Mr. WALSH. How much surplus land is there?

Mr. SNYDER. Several thousand acres.

Mr. HAYDEN. We inquired about that. There is ample land to make these allotments.

Mr. SNYDER. There is plenty of land.

Mr. WALSH. I withdraw the reservation.

The CHAIRMAN. The reservation of the point of order is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To reimburse the Indians of the Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak., for 253.04 acres of land embraced within the boundaries of the Verendrye National Monument, established by presidential proclamation of June 29, 1917, the sum of $1,265.20, representing the appraised value of said land at $5 per acre: Provided, That the sum appropriated shall be subject to expenditure upon the order of the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of the Indians of the Fort Berthold Reservation.

Mr. WALSH. I reserve a point of order on that paragraph. This seems to be a considerable sum of money for the purpose of reimbursement for 253.04 acres of land. How was that appraisal made of $5 per acre?

Mr. SNYDER. The land referred to in this item is embraced within the Fort Berthold Reservation. It was reserved by presidential proclamation, dated June 29, 1917, upon the recommendation of the National Park Service, and set aside as the Verendrye National Monument. The Fort Berthold Reservation was established by treaty, and the equitable title to the land is in the Indians, the legal title being in the United States. Through the reservation of the land as a national monument, without the consent of the Indians, they have been deprived of its use, and should, therefore, be reimbursed for its appraised value. At the present time the land is under the joint supervision of the custodian of the National Park Service, residing at Sanish, N. Dak., and the superintendent of the Fort Berthold Agency, at Elbowwoods, N. Dak. Should an appropriation be made to reimburse the Indians for the value of the land, the Bureau of Indian Affairs will surrender all its rights and claims thereto on behalf of the Fort Berthold Indians to the National Park Service, which will thereafter have full and complete control.

Mr. WALSH. What is this national monument?

Mr. SNYDER. The Indian lands have been included in this national reserve without the Indians being compensated for their lands, and this is to reimburse them.

Mr. WALSH. Were any of them living on this land?

Mr. SNYDER. It is an obligation the Government should pay, because the land belonged to the Indians.

Mr. WALSH. Well, perhaps so; but have they been deprived of the use of this land by its being included within this monument? Were they living on it and were they driven off, or have they been prohibited from using it, or are they still going to be permitted to use it for grazing purposes?

Mr. SNYDER. This land was taken away from them by presidential proclamation dated June 29, 1917, and of course they are entitled to some compensation for it.

Mr. WALSH. Has it been actually taken away from them? Were they using it for dwellings or for grazing or anything of that sort, or are they to be permitted to continue the use of it? Have they been driven off the land? What is this monument?

Mr. SNYDER. The title to the property has been taken away from the Indians by the Government of the United States, and the question now is simply whether the property is worth $5 an acre.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAMTON. What is the reason for placing the money at the discretionary disposal of the Interior Department instead of having it put in the Treasury to the credit of these Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. That is the usual practice. I can not give any justification for it.

Mr. CRAMTON. Is it customary to turn this over to the Indian Department with full discretion as to its expenditure?

Mr. SNYDER. It is Indian money and comes into the hands of the Secretary of the Interior like other Indian money. Under the law it could not go anywhere else.

Mr. CRAMTON. I do not understand that all money coming into the Treasury to the credit of the Indians may be expended in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SNYDER. The moneys coming from transactions of this kind, which would be distributed as tribal funds, would have to go into the Treasury and be distributed in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. CRAMTON. I do not understand that this provides for distribution; it provides for expenditure.

Mr. SNYDER. It provides that the Government shall pay the Indians $5 an acre for the acres taken away from them. That money would be taken from one fund in the Treasury and put to the credit of another fund in the Treasury.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is taking it out of the hands of the Treasurer and putting it into the hands of the Secretary of the Interior and telling him that he may expend it in any way that he thinks right.

Mr. WALSH. Well, this occurred in 1917. I think they can wait, and I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from New York how long he expects to continue this afternoon?

Mr. SNYDER. I want to continue until 5 o'clock.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. How much time do gentlemen on that side of the House want to get ready for the big time?

Mr. CARTER. As the gentleman from Illinois knows, occasionally a Democrat has to put on a dress suit. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And it will take him a good while to hunt one up. [Laughter.]

Mr. SNYDER. Does not the gentleman think that we can run until 5 o'clock?

Mr. CARTER. I think we had better make it 4.30.

Mr. SNYDER. Well, all right; if we can move along rapidly. We want to give you an opportunity to have the last good time you will probably have. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It is not likely that you will all be here to-morrow, anyhow.

Mr. CARTER. That depends upon whether there is any wood alcohol left or not. [Laughter.]

The Clerk read as follows:

For support of Quapaws, Oklahoma: For education (article 3, treaty of May 13, 1833), $1,000; for blacksmith and assistants, and tools, iron, and steel for blacksmith shop (same article and treaty), $500; in all, $1,500: Provided, That the President of the United States shall certify the same to be for the best interests of the Indians.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 16, after the word "Indians," insert: "Provided further, That hereafter no Indian under the jurisdiction of the Quapaw Agency shall be declared incompetent except by a proper court having jurisdiction, and all persons heretofore declared incompetent by the Secretary of the Interior shall be held to be competent unless they are adjudged incompetent by a competent court within six months after the passage of this act."

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I introduce this amendment for the purpose of clearing up a situation at the Quapaw Agency. Under former legislation some Indians have become competent and afterwards have been declared incompetent simply through the action of the department. I believe, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, that any man has a right to go into the courts and have his rights determined as to whether he is competent or incompetent. The Government has probate attorneys in Oklahoma and makes provision for taking care of them, but it is an unsettled question as to whether the courts of Oklahoma have any jurisdiction at all over these Indians. I have introduced this amendment as another step along the line of this bill to as quickly as possible clean up a great deal of the bureau work, and especially to give these Indians their rights in court, a right to which all men are entitled.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does the Oklahoma law provide that a competent Indian may go into court and have the court declare him incompetent, or an incompetent go into court and have the court declare him competent?

Mr. HOWARD. No; the Indians are treated as citizens by the State and have the same rights in our courts as other people, and it is my contention that after they are once declared competent, either by statute or court, that that right should only be interfered with by a hearing in court.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. There is no method that I know of except trying a man for insanity in the ordinary court or as a spendthrift. There would be no provision in my State for declaring an Indian incompetent within the meaning of the term as we use it in the statutes.

Mr. HASTINGS. If the gentleman will yield, a great many Indians have been declared incompetent. The probate attorney would produce their testimony in court, and the court passes upon the competency or incompetency of the Indian to transact business.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. But here is a proposition that where a number of Indians have been declared incompetent the court shall declare them to be competent, and that declaration shall stand as to competency unless the court hereafter shall declare them incompetent. By that time if they have any property it will be gone.

Mr. HASTINGS. It is divisible into two parts. The Secretary of the Interior shall not declare any person incompetent, but that right is transferred to the court. Now, those that have been declared incompetent have six months to go into court and have the court pass on that.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I did not hear that. Let us have the amendment again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I thought I was not mistaken; this declares that the Indians now incompetent to be competent.

Mr. HASTINGS. Unless——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Unless the heavens fall—unless some court declares them incompetent within six months.

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman is mistaken about it.

Mr. SNYDER. If I understand, it is only those who have been once declared competent by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, no.

Mr. SNYDER. Oh, yes; that is what it means.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The amendment provides, if I got it right, that the Indians that have been declared incompetent we declare to be competent, unless they are declared incompetent within six months by a court.

Mr. SNYDER. That is correct.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We declare them competent.

Mr. SNYDER. But only those that have been declared incompetent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We declare them all competent.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. No; only those declared incompetent by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SNYDER. There are 229,000 Indians who are yet incompetent, and this affects only those who have once been declared competent by the Secretary of the Interior and who have since been declared incompetent by the same officer.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We declare them competent, unless there is a court action within six months declaring them incompetent.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This sets out that the Secretary shall not hereafter declare an Indian in this tribe incompetent.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. HASTINGS. This prevents him from declaring any of them incompetent in the future.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Then I am right and the gentleman is mistaken. This declares that he shall not hereafter declare an Indian in this tribe incompetent.

Mr. SNYDER. No.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And then goes further and says that if he has declared them incompetent that incompetency is removed, unless the court within six months finds them to be incompetent.

Mr. HASTINGS. That is correct.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That means that we declare them competent unless there is a court action within six months declaring them incompetent.

Mr. HASTINGS. No; that those whom the Secretary has declared incompetent——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. As to the others, we forbid anyone declaring them incompetent.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Except by action of court.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We have not anything to do with that.

Mr. HASTINGS. This gives that jurisdiction to the court.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This does not give any jurisdiction to the court. We can not give jurisdiction. This takes jurisdiction away from the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HASTINGS. The courts now have jurisdiction.

Mr. SNYDER. It takes the authority from the Secretary of the Interior to declare incompetent an Indian whom he has already declared competent.

Mr. HOWARD. And treated as competent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Whether he has declared him incompetent or not, this prevents his declaring any of them incompetent.

Mr. SNYDER. If it does, I do not understand the amendment, because my understanding was, when the amendment was brought to me, that this was what they wanted to do. There are certain Indians whom the Secretary of the Interior has declared to be competent——

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Incompetent.

Mr. SNYDER. No; he has declared them competent. Subsequent to that he has gone back and declared the same Indian incompetent.

Mr. HASTINGS. That is right.

Mr. HOWARD. Precisely.

Mr. SNYDER. And what they propose to do with this amendment is to fix it so that when the Secretary of the Interior has declared an Indian competent he can not come around three months or six months afterwards and declare him incompetent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I will say to my friend that it does not stop there by a long shot.

Mr. SNYDER. That is my understanding of what they want. That is what I am willing to accept, but I am not willing to accept the amendment if it is as the gentleman from Illinois says it is.

Mr. HASTINGS. Suppose we pass it over until it can be more critically examined.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think it would better be more critically examined, and we can examine it here.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that something should be done with this subject matter, and if this amendment does not meet the situation the paragraph should be passed over with an opportunity to perfect the amendment.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It may be, Mr. Chairman, that Congress sitting in the legislative capacity is better equipped to determine whether an Indian is competent than is the Secretary of the Interior. While in many respects I do not subscribe to what the Indian Office or the Interior Department does, still I would hesitate a good while, if they have declared an Indian to be incompetent in order to prevent some one from robbing him of his property, before I would be willing to declare him competent. It might then again occur, as we witnessed to-day, that a great majority of this committee would vote to support the Indian after his property had been stolen from him. That is a curious attitude to put us in.

Mr. SNYDER. I do not understand what the gentleman means, and I would like to have him point out what we have had of that character to-day.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Absolutely in the Mississippi case, that is what we did.

Mr. SNYDER. But this is not the first time that was done.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. No; but it is the last time that it has been done, and that is the reason I call attention to it. It is not the last time that it will be done.

Mr. HASTINGS. Let it go over.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I never refuse such a request as far as I am concerned, but I think I shall make the point of order when the time comes. I do not say I will, but I may say this: Very likely there ought to be some remedy adopted. Of course, the real remedy would be to get a proper man in the Indian Office.

Mr. HASTINGS. I want to say, if the gentleman will allow me, I am opposed to allowing the Secretary of the Interior through his inferior officers to have the final say as to whether the man who once was declared competent can be declared incompetent without any court procedure whatsoever. That is what is intended by this amendment. It is to give jurisdiction to the court and let the probate attorneys we provide for go in there and represent the department before a court of competent jurisdiction, and let that court determine rather than let the department say upon ex parte affidavits taken from various parties through that agency and forwarded here, and then some clerk in the department finally say that the man is incompetent.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope the Secretary of the Interior will continue to have power, when somebody is trying to rob some Indian of his property or because he has been declared a competent Indian and he is not competent, to save his property for him by declaring him incompetent, and if such a thing could be done with a great many white people I would approve of it.

Mr. HASTINGS. Does the gentleman from Illinois believe under our present system of government it is better to confer that authority upon somebody 1,500 miles away, upon ex parte affidavits, or to permit the court in the country where the department is represented by attorneys to pass upon it after all the testimony is in?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, well, we know perfectly well the local attorney in one of these counties is not specially interested in saving the property of some Indian who is going to lose it to some very eminent white citizen voter of the county.

Mr. HASTINGS. These probate attorneys are appointed by the Secretary of the Interior and are under his jurisdiction.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield, if he has the floor?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have not the floor, but I will yield.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I want to say this upon this amendment: In the Quapaw Agency there is a family by the name of Goodeagle.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. We can not hear what is going on and we can not determine whether this is a Democratic or a Republican caucus.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I think I can make the gentleman from Texas hear. I always try to do so. The Goodeagle family had been attending to their own affairs for years. They owned a large estate. They had many buildings in Baxter Springs, Cherokee County, Kans. They owned large property in the Quapaw Agency, which is south of there in Oklahoma. It was discovered there were large mineral deposits on their property in Oklahoma. It appears that the Quapaw Indian agent was very much interested in endeavoring to secure leases for mineral purposes for certain parties on a part of their property. The Goodeagle Indians refused to make the leases to the parties in whom the agent was interested. They were making leases at a higher rate of royalty. The agent took the matter up with the Indian Office up here and had all the Goodeagles declared incompetent, though for years they had been directors of banks, the owners of buildings, the owners of large affairs, and had conducted their business in a successful manner as other business men in that community had. Immediately after the Goodeagles had been declared incompetent, favorites of the Indian agent were given leases to their lands at lower rates of royalty than the Goodeagles had been offered before, and for which they would not make leases upon their land. This circumstance I think is acute. It is now in the courts. The Goodeagles are rich, they have a large estate, and it is one of the scandals attaching to the Indian Office. This family was, after 16 years, declared incompetent in order that the Indian Office might control their property. I take it that the amendment offered by the Representative of that district is for the purpose of preventing anything like this from ever occurring in the future. The amendment should prevail. The Secretary of the Interior did not pass upon this question. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is not the man who is responsible. The man who was responsible for declaring the Goodeagles incompetent was removed as soon as the circumstances surrounding the situation had been called to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior, but the Goodeagles are still incompetent to conduct their business, although they are still connected with the large affairs of the communities in which they live. They were building a large hotel. The hotel was just ready for the plumbing. That was three or four years ago. The hotel is still standing there with the plumbing rusting on the outside of the building, with the loss of forty-odd thousand dollars to the Goodeagle estate because they were declared incompetent. The Goodeagle estate has lost anywhere from $40,000 to $100,000 because the Quapaw Indian agent secured an order declaring the Goodeagles incompetent of conducting their own affairs, though they had conducted their affairs, as I say, for 16 years or more. I hope the amendment will be approved so as to prevent anything like this from occurring in the future.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we pass this amendment, with the point of order pending, until to-morrow, without prejudice, to see if we can not get it revised so as to obtain exactly what is desired.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that this amendment be passed over until to-morrow, without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, at his discretion, not to exceed $45,000 of the funds on deposit to the credit of the Osage Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma and to pay out the same for necessary expenses in connection with oil and gas production on the Osage Reservation, including salaries of employees, rent of quarters for employees, traveling expenses, printing, telegraphing and telephoning, and purchase, repair, and operation of automobiles.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. HADLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that leave of absence for the day be given my colleague, Mr. JOHNSON of Washington, on account of illness.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 26 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Friday, January 9, 1920, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Attorney General, submitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for increase of salary of the administrative accountant, division of accounts of the Department of Justice, for the fiscal year 1921 (H. Doc. No. 573); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimate of appropriation required by the Internal Revenue Bureau for the enforcement of the national prohibition act during the remainder of the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 574); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation required by the Interior Department for equipment and operation of the Interior Department Building, fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 575); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting deficiency estimate of appropriation required by the Department of Labor for "War Labor Administration Conciliation," fiscal year 1919 (H. Doc. No. 576); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriations for proposed increases in salaries of the Solicitor for the Post Office Department and the chief bookkeeper and record clerk, fiscal year 1921 (H. Doc. No. 577); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

6. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting documents in response to House resolution 271 (H. Doc. No. 578); to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. STEENERSON, from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11578) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 534), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11005) granting a pension to Bridget E. Reid; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5480) granting a pension to Seaburn D. Wray; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. STEENERSON: A bill (H. R. 11578) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and for other purposes; to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. EDMONDS: A bill (H. R. 11579) amending the prohibition act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McCLINTIC: A bill (H. R. 11580) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Weatherford, Okla.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 11581) to provide for the national security and defense by encouraging the production and refining of graphite (plumbago, silver lead) ores in the United States and its possessions, and to provide revenue for the Government of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEENERSON: A bill (H. R. 11582) relating to third-class mail matter; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. STOLL: A bill (H. R. 11583) for the purchase of a post-office site at Mullins, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KAHN: A bill (H. R. 11584) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be erected a suitable building or buildings for marine hospital purposes on the present marine hospital site at San Francisco, Calif., and to remove all or any of the present structures on said site; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HUDSPETH: A bill (H. R. 11585) to amend the Federal plant quarantine act of August 20, 1912, so as to provide that all expenses incident to the fumigation of importations be paid by the United States Government; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STEENERSON: Resolution (H. Res. 433) authorizing the consideration of certain new legislation in H. R. 11578, a bill making appropriations for the support of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year 1921; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. EDMONDS: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 43) requesting the President of the United States to reopen certain cases where men in military service were imprisoned during war; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 11586) for the relief of Frederick Salzman; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BRUMBAUGH: A bill (H. R. 11587) granting a pension to James H. Turner; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11588) granting an increase of pension to William Vollrath; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CASEY: A bill (H. R. 11589) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Titman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DALLINGER: A bill (H. R. 11590) granting a pension to Abbie Davis Morang; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GARD: A bill (H. R. 11591) granting a pension to James Bartram; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HILL: A bill (H. R. 11592) granting a pension to Mary Benson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 11593) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Totten; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 11594) for the relief of John M. Higgins; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11595) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Edgington; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11596) granting an increase of pension to Gurney E. Hall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McKENZIE: A bill (H. R. 11597) granting a pension to John C. Prestin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MONAHAN of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 11598) granting an increase of pension to George B. Pearl; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PELL: A bill (H. R. 11599) for the relief of Peter A. Kearney; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 11600) for the relief of Mrs. Gussie Husak; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 11601) granting a pension to George W. Keith; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

726. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of National Lumber Council of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, urging a revision of the antitrust acts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

727. Also (by request), petition of State board of trustees of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois, regarding war-time prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

728. Also (by request), petition of acting secretary of the Florida State Nurses' Association, favoring Senate bill 1737 and House bill 2492, to secure relative rank for Army nurses; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

729. By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of Chamber of Commerce of Mansfield, Ohio, favoring House bill 10650; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

730. By Mr. JAMES: Petition of Marquette Lodge, No. 405, Marquette, Mich., favoring the deportation of I. W. W. and other disloyal organizations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

731. By Mr. LONERGAN: Petition of Chamber of Commerce of Waterbury, Conn., favoring the treaty and the league of nations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

732. By Mr. MacGREGOR: Petition of City Council of the City of Buffalo, regarding the high cost of living; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

733. Also, petition of F. A. Dirnberger, secretary of the Buffalo Flour Club, favoring the return of the railroads to their owners; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

734. By Mr. McGLENNON: Petition of Chamber of Commerce of Bayonne, N. J., regarding the return of the railroads to their owners; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

735. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of George S. Buck, mayor of the city of Buffalo, N. Y., regarding the Lever food and fuel control act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

736. Also, petition of Daniel J. Sweeney, city clerk of Buffalo, N. Y., regarding the Lever food and fuel control act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

737. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the New York State Forestry Association, favoring increased appropriation for the United States Forest Service; to the Committee on Agriculture.

738. By Mr. RAKER: Petition of Lodge No. 743, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, protesting against the Cummins bill and indorsing the Esch bill with the Anderson amendment; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

739. Also, petition of California Manufacturers' Association, in connection with a revision of the antitrust laws; to the Committee on Revision of the Laws.

740. Also, petition of city council of Oakland, Calif., advocating allocation of ore shipped to the Pacific coast for the Far Eastern trade; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

741. Also, petition of Kern County Chamber of Commerce, Bakersfield, Calif., urging passage of House bill 10650, the Davey sedition bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

742. Also, petition of committee of engineers, architects, and allied professions of California, urging passage of Senate bill 2232 and House bill 6649; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department.

743. Also, petition of Union Hardware & Metal Co., of Los Angeles, Calif., urging support of the Kettner bill (H. R. 6044); to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

744. Also, petition of Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, of California, urging support of the Kenyon and Hersman bills; to the Committee on Agriculture.

745. Also, petition of County Farm Bureau, of Los Angeles County, Calif., urging appropriation of $25,000 for the investigation and suppression of certain pests in the pecan industry; to the Committee on Agriculture.

746. Also, petition of California Manufacturers' Association, of Oakland, Calif., indorsing the labor provisions of the Cummins bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

747. By Mr. RANDALL of Wisconsin: Petition of citizens of Oconomowoc, Wis., urging two years' extension of Government control of the railroads; to the committee of conference on the Esch and Cummins bills.

748. Also, resolution of the Wisconsin Game Protective Association, indorsing House bill 8939; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

749. Also, resolution of citizens of Clinton, Wis., urging the revenue act of 1918 be modified to exempt Chautauqua tickets from taxation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

750. By Mr. WOODYARD: Petition of Huntington Post, No. 16, American Legion, Huntington, W. Va., pledging its organization to the maintenance of law and order in the United States of America; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, January 9, 1920.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, in this restless age of ours, appealing to the highest powers of constructive statesmanship, we do not forget the North Star that has guided safely our fathers over all the troubled waters of the past. Thy Word, unchanging, eternal, divine, we look to it for our guide, and pray that Thou wilt give to us the inspiration of heart to know Thy Word, to read Thy will, to follow Thy commandments, to build upon the foundations that Thou hast laid down for us. Do Thou bless us in this divine enterprise. For Christ's sake. Amen.

On request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Rhode Island ratifying the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the Constitution of the United States extending the right of suffrage to women, which will be placed on file.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10137) to amend an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1906, and for other purposes; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. MAPES, Mr. GOULD, and Mr. WOODS of Virginia managers at the conference on the part of the House.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. SPENCER. I present the memorial of Frank J. Page and sundry other citizens of Doniphan, Mo., which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the memorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as folows:

"To the honorable body of the United States Senate, greeting:

"We, the undersigned, red-blooded American citizens, composed of both old-line parties, beg leave to congratulate you—especially the majority of your membership—upon your patriotism and wise vote on the reservations to the league of nations.

"For, when we see daily in the papers accounts of what a great per cent of the foreign element in this country are doing and are trying to do to disorganize our country and make of it a mass of thieves and murderers without any law or order, then when we reflect upon what this great country cost our forefathers in lives, blood, money, suffering, and tears and grief for the mothers of that day, and the loss of hundreds of thousands of our fathers, grandfathers, and brothers, as well as billions of dollars, tears, and suffering to keep our Union whole in the sixties, capped off by the loss of hundreds of thousands of our own boys in death and crippled for all time, as well as over $20,000,000,000 of expense in defending the honor and even the future existence of our flag and country in the World War—the grandest and best country by far that God Almighty in His wisdom ever permitted His sun to shine upon—we say that after reflecting upon all these sacrifices made by our people for our great Government, the United States of America, we feel that the people of these United States, every red-blooded American man, woman, and child, of every color and every creed—yes, even those that are to come after us, perhaps, as long as the world stands—are to be congratulated upon having at this time and during the Congress just ended a few days ago, sufficient men in the United States Senate, composed of both old-line parties, whom an All-Wise Providence had endowed with the brains, the honor, the patriotism, the nerve, the backbone, the ability, the fearlessness, and will power to do their own thinking, to prevent this great and priceless Government of ours from being handed over, either in whole or in part, into the hands of foreign governments, to manipulate as they thought best. Oh, but it was grand, and we love every one of you for it that gave a vote for the reservations regardless of your political views, for you have proven yourselves to be red-blooded Americans of the first magnitude, and that is what counts more than all else, at this time especially.

"And be assured, our dear sirs, that the great mass of all red-blooded American people are backing you to the limit regardless of all political views.

"Sincerely, yours, FRANK J. PAGE
"(And others)."

Mr. POMERENE. I have before me a petition to the Senate from Rev. Dr. Charles F. Thwing, president of the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, and 66 members of the faculty, urging the ratification of the peace treaty. I ask that it be incorporated in the RECORD without reading. I do not mean by that the signatures other than that of President Thwing.

There being no objection, the petition was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WESTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY,
Cleveland, Ohio, December 11, 1919.

To the Senate of the United States of America,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned, officers of Western Reserve University, are convinced of the supreme importance of the ratification by the Senate as soon as possible of the treaty of peace, with such interpretative reservations as may be proper and necessary, and we urge the Senators from Ohio to promote such action. We believe that a majority of the most intelligent and public-spirited citizens of all parties in the State will support them in favoring a resolution ratifying the treaty of peace with the league of nations covenant in terms that will readily permit the other signatories to acquiesce in the conditions stated by the United States.

CHAS. F. THWING, President
(And others).

Mr. NEWBERRY presented a petition of the Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Mich., praying for the ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Northeastern Michigan Association of Credit Men, of Bay City, Mich., praying for the enactment of legislation for the adoption of a budget system, which was referred to the Special Committee to Devise a Plan for a National Budget System.

He also presented a petition of the Woman's Progressive League, of Niles, Mich., praying for the enactment of legislation to establish a Department of Education, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HALE presented a petition of the Maine State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the reimbursement to farmers for cattle slaughtered because of reaction in tuberculin tests, which was referred to the Committee on Agiculture and Forestry.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WADSWORTH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 3682) to regulate the filling of vacancies in the Corps of Cadets at the United States Military Academy not otherwise provided for by existing law, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

Mr. NEW, from the Committee on Territories, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8953) to authorize the incorporated town of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds for the construction and equipment of schools therein, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 360) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10746) to authorize the incorporated town of Wrangell, Alaska, to issue bonds for the construction, enlargement, and equipment of schools, the acquisition and construction of a water-supply system, the construction of a sewer system, the construction of a city dock and floating dock, and to levy and collect a special tax therefor, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 361) thereon.

DRAINAGE OF PUBLIC LANDS IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. SMOOT. From the Committee on Public Lands I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 3175) authorizing local drainage districts to drain certain public lands in the State of Arkansas, counties of Mississippi and Poinsett, and subjecting said lands to taxation.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. A similar bill passed the Senate in the last Congress. The bill as reported by the committee was prepared by the Department of the Interior and has the unqualified indorsement of that department.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and it was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all of those unentered, unreserved public lands and all of those entered lands for which no final certificates have been issued within the areas hereinafter described are hereby made and declared to be subject to the laws of the State of Arkansas relating to the organization, government, and regulation of drainage districts to the same extent and in the same manner, except as hereinafter provided, in which lands held under private ownership are or may be subject to said laws: Provided, That the United States and all persons legally holding unpatented lands under entries made under the public-land laws of the United States shall be accorded all the rights, privileges, and benefits given by said laws to persons holding lands in private ownership, said lands being those public lands in Mississippi County, Ark., in townships 14, 15, and 16 north, range 9 east, and townships 15 and 16 north, range 10 east, fifth principal meridian, according to the official surveys thereof approved October 12, 1915, and all of those unentered public lands and all of those entered lands for which no final certificates have been issued in Poinsett County, Ark., in townships 11 and 12 north, range 6 east, fifth principal meridian, according to the official surveys thereof approved July 30, 1913.

SEC. 2. That the construction and maintenance of canals, ditches, levees, and other drainage works upon and across the lands subject to the operation of this act are hereby authorized, subject to the same conditions as are imposed by the laws of the State of Arkansas upon lands held in private ownership, and that the cost of construction and maintenance of canals, ditches, levees, and other drainage works incurred in connection with any drainage project under said laws shall be equitably apportioned among all lands held in private ownership, all unentered public lands, and all lands embraced in unpatented entries affected by such project. Officially certified lists showing the amount of charges assessed against each smallest legal subdivision of such lands shall be furnished to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands affected are situated as soon as said charges would become a lien if the lands were held in private ownership.

SEC. 3. That all charges legally assessed pursuant to the drainage laws of the State of Arkansas by a drainage district against any unentered public lands, or against any lands embraced in unpatented entries, subject to the provisions of this act, shall be a lien upon said lands, which may be enforced by sale in the same manner and subject to the same conditions, except as hereinafter set forth, under which said charges shall be enforced against lands held in private ownership, and whenever any of said lands shall be sold for nonpayment of such charges, inclusive of lands bid in for a drainage district, a statement showing the name of the purchaser, the price at which each legal subdivision was sold, the amount assessed against it, together with penalties and interest, if any, and the cost of the sale, and the amount of excess, if any, over and above all lawful assessment charges and the cost of sale, shall be officially certified to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated immediately after the completion of such sale, but nothing in this act shall be construed as creating any obligation on the United States to pay any of said charges.

SEC. 4. That all moneys received from the sale of entered or unentered lands subject to the operation of this act which shall be in excess of assessments due thereon, together with penalties and interest and the costs of the sales, shall be paid by the proper county officer to the receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated, and such excess moneys shall be covered into the United States Treasury as proceeds from the sales of public lands.

SEC. 5. That at any time within 90 days after the sale of unentered public lands and at any time within 90 days after the expiration of the period of redemption provided for in the drainage laws under which the lands are sold, no redemption having been made, after the sale of lands embraced within unpatented entries, the purchaser at such sale, a drainage district being herein expressly excepted from the operation of this provision, shall, upon the filing of an application therefor and an affidavit containing proof of necessary qualifications with the register and receiver of the United States land office, and upon payment to the receiver of the price of $5 per acre, together with the usual fees and commissions charged in entry of lands under the homestead laws, be entitled to receive a patent: Provided, That such purchaser shall have the qualifications required in making entry of lands under the homestead laws, and any such purchase shall exhaust any further homestead right of the purchaser to the extent of the amount of lands thus purchased by him. Not more than 160 acres of such lands shall be sold and patented to any one purchaser under the provisions of this act. This limitation shall not apply to lands subject to the operation of this act which may be bid in for a drainage district, but no patent shall be issued to a drainage district or to anyone bidding in said lands for a drainage district. The proceeds derived by the Government shall be covered into the United States Treasury and applied as provided by law for the disposal of the proceeds from the sale of public lands.

SEC. 6. That unless the purchaser shall, within the time specified in section 5 of this act, file with the register and receiver of the United States land office an application for a patent, together with the required affidavit, and make payment of the purchase price, fees, and commissions as provided in said section 5, any person having the qualifications of an entryman under the homestead laws may file an application for a patent, together with the required affidavit, and upon payment to the receiver of the purchase price of $5 per acre, fees, and commissions, and in addition thereto an amount equal to the drainage charges, penalties, interest, and costs for which the lands were sold, and if the lands were bid in for the drainage district, an additional amount equal to 6 per cent per annum on the sum for which the lands were sold from the date of such sale, said applicant shall become subrogated to the rights of such purchaser and shall be entitled to receive a patent for not more than 160 acres of said lands. When payment is made to effect subrogation as herein provided the register and receiver of the United States land office shall serve notice upon the purchaser that an application for patent for the lands purchased by him has been filed, and that the amount of the drainage charges, penalties, interests, and costs of the sale will be paid to him upon submission of proof of purchase and payment by him of said sums. The receiver shall make such payment as soon as said requirement shall have been fulfilled. If the lands were bid in for a drainage district, the receiver will pay to the proper county officers the amount of the drainage charges, penalties, and interests and costs of sale, together with the additional sum of 6 per cent per annum, to which said drainage district is entitled. All remaining moneys to which the United States may be entitled shall be covered into the United States Treasury and applied as provided by law for the disposal of the proceeds from the sale of public lands.

SEC. 7. That a copy of all notices required by the drainage laws of the State of Arkansas to be given to the owners and occupants of lands held in private ownership shall, as soon as such notice is issued, be delivered to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated where any of the lands subject to the operation of this act are affected, and the United States and the entryman claiming under the public-land laws of the United States shall be accorded the same rights to be heard by petition, answer, remonstrance, appeal, or otherwise, as are given to persons holding lands in private ownership, and all entrymen shall be given the same rights of redemption as are given to the owners of land held in private ownership.

SEC. 8. That this act shall not be effective as to any lands involved in suits instituted on behalf of the United States with a view to quieting title in the Government to such lands until and unless such suits shall be finally determined in favor of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NEWBERRY:

A bill (S. 3689) granting a pension to Mary S. Woolman (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WATSON:

A bill (S. 3690) conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to try, adjudicate, and determine the claim of Clayton G. Landis, administrator of David B. Landis, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CALDER:

A bill (S. 3691) to prohibit certain persons from accepting compensation for prosecuting claims against the United States or for performing services in relation to a matter in which the United States is interested or a party, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 3692) granting an increase of pension to Versa E. Conn; to the Committee on Pensions.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, a subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate has completed the draft of a tentative bill looking toward the reorganization of the Army and the adoption of the military policy of this country. I present the bill and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, the subcommittee having completed its labors.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That action will be taken.

The bill (S. 3688) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the United States Army, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SEDITIOUS ACTS AND UTTERANCES.

Mr. SPENCER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3317) to prohibit and punish certain seditious acts against the Government of the United States and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. NORRIS. I offer an amendment to the so-called water-power bill, providing for the development of the Great Falls of the Potomac, which I ask may be printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WADSWORTH in the chair). Without objection, that order will be made.

Mr. PHIPPS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS.

Mr. PAGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 274), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the resolution of the Senate, No. 62, agreed to June 6, 1919, authorizing the Committee on Naval Affairs of the Senate, or any subcommittee thereof, to send for persons, books, and papers, and to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be before said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and the same is hereby, amended to empower said committee to sit and act at such time and place as it may deem necessary; the expenses of travel incident to the sessions of said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. CALDER, subsequently, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred the foregoing resolution, reported it favorably without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, pursuant to the notice I gave yesterday, I offer the following resolution proposing an amendment to the Standing Rules of the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 273) was read and referred to the Committee on Rules, as follows:

Resolved, That Rule XXV, Standing Rules of the Senate, be, and the same is hereby, amended by changing the paragraph therein now reading as follows:

"A Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico to consist of 12 Senators."

So as hereafter to read:

"A Committee on Pacific Islands, Porto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, to consist of 12 Senators."

INTERNATIONAL LABOR CONGRESS CONTROL.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I am in receipt of a communication from the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America—Atlanta, Ga., division—insisting upon the exemption of all farmers and agricultural workers from the International Labor Congress control, under the treaty recently pending before the Senate of the United States. I ask that it may be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE FARMERS' EDUCATIONAL AND COOPERATIVE UNION OF AMERICA,
GEORGIA DIVISION, ATLANTA, GA.

Senator C. S. THOMAS,
Washington, D. C.

A resolution by Martin F. Amorous, president the Cobb County Farmers' Union, Marietta, Ga.

"Whereas the treaty of peace with Germany contains a proposal to create an international labor congress, which when ratified by the United States Senate limits labor to '8 hours a day, 48 hours a week, and 24 hours' rest each week,' and also taxes landowners with old-age pensions, disability pensions, and unemployment wages; and

"Whereas the enforcement of these conditions will be ruinous to the farming industry of the country: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Georgia Division of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, in convention assembled in Atlanta, Ga., this 26th day of November, 1919, does hereby request the President of the United States and the United States Senate to exempt all farmers and agricultural workers from the international labor congress control; be it further

"Resolved, That the president and secretary of this convention mail to the President of the United States and each Member of the United States Senate a certified copy of these resolutions."

The above resolution is a correct copy of the original resolution, which was read to the convention, discussed, and unanimously adopted.

J. H. MILLS, President.
ANDREW J. FLEMING,
Secretary and Treasurer.

LETTER OF THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD the text of the letter addressed by the President of the United States to the Jacksonian banquet last night.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S LETTER DEFINING HIS TREATY STAND.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, January 8, 1920.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: It is with keenest regret that I find that I am to be deprived of the pleasure and privilege of joining you and the other loyal Democrats who are to assemble to-night to celebrate Jackson Day and renew their vows of fidelity to the great principles of our party, the principles which must now fulfill the hopes not only of our own people but of the world.

The United States enjoyed the spiritual leadership of the world until the Senate of the United States failed to ratify the treaty by which the belligerent nations sought to effect the settlements for which they had fought throughout the war. It is inconceivable that at this supreme crisis and final turning point in the international relations of the whole world, when the results of the Great War are by no means determined and are still questionable and dependent upon events which no man can foresee or count upon, the United States should withdraw from the concert of progressive and enlightened nations by which Germany was defeated, and all similar Governments (if the world be so unhappy as to contain any) warned of the consequences of any attempt at a like iniquity, and yet that is the effect of the course which the United States has taken with regard to the treaty of Versailles.

Germany is beaten, but we are still at war with her, and the old stage is reset for a repetition of the old plot. It is now ready for a resumption of the old offensive and defensive alliances which made settled peace impossible. It is now open again to every sort of intrigue.

The old spies are free to resume their former abominable activities. They are again at liberty to make it impossible for governments to be sure what mischief is being worked among their own people, what internal disorders are being fomented.

Without the covenant of the league of nations there may be as many secret treaties as ever, to destroy the confidence of governments in each other, and their validity can not be questioned.

None of the objects we professed to be fighting for has been secured, or can be made certain of, without this Nation's ratification of the treaty and its entry into the covenant. This Nation entered the Great War to vindicate its own rights and to protect and preserve free government. It went into the war to see it through to the end, and the end has not yet come. It went into the war to make an end of militarism, to furnish guaranties to weak nations, and to make a just and lasting peace. It entered it with noble enthusiasm.

Five of the leading belligerents have accepted the treaty and formal ratifications will soon be exchanged. The question is whether this country will enter and enter whole-heartedly. If it does not do so, the United States and Germany will play a lone hand in the world.

The maintenance of the peace of the world and the effective execution of the treaty depend upon the whole-hearted participation of the United States. I am not stating it as a matter of power. The point is that the United States is the only Nation which has sufficient moral force with the rest of the world to guarantee the substitution of discussion for war. If we keep out of this agreement, if we do not give our guaranties, then another attempt will be made to crush the new nations of Europe.

I do not believe that this is what the people of this country wish or will be satisfied with. Personally, I do not accept the action of the Senate of the United States as the decision of the Nation.

I have asserted from the first that the overwhelming majority of the people of this country desire the ratification of the treaty, and my impression to that effect has recently been confirmed by the unmistakable evidences of public opinion given during my visit to 17 of the States.

I have endeavored to make it plain that if the Senate wishes to say what the undoubted meaning of the league is I shall have no objection. There can be no reasonable objection to interpretations accompanying the act of ratification itself. But when the treaty is acted upon, I must know whether it means that we have ratified or rejected it.

We can not rewrite this treaty. We must take it without changes which alter its meaning, or leave it, and then, after the rest of the world has signed it, we must face the unthinkable task of making another and separate treaty with Germany.

But no mere assertions with regard to the wish and opinion of the country are credited. If there is any doubt as to what the people of the country think on this vital matter, the clear and single way out is to submit it for determination at the next election to the voters of the Nation, to give the next election the form of a great and solemn referendum, a referendum as to the part the United States is to play in completing the settlements of the war and in the prevention in the future of such outrages as Germany attempted to perpetrate.

We have no more moral right to refuse now to take part in the execution and administration of these settlements than we had to refuse to take part in the fighting of the last few weeks of the war which brought victory and made it possible to dictate to Germany what the settlements should be. Our fidelity to our associates in the war is in question and the whole future of mankind. It will be heartening to the whole world to know the attitude and purpose of the people of the United States.

I spoke just now of the spiritual leadership of the United States, thinking of international affairs. But there is another spiritual leadership which is open to us, and which we can assume.

The world has been made safe for democracy, but democracy has not been finally vindicated. All sorts of crimes are being committed in its name, all sorts of preposterous perversions of its doctrines and practices are being attempted.

This, in my judgment, is to be the great privilege of the democracy of the United States, to show that it can lead the way in the solution of the great social and industrial problems of our time, and lead the way to a happy, settled order of life as well as to political liberty. The program for this achievement we must attempt to formulate, and in carrying it out we shall do more than can be done in any other way to sweep out of existence the tyrannous and arbitrary forms of power which are now masquerading under the name of popular government.

Whenever we look back to Andrew Jackson we should draw fresh inspiration from his character and example. His mind grasped with such a splendid definiteness and firmness the principles of national authority and national action. He was so indomitable in his purpose to give realty to the principles of the Government, that this is a very fortunate time to recall his career and to renew our vows of faithfulness to the principles and the pure practices of democracy.

I rejoice to join you in this renewal of faith and purpose. I hope that the whole evening may be of the happiest results as regards the fortunes of our party and the Nation.

With cordial regards,

Sincerely, yours, WOODROW WILSON.

To Hon. HOMER S. CUMMINGS,
Chairman Democratic National Committee,
Washington, D. C.

SPEECH OF HON. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD in juxtaposition to the letter of the President the speech of Hon. William Jennings Bryan, delivered last night at the Jackson Day banquet, since it has been announced that there is no difference between the two.

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMONER ADVISES YIELDING ON RESERVATIONS.

"Seldom has such an opportunity for great service come to any party as now presents itself to our party. But opportunity brings responsibility. Much is required of those to whom much is given. A soldier is a soldier until his day of opportunity comes; after that he is either a hero or a coward. So with the party, opportunities improved become stepping stones to success; opportunities neglected are millstones about the party's neck.

"The opportunities now offered are as large as the Nation and as wide as the world. In this hour, when we take counsel together for the coming campaign, it is the duty of each member of the party, as I take it, to present the situation as he sees it, without stopping to inquire whether his views are shared by others. One can not call a mass meeting to determine what to think. The theory of democracy is that all think and give expression to their thought, and then conclusions are reached by comparison of views.

"Permit me, therefore, to present the more important of these opportunities as I see them. The nations are entering upon a new era; old systems are passing away; democracy is dawning everywhere. Our Nation is the only great nation in a position to furnish the moral leadership required. The nations of Europe are busy with their own problems; our people are the only ones disinterested enough to be trusted by all, and the Democratic Party is the party whose ideas best fit for the task of leadership in such a work.

"A Democratic President was the spokesman of the United States in holding out to a war-worn world the hope of universal peace, and he brought back from Paris the covenant of a league of nations that provides means for settling international disputes without a resort to force. He did the best he could, and succeeded better than we had any right to expect, when we remember that he fought single handed against the selfish interests of the world.

BLAMES G. O. P. FOR DELAY.

"The Republican Party, in control of the Senate, instead of ratifying at once or promptly proposing changes that it deemed necessary, has fiddled while civilization has been threatened with conflagration. It could have adopted its reservations as well five months ago as later, but it permitted endless debate while suffering humanity waited.

"The Democratic Senators stood with the President for ratification without reservation, and I stood with them, believing that it was better to secure within the league, after it was established, any necessary changes than to attempt to secure them by reservations in the ratifying resolutions. But our plan has been rejected and we must face the situation as it is. We must either secure such compromises as may be possible or present the issue to the country. The latter course would mean a delay of at least 14 months, and then success only in case of our securing a two-thirds majority in the Senate.

"We can not afford, either as citizens or as members of the party, to share with the Republican Party responsibility for further delay; we can not go before the country on the issue that such an appeal would present. The Republicans have a majority in the Senate, and therefore can by right dictate the Senate's course. Being in the minority, we can not demand the right to decide the terms upon which the Senate will consent to ratification. Our Nation has spent 100,000 precious lives and more than $20,000,000,000 to make the world safe for democracy, and the one fundamental principle of democracy is the right of the majority to rule. It applies to the Senate and to the House as well as to the people.

"According to the Constitution, a treaty is ratified by a two-thirds vote, but the Democratic Party can not afford to take advantage of the constitutional right of a minority to prevent ratification. A majority of Congress can declare war. Shall we make it more difficult to conclude a treaty than to enter a war?

CAN NOT IMPAIR CONGRESS.

"Neither can we go before the country on the issue raised by article 10. If we do not intend to impair the right of Congress to decide the question of peace or war when the time for action arises, how can we insist upon a moral obligation to go to war which can have no force or value except as it does impair the independence of Congress? We owe it to the world to join in an honest effort to put an end to war forever, and that effort should be made at the earliest possible moment.

"A Democratic Party can not be a party of negation; it must have a construction program. It must not only favor a league of nations but it must have a plan for the election of delegates and a policy to be pursued by these delegates. What plan can the Democratic Party have other than one that contemplates the popular election of those delegates who, in the influence they will exert, will be next in importance to the President himself? And what policy can the Democratic Party have within the league of nations other than one of absolute independence and impartiality between the members of the league?

"Our Nation's voice should at all times be raised in behalf of equal and exact justice between nations as the only basis of permanent peace. It should be raised in defense of the right of self-determination and in proclaiming a spirit of brotherhood as universal as the peace which we advocate.

"We have domestic problems also which offer an opportunity to render large service, and one objection to thrusting the treaty into the campaign is that it would divert attention from questions demanding immediate consideration. We are confronted with the organization of new parties, on the theory that the old parties do not meet the issues that have arisen. Our party is the one party that can qualify for the meeting of these issues. It can oppose a class party because it is not itself the party of a class, but the party of the whole people, regardless of class.

"The Republican Party has become a capitalistic party and has permitted tariff barons to write the tariff laws, trust magnates to direct the policy of the party on the trust question, railroad presidents to dictate its policy on the railroad question, while packing-house companies and other profiteers have used it as their own. It would divide the country into class parties and by its own attitude compel the formation of a farmers' party and a laborers' party.

"THE PARTY OF ALL CLASSES."

"The Democratic Party, on the contrary, stands for the protection of the rights of every class, dealing with each citizen as an individual instead of as a member of a class. It has since it has been in power given a splendid currency law to the commercial classes. It has given a farm-loan law to the farmers. It has given an eight-hour day and greater security in its rights to labor, and has given relief from the high tariff burdens to all the people. Democracy contemplates cooperation between all elements and the promoting of the welfare of society in general.

"It would prevent strikes not by prohibitory laws but by the creation of machinery which will investigate disputes and thus secure a peaceful settlement of differences before the controversy reaches the stage of strike or lockout.

"The Democratic Party will distinguish between evolution and revolution, guaranteeing freedom of speech and press to everyone who advocates governmental changes by constitutional methods, and at the same time prevent the use of either freedom of speech or freedom of the press for the overthrow of constitutional government.

"The Democratic Party has for 20 years denounced private monopoly as indefensible and intolerable. It can not surrender its position on the subject now when the beneficiaries of all the private monopolies are mobilizing under the banner of the Republican Party for a united attack upon the right of the people to own and operate all necessary monopolies in the interest of the public.

"The Democratic Party will continue its fight against the profiteer. A government that restrains the individual from the use of force in the protection of his rights assumes the solemn obligation to protect the disarmed citizen from every arm uplifted for his injury. We need machinery in every State and in each community that will give to the consumer a tribunal before which a dealer accused of profiteering can be brought for examination. The Federal Trade Commission is a step in the right direction. But the subject is too big to be handled by the Nation alone or by a national commission. The remedy must be as complete as the evil, and it can not be complete unless States and communities as well as the Federal Government are prepared to deal with this subject.

"I assume that the party will accept prohibition as the permanent policy of the country. Three-fourths of the Democrats in the Senate and two-thirds of the Democrats in the House voted to submit the national amendment, and every Democratic State voted for ratification—and every Republican State except three. It is inconceivable therefore that our party should antagonize the moral sense of the Nation. John Barleycorn is dead. The Democratic Party can not tie itself to a corpse or become the champion of an outlawed traffic.

"I assume that the party will accept woman's suffrage also as an accomplished fact. The women saved our party from defeat in the last campaign, and we need their aid to hasten the triumph of every righteous cause.

"I venture to suggest three new propositions for which I ask consideration:

"1. A national peace way, running into every State, wide enough to accommodate both passengers and freight and permanent, so that it will be a lasting tie binding together the 48 Commonwealths. It will be a memorial to the soldiers and to all others who took part in the war and a monument in commemoration of peace restored. It will not only be an expression of patriotism but it will be educational as well as useful. It will bring the word peace into the thought and conversation of all our people for centuries.

"2. We need above all other things just now a national bulletin—not a newspaper, but a bulletin—under bipartisan control, furnished to all who desire it at a nominal cost, a bulletin which will present to the people the issues upon which they must act, with editorials presenting the arguments for and against the action proposed, so that every citizen may intelligently exercise the duties of citizenship and give to his Government the benefit of his judgment and his conscience. The avenues of information are at present in private hands, and the editors, being human, have a bias, which makes it impossible for them to present both sides fairly; and to make the situation worse the great predatory interests are in position to influence many newspapers in addition to those which they absolutely control. If there is anything for which a Government like ours can afford to spend money it is to inform those upon whose will the Government rests.

"3. The initiative and the referendum are not new. For a quarter of a century the idea has been growing and spreading; since the reform has been put into operation in States like Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, and Massachusetts it has ceased to be a thing to be ridiculed. Instead it now excites the determined opposition of those who are not willing that the people shall be the masters of their own destiny through a Government entirely within their control. The progress that democracy is making throughout the world ought to encourage our party to make the adoption of the principle of the initiative and referendum its next great reform, a reform entirely in harmony with the election of Senators by the people and the primary. The people are the source of authority, and any machinery which obstructs the popular will and puts into the hands of the minority the right to determine the course of the Government is antagonistic to our institutions and must give way before the progress of popular government.

"We have become the world's teacher in the science of government, and we must not hesitate to express in practice our own faith in the principles that we proclaim. Our party must respond to the call that comes from every State and from across the sea to apply to every problem the principles of democracy. Faith in the people, faith in their capacity for self-government, as well as in their right to self-government, must be our party's policy now and always."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I ask to have read and printed in the RECORD a letter which I have recently received from President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, from which it would seem that this able and distinguished champion of the league plan, whom many people believed to regard article 10 as the most important and, indeed, the one indispensable feature of the plan, now regards it as of minor importance and does not object to the reservations which the Senate has adopted limiting the obligations which this Nation would assume under it. In fact, he points out that there are cases where article 10 would lead to mischievous results. He cites a typical example of cases where "neither we nor any other nation would undertake the obligations fixed by article 10."

Considering how pronounced an advocate of the league President Lowell is, it is a most important and illuminating contribution to the discussion on this subject to have him declare "that article 10 is not well adapted to promote peace and does involve obligations which it is not wise to accept." Many of us who have for some time been making this claim are strengthened and heartened in our convictions by the position now taken by this leading covenanter and accepted authority on American government.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, while the Senator from Massachusetts is on the floor and discussing the question of article 10 of the league and the change of view of President Lowell, as to the inadvisability of adopting article 10, he would not overlook the view of Mr. Bryan, either, would he?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I have been aware of Mr. Bryan's opinion and views for some time; in other words, his position is not a new one, as I understand.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Massachusetts is, of course, closer to Mr. Bryan than are many of the rest of us. We learned of his opinion only last night.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NUGENT in the chair). The Secretary will read the letter presented by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The letter was read, as follows:

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, PRESIDENT'S OFFICE,
Cambridge, Mass., December 31, 1919.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: As one of the stumblingblocks in the way of a compromise on the treaty appears to be article 10, I take the liberty of writing to you about it; the more so as I was the person who introduced into the program of the League to Enforce Peace its third article, declaring that the "signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number that goes to war or commits acts of hostility against another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted to arbitration." I say this to show you that from the beginning I was in favor, and always have been in favor, of the use of a forcible sanction to maintain peace under the league. For this purpose it seems to me that the real strength of the covenant to prevent war rests upon article 16 and not article 10. The latter seems to me to proceed from the wrong end. Instead of seeking to prevent war directly, it strives to do so indirectly, by making predatory war unprofitable; but the difficulty in this lies in the fact that it would be virtually impossible to snatch the prey from the jaws of a victorious belligerent. Nor would a great nation like Germany, for example, be deterred from going to war by any agreement among the members of the league to prevent her annexing territory in case of victory, because she knows very well that if defeated she would have no chance to seize territory, and if victorious she would not be prevented from doing so.

Moreover, as the treaty of peace leaves Europe there are cases where article 10 would lead to mischievous results. For example, a tract of country in the Tyrol, inhabited exclusively by German-speaking people, has been given to Italy. If German Austria should have a grievance against Italy—let us say about the treatment of shipping—should bring it before the council of the league and have a unanimous decision in her favor with which Italy refused to comply, she would have a right to go to war with Italy. If in this war she were victorious and then should propose to take back this German-speaking region, we should be obliged by article 10 of the covenant to go to war with her to prevent it. Neither we nor any other nation would do so, nor ought we to do so. It seems to me, therefore, that article 10 is not well adapted to promote peace, and does involve obligations which it is not wise to accept. I say this because many of the Democrats I know feel that the whole force at the back of the league lies in article 10, and Senator HITCHCOCK has said this to me. I think, however, they are mistaken. The real strength in preventing war lies in article 16; and the agreement to boycott as it stands, if not as strong as we should have liked, seems to me not inadequate, for such a boycott would be completely effective with a small nation, and with a great power it would immediately lead to war. For these reasons it seems to me that it would be a mistake for the Democrats to stand too firmly against a reservation on article 10.

Very truly, yours.

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL.

FIRE DEPARTMENT OF THE DISTRICT.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10137) to amend an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1906, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. CALDER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, agree to the conference asked for by the House, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to, and the Vice President appointed Mr. SHERMAN, Mr. CALDER, and Mr. SHEPPARD conferees on the part of the Senate.

MARION C. RAYSOR.

Mr. DIAL. I ask leave to call up the bill (S. 3176) to authorize the President of the United States to appoint Marion C. Raysor an officer of the Army. The bill is unanimously reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, and if there is no objection I should like to have it put upon its passage.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the bill be read first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be read.

The bill as reported from the committee was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint Marion C. Raysor, formerly a captain of Cavalry of the Regular Army, to that grade in the Cavalry branch of the Regular Army; but no back pay or allowances shall accrue and the total number of officers now authorized by law shall not be increased by reason of the passage of this act.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, merely from the reading of the bill no one can judge whether it is a just measure or not. I should like to understand some of the reasons why this proposed legislation ought to be passed. On its face it seems to be a bill to appoint Marion C. Raysor an officer in the Army and give him a rank which no doubt he is not holding to-day.

Mr. DIAL. No.

Mr. SMOOT. So I should like to have the Senator explain some of the reasons why the bill should become a law.

Mr. DIAL. This man entered the Army many years ago, I believe 18 or 20 years ago. He went to Cuba with the Regular Army and later went to the Philippines and engaged in various battles in the Philippines. He then returned to this country and went to the border with the Regular Army. Some irregularities occurred there and he was dismissed from the service about 1911, I believe.

When the recent war broke out he asked to be allowed to join the Army as a private, which permission was granted to him. He then went to France and made good in every capacity there. He came back to this country with high recommendations from all the officers under whom he served. He is exceedingly anxious to have this stigma removed from his name. He has been employed in the District of Columbia in the Government storehouse, and has been promoted at various times.

The bill went to the Committee on Military Affairs, and after hearings they unanimously reported it favorably. It carries no back pay and merely authorizes, it does not direct, the President to restore him. He was over the age limit and did not have to go to war, but volunteered and went to fight in behalf of our country. There have been many bills of the sort passed, some 800 I believe, and I should like very much indeed to have the bill passed. If there is objection, I will ask that it may go over at this time, but I presumed that after the committee had heard the case and had unanimously reported it favorably there would be no objection.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I notice from the report that Marion C. Raysor, formerly a captain in the Army, was court-martialed and convicted of certain charges, and as a result dismissed from the Army. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that in the report on the bill there is nothing from the War Department. Did the committee ask for a report from the War Department?

Mr. DIAL. Yes; and the War Department reported against restoring him, which I understand is the universal procedure.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask that the bill may go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will go over.

COAL CORPORATION TAXES.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to call up the resolution (S. Res. 247) requesting information from the Secretary of the Treasury relative to income and profits tax returns of coal corporations.

Mr. SMOOT. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

SEDITIOUS ACTS AND UTTERANCES.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3317.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3317) to prohibit and punish certain seditious acts against the Government of the United States and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. Before the Senator from Nebraska proceeds, I send to the desk and ask to have read a letter just received from the Solicitor of the Post Office Department relative to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it will be read.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Clerk starts to read, I notice that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] is not in his seat. I have just talked with him over the telephone, and he is going to be here very soon. Would the Senator from South Dakota just as soon withhold the letter until the Senator from Idaho is present? He will be here by the time I finish.

Mr. STERLING. I think it may be withheld for the present if the Senator from Nebraska so desires.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ball	Harris	Nelson	Smoot
Bankhead	Harrison	New	Spencer
Calder	Henderson	Newberry	Sterling
Capper	Hitchcock	Norris	Sutherland
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Nugent	Swanson
Culberson	Kellogg	Overman	Thomas
Curtis	Keyes	Page	Trammell
Dial	King	Phipps	Wadsworth
Dillingham	Kirby	Pomerene	Walsh, Mass.
Elkins	Lenroot	Robinson	Walsh, Mont.
Fernald	Lodge	Sheppard	Watson
France	McCormick	Sherman	Wolcott
Frelinghuysen	McKellar	Simmons
Gerry	McLean	Smith, Ga.
Hale	McNary	Smith, S. C.

Mr. NELSON. The Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL] are absent, being engaged at a hearing of the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] are absent on official business. The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is detained by illness in his family, and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] is absent on account of the death of his wife.

I have also been requested to announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is detained from the Senate by illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. BANKHEAD. My colleague [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is detained from the Senate on official business.

Mr. GERRY. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN], the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] are absent on official business.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] are detained from the Senate on public business.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained by illness in his family.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-seven Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The bill is in the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I should like to have read at this point the letter which I sent to the desk a while ago. I have a copy of the letter here and will furnish it to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] when he appears in the Chamber.

Mr. NORRIS. That is perfectly satisfactory, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The letter was read, as follows:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR,
Washington, January 8, 1920.

Hon. THOMAS STERLING,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR STERLING: You ask my views with respect to the necessity for and the practicability in operation of the following proposed amendment to your bill, No. 3317, now pending in the Senate:

"Provided, That any author, publisher, or party affected or aggrieved by the action of the Postmaster General in excluding materials from the mails under this section shall, upon filing a bond to cover the actual cost of such proceeding, be entitled to a hearing de novo before the judge either of the Federal court or of a State court of record of the district or circuit in which the party affected or aggrieved resides. But in case the party aggrieved or affected is successful in securing the admission of his mail matter to the mails, he shall not be liable for the cost of the proceedings, and during the pendency of the proceedings in court the order of the Postmaster General shall be suspended."

There would seem to be no occasion for this amendment, as anyone aggrieved at an order of the Postmaster General may now at once file a bill in equity to restrain the execution of the order of the department and in this way bring before the court the identical matter upon which the department has ruled. In such proceeding a temporary restraining order may be issued by the court upon the filing of such a bill. In such cases there can be no dispute as to the facts, because the matter to be passed upon, both by the department and the court, is the document itself, and the question of law as to whether or not it is nonmailable is raised upon the face of the document. The remedy proposed substitutes a court of law for the existing equity jurisdiction over the subject matter without providing any protection to the public against the dissemination of nonmailable matter in the mails while the proposed legal proceedings are pending.

The proposed amendment would also place the execution of a Federal statute and the acts of a Federal officer under the supervision of State courts, which would be quite a departure in laws of this character and would not seem to be necessary for the convenience of the public, because the Federal courts throughout the country now have jurisdiction in equity and may restrain the postmaster at any place from carrying out any order of the Postmaster General which may have been issued to him with respect to any publication, and the trial de novo provided for in the amendment would not give the courts greater power in reviewing the acts of the Postmaster General than the equity courts now have; in fact, the procedure in a court of law could not afford the broad powers now exercised by a court of equity. My judgment is that in the present condition of affairs in this country equity courts alone can properly protect the public interests.

That the Federal courts have equity jurisdiction over this class of cases has been passed upon on numerous occasions by the Supreme Court of the United States in such cases as Public Clearing House v. Coyne (194 U. S. 497) and cases there cited.

Respectfully,

W. H. LAMAR, Solicitor.

Mr. NORRIS resumed and concluded the speech begun by him on yesterday. His speech entire is as follows:

Mr. President, I desire to say at the beginning of my remarks on this bill that I want to discuss it entirely in a nonpartisan manner. If I use the name of the present Postmaster General, or refer to the department as it is now organized, it is only for the purpose of illustrating the evils that I desire to point out. I have no more desire to find fault with the present administration of the office, under the present Postmaster General and his various assistants, than I would were anyone else in charge. I shall have occasion to refer to some of the acts of the present Post Office Department, but I want it understood that I do so only by way of illustrating the argument that I desire to make.

I should like to say to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING], who has been so diligent in the prosecution of this bill, that I do not find fault with him or criticize him in any way in his desire to meet, if he can, by proper legislative action, any case of sedition. Sedition is a form of treason. There is no disagreement on this floor as to the desirability of properly punishing it. I do not disagree with the Senator from South Dakota in his remarks of yesterday, when he so eloquently described the crime of sedition, and very truthfully said that it was greater than any of the crimes that he enumerated. It is greater. I can not conceive of anything except treason that is greater. Those of us who do not agree with the bill as it stands simply do not agree with those who favor the method by which they expect to accomplish the purposes of the bill.

Most of my remarks will be confined to section 3 of the bill, although under present conditions, with the excitement that prevails and the unrest that exists, I doubt the wisdom of legislating at all upon the subject at this time. I do not believe it is necessary. I believe that existing law covers the matter as fully as it is necessary that it should be covered.

It is a dangerous thing to legislate if we are going to encroach in any way upon free speech and a free press. Free speech and a free press are the fundamental corner stones of every Government where the liberty and the freedom of the citizen are properly protected, and no Government can long exist and be free unless these rights are properly protected. Our forefathers had it so much in mind that they have provided in the fundamental law of the land what I presume they thought was as explicit as they could make language explicit in defining the position of the Government upon this subject.

The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which was adopted soon after the Constitution itself was adopted, reads as follows:

> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Section 3 of the pending bill, in my judgment, places in the hands of the Postmaster General the power to coerce both a free press and free speech, because you can not prevent free press without interfering with free speech. We to-day get all the news, in all lines of human endeavor, through the newspapers. I believe it was the intention of the forefathers, when they adopted that amendment to the Constitution, absolutely to prohibit Congress from making any law that would in any way suppress it. The history of the world, the history of civilization, from the very beginning, when light was first dawning upon a barbarous world, is full of instances of the failure of government where free speech was denied and free press interfered with.

In connection with this fundamental proposition, before I get to the concrete parts of it, I want to read from an article by Mr. Roosevelt. He said:

> Free speech, exercised both individually and through a free press, is a necessity in any country where the people are themselves free. Our Government is the servant of the people, whereas in Germany it is the master of the people. This is because the American people are free and the German people are not free. The President is merely the most important among a large number of public servants. He should be supported or opposed exactly to the degree which is warranted by his good conduct or bad conduct, his efficiency or inefficiency, in rendering loyal, able, and disinterested service to the Nation as a whole. Therefore it is absolutely necessary that there should be full liberty to tell the truth about his acts, and this means that it is exactly as necessary to blame him when he does wrong as to praise him when he does right. Any other attitude in an American citizen is both base and servile. To announce that there must be no criticism of the President, or that we are to stand by the President right or wrong, is not only unpatriotic and servile but is morally treasonable to the American public. Nothing but the truth should be spoken about him or anyone else. But it is even more important to tell the truth, pleasant or unpleasant, about him than about anyone else.

Mr. President, I think any legislator or citizen who will give it candid thought must agree that criticism of a public official, of any organization, or of an individual, particularly one occupying a public or a semipublic position, ought to be constructive; it ought to be helpful. But even if it is not intended to be so, it will be helpful, and the truth ought to be a good defense. Yet, Mr. President, the Congress of the United States has refused to put on the statute books a law that specifically said that the truth would be a defense.

Section 3 of this particular bill will in effect continue during the time of peace what has been enacted during a time of war, and what is now on the statute books. We have now on the statute books a statute containing this language:

> When the United States is at war the Postmaster General may, upon evidence satisfactory to him that any person or concern is using the mails in violation of any of the provisions of this act, instruct the postmaster at any post office at which mail is received addressed to such person or concern to return to the postmaster at the office at which they were originally mailed all letters or other matter so addressed.

This law makes an absolute dictator of the Postmaster General. He is not required under it to give any man a trial; not even required to notify the citizen against whom he renders his arbitrary judgment. He decides "upon evidence satisfactory to him" and then acts. By it he can put any man in the United States out of business. No monarch of ancient times ever had a more supreme and arbitrary autocratic power. He does not even have to keep the evidence that satisfies him. It may consist only of a hint of some enemy. It may be only a desire to get revenge. It may, in fact, be absolutely nothing but a whim of the official who acts, and by his act he can bring ruin to an established business. Does any man think for a moment that with such a power lodged in Washington the effect upon citizens thousands of miles from the Capital will not be great? Does any man doubt but that a hint from the proper authority, some one who stands close to the administration, will be sufficient to have the necessary effect and accomplish the desired end? It will not be in the use of the power, but it will be in the fear of its use that will make vassals and slaves of otherwise independent men.

Section 3 of the pending bill gives to the Postmaster General the right to deny transmission through the mails of certain documents, letters, circulars, or newspapers, which, in his judgment, or which he finds, which he thinks, violate the provisions of this statute.

It is a serious thing, Mr. President, to deny the publisher of a newspaper, for instance, the right to have the newspaper carried through the mails. It means absolute destruction of his property; it means his ruination. I do not believe such a course ought to be taken until after the man charged has had an opportunity to be heard, has had an opportunity of a trial, has had the charge against him laid before him, and has been given an opportunity to defend himself.

When the statute which I have just read was pending before the Senate the Senator from Maryland offered an amendment as follows:

> Provided, however, That nothing in this act shall be construed as limiting the liberty or impairing the right of any individual to publish or speak what is true, with good motives, and for justifiable ends.

That amendment was agreed to. It was rejected, however, in conference, and the Senate agreed to the conference report which struck it out, and when that conference report was before the Senate the chief argument against it was a letter from the Attorney General, in which, in substance, he said that if that provision were added it would make prosecutions more difficult. There is no doubt but what it would. There were a great many instances cited, as I remember the letter, where, if the truth was a good defense, the man would go scot free. My contention is in such a case he ought to go scot free, and if he can not his liberty is seriously interfered with, and no country has a right to boast of its freedom where it deprives the citizen of his property or liberty under such barbarous procedure.

That amendment not only provided that the publication must be true, but that it should have two other attributes—it must be published with good motives, and it likewise must be published for justifiable ends. I cite this law to show how far the Congress of the United States has already gone in giving power to the Postmaster General.

It is argued, in defense of this proposed law, that we have already on the statute books statutes similar to the proposed law. Mr. President, to my mind that is not a good defense. It does show, however, how careful any legislative body ought to be, particularly when it is dealing with the liberty of the citizen, in putting anything on the statute books that may thereafter be cited as a precedent for increasing the power granted by such statute. One of the dangers of all such legislation always is that you give a little power to begin with to the administrator, whoever he may be, the executive officer, and ninety-nine times out of one hundred he will stretch it to the limit; then the next one goes a little further and uses what was done before as a precedent for the course he is taking. By this proposed law, and the other laws which have already been passed, we place in the Postmaster General the power to coerce every newspaper and every citizen of the United States. In my judgment the danger, the harm, the evil, the wrong, the sin that comes from this legislation is not alone because here and there some newspaper is suppressed, some man wrongfully deprived of his liberty or of his property, but it is the effect that such laws have generally upon the people; and I want to make that emphatic. I do not know whether I can fully make myself understood, but in my judgment the great evil of such legislation is not the particular concrete things that happen, but the millions of other things that do not happen, where the mind of the citizen is subdued, where he is coerced, where he is compelled against his will to remain silent when otherwise he would speak. It is the unconscious influence of the law, Mr. President, that does the most evil, unconscious on the part of the official who is enforcing it, and unconscious, often, on the part of the man who is affected by it; and I am going to give some illustrations that bear out that point from the legislation we already have on the statute books.

Now it is proposed that this power should be given to the Postmaster General in time of peace, to go on indefinitely, and to be exercised by him in his discretion. There is no jury trial. A man with a newspaper, particularly a daily newspaper, who has one issue suspended, has been damaged, perhaps ruined, and he is tried afterwards. It is said by the Senator from South Dakota that this is necessary, because if the newspaper goes out with a seditious article in it the harm is done. Now, let us see if the harm is done; let us see if any great harm is done.

The Senator from South Dakota says—and I agree with him—that if an individual must suffer in order to save the general public from an injury, it is something that he must bear. I concede that. But he ought not to be required to suffer unless it is necessary. The Senator from South Dakota described the people as 110,000,000 patriotic people, and said that this seditious literature, the issue of the paper, unless it were stopped before it got into the mails, would get out and be distributed among the people. Does the Senator have no more confidence in the intelligence and the patriotism of the American people than to think that their minds would be poisoned? Is our Government suspended on such a slender thread that we are afraid of open debate, open discussion, and open criticism from any source?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. STERLING. I think the Senator misconstrues what I said in that regard. It is not that 110,000,000 people will be influenced or their minds poisoned by this kind of literature, but it is that the injury may come, the attempt may be made, and perhaps in part be effected, for the overthrow of the Government, in the assassination of Government officials, and so forth. That may happen, and the 110,000,000 people are vitally interested and concerned in that; and it is that rather than that they are going to be influenced by the literature.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know how the officials are going to be assassinated or the Government destroyed if the people are not going to be influenced by the literature. Are we afraid of a few crazy anarchists, and do we expect to suppress them by driving them into secrecy and secret meetings, if they want to carry on their propaganda?

I believe that one of the best things that could happen would be to give publicity to everything of that kind. Let me call your attention to an instance, the steel strike investigation, which disclosed that one Foster, one of the labor leaders, was the author of a book or pamphlet of some kind on syndicalism. I have never seen it. From what I have read of and about the hearings I presume it was a pamphlet which advocated the destruction of government, the thing that is prohibited in the pending bill. Immediately when it became known that he was the author and that he had published that kind of a book he lost caste, not only with the committee but with the country. They did not know about it before. As soon as they did know about it, as soon as publicity was given to it, his influence was gone.

Let us see what happened. Since that investigation, and since it became known that Foster, one of the labor leaders, had written the pamphlet—although I believe he testified that he had changed his mind since he wrote the pamphlet and that it was several years ago when it was written. When the people found out he had written the pamphlet on syndicalism, what happened? The steel company then published the pamphlet. They have given it more circulation ten times over than Foster ever gave it. They have published it and sent it broadcast.

I presume if one of the sleuths of our present Attorney General, who, by the way, tries more lawsuits in the headlines of the daily newspapers than any lawyer I ever knew, went into the slums somewhere, to some little cottage or some little alley house, and arrested one of the inmates and found that he had a copy of Foster's book on syndicalism, that would be enough to deport him if he was an alien. He would hardly be allowed to make a defense.

But suppose the Attorney General sends his sleuths to the mansion of Mr. Gary, the head of the Steel Trust, and arrests him and his family and finds in his house some copies of Foster's pamphlet, what would happen then? Gary has had them printed—and I say that not in criticism. I agree that Mr. Gary and the Steel Trust took the right course. I commend them for the course they took. But would we send Gary across the ocean or send him to the penitentiary on the fact that in his residence had been found a copy of Syndicalism?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I gather from the remarks of the Senator that he is opposed not only to the provision of the bill prohibiting the use of the mail for the circulation of that literature, but the entire bill which seeks in any way to prevent the circulation of the literature.

Mr. NORRIS. No; I am not opposed to it. I have said that I believed in the present condition of the public mind it was probably inadvisable to legislate upon it, because I thought that under existing law we could get the necessary relief.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I asked the Senator the question because I understood him to say that it would be better to allow a few crazy anarchists to announce generally their doctrine and even pay for giving publicity to it than to seek to prevent the circulation of the literature.

Mr. NORRIS. No; I did not advocate paying to give it publicity.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; but giving them perfect liberty to publish because, being crazy, the general public would appreciate the situation and their influence would be lost. I understood that to be the tenor of the argument of the Senator, but I may be mistaken.

Mr. BORAH. May I say that the very able Senator from Montana had printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a few weeks ago a very large amount of this material of the Bolshevists upon the theory that as it went out to the people and the people saw what it was it would have the very opposite effect from that desired by those who were advocating it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes; I was desirous of having a discerning public appreciate the character of the literature that was being put out, that people of morbid minds by reading it would be influenced to commit crimes. But if the Senator from Nebraska will pardon me just a moment, I asked him the question I did because I have here the reports of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York in the famous case of People against Herr Most——

Mr. NORRIS. Let me say to the Senator right now that the Senator is not going to be able to put me in that class of people who are opposed to the proper punishment of all offenses, including sedition. I tried to make myself plain upon that point.

I do claim the right, however, to disagree with those who advocate the passage of the bill, and particularly section 3 of it, that it is an inopportune time to do it now. I am not opposed even to the deportation of unworthy aliens. I am in favor of it in the proper cases, but I would give every one of them a trial. I would try them under the law before I took any action. I do not know of anyone, however low he may be, that is not entitled to a trial by a jury of his peers before a judgment of condemnation is rendered against him.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. If the Senator will pardon me further, I was simply endeavoring to draw out from the Senator his attitude concerning the legislation intended——

Mr. NORRIS. I am going to give my attitude as I proceed.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Intended to suppress literature advocating the destruction of government by force.

Mr. NORRIS. Section 3 goes further than that.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield to the Senator from Illinois in just a moment. That is not what section 3 is. It suppresses it and tries the man afterwards.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. If the Senator will pardon me further, I was endeavoring to get the attitude of the Senator concerning the remainder of the legislation, leaving section 3 for separate consideration.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator let me outline my own speech? Even if I do not discuss the remainder of the legislation, will I not be entitled to discuss one part of it and not another? Will I not be entitled even to agree to some part of it and condemn some part of it? I am discussing now section 3. The Senator is trying to take me on a wild goose chase somewhere else, and I decline to be led.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Excuse me; I was directing the Senator's attention to some remarks which he just made.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; the Senator from Montana came into the Chamber after I had commenced and after I had outlined my purpose and probably did not understand what my purpose was. I now yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, a moment ago the Senator from Nebraska remarked, if I understood him, that in the deportation of alien revolutionists he believed that a trial by jury was necessary.

Mr. NORRIS. It is not necessary under the proposed law, and I did not say I advocated it.

Mr. McCORMICK. But the Senator believes that it should be?

Mr. NORRIS. I am not prepared to say. Of course, it is a question on which I might change my mind after investigation and debate, but to my mind it would not be an unreasonable proposition to provide that there should be a trial by jury.

Mr. McCORMICK. I interrupted because there are some of us who stand with the Senator on section 3 who would not accept that view regarding the deportation of aliens accused of fomenting revolution and violence against the Government.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to say briefly—and I hope that will settle it as far as my attitude is concerned—that my idea is that when a man comes from a foreign country to this country and does not make any attempt to familiarize himself with American institutions, but still retains his old ideas and does not do anything to become the right kind of an American citizen, he ought to be sent out of the country. He has not any business here, and I would be glad to send him out.

As to the method by which it is done, I might have said something that would indicate that he ought to have a trial by jury, and maybe he had. I am not sure that on full discussion and consideration of the matter I may reach that conclusion, but I have not reached it now. It is not before the Senate now. It is not involved in the proposition. It is not involved in the debate and it is not in the law now.

Mr. President, under existing laws we have been traveling, in my humble judgment, toward coercion of the press and of free speech. I am not accusing anyone who is to blame for it or responsible for it of being moved by any motive that is not worthy or by any other than a patriotic idea, and yet I believe it can be demonstrated that we are suffering now all over the country from that kind of a course, based on the laws that have been passed conferring power upon the Postmaster General by virtue of which he has had control practically of the liberties of the American people through the instrumentality of his power over the press.

I am not alone in that idea. I am going to read some extracts from an editorial that appeared in the North American, of Philadelphia, on May 30, 1918. We are all familiar with that newspaper. Its patriotism has never been questioned. Its loyalty has never been in doubt. The ability of its editor and its editorial policy have been admitted by all who are familiar with it. The editorial says:

> The administration's system of seeking control of the press through rewards of favor and threats of punishment, although it has in Col. Roosevelt's article—

I might say this was an editorial discussing Col. Roosevelt's article in his controversy with the Postmaster General. The editorial in its entirety is interesting, but I do not care to read that part of it referring particularly to Roosevelt's article, because I thought there might be a possibility that some Senator would think I was trying to give a partisan tinge to the discussion.

I think the article shows that even though we have had those laws on the statute books but a short time we have already traveled so far that those who now have the power are using it for the purpose of coercion or, at least, I believe the evidence warrants that statement.

> The administration's system of seeking control of the press through rewards of favor and threats of punishment, although it has in Col. Roosevelt's article its first complete exposure, is a fact recognized by every intelligent editor and publisher in the country. One of the first demands made by President Wilson after the declaration of war was for a law that would have empowered the administration to suppress any critical publication arbitrarily, and finally a measure short of this, yet drastic enough to intimidate many newspapers, was passed.
>
> The position of the press for the last 14 months has been humiliating and often intolerable. The newspapers long ago lost confidence in the propaganda conducted at public expense under the guise of "official" news, yet they have been compelled to give it currency.

I wish the Senate would let those words sink in. This statement is made by one of the leading newspapers of the country and is backed up later on with incidents. It says that the newspapers long ago lost confidence in this propaganda, and yet they have given it currency.

> The method is simple but deadly. The newspapers were asked at the outset not to print news of war activities of kinds specified, and this request has been scrupulously honored. At the same time the administration undertook to supply information proper for the public to have and has issued daily great masses of official statements not only reciting alleged facts but urging administration aims and policies. In large part the statements are inaccurate and conflicting.
>
> Newspapers disseminating the stuff know that in doing so they are often helping to deceive their readers, but there is nothing else for them to do; it is sent to all, and if any flagrant misrepresentations are discarded or modified the offending paper lays itself open to the charge of not "supporting the Government." Few newspapers have sufficient command of the facts to make it safe for them to risk a controversy by challenging statements they know to be untrue. * * *
>
> The North American, on the other hand, which has stood unswervingly for American rights and American obligations to defend democracy ever since August, 1914, has itself printed untold columns of "official" misinformation.

Think of that confession! One of the most courageous newspapers that was ever published admits editorially that it has printed "untold columns" of information that is not correct.

> It has done so because it is not humanly possible to test the accuracy of every statement and because the stamp of official authority gives the matter importance even when its verity is doubtful.
>
> But the system as a whole has brought the American press under a reign of terrorism. Few newspapers dare to challenge the displeasure of an administration which has shown that it does not scruple to use the Postal Service and the Department of Justice to exact servility. Few of them have the strength or the courage to risk such an assault as the President made upon Senator CHAMBERLAIN when he tried to tell the Nation the truth. * * *
>
> On February 4 last, in an editorial discussing the Liberty motor, it was remarked that the original model soon "was found to be obsolete" and "was scrapped and the name adopted for a new and radically different model." A few days later we received an insolent letter from one Robert C. Benchley, written on the letter paper of the chairman of the Aircraft Board, stating that this newspaper had "put itself in the position of American representative of the Berliner Tageblatt" by spreading such "rumors." There had been only the "normal" change, said the writer, from 8 to 12 cylinders, and he bitterly denounced the suggestion that meant the original model had been found "obsolete."
>
> A newspaper less sure of its facts might have been alarmed by this "official" rebuke, with its impudent charge of disloyalty. The North American simply kept on telling the truth, and on May 15 the War Department, in a formal description of the Liberty motor, employed itself the very word we had used when it said:

This is quoted from the War Department:

> "The first sample was an eight-cylinder model. This, however, was never put into production, as advices from France indicated that demands for increased power would make the eight-cylinder obsolete before it could be produced."
>
> On March 25 we printed over the day's account of the great German drive a seven-column headline—more conservative than the news dispatches—reading, "British line bends, but holds," and on the same page a two-column head, strictly accurate, reading, "Germans capture Peronne; Berlin boasts of victory." At midnight newsboys selling the paper were threatened by a Secret Service agent; later he took into custody the office employee in charge of the boys and conducted him nearly to the Federal building before he would deign to state what charge he intended to make. Finally he said that the newsboys were giving "aid and comfort to the enemy" by calling out that the Germans had captured a town, and he added that this was part of the North American's pro-Germanism. After putting this preposterous charge into words the agent lost his nerve and released the employee, but warned him that the paper would hear from the Department of Justice. * * *

The system of intimidation is so villainous that we feel justified in mentioning that the name of the editor of this newspaper has been used by the tools of the administration with a false suggestion that it is of German origin. The name, as it happens, is no more German than Wilson or Baker, and its owner's ancestors were Americans 250 years before the fathers of some of the Bolsheviki who fawn upon the administration set foot in this country.

The revolting disclosure respecting the system is that seditious utterances against the United States may be safely made by newspapers which agulate the President, while truthful and helpful criticism of the administration has become dangerous for publications which are wholly and devotedly loyal to the country. And it has been shown that the price of immunity is undiluted servility.

Anarchism can not live where there are peaceful homes and prosperous people. It finds its breeding place in the slums, in misery, where there is suffering, where there is dissatisfaction. If we want to free our country of what is admitted to be damaging, of what is admitted to be wrong, of what is admitted to be a crime, the best way to do it is to let the light shine, let publicity into the dark places.

Let the lower lights be burning,
Send a gleam across the wave;
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman
You may rescue, you may save.

I only wish to call attention in this line to the fact that the course outlined in this editorial is the logical thing. It always so happens. It always has been true and always will be true that where an official is given power of that kind to interfere with the liberty and the freedom of the citizens without trial, without cause, without a charge, it can always be expected that the officials who have the power will go on taking more power, will go further and further, until ruin, revolution, and anarchy in time will follow. We can not live as a free Government without free speech and a free press. It must be conceded that, whether this power has ever been used wrongfully, it can be used wrongfully; and let the statute granting the power remain on the books long enough and it will be used wrongfully.

Mr. President, I have had my attention called to a charge made against one of the great daily newspapers in one of the States of our Union. I learned that the editor and publisher of that paper, who had about $100,000 invested in it—and it was in a very prosperous condition—was summoned to appear in Washington. Although I had never met him before, he came to see me, nevertheless, in regard to the matter, and I talked it over with him. I have in my office a complete copy of the record as made up in the Post Office Department of that charge and the trial that was given. I saw the official notice that was served on him. There were no specifications, nothing to indicate specifically anything he had written or published; but simply a statement that he was required to appear at a certain hour on a certain day in the city of Washington to show cause why he should not be denied the second-class privileges in mailing his newspaper. He appeared; he desired to know what it was all about, and there was some kind of a hearing. There came with him one of the leading lawyers of his State, a very prominent Democrat in the State and a friend of the administration. The hearing, by the way, was not before the Postmaster General—that is another thing that will happen under such a law—it was before some clerk; and I have it from a witness who was there, who said that he thought it was the most humiliating thing he had ever witnessed, that these men, without any formal charge having been made against them, appearing before a clerk, were abused, were insulted, were told that they ought to be in jail; that they had no business here or anywhere; that they were pro-Germans. Of course, it was denied, and he asked them to cite what particular things were done, and they finally adjourned the session. As I was about to say, this lawyer friend of his, when they came out of the Post Office Department just about dusk, with a fog over the city, said: "If, now, some soldiers in uniform would take us into custody, the picture of darkest Russia in the Capital of America would be complete."

When they finally got the hearing, when they finally called attention to the things they objected to, they contended, of course, that they were not seditious, that there was nothing wrong in them. I have read every one of them myself; and while I do not agree with them I could not find a word or a sentence that to my mind was objectionable from the standpoint of being illegal, or giving any aid or comfort to the enemy. There was one of them that criticized Samuel Gompers, I remember. I did not agree with that criticism; I thought it was wrong; but there was not a slur in it, there was not a line in it but that was couched in the most respectful and courteous language. No one was charged with doing anything but what was honest, but they did not agree with the policy that he took.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I was unavoidably absent when the Senator began his discussion. I should like to inquire to what publication he is referring.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not give the name of the publication, and I will say to the Senator that I would rather not give it. I have all the copies in my office. I have here the dates, and so forth, but I have not given the name of the publication. It was a daily newspaper in which about $100,000 was invested. I stated that.

The upshot of it all was that the Post Office Department decided that they would not deny the second-class mailing privilege; but what happened to the man? What happened to his publication? What is the effect? Again, Mr. President, I want to call your attention to the fact that it is the unconscious influence that hurts. This man was permitted to send his paper through the mails, but he was not permitted to do it until he signed a statement in which the following language appeared:

We understand now the attitude of the department, and we shall accordingly abide. We shall say nothing until peace is declared that can be construed as unfriendly to nations associated with us, or of the foreign policies of the Government, even as until now we have endeavored to do nothing to offend the law.

There is the collar on that man's neck. There is a positive suppression, it seems to me, of free speech. There is coercion. I remember now that in one of these editorials he had criticized Great Britain. In the same editorial he lauded France to the skies. It was early in the war. You remember that France did most of the fighting to begin with, and that her courage, her steadfastness, and her bravery were applauded all over the world, and there was some criticism—in my judgment, as subsequent events have developed, I think it was wrong—against Great Britain, on the ground that she was not doing her part. Later on that vanished. England had not fully gotten into it. He had criticized England for not sending more men to France, for not getting to the front faster than she did, and he had criticized Japan slightly. By the way, Mr. President, criticism of one of our allies or criticism of our Government was an offense; and yet if every Senator who has criticized Japan's course in this war were deported or sent to prison, I do not believe there would be a quorum of the Senate here to-day.

You say it is not intended that the Postmaster General shall do this. That is true, but under these laws practically all officials in power would do that. They have done it; they do do it. It is the natural thing that they should, moved, probably, according to their idea, by laudable motives, but it is done nevertheless.

The great danger comes from the fact that an administrative official having a policy to carry out, knowing the power that he possesses, will trump up some kind of a charge against a newspaper, when in reality the motive is to coerce in regard to some other matter wherein the support of the newspaper is desired, or its opposition the official desires to prevent. In the case I have just cited, my own idea is, after reading all the editorials which it was alleged were wrong, the action of the administration was not based in good faith upon the articles to which it objected. I can not help reaching the conclusion that Col. Roosevelt was right when he said that newspapers that were friendly to the administration were in no danger of being suppressed, but papers that were against the administration were continually watched and all kinds of excuses given to call the publishers on the carpet, oftentimes no doubt without a real intention of suppressing the paper, but in order to strike fear into their hearts and do the indirect thing which I have always claimed was the greatest danger in the law—the coercion of our citizens.

These things have gone on, Mr. President, until, like this editorial from the great newspaper in Philadelphia, the entire press felt coerced, afraid to criticize. This law will give to the Postmaster General in times of peace a power to hold that same kind of coercion over the press; and, let me repeat, when you hold it over the press you hold it over the people. You can not suppress and prevent the newspapers of the country from criticizing the Government without holding the same kind of a threat over the individual; and the law that is now on the statute books, that I have read, already gives the Postmaster General the power, as it says, upon evidence sufficient in his judgment to prevent any citizen of the United States from getting mail out of the post office.

I said, when that law was pending, that the evil will not come from the number of persons on whom he will use the power and deprive them of getting their mail. That is not the danger of the statute. If one man is denied the privilege of getting mail from the post office, it is wrong; but the evil is a million times greater when the people of the country all know that somewhere in Washington, perhaps a thousand miles away, there is an arbitrary power existing by which they can be deprived of mail through the post office. The man in a country grocery store out in California or the State of Washington knows that that power exists, and he knows it is in Washington that it exists, and that is the danger that comes from this kind of legislation. It is that coercion, it is that fear, just exactly like the North American has pointed it out in that able editorial. That is where the trouble comes and that is where the danger lies.

Why, Mr. President, when one of these drives was on to raise money for the Young Men's Christian Association, I delivered an address in Oxford, Nebr. I was on my way to Washington and stopped overnight there and delivered that address. Seventeen miles from Oxford is the county seat of that county, Beaver City. Several automobile loads of people came from the county seat to the meeting. At one time in my life I lived for 15 years in Beaver City, and I knew nearly everybody there. When the meeting was over one of the men who came from there told me that a man whom I had known for 30 years, A. D. Ellis, who lives now in that town, had been summoned to appear before the State council of national defense at the capital, 200 or 250 miles away from his home. I had known that man; I had lived in the same town with him for 15 years, and during that time I had seen him practically every day. I never in my life knew him to speak ill of any man. I knew him as a man who was universally respected by everybody who knew him. I did not know that he had an enemy on earth. He was as patriotic, in my judgment, as any man in the United States, an American, born and reared in America of American parents. This friend of his told me that he had already gone to Lincoln; he did not know why, but the sheriff had served the summons on him. The whole town knew it, but nobody knew what it was about or just what the charge was.

The next morning, when I was taking my train from Oxford the train from Lincoln came in. This was the place where a passenger from Lincoln to Beaver City had to get off and change cars, and A. D. Ellis stepped off the train. I saw him and asked him what was the matter. We had 25 or 30 minutes, and he told me what it was. He said he had been notified by the sheriff to appear—and I have a copy of the official notice—before the State council of national defense just two days later. Now, Mr. Ellis is a poor man. He is a man, I judge, about 65 years old. He has a little humble cottage in that town and supports himself and his wife by repairing furniture and has a set of tools with which to do his work. He did not have enough money to buy a ticket to go to Lincoln. He placed a chattel mortgage for $25 upon his tools in order to borrow the money at the bank to answer that summons. I have that chattel mortgage here on my desk. I have the note here. Of course, I presume he was frightened. He did not know what it was about. The notice gave him no information of anything except that he should appear. He borrowed the money on the only thing he had to make a living with and went to Lincoln and appeared, and when he got there at the appointed hour he told them who he was, and they explained to him that it had been charged that he had made some remarks that were not loyal in regard to the President of the United States.

It was stated to him by the officials there that he had said that President Wilson would go out of office the richest President that we ever had. They asked him if he had said it, and he said he had no recollection of it, but he said, "I might have said it, because I believe that is true." Now, he had an indefinite idea as to some things, as the story will show; but they said: "Why do you think it is true?" He said, "In the first place, our Presidents have all been poor men, as a rule. In the next place, I understand that President Wilson married a very rich woman." That was his idea of it; and they took no other evidence, and told him he could go, and he went back home. Before going, however, he said, "Who makes the charge?" They said, "We can not tell you. That is secret." "Let me see the charge." "No; you can not see that. That is secret." So there he stood, in the eyes of his friends and in the eyes of the community, condemned. The next morning there appeared in the daily papers of that capital city a little squib, about half as long as your finger, saying "A D. Ellis, of Beaver City, has been before the State council of national defense charged with disloyal conduct."

This illustrates how easy it is for an enemy, in secret, to bring about almost an irreparable injury to a worthy citizen. The man is charged in secret. He is called to answer, but the room where the trial takes place is a secret room. The public is excluded. Friends of the accused are not admitted. The charge is not read. The man who makes it may be a thousand miles away. The accused is not permitted to know who it is that charges him with a wrong, and it is but small satisfaction that those who have charge of it permit him to go without punishment. The newspapers allege that he has been called before the board for disloyal conduct. No newspaper comes to his defense. He is stamped, as it were, with the black mark of disloyalty, without knowing from whence came the charge or what in reality it is.

No government can continue and be free when its citizens are thus persecuted, for it is nothing short of persecution. Such things make people dissatisfied with their government. Such things breed anarchy and disloyalty. It is such a course that our Government ought to avoid. It is such things that those of us who oppose section 3 of this bill desire to make impossible, and we are moved to this course because of the love and admiration that we have for our country and for the loyalty and well-being of our fellow citizens.

That went all over the State. As I said, I was on my way to Washington. When I came here I wrote to an old friend of mine in that town and told him of my conversation, and I said, "Is it possible that Ellis has done anything that is wrong? I want you to let me know the truth, and I want to pay something on that mortgage if he is innocent." I got an answer back in which my friend said, "Everybody here knows he has done nothing wrong. But you are too late to pay anything on the chattel mortgage. He had not more than gotten back to town before one man after another, meeting him on the street, would slip a dollar into his hand secretly, would not let anybody know it for anything, and he paid the mortgage off the same day."

What harm has been done, Mr. President? Why, of course, Mr. Ellis has been injured. But that is not the great injury that has occurred. All the people who know about it realize that there is a secret court, where a secret complaint can be made, a secret trial will be had, and that you may be accused by somebody who never will show up in the light. That is the damage in a free government that that kind of a proceeding has. That is the kind of damage that will come from section 3 of this bill if it is put on the statute books and permitted to remain.

In the little town where Mr. Ellis lives there is a newspaper published, a country newspaper, and it is as good and progressive and active and energetic a newspaper as ever came off the press. I get it regularly, and after this occurred I watched to see what the editor of that paper would say about the outrage upon one of the citizens of the town. Ordinarily there would have been things published in that paper that would have burned the paper upon which they were written. But there was not a word, not a sentence about the affair. Everybody was coerced, everybody, just as the North American editorial says, afraid to make a move, because some secret power coming out may grapple you next; and no man speaks; everybody whispers.

Mr. President, that is the kind of a condition that will breed anarchy; that is the kind of a condition in the country that will ultimately bring ruin, and when you place this kind of a power in the hands of any official, to take the life, the liberty, or the property of a citizen without trial, you are tending to bring on that kind of a condition. If you want a soviet government, such a course will bring it.

I started a while ago, when I was interrupted by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING], to refer to his argument that the damage is done unless we stop the paper to begin with. Mr. President, if we have a healthy citizenship, if we have a free citizenship, if we have a country where no man is afraid to talk to his neighbor, to speak his sentiments, to honestly criticize public officials, any seditious publication in a newspaper is not going to do the harm that you may think it will; and if it is seditious, then arrest the man who is responsible for it and try him. That is the kind of a law we ought to have. We do not need section 3, to ruin him first and try him afterwards.

Mr. President, I want to call attention to another incident happening in my State that shows the dangers of this kind of legislation, which bears out the statements in this editorial, that all the press and all the people were scared and coerced by virtue of the power lodged in the Postmaster General. It will not stop with newspapers; it will go into every line of endeavor, as this shows.

Out in a little country town in the State of Nebraska is a country merchant, who buys eggs and ships them, as all other country merchants do. There is a law in that State which makes it a criminal offense to ship rotten eggs or to sell them or to offer them for sale. One day this man received a letter written on the letterhead of the Food Administration, and I have a copy of it here. I am going to omit the names, because I do not doubt but what the people who wrote the letter were patriotic; I have not any doubt but what they thought they were doing the right thing, although, in my judgment, they were mistaken. But they sent him a letter, and this is what it says:

You offered for sale eight stale eggs during the week ending August 31, 1918.

He was doing pretty well if he did not sell more than eight stale eggs in a week, I should think.

If I prosecute you under the State law, the costs of the case and the fine connected with this violation of the law will be heavy. I suggest that you make a donation of $8—

That is $1 for each egg; and even now that is a high price for even a good egg—

I suggest that you make a donation of $8 to the Red Cross through this office in lieu of prosecution. I shall expect a check to cover by the 12th instant. If I do not receive same by that date, I will start prosecution under the State laws.

That was written on the letterhead of the United States Food Administration for the State of Nebraska, signed by the proper official of the county of that administration. I ought to say for this man who runs this grocery store that he claims in his letter to me that he never did sell any stale eggs. But an official of the Government took that action, just as the Postmaster General would do under this law. It is said, "You are charged with selling eight stale eggs. We will prosecute you under the law unless you donate something to the Red Cross."

I knew the Red Cross did not want money obtained in that way, and I sent this letter to the proper official in the Food Administration, it was forwarded to the Red Cross, and I received an answer from them in which they say that they will take it up with the proper authorities and see that such a thing does not occur again. The letter says in substance that—

While we need money, we do not want to get it in that way.

The man who wrote that letter to the groceryman committed an offense under the criminal laws of the State of Nebraska; but the man who sent the letter to me, to whom this letter was sent, told me that the practice was general; that hundreds of dollars had been paid by other men in the business rather than to be exposed or be denounced as disloyal—a charge in secret, a trial in secret, a judgment in secret, and the poor defendant knows nothing about it until the proceedings are over and everything is completed.

Now, I want to read an article from the National Republican of January 3. It is headed:

A remnant of bolshevism in our postal practice.

My contention, Mr. President, is that this kind of legislation breeds bolshevism. It breeds dissatisfaction with the Government. It breeds dissension; and there can be no good come from it. This article says:

Postmaster General Burleson has recently set up the contention in the Federal courts that his decisions relative to the admissability to the mails of second-class matter is not subject to judicial review.

I am inclined to think that the Postmaster General is right. We pass a law that gives him discretion. We say that is not fair, that a man ought to have a trial before the Postmaster General can take a newspaper off its feet. Those in favor of the bill say he can get a trial; he can go into court and get an injunction. But, as I said to the Senator from South Dakota yesterday, when that injunction comes up in court, will not the court be apt to say, "The law gives this discretion into the hands of the Postmaster General. He says, 'I am satisfied'"? As a matter of fact, he may not have a scrap of evidence. He will have no record, no testimony, nobody sworn, but a court has not the right to deny his discretion if he has it. This article goes on:

The New York World, administration organ, declares that such a claim is a violation of the fundamentals of free government, and blames the arbitrary course of Postmaster General Burleson, not upon the power that has appointed and maintains him in the Cabinet, but upon Congress for leaving so much to the discretion of an administrative official. This is very Worldesque indeed, but it does not shift the responsibility from the shoulders of President Wilson.

I want to say right there that I think Congress is to blame the same as the President. Congress has passed a law that gave him the authority, and undoubtedly he is carrying out the wishes of the President in administering the law. The article continues:

Yet it must be admitted that Congress is culpable for failing to furnish any means of appeal from the decision of a Postmaster General in matters of this kind. He may, under the existing law and even more drastic laws now being considered in Congress, decide that an innocent article on tomato culture is seditious, and bar a publication from the mails, inflicting irreparable injury, without the least recourse to the publisher. This is decidedly bolshevistic in its autocracy and violative of the spirit if not the letter of the Constitution's provisions against abridgment of the freedom of speech and of the press. The very existence of such laws and practices permits a Postmaster General and the administration he represents to intimidate the press of the country, since every publication exists, under this system, entirely at the will and pleasure of the Postmaster General. In all our governmental practice there is nothing akin to this absolute power given to the Postmaster General under the law without relief or remedy being provided for the aggrieved object of this functionary's displeasure.

Mr. President, that again emphasizes the idea that I mentioned some time ago, that there is this unseen influence. The fact that this power exists and is lodged in Washington will have a wonderful restraining influence upon anyone residing particularly at a great distance from Washington, when he knows that this arm can reach down upon him and absolutely ruin him and deprive him of everything that he has earned during a lifetime of work. It is the existence of it that does the damage. That is not the only damage, it is true, but in my judgment that is the big danger. We ought to follow the procedure that we do universally in all criminal and civil cases, try the man before we deprive him of his property or of his liberty; give him a hearing before some tribunal where he will have an opportunity to defend himself, where a charge must be made in writing, where the simple ipse dixit of an administrative official will not be sufficient to put him out of business.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho to some extent will do that; but in my judgment it does not completely cure it. If we make the publication of seditious matter a crime, as other parts of this bill do, then the man who publishes it is liable to be tried under that statute. He will have a trial before a jury in court, and that is where he ought to be tried; and as compared with ruining his business before he has had a trial, the harm that one issue of the newspaper will do to an intelligent people sinks absolutely into insignificance. Therefore section 3 should be stricken out of the bill entirely. It is absolutely unnecessary, as far as the enforcement of any criminal feature is concerned, and will do great injury to many honest people and enable an administrative official to wrongfully coerce millions of people.

Friday, January 9, 1920.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the letter just read, to my mind, furnishes an additional argument why section 3 of the pending bill should not become a law. In the first place, it illustrates the growing tendency of Congress when it desires to enact a law to ask the parties to whom the enforcement of the law would be given whether or not they want the law. I, of course, have not had an opportunity to examine this letter, but to my mind it illustrates a practice that is growing common, that as soon as an attempt is made in the Senate to give some administrative official greater power, greater discretion, those who favor the legislation at once call upon the very officials who are going to be required to enforce the law and ask whether or not they desire the law enacted.

It is proper to ask for such an opinion, and it is as proper for the officials of the Post Office Department as for the officials of any other department to state their opinion, or, for that matter, for any citizen to state his opinion; but we ought to be careful not to permit those upon whom we are going to place the authority to take the property of men without a trial before a court or jury to also have the power to enact the legislation that confers the power or that places limitations upon it.

The solicitor does not say, however, that in a trial now pending in the courts, where a similar law in regard to the power of the Postmaster General to suspend the publication of a paper and deny the second-class mail privileges is in issue, that he has not alleged in his brief what I stated yesterday, to wit, that Congress, having placed the discretionary power upon the official of the Government, it is beyond the power of the court to interfere with that discretion.

As the clerk read the letter I was particularly struck with one sentence, which I am trying to find. He says:

My judgment is that in the present condition of affairs in this country equity courts alone can properly protect the public interests.

Mr. President, that sentence is teeming with deep meaning. If it means anything, it means that under present conditions he would resort to courts and not to juries; it means that the administrative officials who will enforce this proposed law want a law that will keep the matter from a jury trial. Equity courts alone, he thinks, ought to have jurisdiction. According to my idea—and, of course, Mr. President, I may be entirely wrong—at the present time more than any other we ought to protect trial by jury, that heretofore under the American Government and American jurisprudence has been regarded as sacred to the liberty and to the rights of all the people.

Yesterday when I was compelled to suspend my remarks because the Senate took up the unfinished business I was discussing section 3. I was about to call attention to the proviso in section 3 which it is claimed is meant to take away some of the bad odor of the preceding portion of the section. The proviso reads as follows:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to authorize any person other than an employee of the Dead Letter Office, duly authorized thereto, or other person upon a search warrant authorized by law, to open any letter not addressed to himself.

Mr. President, what is the benefit of that proviso? Suppose it is violated, what can be done about it? There is no penalty provided. Suppose there is a penalty under general law for opening a letter, what difference does that make? Is it to be supposed that the Department of Justice is going to prosecute the Post Office Department or any of its officials for opening letters? The general law applying to the ordinary person would probably bring relief; but if the officials of the Post Office Department violate the law and open a letter that they have no right to open, what are you going to do about it? There is not a place on earth for you to go to get relief or to punish anybody.

I had just a little personal experience in that line. A man in a little town in my State in January, 1917, a few months before we entered the war, wrote a letter to a party in Germany. The letter was held up—and I am not criticizing that—very properly so. On account of the conditions with which we were all familiar, and the interference with shipping, and the embargoes, it was impossible for the letter to be delivered, and, of course, it was necessary to return the letter to the sender. The sender of the letter had written his name and address on the envelope in the proper place, showing where it could be returned, in plain, legible writing; but, notwithstanding this fact, the letter was opened in the Post Office Department, and when I got the envelope—and I have the envelope now in my possession—and there seemed to me to be no reason whatever why they should open the letter in order to return it when the address and the name of the sender were plainly written on it, I took it up with the department, and this is the reason given, in the reply to me, why that letter was opened. I quote from the official's letter to me:

On examining letters for return to senders which had been opened by employees of the division named, designated for the purpose, it was found that the card address of the alleged sender on the envelopes did not, in many instances, correspond with the name or the address of the writer.

That is the only explanation. In other words, because the Post Office Department thought that perhaps the name given on the outside of the envelope as that of the person writing the letter, and his address, was not the real name of the person who wrote the letter, they would open it to see. If the Senator from South Dakota came into my office at my home, and wrote a letter on my stationery, and the Post Office Department were unable to deliver it, they would return it to me if it had my return card on it. That may happen sometimes; but the Post Office Department says: Notwithstanding the fact that the envelope has the address and the name of the sender plainly written or printed on it, we will open it to see whether that letter was really written by the fellow whose name appears on the envelope.

Mr. President, is that any reason? Is there any sense in that reason? Does not everybody know, when he reads the reason given, that that is not the reason?

That is only a little incident of no consequence. It does not amount to much. It is a trifle, but, as a great writer said, "Trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle." It only illustrates that the Post Office Department now, backed with power that Congress has given them that they never ought to have, go beyond that power, even, whenever they find occasion to do it. It only illustrates the argument that I tried to make yesterday, that when you give an administrative official power he will use all of it; the probabilities are that he will stretch it, and the next man that takes his place will use his illegal act as a precedent to go still further. Now, when we are placing in the power of departmental officials in Washington the liberty and the property of citizens all over the United States, we ought to take heed that that has been the history and is the proof now of what is going on in the Post Office Department.

Let me read right along that line, Mr. President, the sayings of one of the wise men of the world in speaking of giving power to various departments, and speaking in so much better language than I have been able to speak of the proclivity of grasping for power and of going further, and then another subsequent official using that as a precedent to go still further.

It is important likewise—

Says this writer—

that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another. The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. A just estimate of that love of power and proneness to abuse it which predominate in the human heart is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position. The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions of the others has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern, some of them in our country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation.

Mark these words. Let me repeat them:

But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed.

When we are trying to pile up power in the hands of administrative officials who are already going beyond the powers that they have in their possession, I wish that those words might sink deep into the hearts of those who are asked to confer additional power. Let me read them again:

But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Mr. President, I have read from the Farewell Address of George Washington, and in it he outlines what I have tried to say—that even though, by a usurpation of power, good may be accomplished in one instance, the precedent that is made will be used by tyrants in the future, and, as he said, little by little and step by step that is the way that free governments have been destroyed. To my mind, Mr. President—and I feel deeply on the subject—when we are asked and when we obey and take such steps as this in legislation we are fertilizing the soil for anarchy, for dissatisfaction, for soviet rule, and all kinds of things that grow from dissatisfaction, from secrecy in government, from usurpation of governmental officials.

Mr. President, if we should enact this law, it seems to me that it would not be unreasonable to suppose that we might pick up a paper some time in the not-distant future and read an item of news, probably tucked away in one corner of it, where it was not very conspicuous, that would run something like this:

Yesterday in the United States court Adolph Stranjefsky was tried for circulating literature contrary to the Sterling statute. The prosecution showed in evidence before the court and jury that Stranjefsky had circulated a pamphlet in which the following objectionable language occurred:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

Stranjefsky, through his attorneys, attempted to prove to the court and jury that the objectionable language was part of an ancient document, which in the early days of the country was held in reverence by the people; that in fact it was a part of a document known to have existed in our forefathers' days as the Declaration of Independence. But the court waved the offer aside with the remark that the langauge clearly showed it was the belief of the man who circulated it that the Government should be destroyed; that the Government can not be destroyed except by force; and that while the offer of the defendant to explain it might be interesting to a student of history, it had no place in a court of law. Hence the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and Stranjefsky was sentenced to five years in prison.

Mr. President, it might occur that some daily newspaper, learning of this action of the court, would criticize the court the next day, and argue that there had not been anything done that was wrong; and then would come the strong arm of the Postmaster General, under the same statute, perhaps, brought into force by a telegram of some postmaster a thousand miles away from Washington calling his attention to what he found in this paper, that they were trying to send it through the mails as second-class matter; and the postmaster would be instructed to suppress it and to keep it out of the mails.

The incident is closed. Stranjefsky is in jail; the owner of the newspaper, probably having his life's work in it and all his fortune, has lost practically all. Other newspapers say nothing about it, because they do not want the strong hand of the Postmaster General to come down onto them, and to be required, if they ever get any relief, to go into a court a thousand miles from their own home to get justice.

But that is not all, Mr. President. Those things are important, but they are not as important as the effect it has upon the minds of the people, where it gradually percolates in time, and they believe that some one has been deprived of his property without due process of law; they believe that this arbitrary power in the hands of the Government has dealt unjustly and suppressed free press and free speech. That is the damage. That is where the injury comes, and that percolates over the country, and the incident is multiplied. Take the incidents that have already occurred, spread them over the country, everybody knows about them; everybody feels that an injustice is being done now in the way of coercion of free press and of free speech and that men have been deprived of their property and liberty without due process of law; and what is the effect of that? That is how anarchy and dissatisfaction are bred from secret methods of the Government. Nobody is able to find out just exactly why the Postmaster General did it; but he did it. He exercised the power that Congress placed in his hands. They did not intend that he should exercise it the way he did; but he does. As George Washington said, he stretches a point. Even though he is right, as Washington said, he establishes a precedent that, followed by future men in his position, will ultimately bring ruin and destruction to free government.

Mr. President, there is another section that has not been discussed, and I do not care very much about it. I just mention it in passing. It is section 2, which reads:

That the display or exhibition at any meeting, gathering, or parade, public or private, of any flag, banner, or emblem intended by the person or persons displaying or exhibiting the same to symbolize or indicate a purpose to overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property, the Government of the United States or all government, is hereby declared to be unlawful.

Mr. President, I have not any objection to the principle involved in that; but, as I have tried to say about free speech and free press, and as I am going to say a little later on, we can not pass a law that will prevent men from overstepping the bounds; that is admitted.

But this is a dangerous provision, that the display or exhibition of a flag that is intended to indicate a purpose to overthrow the Government shall be unlawful. That might be the United States flag. A man might arrange with a lot of conspirators to have a meeting and that that flag should be their emblem and the sign that they were going to congregate here or there to begin the destruction of the Government. I presume, however, the particular reference is to what is known as the red flag.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator will note that it must be intended by the person or persons displaying or exhibiting that flag or emblem to indicate a purpose to overthrow the Government of the United States.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, the Senator is getting into a kind of proof that is practically impossible to produce. I suppose the intention is to prevent the display of the red flag, and I have not any sympathy for the red flag; I have no interest in it. But, Mr. President, if we could by a statute—and I will admit we could not—require every anarchist to carry a red flag all the time, I would favor it. That would identify him; we would know what he was. Mr. President, at the main entrance to the Senate are three red lights always displayed when we go into executive session. I fear that some overenthusiastic Postmaster General and Attorney General who like to get into the daily papers in headlines some day would bring the Army up here and capture the Senate on the ground that they were displaying a red light, and that they were intending to destroy the Government of the United States, and that that was the emblem of anarchy.

I do not believe it is necessary to legislate about the red flag. If they have a flag that designates their purpose, at least it gives publicity to their actions, and that is one of the things we ought to have, if we can possibly get it.

Mr. President, now let us come down to something else that is modern. Not very long ago the Democratic Party in New Jersey called a State convention. They adopted a platform, and one plank of that platform read as follows:

We believe in the personal liberty of the individual and are opposed to legislative encroachments thereon. We reiterate our declaration of past years, that the question of prohibition has no proper place in the fundamental law of the Nation. We pledge ourselves to oppose, by all lawful means, the ratification or—enforcement of the so-called prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, and to lead the movement which will eventually result in its repeal.

Listen to this word—

At the time that platform was adopted the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the prohibition amendment, had been adopted and was a part of the fundamental law of the land, so that when they say they oppose its ratification I can not see that that has any material thing to do with it. But when they say, "We pledge ourselves to oppose its enforcement," are they not proposing to nullify the Constitution of the United States, and would a Postmaster General, or even a judge, be going too far to say that if they want to nullify the Constitution of the United States it will take force to do it, that they will have to kill men and destroy property?

But that is not all. The Democratic Party of New Jersey was successful. They carried the election on that platform. They elected their governor, and it has been stated here on the floor of the Senate and published in all of the newspapers, and, as far as I have heard, never been denied, that the candidate for governor in his speeches during the campaign publicity and openly used this language:

If I am elected governor, I will make New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic Ocean.

Does that mean nullification? When he used that language, Mr. President, the prohibition amendment was a part of the fundamental law of the land. If he were a Bolshevik, you would have him in jail now. If he were an alien he would be on that soviet ship over in the North Sea. If he were a socialist they would not allow him to be inaugurated governor, any more than they would allow socialists to be sworn in as members of the New York Legislature.

But that is not the end of it. After this election, after this man went through that kind of a campaign in New Jersey and was elected, he got a telegram of congratulations from the President of the United States, as follows:

Please accept my hearty congratulations upon your election.
(Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

Will the Attorney General, in his enthusiasm in enforcing this proposed law, have the President of the United States arrested as an accessory of the State of New Jersey and its governor in the attempt to prevent the enforcement of the Constitution of the United States and the making of New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic Ocean?

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. President, will the Senator read again that passage about the prevention of the enforcement of the amendment in connection with the President's telegram of congratulation?

Mr. NORRIS. The plank in the platform was:

We pledge ourselves to oppose, by all lawful means, the ratification or enforcement of the so-called prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, and to lead the movement which will eventually result in its repeal.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, of course the Senator from Nebraska has noted the expression "by all lawful means."

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I was just about to take that up when the Senator interrupted me.

Mr. STERLING. There is no indication that they will oppose it by force or violence.

Mr. NORRIS. They say "by all lawful means." Now, let us see what lawful means could be used. The amendment says, as we all know, that the importation into, the exportation from, the manufacture, or sale of intoxicating liquors is forever prohibited in the United States. That is in substance the amendment. The platform says:

We will oppose by all lawful means its enforcement.

Are there any lawful means left by which to oppose it? Then take that in connection with the governor's expression, upon which he made his campaign:

If I am elected governor of New Jersey, I will make the State as wet as the Atlantic Ocean.

Does that look like lawful means?

Mr. President, there are not any lawful means left. When they use the word "lawful" they are only camouflaging the whole situation. Force and violence are the only means left for them to use, and this becomes perfectly plain when we consider the slogan, "If I am elected governor, I will make New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic Ocean."

Suppose it were a Bolshevist who said he was going to use lawful means, and that he was going to prevent the enforcement of the Constitution. Would that be any defense for him? Mr. President, I think when the Attorney General gets over the effects of the Jackson Day dinner, in his enthusiasm to enforce the law he will deport the whole Democratic Party of New Jersey and send them in the next soviet ship away from this country; and I wonder if he will put them in "a ship of stone with sails of lead."

Mr. President, I am using this only by way of illustration. I only want to show how these things come home to roost. We can not afford to do an injustice, great and powerful as we are in this Government. We can not afford to take advantage of the most humble of people. We can not afford to place in the hands of an administrative official the power to coerce, to ruin, to destroy the newspapers of the country and to interfere with freedom of speech throughout the great breadth and the length of the land. If we do it, we must suffer the consequences. Even though we escape, our children will reap the harvest of disorder and anarchy.

And when we look into the lessons of history, when we follow the advice of George Washington, the Father of his Country, in his last public utterance to our people, we can not get away from the fact that these things have always brought ruin. Instead of stopping a man from making a speech on a street corner, I would buy him another soap box and put it out on the street and tell him to go to it. I have faith enough in the principles of our Government and in its very foundation stones to believe that it can withstand the attack of crazy, nonsensical anarchists and others. I believe that we ought to be careful lest we sow the seed that will bring forth more anarchy, more bolshevism, more sovietism.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator just this question: Suppose the soap-box orator of whom he speaks was advising the crowd around him to throw bombs into the Capitol Building here?

Mr. NORRIS. Then I would arrest him and put him in jail. We have a law to do that in every State in the Union. That would not be any trouble.

Mr. FRANCE. There is a Federal law also.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes. That would not bother me any. I would still leave the soap box there for any other man to use.

Why, Mr. President, because the men are patriotic who want it and believe it is right is not a sufficient reason why the law should be passed. Every man who ever lit a torch that burned a witch at the stake believed that he was doing the right thing. Not very many years ago as time goes they put Galileo in prison because he said the world moved. People believed that the world was flat, and the religious enthusiasts said that the Bible teaches that it is flat, and any man who denies it must be punished. So they put Galileo in jail because he said the world moved. But, Mr. President, the world kept on moving just the same.

We can not stop these things by statute. We can not make men good by passing a law. Why, Mr. President, the men who crucified the Savior believed they were right. They thought He was destroying the fundamental principles of the government of Rome. I might pause here to say that they were in the majority, too, when they did it. The remedy is not more law, more punishment; the remedy is more light, more freedom.

As I was saying when the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING] interrupted me, my faith in my Government is so great that I am not afraid to let any man go out and turn him loose in his criticism of it. Yet under laws that we have already passed, and authority that we have placed in the hands of the Postmaster General, papers that have criticized the Government have been shut up and put out of business, or they have been compelled to sign an agreement that they would not criticize it any more, that they would not criticize our allies any more. That is where it leads. That is a natural result, and this law proposes to continue that power in time of peace.

As Washington said in his Farewell Address, even though you might accomplish good in one instance, you set a precedent that future men having authority will use to do evil, to suppress the rights of the people and deny them their liberties, and in the end bring down upon their heads the destruction of the Government itself.

It is said that these men will abuse the right if you give them free speech. That is true; they will. Give free press, and the press will abuse it. Of course it will. They have in the past, always—not all papers, not all men, but some in every class.

Then you say, Ought we not to suppress that abuse? My answer is that, following the doctrine laid down by Washington, history shows from the beginning of civilization that it can not be done without bringing on a great injury. So our forefathers said that we will suffer this abuse rather than interfere with the right of free speech and free press; that if you place in any man's hands the power to suppress, you eventually bring upon your heads the destruction of free government.

I desire to read right in that line what was said by Franklin. I presume in all the world there will be no voice raised against or in condemnation of Franklin, one of the great leaders of our country; one of the great leaders of thought of the world; one of the men who had much to do with the foundation of our Government, with the foundation of something that is, in my judgment, greater than our Government—the inculcation in the hearts of men everywhere that freedom in all government at all times is necessary for the continuance of the life of the government and the happiness of the people. Franklin had something to say about this, and it seems to me that with great benefit we can listen to his words of wisdom. They apply now just as much as they applied then—yes, more than they applied the day he uttered them, in November, 1737. He said:

> Freedom of speech is a principal pillar of a free government; when this support is taken away, the constitution of a free society is dissolved and tyranny is erected on its ruins. Republics and limited monarchies derive their strength and vigor from a popular examination into the action of the magistrates.

There is a criticism of the courts which even he advocates.

> This privilege in all ages has been and always will be abused. The best of men could not escape the censure and envy of the times they lived in. Yet this evil is not so great as it may appear at first sight. A magistrate who sincerely aims at the good of society will always have the inclinations of a great majority on his side, and an impartial posterity will not fail to render him justice.
>
> Those abuses of the freedom of speech are the excesses of liberty. They ought to be repressed; but to whom dare we commit the care of doing it?

That is the question, Mr. President. As I tried to say before, freedom of speech will be abused, but there is no place in human wisdom to put the authority to suppress that abuse without doing more harm than good.

> But to whom—
>
> Said Franklin—
>
> dare we commit the care of doing it? An evil magistrate intrusted with power to punish for words, would be armed with a weapon the most destructive and terrible. Under pretense of pruning off the exuberant branches he would be apt to destroy the tree.

Mr. President, I am afraid that is what we are doing or attempting to do here. As Franklin says, this abuse of the freedom of the press is an exuberance of liberty bubbling and boiling over. It will be taken advantage of, but when you come to think about it, if the people are intelligent, if the people are happy, if the people are satisfied, it will not have any more harmful effect than the blowing of the north wind.

The time has not very far passed when men hid from their children the works of Tom Paine, when men would not permit to come into their houses a speech or a pamphlet or a book or a writing of Bob Ingersoll. Draper, who wrote the history of the conflict between religion and science, had his book banished from almost every fireside. The men who banished it were honest. The women who refused to permit their children to read those things thought they were right. But it has all passed away now, and the Christian religion stands stronger before the world to-day than it ever stood in history. Founded upon the rock of truth, it need not fear to be assailed by wrong, and that ought to be the motto of our country.

We have an intelligent, patriotic citizenship who are wise enough to dissect any discussion of government or religion or of politics. Shall we excite the suspicion of the growing generation by saying, "You shall not read this; you shall not read that"? Or shall we say, "Let everything be open; form your own judgment—you are wise enough to do so—and act after you have heard the evidence on all sides." Such a course, if pursued, will bring about the greatest condemnation of anarchy that any system on earth can bring. Let the light shine in. Let the people hear everything, right and wrong, and then be the judges. Are you afraid of the verdict when they are fully informed? Are you afraid that right will not prevail and that liberty will not be supreme? If you are, then, with due respect to you, it seems to me you doubt the intelligence of the American people.

If our doctrines are right, if our country is founded upon a system embedded in the truth—and I believe it is—then we need not fear any debate, any discussion. To my mind, however, if you undertake to suppress something, you create a feeling in the minds of all curious and intelligent men to see what it is; and you create a suspicion in the minds of honest men that you are afraid to meet honest criticism and honest consideration in the open light of heaven.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the real issue which is involved in the consideration of this measure at this time is contained in an amendment to section 3. That section reads as follows:

> SEC. 3. That every document, book, circular, paper, journal, or other written or printed communication in or by which there is advocated or advised the overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property of the Government of the United States or of all government, or in or by which there is advocated or advised the use of force or violence or physical injury to or the seizure or destruction of persons or property as a means toward the accomplishment of economic, industrial, or political changes is hereby declared to be nonmailable and the same shall not be conveyed in the mails or delivered from any post office or by any letter carrier: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to authorize any person other than an employee of the Dead Letter Office duly authorized thereto or other person upon a search warrant authorized by law to open any letter not addressed to himself.

To that section I have proposed an amendment, which reads as follows:

> Provided, That any author, publisher, or party affected or aggrieved by the action of the Postmaster General in excluding materials from the mails under this section shall, upon filing a bond to cover the actual cost of such proceeding, be entitled to a hearing de novo before a judge of the Federal court of the district or circuit in which the party affected or aggrieved resides. But in case the party aggrieved or affected is successful in securing the admission of his mail matter to the mails he shall not be liable for the cost of the proceedings, and the court shall have power during the pendency of the proceedings in court to suspend the order of the Postmaster General: Provided further, That no such court proceedings shall bar or interfere with any criminal prosecution under the terms of this act.

Mr. President, the issue narrows down, therefore, so far as it is presented by the amendment, to the question of whether we are willing to provide a hearing before an impartial tribunal for the parties who are affected by the order of the Postmaster General in excluding their mail matter from the mails.

While I have views with reference to the bill as a whole, and the principles which are involved in the measure, I do not at this time propose to discuss them. I may do so later; but the question to which I call attention now is the simple question of a hearing to be provided for those who are affected by the order in excluding their mail matter from the mails.

It has been said here, by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] and others, that there is being passed through the mails a vast amount of seditious literature to the colored people of the South, and that this material is sent without any identification as to the sender, the author is unknown, and they have no means of knowing, so as to hold anyone responsible, as to who is guilty of sending this material through the mail. The amendment which I offer would not preclude the Postmaster General from excluding from the mail any material of that nature unless the author and responsible party were known, because the amendment relates only to the right of individuals who may be affected, and they must make their identity known, of course, before they can avail themselves of the right of the law. So all this literature for which no one is willing to stand sponsor, this seditious material which no one will father, is left entirely unaffected by this amendment. I apprehend not only that that applies to this literature which is going to the colored people of the South, but the larger portion of all this literature is unidentified—that is, this literature which is most objectionable and most obnoxious—and therefore this amendment in no way affects that. The amendment provides only for a hearing de novo by those who are willing and have such faith in their right to mail this material as to come forward, acknowledge the authorship, file a bond, and submit themselves to the jurisdiction of a court.

I venture to say, Mr. President, that such material as would bona fide come under this law, such material as really ought to be excluded under the law, never would be fathered by anyone with the risk of having it passed upon by a Federal court. The Senator from South Dakota will observe that I struck out the question of a State court. I did so reluctantly, but I did so in order to get some support, hoping to get some kind of a hearing. I think it ought to have remained in, but I have stricken it out.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NUGENT in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. KING. For information—I have not heard all of the Senator's statement, and I have not seen his perfected amendment—may I put a concrete case, and ask the opinion of the Senator as to the effect his amendment would have upon the case that I am about to present?

Suppose that an issue of some newspaper is tendered to the postal authorities for transmission through the mails and it clearly is a violation of the laws. It does, without any question—and there could be no diversity of opinion in regard to the construction or interpretation placed upon the language—teach the overthrow by violence of our Government. Does the Senator's amendment contemplate that in an event of that character the postal authorities would have no discretion to exclude it, but would have to give notice and arrange for a hearing?

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no. My amendment does not interfere with the Postmaster General's discretion at all. If such material as the Senator speaks of should come to the notice of the Postmaster General he would exclude it from the mails. That material would remain excluded from the mails permanently unless two things transpired: First, that the party sending it came forward and filed a bond to cover the cost of the proceeding, and, secondly, that upon his showing the court made an affirmative order canceling the order of the Postmaster General. In other words, Mr. President, the party has no relief under this amendment until he has satisfied the court prima facie that it ought to go through, because until he does satisfy the court that as a prima facie case it ought to go through, it continues to be under the control of the Postmaster General, and this does not modify section 3 at all. It leaves just as it is the designation as to the kind of literature which is to be excluded and it leaves the Postmaster General the sole judge in the first instance and the sole judge continually unless a Federal court shall, upon a showing, cancel the order and restore it to the mails.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BORAH. Just a moment. I will yield, with pleasure, in a moment. Now, speaking with the utmost respect for Federal courts and not intending what I say to be a criticism, I do not believe that any man will assume for a moment that any mail matter will ever get by a Federal judge unless it is clearly beyond the terms of the law; but the virtue of this amendment is that it gives the party a de novo hearing, so that it will be impossible for those orders to be made which are often made by the heads of bureaus without a proper hearing and without an opportunity for the individual himself to be heard in such a way that he actually can be heard. I do not see upon what theory we can deny people a hearing.

I now yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I merely wished to ask the Senator what the status of the obnoxious literature would be between the time of giving the bond and the time of the decision by the Federal court?

Mr. BORAH. It remains excluded under the order of the Postmaster General. Of course, I want to say again that this amendment does not represent my view as to what we should do. There are some fundamental principles involved in this matter which, if I am able to do so, I expect to discuss later; but this is all of which I have any hope of getting anything like successful consideration, and it does do this: It has this virtue, which I think is a very great virtue, that it gives the party a hearing before a tribunal which is in no wise concerned with the original proceeding.

Mr. President, the learned Solicitor General of the department has written the Senator from South Dakota a letter concerning this amendment, a copy of which he has handed to me. The Solicitor General says:

> There would seem to be no occasion for this amendment, as anyone aggrieved at an order of the Postmaster General may now at once file a bill in equity to restrain the execution of the order of the department, and in this way bring before the court the identical matter upon which the department has ruled.

Of course, everyone knows the vast difference between giving a man under a statute, as a matter of right, a hearing de novo upon the filing of a bond for the mere covering of costs and giving him the right to go into court and ask a court of equity to review the discretion of the head of a department of the Government. One is an assured, practical proposition. The other is almost impossible, in view of the law which the court has announced with reference to reviewing the discretion of a department of the Government—a principle of law which I presume is well founded—but involving a presumption that the party asking for a hearing must overcome. In addition to that, a party situated in your part of the country and mine, situated away from Washington, is denied a hearing by the very circumstances, the physical conditions which surround the hearing. It is a practical impossibility, unless he is a man of great wealth and great means, to bring a proceeding for review of the matter in a court of equity, when the party resides, for instance, in Idaho or Montana or Colorado, and the Postmaster General is here at Washington. This amendment gives him a hearing before the district court of the district in which he resides; and in the meantime the Postmaster General has full charge of the matter, and the mail continues to go through.

> In such proceeding, a temporary restraining order may be issued by the court upon the filing of such a bill.

I again say that the rule which is invoked in order to secure such a temporary restraining order makes it burdensome and almost impossible for a party to avail himself of it, especially if he lives any distance from Washington.

> In such cases there can be no dispute as to the facts, because the matter to be passed upon, both by the department and the court, is the document itself, and the question of law as to whether or not it is nonmailable is raised upon the face of the document.

I have gone through some of these cases which the Postmaster General has had up; and the position which he takes with reference to his discretion, which he contends is practically conclusive if it should be sustained—and it has been sustained to some extent—would amount to a refusal of a hearing under the theory now advanced by the Solicitor General, whereas the amendment which I propose gives it to the party as a matter of right, and does not require him to invoke the power of the court to review the discretion of the Postmaster General, but specifically provides that the hearing shall be de novo. The question of the discretion of the department is eliminated, and the party affected may therefore present his case the same as he would in the first instance to the Postmaster General.

> The remedy proposed substitutes a court of law for the existing equity jurisdiction over the subject matter without providing any protection to the public against the dissemination of nonmailable matter in the mails while the proposed legal proceedings are pending.

The Solicitor General was correct as to the original amendment, because the original amendment provided that until the hearing should be had the order of the Postmaster General should be suspended, but after consultation with some of the Senators that is one of the things which I eliminated, so that he is in error, as the amendment is now presented, when he says that—

> The remedy proposed substitutes a court of law for the existing equity jurisdiction over the subject matter without providing any protection to the public against the dissemination of nonmailable matter in the mails while the proposed legal proceedings are pending.

Now, once the court affirmatively makes an order upon a showing, the matter continues to be excluded from the mails.

Mr. STERLING. Let me say to the Senator that at the time of the phone conversation had with the Solicitor for the Post Office Department on yesterday he had not seen the Senator's modified amendment.

Mr. BORAH. I understand that.

Mr. STERLING. I suppose the amendment he got hold of was the one that was first framed by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. I understand, of course, that the solicitor was writing upon the first amendment. He said, further:

> The proposed amendment would also place the execution of a Federal statute and the acts of a Federal officer under the supervision of State courts, which would be quite a departure in laws of this character.

That has been eliminated, so that that no longer is an objection, if it ever was a valid objection.

He concludes by saying:

> My judgment is that in the present condition of affairs in this country equity courts alone can properly protect the public interests.

That, of course, Mr. President, is still pertinent, because the amendment provides a hearing under the statute instead of in a court of equity. The fact is that the courts of equity do not provide any remedy at all to a very large proportion of those who may be affected by these orders.

What class of people, Mr. President, would this amendment protect? It would not protect, in the first place, any of those who send literature through the mails which they do not sponsor, with which they are not identified, and the authorship of which can not be ascertained, nor would they be able to avail themselves of its terms. All the nom de plume or irresponsible matter which goes through the mails would continue to be solely under the jurisdiction of the Postmaster General. He could exclude it, as he could under the bill if it passes as reported by the committee. So that kind of literature is not covered by the amendment.

Neither, Mr. President, would it cover that class of people who send such literature through the mail as no man would undertake to defend before a Federal court. If it was literature which was confessedly and clearly literature advocating the overthrow of the Government by force, or which a reasonable man would conclude would have that effect, the party would be wholly without any protection under this amendment, because even if he filed his bond, the mail matter continues to be excluded until the court makes an affirmative order, upon a showing, that the order should be suspended.

Mr. President, it can only protect that class of publishers and writers who in good faith contend that they are without the provisions of the law; and without seeming to criticize the present Postmaster General, it would protect that class who claim that their material may be excluded from the mails for reasons other than the reasons specified in the law.

It is no secret, Mr. President, that ever since these different statutes have been upon the statute book different Postmasters General have been charged with exercising the power arbitrarily and to the great injury of people who in good faith were conducting publishing houses and printing newspapers and magazines, and if the parties believe in their cause, and think that they can show a judge that they are without the terms of the law, I think they ought to have a hearing.

Now, Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator who has charge of the bill that while there are some general features which I want to discuss in regard to general propositions, I am not in a condition physically to do it to-day. I would prefer that the bill should go over, not alone on my own account, because I would not urge it if I stood alone, but there are Senators absent who want to be here to say something on the bill, although very briefly, they tell me, and to vote upon it. I will ask the Senator from South Dakota if it is his intention to go ahead with the bill to-day and complete it?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, in answer to the Senator from Idaho, I will say that I would like to proceed as far as we can with the consideration of this bill to-day. I do not expect that we can reach a vote to-day on the bill, and possibly not to-morrow. I think it probable, I will say to the Senator now, that I shall not desire that the bill be voted upon to-morrow.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STERLING. I would not like to say at this moment absolutely that I shall not ask for a vote to-morrow, but I am just giving the Senator from Idaho my impression that a vote will not be reached before the first of next week.

Mr. KING. May I make an inquiry of the Senator? My understanding was, and I would like to have the Senator from South Dakota confirm it if it is correct, that the bill was, by a sort of common consent, and through the courtesy of the Senator from Minnesota, to have the right of way to-day.

Mr. STERLING. Yes; that was the understanding, I will say to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Of course, if the discussion were concluded before the usual hour of adjournment this afternoon, I presume a vote would be taken.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me also?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have two amendments that I wish to offer, and I shall have something to say about them; but I am hardly ready to proceed to-day, and if it is possible I would like to have the bill go over until to-morrow. However, I will speak on it to-day rather than discommode the Members of the Senate, if it is necessary for me to go on to-day.

Mr. STERLING. I can assure the Senator from Idaho that the bill will not be pressed to a vote to-day, and we will determine to-morrow as to the course to be followed.

Mr. BORAH. I dislike very much to ask for any delay, and I do not think I would do so in my own interest, although I am in such condition that I certainly could not go ahead with the debate to-day. If the matter is not coming to a vote to-day, I think possibly the Senators who desire to speak may be here to-morrow in time, if the Senator from South Dakota wants to dispose of it, and I will undertake to conclude what I have to say on the general proposition within an hour.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Idaho whether he knows of any reason why it might not be disposed of to-morrow? Does he anticipate that the debate will be so protracted that it may not be disposed of to-morrow?

Mr. BORAH. I have not any intention of protracting it just simply for the purpose of protracting it. Some Senators who are absent want to be here. I understood the Senator from South Dakota to say that he would not ask for a vote to-day.

Mr. STERLING. I shall not ask for a vote to-day, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. KING. I understand the Senator from South Dakota expects that there will be discussion this afternoon by the opponents of the bill, to present their views.

Mr. STERLING. I understand there will be discussion this afternoon. I understand the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE] expects to go ahead this afternoon.

Mr. BORAH. Whether the discussion continues all the afternoon or not, the Senator will not ask for a vote to-day?

Mr. STERLING. It is understood, I will say to the Senator from Idaho, that we shall not have a vote to-day.

Mr. FRANCE addressed the Senate. After having spoken for a few minutes,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is House bill 3184.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside for the discussion of the so-called sedition bill, and that the water-power bill shall not lose its place as the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRANCE resumed and concluded his speech, which entire is as follows:

Mr. President, I do not wish to occupy very much time in the discussion of this bill, because I realize the utter futility of seeking to defeat it. I merely wish to register my protest against it as a piece of legislation which seems to me both unwise and unnecessary. If this bill is what it purports to be—a measure making direct incitation to force and violence against the Government a crime—it is wholly unnecessary. If it is what it appears to be, really a peace-time sedition act, it is entirely unjustifiable.

I think it is incumbent upon the chairman of the Judiciary Committee or any Senator who is in charge of such a bill as this, when bringing it into the Senate, to show the necessity for the legislation. Personally I consider it to be a vicious practice for the Congress to enact legislation making that a crime which is already a crime under statutes which have been upon the statute books for many years. Such a practice tempts Senators to yield to temporary popular hysteria and to bring in legislation which is entirely unnecessary, and it must result in the encumbering of the statute books with statutes wholly unnecessary.

This bill purports to be a bill making direct incitation to the use of force and violence against the Government a crime. If it be true that the bill is no more than that, it should not receive, in my judgment, any serious consideration. In the first place, we have the common law and the State laws which cover the crime of direct incitation to force and violence.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to correct him there? Our Supreme Court has long ago decided that we have no common-law offenses in the United States, as they have in England. All our offenses are statutory offenses.

Mr. FRANCE. Offenses against the Federal Government, of course, are statutory; but I am referring to the State laws.

Mr. NELSON. I think in most of the States they have no common-law criminal jurisdiction.

Mr. FRANCE. I have great respect for the judgment of the Senator, but I have been under the impression that the State courts did pay great respect to the old common law.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, many States have their civil and criminal codes, and those codes will govern, and there is a question as to whether or not common-law sedition would prevail in the code States, where they have codes.

Mr. FRANCE. I am perfectly aware of the fact that there is no common law against sedition in this country. One of the purposes of the American Revolution was to do away with the old doctrine that sedition was a crime under the English common law, and I may refer to that a little later. I was referring in my remarks particularly to the State codes, which, of course, make either the direct use of force or violence against the Government, or against the person, or direct incitation to force or violence, a crime. But my point was this: There are already upon the Federal statute books ample statutes to cover direct incitation to force or violence.

We have, first, of course, the treason statute. Either the use of force or violence against the Government, or direct incitation to force or violence, is nothing less than treason. We have, first, the treason statute, from which I will quote:

Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid or comfort, within the United States or elsewhere is guilty of treason.

Of course, treason is punishable by heavy fines or by imprisonment, by fines and imprisonment, or by death.

We have, of course, the statute, and I will put a reference to the statute in the RECORD.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Maryland whether or not he thinks the penal statutes of the United States cover anything involved in the pending bill? You can not change the Constitution by statutes. The statute provides that treason shall consist solely of levying war against the United States. The advocacy of the overthrow of Government by force or by violence is not the levying of war.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, the discussion of that question would lead us, I think, into so many legal subtleties that it would be wholly unprofitable. I believe myself that the very essence of waging war against the Government is the use of force or violence against it or by the use of direct incitation to force and violence, and it seems to me that some of the acts provided for in this particular measure come very close to falling within the treason statute.

I would also cite the statute against inciting or engaging in rebellion or insurrection against the United States:

Whoever incites, sets on foot, assists, or engages in any rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the United States or the laws thereof, or give aid or comfort thereto, shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined not more than $10,000, or both; and shall, moreover, be incapable of holding any office under the United States. (Act Mar. 4, 1919, ch. 321, sec. 4, 35 Stat., 1088.)

Then we have the civil rights act, which provides:

If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same, or if two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured, they shall be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than 10 years, and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to any office or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States. (Act Mar. 4, 1909, ch. 321, sec. 19, 35 Stat., 1092.)

Then we have, of course, the general conspiracy statute, from which I quote as follows:

If two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, each of the parties to such conspiracy shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both. (Act Mar. 4, 1919, ch. 321, sec. 37, 35 Stat., 1096.)

Then we have the joint principals act, which provides that—

Whoever directly commits any act constituting an offense defined in any law of the United States, or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures its commission, is a principal. (Act Mar. 4, 1909, ch. 321, sec. 332, 35 Stat., 1152.)

Then we have the threats-against-the-President act, passed in 1917, from which I quote as follows:

Any person who knowingly and willfully deposits or causes to be deposited for conveyance in the mail or for delivery from any post office or by any letter carrier any letter, paper, writing, print, missive, or document containing any threat to take the life of or to inflict bodily harm upon the President of the United States, or who knowingly and willfully makes any such threat against the President, shall upon conviction be fined not exceeding $1,000 or imprisoned not exceeding five years, or both. (Act Feb. 14, 1917, ch. 64, 39 Stat., 919.)

Then, of course, we have the espionage act, the operation of which will be suspended upon the termination of the war. I will not read the extracts from the espionage act which cover these particular actions which are made crimes under the pending bill, but I will ask leave to insert extracts from the espionage act and also from the explosives act which governs the distribution and transportation of explosives.

Mr. NORRIS. May I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. FRANCE. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. Are the extracts from the espionage act very lengthy? Would the Senator object to having them read now as he proceeds. I of course do not object to the Senator having them printed, if he desires, but I think it would be enlightening if those extracts which the Senator intends to print from the espionage act should be read. We are all more or less familiar with them, but I should like to have them read again.

Mr. FRANCE. I will read first, at the request of the Senator from Nebraska, the treasonable mail matter section of the espionage act, which is practically identical with the provisions of the pending bill, which section is, of course, in force until the war has been officially terminated by proclamation. It reads as follows:

Every letter, writing, circular, postal card, picture, print, engraving, photograph, newspaper, pamphlet, book, or other publication, matter, or thing, of any kind, containing any matter advocating or urging treason, insurrection, or forcible resistance to any law of the United States, is hereby declared to be nonmailable.

Whoever shall use or attempt to use the mails or Postal Service of the United States for the transmission of any matter declared by this title to be nonmailable shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both. (Act June 15, 1917, ch. 30, Title XII, secs. 2 and 3.)

I have not at the moment in my hand the espionage act, so called, and the act amendatory thereof, from which I had intended to read those portions which have been used to censor the press and to put so great a limitation upon the freedom of speech during the war.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator will have those printed later on?

Mr. FRANCE. Yes; I ask permission to have those printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission is granted.

The extracts referred to are as follows:

[Public No. 150, Sixty-fifth Congress, H. R. 8753.]

An act to amend section 3, Title I, of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of Title I of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. Whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully make or convey false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies, or shall willfully make or convey false reports or false statements, or say or do anything except by way of bona fide and not disloyal advice to an investor or investors, with intent to obstruct the sale by the United States of bonds or other securities of the United States or the making of loans by or to the United States, and whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully cause, or attempt to cause, or incite or attempt to incite, insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, or refusal of duty in the military or naval forces of the United States, or shall willfully obstruct or attempt to obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service of the United States, and whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully utter, print, write, or publish any disloyal, profane, scurrilous, or abusive language about the form of government of the United States, or the Constitution of the United States, or the military or naval forces of the United States, or the flag of the United States, or the uniform of the Army or Navy of the United States, or any language intended to bring the form of government of the United States, or the Constitution of the United States, or the military or naval forces of the United States, or the flag of the United States, or the uniform of the Army or Navy of the United States into contempt, scorn, contumely, or disrepute, or shall willfully utter, print, write, or publish any language intended to incite, provoke, or encourage resistance to the United States, or to promote the cause of its enemies, or shall willfully display the flag of any foreign enemy, or shall willfully by utterance, writing, printing, publication, or language spoken, urge, incite, or advocate any curtailment of production in this country of any thing or things, product or products, necessary or essential to the prosecution of the war in which the United States may be engaged, with intent by such curtailment to cripple or hinder the United States in the prosecution of the war, and whoever shall willfully advocate, teach, defend, or suggest the doing of any of the acts or things in this section enumerated, and whoever shall by word or act support or favor the cause of any country with which the United States is at war or by word or act oppose the cause of the United States therein, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both: Provided, That any employee or official of the United States Government who commits any disloyal act or utters any unpatriotic or disloyal language, or who, in an abusive and violent manner, criticizes the Army or Navy or the flag of the United States shall be at once dismissed from the service. Any such employee shall be dismissed by the head of the department in which the employee may be engaged, and any such official shall be dismissed by the authority having power to appoint a successor to the dismissed official."

SEC. 2. That section 1 of Title XII and all other provisions of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, which apply to section 3 of Title I thereof shall apply with equal force and effect to said section 3 as amended.

Title XII of the said act of June 15, 1917, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following section:

"SEC. 4. When the United States is at war, the Postmaster General may, upon evidence satisfactory to him that any person or concern is using the mails in violation of any of the provisions of this act, instruct the postmaster at any post office at which mail is received addressed to such person or concern to return to the postmaster at the office at which they were originally mailed all letters or other matter so addressed, with the words 'Mail to this address undeliverable under espionage act' plainly written or stamped upon the outside thereof, and all such letters or other matter so returned to such postmasters shall be by them returned to the senders thereof under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe."

Approved, May 16, 1918.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I have placed in the RECORD extracts from the statutes which seem to me to fully cover those acts which are to be made crimes under the proposed legislation. Before discussing this statute more in detail I desire to refer to the general subject of the unrest which exists in the country.

I was one of those who in last January, February, and March contended that there should be called immediately upon the 5th day of March an extra session of the Congress to deal with the serious problems of reconstruction which were then upon us. That extra session was not called for the 5th of March, and valuable weeks were lost before the Congress was reconvened. When it was again assembled it, of course, faced the duty of enacting the great appropriation bills, and very shortly the peace treaty was brought before it, with the result, Mr. President, that none of the great problems of reconstruction which confronted us last January, February, and March have received any serious consideration at the hands of Congress, nor have we enacted remedial legislation for their meeting and for their solving.

In the resolution which I offered on the 28th day of last February, which resolution would have declared it to be the judgment of the Senate that the Congress should be called into extra session on the 5th day of March, I directed attention to the serious unrest which existed in the country, to the unemployment, to the dangerous illiteracy, to the preventable disease, ill health and injury, to the deplorable poverty, to the underproduction and faulty distribution of the necessities and commodities of life, to the high cost of living which resulted therefrom, and to the many other undesirable conditions which then existed and which threatened to become more intolerable. I pointed out the imperative need for remedial legislation for the meeting of those conditions.

During all of the last months the conditions have been growing more and more intolerable. We have witnessed in the country from day to day the spread of the profound discontent which finds its expression, of course, either in mild criticism of governmental policies on the part of the most intelligent, in more drastic criticism on the part of those who are intemperate, and in threats of violence against the Government on the part of those poor, misguided ones who, because of their ignorance and their lack of training, do not know how futile it is to attempt to bring about reforms through the use of force.

Mr. President, those who are opposing this bill condemn as severely as could any others those who threaten the use of force or violence or those who advocate the use of force or violence against the Government of the United States, but we believe—at least, I believe, speaking for myself—that we have upon the statute books legislation ample to deal with those who threaten or those who incite to the use of force or violence against the Government.

In this whole discussion I feel that it is very important for us to remember that the failure of our legislators has done much to put weapons both into the mouths and into the hands of agitators.

Mr. President, revolutions are not caused by agitations and conversations against the Government. They are caused always by unsatisfactory social conditions. We should remember that discontent can not be cured by repression; it must be eradicated by reforms. It seems to me, from my standpoint, that the man who favors repressive legislation is generally apt to be the stanchest opponent of corrective statutes. It seems to me that all such repressive legislation as the espionage act—and this bill of course is a very similar act in some of its provisions—arises out of the policy of reaction which relies on repression and refuses reforms. However fair his phrases may be, the man who believes in the suppression of free speech and in the censorship of press is a man who believes in autocracy, which is government by repression instead of democracy, which is of course government by discussion and by that free and fearless expression which leads to the proper reformation through legislation.

I am not one of those who tremble at every slight agitation against our Government. I regret and deplore the folly of such agitators, and yet personally I feel inclined to place some of the blame upon the legislators who have failed to utilize truly educative and eradicative measures against such irrational doctrines as those which are preached by the agitators.

Suppression is not eradication. It simply drives the evil forces in a new direction and causes them to operate beneath the surface where, hidden and smoldering, they are even more dangerous. I have believed that there was no danger to this Government from those who would use force or violence against it. Whenever the destruction of our Government by force or violence, either from within or without, has been attempted, strong arms have been raised for its protection. I have believed that the Republic, which I have considered to be the strongest citadel of human freedom, would never fall through assault from without, but I have sometimes feared that it might possibly be disintegrated by the insidious assaults of legislators who might be tempted at a time such as this to disregard the fundamental law and forget the fact that this is a free Government founded upon free discussion and upon a free expression of opinion.

I have pointed out that there are already laws upon the Federal statute books which make a crime of incitation to the use of force or violence, and, of course, a crime also to use force or violence itself against the Government. That being the case, it seems to me it would be most unwise at a time such as this to enact a statute which might be used for the repression of a free expression of opinion and which might be interpreted by the great masses of our people as being enacted to inhibit agitation for proper and legitimate reform. That this act is so considered there can be no doubt. From all over the country I have been receiving letters from individuals, from associations, and particularly from labor organizations, protesting against the enactment of this bill into law.

In order that the Senate may be acquainted with the views of the working people upon this proposed statute I feel that there should be read into the RECORD one or two typical letters from labor organizations protesting against the bill. Here, for example, is one from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, office 44 East Twelfth Street, New York City. I will read the body of the resolution adopted by that organization:

Whereas there is now pending before the Senate of the United States a bill known as bill 3317 and a similar bill in the House of Representatives; and

Whereas these bills provide for the extension of the war-time espionage act with all its vicious restraints, which, though it was aimed against German spies, was only used to curtail and restrict, directly and indirectly, the legitimate activities of labor unions; and

Whereas the espionage act was an emergency measure to help win the war, and only as such was it tolerated by labor; and

Whereas there is no need of extending this repressive measure unless it be the desire and object of the Government to pass laws in favor of the vested interests, as only they are interested in the passage of this bill; and

Whereas such laws, if passed, are contrary to the spirit and to the traditions of our country: Be it therefore

Resolved, That we strongly condemn Senate bill 3317 and its companion bill in the House of Representatives as an antilabor bill and urge the Senators of our State to vote against it.

Here is another letter from the United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. FRANCE. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I have listened to the letter which the Senator has just read. I hope the Senator from Maryland, who is an able, patriotic Senator, does not approve of the manifest untruths and distortions of fact that are contained in that letter. In the first place, it states, as I recall, that the so-called espionage bill was aimed at labor. That is absolutely untrue. If not unparliamentary, I should use a shorter word in describing the statements of the writer or of the organization from which that statement originates. Everybody knows that the espionage bill had no relation to labor organizations and was not aimed at them.

The labor organizations of the United States have been and still are loyal to our country; during the war the genuine workingman of the United States, whether a member of a labor union or not, was as loyal and patriotic as any other man, and in the ranks of labor were found as devoted and patriotic men as our Nation produced. The espionage bill was not repressive legislation; it was not class legislation; it was legislation which was proper and which any government that was interested in its own preservation would enact under the same circumstances. Much of the legislation, or some of the legislation, contained in the act referred to is as applicable in times of peace as in times of war.

The statement of the writer of the letter is also untrue when he says that the bill to which reference is made, namely, Senate bill 3317, is a bill only desired by the vested interests. The distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], the distinguished Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING], and myself were appointed a subcommittee by the Judiciary Committee to consider a number of bills dealing with the question of sedition and movements looking to the overthrow of our Government by force and violence. In the consideration of those bills the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from South Dakota manifested, as they always have, their regard for law and order, for the rights of the workingman and for the rights of American citizens generally, and for the preservation of our Government and its institutions. This bill is for the purpose of striking at those, whether they are laboring men or capitalists, whether they are intellectualists or otherwise, whether they belong to the "parlor" Bolsheviki or to the loud-mouthed, blatant street-corner revolutionist, who seek to destroy by force and violence our Government. If any laboring man, belonging to a union or otherwise, is in favor of destroying our Government by force and violence, he is not a true American citizen; he is not fit to live under this flag; he is not fit to enjoy the benefits which flow from a constitutional government such as that under which we live; and I hope, for the credit of the distinguished Senator from Maryland, that he does not give his approval to the expressions in that letter, or indorse the vicious, un-American, unpatriotic, destructive views that are voiced by the so-called labor organization.

I thank the Senator for permitting the interruption.

Mr. FRANCE. The Senator is a very distinguished lawyer and a member of the Judiciary Committee, and, of course, the remarks which he has made bear out my continual contention in this body that all of the learning and all of the intelligence of the country is not lodged in those gentlemen who happen to be members of legislative bodies. As a matter of fact, I ought to have on my desk a recent editorial from the Baltimore Sun which referred to the fact that probably one of the reasons why it would be unwise, in the opinion of the members of the Judiciary Subcommittee, to repeal the espionage law at this time was the fact that the espionage act contained a clause which evidently the Senator has overlooked when he calls attention to the misstatement in this resolution that it contained a clause which was in effect an antistrike clause, making it a crime to limit production. I have not the language of the act before me at the moment, but I will insert it in the RECORD. So that, as a matter of fact, the Senator is mistaken, and the writer of the resolution is not mistaken, when the Senator contends that there was nothing in the espionage act which might be used to curtail the liberties and activities of the labor unions, this writer evidently having in mind that particular clause of the espionage act which might be called an antistrike clause. Whether or not it be true that it was because of that clause in the espionage act that it was deemed unwise by the subcommittee to repeal it I can not say, but certainly one of the great daily papers in my own State gave that as a possible reason why the subcommittee might not care to repeal the act. In other words, both in the food-control bill and in the espionage act, there were placed clauses which made it possible for the Government to take out injunctions against strikes.

I voted against both of the bills. I thought they went too far. I thought they tended to cause disunion rather than union and harmony in our prosecution of the war. But, leaving that question entirely aside, the fact does remain that there was a clause in the espionage act, aside from the free-speech and free-press clause, which was capable of being used to curtail the activities of the labor unions.

So far as concerns our laboring people being inclined to use force or violence or to advocate the use of force or violence against our Government, I am the last man who believes that there is any disposition of that kind in the minds or hearts of the vast majority of our people; and it is because I believe that our laboring people are free from any such disposition as that that I feel that it would be unwise at this time to enact a statute which seemed to attribute to them motives of that character, and which seemed to indicate that the Government was in danger from acts of violence, or threats of acts of violence.

However, the Senator, having been out of the Chamber, missed the point of my remarks. I read extracts from statutes showing that the acts which are made crimes under this proposed legislation are already crimes, and I was making the point that it seemed to me unwise at this time to enact into law a bill which really did not in any sense strengthen the criminal statutes already upon our statute books, and yet which at the same time was considered by the masses of our people to be inimical to their interests. That is the whole point which I was making, and that is the point which, it seems to me, is being missed by the Congress in all of the legislation of this character which is being enacted. The thing which disturbs me about this whole situation is that so many thousands and hundreds of thousands of our people—indeed, so many millions of our people—are coming to look upon our Government with distrust and fear, and, indeed, some of them even with hatred, as the result of legislation which we have enacted which has impinged upon some of the liberties which our people enjoyed prior to the war.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit another interruption?

Mr. FRANCE. I yield, with pleasure.

Mr. KING. I apologize to the Senator for interrupting him, but in view of the letter which the Senator read and the statement which I made, it occurs to me that persons reading the RECORD might obtain an entirely erroneous idea as to what the espionage act was; will the Senator therefore permit me, in a very few words, to put into the RECORD just what the espionage act is which the gentleman whose letter the Senator read inveighs against so strongly?

Mr. FRANCE. Does the Senator wish to insert the whole act and the acts amendatory thereof?

Mr. KING. Oh, no; my purpose is to merely state the substance of its provisions.

Mr. FRANCE. I have not the slightest objection to the Senator inserting at this point a copy of the espionage act. However, unless he puts in the portions to which we were referring, I fail to see how it can be advantageous to insert it in the RECORD.

Mr. KING. Exactly; but the bill is so long, and deals with other subjects than those which the Senator is discussing, that it would not be advantageous to put it in; but if the Senator does not object, I should like to briefly state what that part of the espionage act is which evidently the writer of the letter had in mind. I have the act before me.

Mr. President, the espionage act to which the writer of the letter referred was approved June 15, 1917. The first title, in substance, provides that whoever, for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the national defense with intent or reason to believe that the information to be obtained is to be used to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of any foreign nation, goes upon, enters, flies over, or otherwise obtains information concerning any vessel, aircraft, coaling station, and so forth, shall be guilty of an offense.

Then it further provides that whoever, for the purpose aforesaid, and with like intent or reason to believe, copies, takes, makes, or obtains, or attempts or induces or aids another to copy, take, make, or obtain, any sketch, photograph, and so forth, of any of the forts or plans for the national defense, or who attempts to dispose of it to the enemy, shall be guilty of an offense; or whoever, lawfully or unlawfully having possession of, access to, or control over any document, writing, code book, signal book, and those matters that pertain to the war, willfully communicates or transmits, or attempts to communicate or transmit, the same to any person not entitled to receive the same, or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver such document to the United States upon demand, shall be guilty of an offense.

Then it proceeds with other like offenses. That is, dealing with the conveying of information to the enemy. Certainly no member of a labor union objects to that part of the espionage act.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator to say that he did not object?

Mr. KING. I say, certainly he could not object to that.

Mr. FRANCE. That was the portion of the act which he said had not been invoked—the portion which dealt with espionage proper.

Mr. KING. I beg the Senator's pardon; I am not sure that I understood his last observation.

Mr. FRANCE. The statement in the letter was to the effect that the law had not been used for the prosecution of German spies, and of course that portion of the act from which the Senator has been reading is the portion of the act designed for the punishment of those who should be spies for Germany against this country.

Mr. KING. Yes; or who were communicating any information, perhaps not to Germany, but communicating it to other persons in such a way as that it possibly might be used disadvantageously to our Government. Of course, I deny that statement, because to my own knowledge this act was invoked, and was effectively utilized.

Then it provides that whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully make or convey false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies, and whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully cause or attempt to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, or refusal of duty in the military or naval forces of the United States, or shall willfully obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service of the United States, to the injury of the service or of the United States, shall be punished, and so forth.

Certainly no patriotic working man or any American who is worthy of the name "American" could object to that. Berger, and men of his character, might object to that, and as I understand have objected to it, and will doubtless continue to object to statutes of that character.

Section 4 provides that if two or more persons conspire to violate the provisions of the foregoing section, to which I have referred, they shall be amenable to the law. That is to say, if there is a conspiracy to commit the overt act, the conspiracy shall be likewise punishable.

Mr. FRANCE. In order that there may be no misunderstanding, I will say that I think the portions of the espionage act which were considered by the writers of these letters to be unfavorable to labor were those portions dealing with the curtailment of production, which were considered to constitute an antistrike clause, and those portions which placed a limitation upon free speech and free assemblage, as the law was enforced by the Department of Justice.

Mr. KING. Just a word or two more, with the Senator's permission.

Title II deals with vessels in ports of the United States, and provides punishment for the violation of proclamations of the President in dealing with commerce. Of course, in time of war, it is obvious that there must be some control over vessels coming into and leaving the ports of the United States, and there must be penal provisions so that those who violate proclamations that may be made by the President in the interest of the prosecution of the war shall be punished.

Title III relates to injuring vessels engaged in foreign commerce. Certainly no laboring man could object to that.

Title IV provides that—whoever, with intent to prevent, interfere with, or obstruct, or attempt to prevent, interfere with, or obstruct the exportation to foreign countries of articles from the United States, shall injure or destroy, by fire or explosives, such articles or the places where they may be while in such foreign commerce, shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.

The Senator knows that during the war there were a number of explosions upon our boats and upon the ships of our allies that came to our ports and departed from our ports. The evidence lends to show that bombs and other explosives were placed there, of course, by German spies, or those who sought the triumph of our enemies, not the victory of the American arms.

Title V relates to the enforcement of neutrality. Certainly no one could object to the enforcement of laws and regulations dealing with this subject.

Mr. FRANCE. Do I understand the Senator is assuming that the writer of the letter did object to all those portions of the law?

Mr. KING. The writer of the letter does not differentiate between any portions of the act. He denounces the whole espionage act, and says in substance that the espionage law was enacted against labor, and I am calling attention to the general provisions of this act to show how unjust and untrue is the statement of the writer of the letter which the Senator read.

Mr. FRANCE. The Senator did not correctly understand the language of the writer. I know it is very difficult to catch the exact wording as the letter is read. The resolution stated that it was aimed against German spies, but was only used to curtail and restrict, directly or indirectly, the activities of labor unions. Of course, that is a statement which would be subject to modification, even by the writer, I am sure. However, the point is that those portions of the act which were considered to be hostile to labor were the portions which I have mentioned, those portions making curtailment of production a crime—it is, of course, an antistrike clause—and those portions which limited the right of free speech and free assemblage, those rights having been denied to the workingmen of the country during the period of the war on many occasions.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will permit me, there are just a few other sections to which I should like to refer, so that the general purport of the act may be in the RECORD in connection with what I have said, and I shall be glad if I may be permitted to briefly refer to them.

Title VI relates to seizure of arms and other articles intended for export, and provides penalties for the violation of those provisions of the section.

Title VII provides that certain exports in time of war shall be unlawful. It provides that—

Whenever there is reasonable cause to believe that any vessel, domestic or foreign, is about to carry out of the United States any article or articles in violation of the provisions of this title, the collector of customs—may seize the same.

Title VIII relates to acts tending to disturb foreign relations.

Title IX relates to passports.

Title X relates to the counterfeiting of the Government seal.

Title XI relates to search warrants, and provides in the usual way that when property was stolen or embezzled in violation of a law of the United States, and when property was used as a means of committing a felony, as, for instance, the use of counterfeit dies, and so forth, that in the proper manner and under very strict provisions search warrants might be issued. No one, certainly, could object to that.

Probably this is what the writer refers to particularly, the use of the mails, In Title XII it is provided that—

Every letter, writing, circular, postal card, picture, print, engraving, photograph, newspaper, pamphlet, book, or other publication, matter or thing, of any kind, in violation of any of the provisions of this act is hereby declared to be nonmailable matter and shall not be conveyed in the mails or delivered from any post office—

And so forth.

Certainly no American could object to a statute of that character. It says:

Every letter, writing, circular, postal card, picture, print, engraving, photograph, newspaper, pamphlet, book, or other publication, matter or thing of any kind, containing any matter advocating or urging treason, insurrection, or forcible resistance to any law of the United States, is hereby declared to be nonmailable.

And the person mailing such writings and publications so declared to be nonmailable is guilty of an offense. Mr. President, how any American can object to those provisions is something that surpasses my understanding.

A supplemental act was approved May 16, 1918, and it is this act which more particularly the writer of the letter had in mind.

Mr. FRANCE. I was about to say that it was the act amendatory of the espionage act which was much more drastic, and which was very objectionable as it was enforced.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not take the time to read this, though it is very brief, but I will ask permission of the Senator to have it inserted at this point in his remarks, or in my remarks, in the RECORD, so that persons reading the speech of the distinguished Senator—and I know it will be read by many people—may know just exactly the character of the legislation which the writer of the letter so strongly denounces.

There being no objection, the act referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Public No. 150, Sixty-fifth Congress, H. R. 8753.]

An act to amend section 3, title 1, of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of title 1 of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. Whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully make or convey false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies, or shall willfully make or convey false reports or false statements, or say or do anything except by way of bona fide and not disloyal advice to an investor or investors, with intent to obstruct the sale by the United States of bonds or other securities of the United States or the making of loans by or to the United States, and whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully cause, or attempt to cause, or incite or attempt to incite, insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, or refusal of duty, in the military or naval forces of the United States, or shall willfully obstruct or attempt to obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service of the United States, and whoever, when the United States is at war, shall willfully utter, print, write, or publish any disloyal, profane, scurrilous, or abusive language about the form of government of the United States, or the Constitution of the United States, or the military or naval forces of the United States, or the flag of the United States, or the uniform of the Army or Navy of the United States, or any language intended to bring the form of government of the United States, or the Constitution of the United States, or the military or naval forces of the United States, or the flag of the United States, or the uniform of the Army or Navy of the United States into contempt, scorn, contumely, or disrepute, or shall willfully utter, print, write, or publish any language intended to incite, provoke, or encourage resistance to the United States, or to promote the cause of its enemies, or shall willfully display the flag of any foreign enemy, or shall willfully, by utterance, writing, printing, publication, or language spoken, urge, incite, or advocate any curtailment of production in this country of any thing or things, product or products, necessary or essential to the prosecution of the war in which the United States may be engaged, with intent by such curtailment to cripple or hinder the United States in the prosecution of the war, and whoever shall willfully advocate, teach, defend, or suggest the doing of any of the acts or things in this section enumerated, and whoever shall by word or act support or favor the cause of any country with which the United States is at war or by word or act oppose the cause of the United States therein, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 20 years, or both: Provided, That any employee or official of the United States Government who commits any disloyal act or utters any unpatriotic or disloyal language, or who, in an abusive and violent manner criticizes the Army or Navy or the flag of the United States shall be at once dismissed from the service. Any such employee shall be dismissed by the head of the department in which the employee may be engaged, and any such official shall be dismissed by the authority having power to appoint a successor to the dismissed official."

SEC. 2. That section 1 of Title XII and all other provisions of the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, which apply to section 3 of Title I thereof shall apply with equal force and effect to said section 3 as amended.

Title XII of the said act of June 15, 1917, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following section:

"SEC. 4. When the United States is at war, the Postmaster General may, upon evidence satisfactory to him that any person or concern is using the mails in violation of any of the provisions of this act, instruct the postmaster at any post office at which mail is received addressed to such person or concern to return to the postmaster at the office at which they were originally mailed all letters or other matter so addressed, with the words 'Mail to this address undeliverable under espionage act' plainly written or stamped upon the outside thereof, and all such letters or other matter so returned to such postmasters shall be by them returned to the senders thereof under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe."

Approved, May 16, 1918.

Mr. FRANCE. The Senator is well aware of the fact that our working people, particularly the members of labor unions, have always been very jealous of the right of free speech and free press and free assemblage, and that they have always been very jealous of their right to strike. Without entering into the merits of the question as to whether the members of labor unions should be allowed to strike or not, I would say that they believe that the strike is the only weapon left for the securing, under certain conditions, of justice from their employers. In view of that well-grounded belief, of which the Senator is aware, he can scarcely be surprised that members of labor unions should find very objectionable that portion of the espionage act to which I have referred.

The act provides punishment for anyone who advocates any curtailment of production in this country of any product or products necessary or essential to the prosecution of the war, of course, practically all products being necessary to the prosecution of the war under modern conditions, and that clause in particular was considered by many—not merely by the labor unions themselves, but by some commentators on the law—as being an antistrike provision; and, in view of the Senator's knowledge of the jealousy on the part of labor unions of their rights to strike, he could scarcely be surprised that that particular clause should be considered to be hostile to the labor unions.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRANCE. I yield.

Mr. KING. I do not recall when the bill was before the Judiciary Committee or during the discussion of it upon the floor of the Senate hearing of a single workingman in the United States objecting to its provisions, and I am surprised to learn now from the distinguished Senator that there was objection to this provision. Let us see for just one moment what it provides. It says that any person who shall—encourage resistance to the United States, or to promote the cause of its enemies, or shall willfully display the flag of any foreign enemy, or shall willfully by utterance, writing, printing, publication, or language spoken urge, incite, or advocate any curtailment of production in this country of any thing or things, product or products, necessary or essential to the prosecution of the war in which the United States may be engaged, with intent by such curtailment to cripple or hinder the United States in the prosecution of the war, shall be guilty of an offense.

Mr. President, this Government was engaged in the greatest conflict of all time; not only our Nation but the cause of civilization was involved. I do not believe there was an American citizen of any labor organization, I do not believe that there was any man who loved his flag or loved our institutions, who objected to this provision of the statute which made it an offense to seek to incite the curtailment of the production of guns or foodstuffs or those things necessary to feed our soldiers and to arm them that they might obtain victory over the Central Powers. If there was a single man under this flag claiming to be an American who favored inciting men to fail to produce the things necessary to win the war, and with the intent by such curtailment to cripple or humble the United States in the prosecution of the war, he was a traitor to the Government, and should have been punished as a traitor.

Mr. FRANCE. I rejoice in the fact that the Senator's faith in American workingmen and in the masses of our people seems to be increasing. My faith in the loyalty of the American workingmen and in the masses of our people was so firm at the time the espionage act was before us that I voted against it, because I considered it to be an insult to the masses of our people and to the great host of the American workingmen, whose sons went to the front and won the war, while we sat here after having passed statutes which seemed to hurl insults into their teeth.

The espionage act was never necessary for the winning of the war by America, and its very enactment, and the very votes, it seems to me, of the men who voted for it, were an indication of a lack of faith in the soundness of our institutions and in the loyalty of all of our citizens.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRANCE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the genuine American workingman is entitled to all the praise that my friend with his eloquence can bestow upon him. The genuine American workingman needed no statute of this character, I agree with him, but there were men, as the Senator knows, of the I. W. W. stripe, men who were aliens, who were going into the logging camps, into the mining camps, where copper and lead were being produced, and into the factories, where clothing was being produced for our soldiers, and into the ordnance factories, where guns were being made, and seeking to provoke general strikes, and to curtail production in order to help Germany win the war. It was not the genuine workingman, it was not the member of the American Federation of Labor, who was aimed at in this statute, but it was the aliens who belonged to the I. W. W. organizations and similar ones, and some cowardly Americans who were untrue to our country, and who were traitors to the cause of liberty.

Mr. FRANCE. My faith went further than the Senator's. I did not even believe that those few agitators would succeed in corrupting the patriotism and loyalty of the great body of American workingmen. If they failed to corrupt it, if they failed to destroy their patriotism, their efforts must be futile. I believed they would be futile, and they were futile, and they were futile not because of any statute which we enacted but because of the essential soundness of our institutions, because of the essential soundness of government by discussion, because of the essential rationality and beneficence of this Government, which causes the masses of our people to love it and to rush to its defense when it is placed in danger.

As a matter of fact, the records show, and I am not going into it again, as I have already gone into it rather extensively on another occasion, that this act was not used for the punishment of men who were disloyal to the Government, but for the protection of men who were not doing what they should have done for the efficient conduct of the war, that it was used to shield high public officials who were refusing to promptly enact statutes which were necessary and who were not effectively putting into force the statutes which were enacted. I believe that harm was done our cause by the enactment of this law. Opinions may well differ upon that, but, as a matter of fact, I believe so firmly in government by the masses of people; I believe so firmly in the soundness of the judgment of all, that I am afraid to enact any statute which may be used by a government for the suppression of criticism of itself, and which may be used to place any limitation upon that free discussion and free assemblage upon which, of course, our Government rests.

There are two theories of government, of course, one that government is the master of the people and the other that it is the servant of the people; one that the government is the sovereign and the other that the people themselves are the sovereigns. Why, sirs, how can there be such a crime as sedition in a Government such as ours, which is truly founded upon the principle that the people themselves are sovereign? It seems to me that the very fact that the people themselves are the sovereigns, that they are the masters of their Government, should make us very careful in the enactment of legislation which would curtail their rights, which would silence their voices, so that they may not direct their servants and their agents to perform those governmental acts which they may consider to be to their interest.

However, this whole discussion has led us far away from the point. My point is that the bill is unnecessary, because we already have Federal statutes which cover the situation and which make crimes of those acts which are made crimes by the pending bill, and that in view of the fact that we have those statutes it seems to me unwise to enact a new statute which is so repugnant to the working people of our country and which, in their opinion—no matter how erroneous that opinion may be—will be used as a means to curtail their demands for a bettering of their conditions and for an improvement of the general conditions in the country.

In order to prove that there is a widespread criticism of the bill on the part of labor unions I had started to introduce certain letters from organized labor unions in different parts of the country. I ask now permission to insert a letter from the United Mine Workers of America, District No. 5, Whitsett, Pa., also one from Denning, Ark. I have picked out these letters merely to illustrate how widespread is the feeling against the pending legislation. I offer also one from the United Shoe Workers of America, Joint Council No. 9, of Chicago, Ill., also one from the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local Union No. 183, Peoria, Ill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WADSWORTH in the chair). Without objection, permission is granted as requested by the Senator from Maryland.

The letters referred to are as follows:

LOCAL UNION NO. 2057,
UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
Whitsett, Pa., December 18, 1919.

Hon. JOSEPH I. FRANCE.

SIR: It has been brought to our attention that the powers of reaction are trying to place most reactionary laws on the statute books of this country, and—

Whereas the right of free press and free speech and the right of assemblage are fundamental rights which are written in the Constitution of this country; and

Whereas Senate bill No. 3317 will soon be up for consideration, and we consider this bill as being dangerous to our constitutional rights: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Local Union No. 2057, United Mine Workers of America, representing over 350 coal miners, protest against Senate bill No. 3317 and urge you to use your vote and influence to defeat this bill.

[SEAL.]

JOHN STIFFY, President.
JAS. F. LEE, Recording Secretary.

—

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
LOCAL NO. 1814,
Denning, Ark., November 19, 1919.

Senators JOSEPH I. FRANCE, A. J. GRONNA, ROBERT H. LA FOLLETTE, WILLIAM J. BORAH, MEDILL MCCORMICK, THOMAS P. GORE, HIRAM W. JOHNSON, and GEORGE W. NORRIS.

GENTLEMEN: Local Union 1814, United Mine Workers of America, in regular meeting November 19, instructs us to write you protesting against Senate bill No. 3317, introduced by Senator STERLING.

These measures propose to carry over into peace time the vicious restraints contained in prewar measures. Quoting President Wilson in vetoing war-time prohibition, "Where the purposes of legislation arising out of war emergency have satisfied, sound public policy makes clear reason and necessity for repeal." In view of these facts, why necessary to pass other legislation of same nature? In view as members of organized labor, and believing that these laws would be used to our detriment, we ask that you use your vote and influence against same.

JAS. H. ARBAUGH, Recording Secretary.
J. HALLOWELL, Financial Secretary.

—

JOINT COUNCIL NO. 9,
THE UNITED SHOE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
Chicago, Ill., November 29, 1919.

Hon. JOSEPH I. FRANCE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: At regular meeting, Tuesday evening, November 25, 1919, of Local No. 14, of the United Shoe Workers of America, the membership strongly condemns and expresses its indignation that such measures as Senate bill 3317, introduced by Senator STERLING and at present on the Senate Calendar, should be considered in the Congress of a free people.

We urge that you use your influence and do all in your power to defeat such antiliberty legislation. We also urge that you do all in your power to effect the repeal of the espionage act.

Yours, very truly,

[SEAL.]

LARS FLIKEID,
Recording Secretary, Local No. 14, U. S. W. of A.

—

UNITED BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS AND JOINERS OF AMERICA,
LOCAL UNION, NO. 183,
Peoria, Ill., December 1, 1919.

Mr. JOSEPH I. FRANCE, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We wish to call your attention to the principle of legislation given by President Wilson in vetoing the war-time prohibition law: "Where the purpose of particular legislation arising out of war emergency have been satisfied, sound public policy makes clear the reason and necessity for repeal."

That principle should be applied to the antiliberty legislation, also the espionage act.

Local No. 183, Carpenters and Joiners of America, at Peoria, Ill., wish to protest to you against the Senate bill No. 3317, and its companion bill in the House of Representatives. These measures should not be considered in the Congress of a free people. Therefore we hope that you will use every effort to defeat this bill.

Respectfully, yours,

LOCAL NO. 183, U. B. OF C. AND J. OF A.,
[SEAL.] CHAS. W. DAVIDSON,
Secretary, 516 Monson Street.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I ask permission also to insert in the RECORD three very valuable editorials upon the general subject of free speech, one from the New York World of December 28, 1919, entitled "The tyranny of the majority"; one from the Baltimore Sun of January 4, 1920, entitled "The raiding of the reds"; and a third from the Baltimore Sun of Tuesday, January 6, 1920, entitled "Farragut's rule of conduct."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission is granted.

The editorials referred to are as follows:

[From the New York World, Dec. 28, 1919.]

THE TYRANNY OF THE MAJORITY.

More than 80 years ago the most profound of all students of American institutions, Alexis de Tocqueville, wrote this warning:

"If ever the free institutions of America are destroyed, that event may be attributed to the omnipotence of the majority, which may at some future time urge the minority to desperation and oblige them to have recourse to physical force. Anarchy will then be the result, but it will have been brought about by despotism."

And further:

"When I refuse to obey an unjust law I do not contest the right of the majority to command, but I simply appeal from the sovereignty of the people to the sovereignty of mankind. Some have not feared to assert that a people can never overstep the boundaries of justice and reason in those affairs which are peculiarly its own; and that, consequently, full power may be given to the majority by which they are represented. But this is the language of the slave.

"A majority, taken collectively, is only an individual whose opinions and frequently whose interests are opposed to those of another individual, who is styled a minority. If it be admitted that a man possessing absolute power may misuse that power by wronging his adversaries, why should not a majority be liable to the same reproach? Men do not change their characters by uniting with each other, nor does their patience in the presence of obstacles increase with their strength."

These words are worth recalling at a time when the popular tendency toward repression is stronger than it has ever been before in the United States. Having destroyed personal liberty by means of prohibition, we are now engaged in destroying the Bill of Rights.

There is no freedom of speech or of the press left except by consent of government. Police authority everywhere is denying to small minorities whose doctrines are unpopular the right of free speech. The Post Office Department, under authority of Congress, proscribes newspapers whose political and economic policies are regarded as obnoxious by the Postmaster General. A police department that recognizes the right of assemblage in the case of minorities tainted with radicalism is held to be not only incompetent but deficient in patriotism. The New York police on Christmas Day attempted to maintain the weird and wonderful theory that while the right of petition might be tolerated on Sixth Avenue, it is flagrantly illegal on Fifth Avenue.

Plainly the American people are getting away from first principles. They are forgetting their traditions and losing sight of their ancient landmarks. All the radical agitators in the country can never do half so much harm to democratic institutions as an inflamed public sentiment is doing when it sustains the attacks that various agencies of government are making against the guaranties of the Bill of Rights and of individual freedom.

—

[From the Baltimore Sun, Jan. 4, 1920.]

THE RAIDING OF THE REDS.

It is to be presumed that the Department of Justice has information in its possession—information, however, which it has not yet shared with the public—which justifies its nation-wide "round-up of radicals" on Friday night. It would be most unfortunate if it had not. But there are a sufficient number of disquieting questions raised by certain features of this performance to give point to the suggestion that the Government's whole policy in connection with the treatment of radical agitators should be reexamined and analyzed and if found faulty changed.

During the war, as the able editor of the New York World points out in an article, a portion of which is printed elsewhere on this page, there was no free play of public opinion in this country. News and opinions were censored by the Government, and the public cheerfully consented to the censorship. The people stopped thinking for themselves. That seemed the best way to insure the successful prosecution of the war. It was accepted as a patriotic duty.

Thoughtful individuals, however, assumed as a matter of course that as soon as the war ended the free expression of opinion would be resumed. They took it for granted that the fundamental doctrines of free speech and free assemblage and a free press were as sound as ever and that no one would dispute them in time of peace. But there have been two unexpected and alarming developments in this connection. The first is that a considerable proportion of the people seem, as a result of the suspension of their habit of thinking, to have lost that habit. Their mental faculties seem to have atrophied from disuse. The second is that an even larger proportion of the people have grown so accustomed to censorship and suppression that they want them continued. They don't want free speech and free assemblage and a free press any more. It doesn't occur to them that, while the ideas which are now being suppressed are obnoxious to them, the day will surely come, if the principle of suppression is established, when ideas of their own will be denied utterance. The Russian monarchists were highly agreeable to the institution of a censorship under the Czar; they are not so pleased with the censorship established by Lenin.

In these circumstances it is perhaps more important than ever before in American history that the constitutional right of freedom of speech should not be abridged. The people need to be reeducated on this subject. Progress is impossible without free speech. Retrogression and decay are inevitable if it is successfully prohibited. Revolution, the kind of revolution which timid souls in this country are so unnecessarily afraid of to-day, is furthered, not hindered, by attempts at suppression. Witness the growth of socialism in Germany! Witness Russia of to-day! You can not prevent the advance of an idea by force or by law. You can prevent the advance of a false idea by confronting it with the truth, by discussion, by honest argument, by education. And that is the only way.

When does liberty of speech degenerate into license? Justice Holmes, of the United States Supreme Court, drew the line in his recent dissenting opinion in a sedition case. When it immediately and directly incites to violence or the violation of law, then it is properly punishable. Not otherwise. John Stuart Mill drew the line in his famous essay "On Liberty":

"No one pretends that actions should be as free as opinions. On the contrary, even opinions lose their immunity when the circumstances in which they are expressed are such as to constitute their expression a positive instignation to some mischievous act. An opinion that corn dealers are starvers of the poor, or that private property is robbery, ought to be unmolested when simply circulated through the press, but may justly incur punishment when delivered orally to an excited mob assembled before the house of a corn dealer, or when handed about among the same mob in the form of a placard."

Whether or not the line has been crossed in the case of an individual offender is a matter for the authorities to determine. The rule is sufficiently clear.

What bearing have these general principles upon the Friday night raid? It was directed, according to the instructions given the Secret Service men who did the raiding, against "the radical organizations known as the Communist Party of America and the Communist Labor Party of America, also known as Communists." The Secret Service men were instructed to arrest all active members of these organizations where found.

The Communist party is the party of revolutionary socialism in America, the Bolshevist party. It advocates mass action and the general strike and its manifestoes imply that force will be necessary to accomplish the revolution which it seeks. A temperate article in the Atlantic Monthly for December tells us that its members do not expect immediate revolution, but propose the maintenance of revolutionary action that may last for years and tens of years until the final collapse of capitalism. The Communist Labor Party is a less radical one. It does not openly advocate violence, but intimates "the necessity and justification of force at the opportune moment."

Four and a half thousand members of these two parties were arrested by Government agents Friday night. We should like to believe that the action of the Department of Justice was wholly justified; but is that theory a plausible one? Under the principle of free speech as laid down by Holmes and Mill these men—certainly such of them as are citizens—have a perfect right to advocate a soviet form of government for the United States, communism, socialism, the overthrow of capitalism, any change whatever in our form of government, provided only that their propaganda does not immediately incite to violence. Is there any reason to believe that these thousands of men have wholly or largely been guilty of immediate incitement to violence? Was there really a revolutionary plot under way which needed to be nipped in the bud? The Government should make known the facts which justify its action.

The trouble, the dangerous trouble, of course, is that if any considerable proportion of our people are led to believe that the Government's action is unwarranted, that these men are being persecuted for the ideas they hold and not prosecuted for crimes which they have committed; if sympathy is aroused for these men or the belief fostered that a powerful capitalistic government is bent on crushing a proletarian movement that threatens its supremacy by fair means or foul, 10 Bolshevists will grow where 1 grew before. That is the invariable lesson of history. The surest way to make exasperated converts to "direct action" is to treat all heretical inquiry as a crime. The surest way to bestir wild men to outrage is to persecute peaceable men in an unfair and unintelligent manner.

To what absurd lengths bolshevophobia is carrying some of our timorous Government officials is indicated by the news conveyed in a Washington dispatch to the Sun yesterday, to the effect that W. L. George, the English novelist, may be denied admittance to this country on the ground that he is an undesirable alien. Mr. George is a writer of very high distinction. He served his country in an official capacity throughout the war; his interests are primarily artistic, not political; no one in England would think of denouncing him as an enemy to society. And yet, because he has printed an article or two exhibiting an interest in radical ideas, it is proposed to turn him away from America as if he were an anarchist with a bomb in his hand.

The episode is grotesque and discreditable. If, after his arrival in the United States, Mr. George should commit any act in violation of American law, the machinery for punishing him would stand ready. If, avoiding the actual infraction of the law, he should voice any sentiment currently prohibited by the police, it would be easy to deport him instantly and without trial. But to bar a man of his position from the country altogether, in the mere fear that he may possibly repeat here what has gone unchallenged at home—this is to carry the throttling of opinion to absurd and intolerable lengths. The English have laws against "direct action," just as we have. If Mr. George had violated those laws, he would be in jail to-day. As it is, the sole effect of turning him away as a dangerous alien will be to make the English laugh at us and the rest of the world begin to pity us.

Let us hope that the net effect of this pretentious movement against the so-called "reds" will not turn out to be merely a huge advertisement of them and their cause and a consequent increase in their membership.

—

[From the Baltimore Sun, Tuesday, Jan. 6, 1920.]

FARRAGUT'S RULE OF CONDUCT.

It is safe to say that the radical and near-radical papers of the country will have voluminous comments upon the rounding up of the "reds." It is equally safe to say that their comments will have little to say about the bomb-throwing anarchists included in the catch, the miscreants who really ought to be deported, but very much to say about certain features of the raids which we find chronicled in yesterday's papers, the nature of which is indicated in the following questions:

"Officials said it was distinctly surprising that each party—the communist and the communist labor—numbered so many American citizens in its membership. The party rolls were said to carry the names of many persons well known in their respective communities and American citizens."

"Action of the Government obtaining an injunction against the leaders of the bituminous coal strike was employed by the communist party heads as ammunition in their campaign, declaring that the capitalists used the Government's power, a weapon which the workers could not muster."

"The Chicago Federation of Labor to-day adopted two resolutions of protest against the Federal raids against the radicals. One declared that the executive board suspected that the raids were 'a part of the gigantic plot to destroy organized labor by the employers,' citing that among those arrested were officials of a local cigarmakers' union, whose records were seized. The other resolution declared that the Federal agents' acts were 'repressions' resembling 'Czaristic methods in Russia' and 'terrorist tactics.'"

"The Socialist Party, from its national headquarters, to-day issued a statement deploring the raids against the radicals. The arrests throughout the country were termed 'the gravest blow yet struck at the permanence of American institutions, and if continued, as it is threatened that they will be continued, this policy will place the United States in the forefront of the reactionary nations of the present day.'"

"Of the original 35 taken to the Baltimore post office Friday night, 12 were released. One of those arrested, a Russian, was a former member of the Three hundred and thirteenth Infantry."

These incidents will furnish texts for impassioned sermons against the Government as "reactionary" and "capitalistic." The total circulation of the several hundred radical journals of this country is a very large one. Will not the effect of their appeals be to increase the number of their adherents, just as the similar methods employed by Bismarck against the socialists of Germany caused a growth in the number of socialists there from 100,000 to more than 4,000,000?

It is hardly necessary to say that the Sun has no sympathy whatever with communism, socialism, bolshevism, I. W. W.ism, or any other branch of extreme radicalism. It believes that they are all economically unsound and unworkable and dangerous. But it believes that the only way successfully to combat them is by pointing out the weaknesses and fallacies of their theories, and that they can not be successfully combated by bringing the strong arm of a powerful government down upon half-witted and scatter-brained enthusiasts whose vaporings are apt to be dangerous in proportion as they are taken seriously, even when they happen to be associated with some really astute and dangerous characters who ought to be suppressed.

"The 'reds,'" said the Springfield Republican a day or two ago, "haven't the ghost of a chance in this country ever to overturn our established Government and institutions, or our industrial system, by force if our people will follow Admiral Farragut's rule of conduct in battle. 'I may be licked by the enemy,' he coolly remarked, 'but I'll be damned if I'll be frightened to death.' The few 'reds' should not be permitted to frighten the great American people. Their conspiracies are worth unearthing, but they are not worth anything else." That is the sanest comment we have yet seen upon the raiding of the "reds."

Mr. FRANCE. I think that Farragut's rule of conduct would be very helpful in this connection. In view of the fact that so many in the country are terrorized by a little red literature that has been circulated here and there—it has always been circulated by a few hare-brained anarchists here and there—they have always existed, sometimes more troublesome and sometimes less, but they have never seriously threatened the stability of the Republic; but in view of the fact that there are so many men who are trembling and shaking in their shoes at this little agitation which is so futile as long as we here observe the great fundamental principles enunciated in our Constitution, I think it would be well if more would adopt Farragut's rule of conduct. He said:

I may be licked by the enemy, but I will be damned if I will be frightened to death.

We need not be frightened if we really have a profound faith in the soundness and perpetuity of our institutions.

Mr. President, the whole point at issue in connection with the bill, it seems to me, is this: Is it a bill which makes direct incitation to the use of force and violence and only that a crime? If it is, it seems to me that it is a useless bill. But, to quote from a very valuable document which I wish every Member of Congress might read, entitled "Freedom of speech in war time," by Zechariah Chafee, jr., of the Harvard Law School—

The real issue of every free-speech controversy is this—whether the State can punish all words which have some tendency, however remote, to bring about acts in violation of law, or only words which directly incite to acts in violation of law.

That is always the question. How direct an incitation must it be to have the words made a crime? Of course, it is difficult to draw the line. The mere criticism of a statute or of a governmental policy might be considered by some to be provocative of discontent, a discontent which might cause the one so made discontented to tell another that the condition was growing intolerable, and that one who was told that it was growing intolerable might then speak words which would be a direct incitation to crime.

The pending bill does not and no statute dealing with the subject of free speech can define how direct the incitation to crime must be in order to be a crime itself, and that is the difficulty with all such statutes—their failure and the necessary inevitable failure to draw the line as to what is direct incitation to anarchy and violence and as to what is real but legitimate criticism of the Government.

Of course, those who advocate the utmost freedom of speech feel that it is very dangerous to lodge with a governmental official the power to decide himself without any review by the court just whether the language in question is or is not a sufficiently direct incitation to the use of force or violence to become itself a crime.

To go on with the quotation:

If words do not become criminal until they have an immediate tendency to produce a breach of the peace, there is no need for a law of sedition, since the ordinary standards of criminal solicitation and attempt apply.

In other words, if only direct incitation is a crime under this bill, it is not necessary, because the criminal statutes already enacted apply.

Under those standards the words must bring the speaker's unlawful intention reasonably near to success. Such a limited power to punish utterances rarely satisfies the zealous in times of excitement like a war. They realize that all condemnation of the war or of conscription may conceivably lead to active resistance or insubordination. Is it not better to kill the serpent in the egg? All writings that have a tendency to hinder the war must be suppressed.

Of course, I am merely quoting this to give the line of thought, because the same line of argument would apply to something other than war.

Such has always been the argument of the opponents of free speech. And the most powerful weapon in their hand, since the abolition of the censorship, is this doctrine of indirect causation, under which words can be punished for a supposed bad tendency long before there is any probability that they will break out into unlawful acts.

Of course, Mr. President, there is the whole essence of the matter—that very question as to what language shall be considered and what language shall not be considered a crime.

I do not intend to go into a discussion of the whole subject of free speech, nor, indeed, had I intended to occupy the time of the Senate this long. I wished merely to enter my individual protest against legislation which may be used in times of peace to suppress legitimate discussion and to censor the press, for, as we have already seen during the war and as the quotations which I have had inserted in the RECORD will indicate, this authority conferred upon the Postmaster General does really constitute him a censor of the press.

Mr. President, we do not live under a democracy. We are living in a Republic, a constitutional Republic, with a Constitution, a Government so framed that so long as its provisions shall be regarded tyranny is impossible—tyranny of the minority over the majority, the equally despicable tyranny of the majority over the minority—a Government founded upon the theory that while the majority might rule, the minority always had a right to be heard and to agitate for change and reform in the administration or in the Constitution itself by legitimate means. Believing as I do in that Constitution, believing as I do in our form of government, believing as I do that it is the only form of government in all the world which does make tyranny impossible—any of these tyrannies which I have mentioned, tyranny of the few over the many or of the many over the few—I hesitate very much to see enacted for a time of peace a statute which may be used by a Government official for the suppression of free speech, for the censorship of the press, and, worse than all, possibly for the protection of himself and some of those legislators who themselves forgetting their sacred oaths are violating the fundamental law of our Constitution, which is the only law, I believe, that has ever been drafted which will preserve government, preventing the tyranny of any, and guaranteeing liberty to all.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I have discovered throughout this discussion and in the letters offered for the RECORD by Senators opposing the bill, or certain features of the bill, a great misapprehension as to what the bill really is. To corroborate that statement, I read here a short paragraph from the publication called "Industry," of date January 1, 1920. This is the paragraph:

Senator STERLING has announced that he would attempt to secure immediate consideration of his bill to restrict criticism of the Government.

Mr. President, I never introduced any such bill; I never reported any such bill as that from the committee. If there is anything in which I believe, it is liberty of opinion and liberty freely to criticize the policies of the Government or of the administration or of any of the officials of the Government or administration.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I did not understand who the Senator said is the author of the interpretation of the bill which he has read.

Mr. STERLING. I do not know. I find the paragraph under the head of "Sedition" in the publication called "Industry," of the issue of January 1, 1920.

Further, Mr. President, to show what the impression seems to be in certain quarters and among certain people in regard to the purport of this bill, I read a short letter which I have just received this morning from Purchase, N. Y., as follows:

PURCHASE, N. Y.

DEAR SENATOR: I wish to protest against your bill curbing free speech. Patrick Henry, Benjamin Franklin, Harriet Beecher Stowe, William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and myself would have had to serve prison terms for trying to better the Government through criticism; I for writing this letter of protest. What happened to the Federal Party with their alien and sedition acts?

Yours, truly, WILLIAM MCHUGO.

So, Mr. President, in the view of the writer of this letter, the bill is for the purpose of preventing criticism which would result in the improvement of our Government. The bill is no such bill as this writer imagines it to be, but, as has been stated again and again here, it is a bill to prevent the advocacy of the overthrow of this Government and of all government by force or violence.

The writer of this letter refers to the alien and sedition acts. I am not sure but that some of the animus of the opposition to this bill comes from a recollection of the alien and sedition acts; or, if not from a recollection of those acts, from what men have learned of their history and the protests against them. I have the old sedition act here, and I merely want to read it. We shall then see the difference between the sedition act of 1798, persistence in the enactment and enforcement of which, as much as anything else, caused the Federal Party loss of power, and the pending bill. Section 2 is the sedition portion of that act. It provides:

That if any person shall write, print, utter, or publish, or shall cause or procure to be written, printed, uttered, or published, or shall knowingly and willingly assist or aid in writing, printing, uttering, or publishing any false, scandalous, and malicious writing or writings against the Government of the United States, or either House of the Congress of the United States, or the President of the United States, with intent to defame the said Government, or either House of the said Congress, or the said President, or to bring them, or either of them, into contempt or disrepute, or to excite against them, or either or any of them, the hatred of the good people of the United States, or to stir up sedition within the United States, or to excite any unlawful combinations therein, for opposing or resisting any law of the United States, or any act of the President of the United States—

And so forth.

Of course, that portion of that section of the old sedition law which might be construed as a prohibition of criticism of the President of the United States, the Government of the United States, or of the Congress of the United States, or any or either of them, is a law such as we would not tolerate upon the statute books of the United States now, for fear not so much of the language of the act itself but of the interpretation that might easily be put upon it.

Now, Mr. President, just a word with regard to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH]. I sympathize with the idea of the Senator from Idaho that there should be a hearing allowed any publisher who feels himself aggrieved by the exclusion from the mails of the matter which he publishes; but my point is that under the law and under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States he has that right now, and that within 24 hours after the matter has been excluded from the mails the party who feels himself aggrieved can apply to a Federal district court anywhere in the United States within which the publication is issued and procure a restraining order against the action of the Postmaster General in excluding the matter from the mails.

I had read into the RECORD this morning a letter from the Solicitor of the Post Office Department. In the concluding portion of that letter he refers to a Supreme Court case which I have before me. First, let me read from another case so as to disclose the principle involved. I read from the decision in the case In re Rapier, which Senators will recognize as the old lottery case, in regard to the constitutionality of that provision of the statute of the United States which prohibited sending lottery tickets or matter pertaining to lotteries through the mails. The court says in that case:

The question for determination relates to the constitutionality of section 3894 of the Revised Statutes as amended by that act. In Ex parte Jackson (96 U. S., 727) it was held—

And here the court quotes almost literally the opinion of the court in the case of Ex parte Jackson—

it was held that the power vested in Congress to establish post offices and post roads embraced the regulation of the entire postal system of the country, and that under it Congress may designate what may be carried in the mail and what excluded; that in excluding various articles from the mails the object of Congress is not to interfere with the freedom of the press or with any other rights of the people but to refuse the facilities for the distribution of matter deemed injurious by Congress to the public morals; and that the transportation in any other way of matters excluded from the mails would not be forbidden. Unless we are prepared to overrule that decision, it is decisive of the question before us.

That decision has been referred to as a precedent in later decisions in regard to the power of Congress to provide for the exclusion of matter from the mail through the action of the Postmaster General.

I now refer to the case which I had in mind in the first instance, the case which recognizes the right of a hearing on the part of the person feeling himself aggrieved, the case of Public Clearing House against Coyne, in One hundred and ninety-fourth United States, decided at the October term of the Supreme Court in 1903. The idea is sometimes sought to be conveyed that, because the Postmaster General may act in the first instance without its having been decided by a court that the matter comes within the prohibition of the law and should be excluded from the mails, it is a denial to the party of due process of law. If that be true, we are in every department of the Government and every day denying the individual the right of due process of law. The court says:

It is too late to argue that due process of law is denied whenever the disposition of property is affected by the order of an executive department. Many, if not most, of the matters presented to these departments require for their proper solution the judgment or discretion of the head of the department, and in many cases, notably those connected with the disposition of the public lands—

Cited as an illustration—

the action of the department is accepted as final by the courts, and even when involving questions of law this action is attended by a strong presumption of its correctness.

But coming now to that part of the opinion which allows the right to be heard, the court says—

That the party injured has a right to invoke the judicial power of the Government whenever his property rights have been invaded by the exercise of such power was settled by this court in Noble v. Union River Logging Railroad (147 U. S., 165), as well as in the McAnnulty case—

Previously referred to in this opinion—

but, as already indicated, it would practically arrest the executive arm of the Government if the heads of departments were required to obtain the sanction of the courts upon the multifarious questions arising in their departments, before action were taken, in any matter which might involve the temporary disposition of private property. Each executive department has certain public functions and duties, the performance of which is absolutely necessary to the existence of the Government, but it may temporarily at least operate with seeming harshness upon individuals.

Again it is pertinent to ask in this case, which must be of most concern to us—the loss sustained by the individual, his inconvenience for the time being, or the safety and welfare of the public? It is upon this ground, of course, that we must sometimes submit to errors, or perhaps abuses even, on the part of those holding executive offices.

But it is wisely indicated that the rights of the public must in these particulars override the rights of individuals, provided there be reserved to them an ultimate recourse to the judiciary.

I early learned this, Mr. President, as a maxim of the law: "There is no wrong without a remedy." We can broadly apply it. Unless it is in the case where the public welfare and safety must be taken as the prime consideration, and on that account full redress can not be given to the individual through the courts, there is no wrong without a remedy.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to interrupt him a minute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. STERLING. I yield; yes.

Mr. NELSON. I recall very well that the Supreme Court has in several cases—in one particular case the title of which I can not give just at this moment—decided that "due process of law" does not necessarily mean that the case must be considered in court, in a judicial tribunal. If jurisdiction is conferred upon an executive department or an executive officer, and that officer gives a hearing, and a full hearing is accorded to the other side, and due consideration is given to his case, then and in that case there has been due process of law, and it is not absolutely necessary that it shall be carried on in a judicial tribunal.

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. The main point is that the party interested shall have a full hearing and a full opportunity to have his case considered; and if he has he has had due process of law.

Mr. STERLING. Certainly, Mr. President.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. FRANCE. I should like to ask the Senator if, in connection with this bill, he is defending the apparently growing practice of Congress in past legislation which tends to consolidate legislative, executive, and judicial powers in an executive official—if he is defending that tendency, or if he upholds it?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I am not quite ready to agree with the Senator from Maryland that that is the tendency. I would not, assuming that it was a tendency, defend it. I do not believe in the practice of combining these three coordinate powers under one head or body.

Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], in discussing his amendment this morning, seemed to regard it as necessary because of the very wide discretion that the Postmaster General may have in excluding matter from the mail. Under the terms of this bill the Postmaster General can not exclude from the mails matters that criticize the President of the United States, or the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Treasury, or any other head of a department. The publisher may severely criticize any and all such officials. He may criticize our form of government. He may say that a soviet government is indeed preferable to a republican or representative form of government. He may say anything except in terms, or in language from which it may fairly be implied, that which advises or advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States, or of all governments, by force or violence, or, for the purpose of accomplishing the same end, advises or advocates the destruction of property or the destruction of human life.

We can see at a glance that the Postmaster General has practically no discretion at all. It is confined within such narrow limits that to use the authority which this bill gives him can hardly be called the exercise of discretion.

Suppose a party feels himself aggrieved because this or that publication has been excluded from the mails. As I stated a while ago, he may at once apply to a Federal court for relief and for a restraining order; and it will be for that court, upon inspection there of the document, to interpret it and say whether or not, in direct language or in terms, it advocates or advises the overthrow of the Government by force or violence, or whether the words are such as to convey by fair implication the idea that the party to whom it is addressed, or the persons who may read it, should undertake to overthrow the Government by force or violence.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NELSON. Is it not clear that the bill applies only to such publications or documents as advocate in direct terms the overthrow, by force and violence, or by physical injury to person or property, of the Government of the United States? Is it not strictly limited to that?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. And is there any occasion to build up a man of straw, and conjure up dangers as to what may happen to that straw man, in a case like this? In this case the moment the Postmaster General attempted to cover more ground than I have referred to, could he not be immediately restrained in court and an injunction immediately issued against him?

Mr. STERLING. Most certainly.

Mr. NELSON. And the court would immediately say, in such a case as that, "The Postmaster General is outside of his jurisdiction. This law has not given him jurisdiction to pass upon anything except what is specified in the law."

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Minnesota is entirely right in that proposition.

It may be readily seen that nearly the entire discussion on this bill up to date has been concerning the freedom of the press and the fear that we might enact some legislation here that would interfere with the freedom of the press as guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. STERLING. I do.

Mr. FRANCE. My discussion this afternoon was directed to the point that if the legislation was designed to make those things crimes which the Senator has now described, statutes already exist which make them crimes. I should be pleased to ask the Senator if he is contending that those acts which he has described are not already crimes under the statutes?

Mr. STERLING. I will say, in answer to the Senator, that he has not yet produced the statute that is applicable to the particular cases covered by the bill, nor is he able to do it. The Senator uttered that challenge the other day, insisting that it was the duty of the proponents of the bill, by referring to the statutes, to point out the need of this legislation. Mr. President, 33 bills have been introduced in the Senate of the United States covering this or allied subjects. Thirty-six bills have been introduced in the House of Representatives covering this or allied subjects, very many of them covering all the features involved in this bill, or a portion of them. Then there was a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate that had a number of these bills referred to it, and we had them under consideration for a long time. The pending bill is the result of a combination of four different bills that have been introduced in the Senate of the United States—one by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], another quite similar bill by the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], another by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], and still another by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. NEW].

This bill is a combination of the principles involved in these four separate bills. So, Mr. President, the presumption is, after all these proceedings, that there is need for this legislation and that there is no statute which covers the features involved in this bill.

It is "matter of defense," then, for Senators opposed to the bill or opposed to any of the features of the bill on the ground that they are already covered by existing law to show that fact by producing the statutes showing that they have been so covered. As yet there has been no such showing made.

SECOND INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I ask the pardon of the Senate for obtruding some observations this afternoon on a subject other than the one under consideration. It seems to me that the preliminary statement of the Second Industrial Conference appointed by the President, which was recently issued to the public, warrants some comment in this body. I ask unanimous consent that that statement may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT OF INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE.

"I. Introduction.

"The Industrial Conference, convened by the President in Washington on December 1, issues this statement in the desire that certain tentative proposals be given considerate study by interested individuals and organizations throughout the country. It will reassemble on January 12 and will then carefully consider any constructive criticisms that may be submitted to it.

"The conference does not deem it useful at this time to enter upon a discussion of the causes of industrial unrest. It believes, rather, that its most important immediate contribution is the suggestion of practical measures which will serve to avert or postpone industrial conflicts.

"In confining itself to the proposal of machinery for the adjustment of disputes, the conference is far from wishing to exaggerate the importance of the mechanical as contrasted with the human elements in the situation. Our modern industrial organization, if it is not to become a failure, must yield to the individual a larger satisfaction with life. It makes possible a greater production of material things. But we have grown so accustomed to its complexity that we are in danger of forgetting that men are to-day more dependent on each other than ever before. The spirit of human fellowship and responsibility was easier to maintain when two or three worked side by side and saw the completed product pass from their hands. Yet their cooperation was actually less necessary because each by himself was more nearly capable, if circumstances demanded, to meet the needs of life. To-day we have a complex interweaving of vital interests. But we have as yet failed to adjust our human relations to the facts of our economic interdependence. The process toward adjustment, though slow, nevertheless goes on. The right relationship between employer and employee in large industries can only be promoted by the deliberate organization of that relationship. Not only must the theory that labor is a commodity be abandoned, but the concept of leadership must be substituted for that of mastership. New machinery of democratic representation may be erected to suit the conditions of present industry and restore a measure of personal contact and a sense of responsibility between employer and employee. The more recent development of such machinery with the cooperation of organized labor is a hopeful sign. But back of any machinery must be the power which moves it. Human fellowship in industry may be either an empty phrase or a living fact. There is no magic formula. It can be a fact only if there is continuous and sincere effort for mutual understanding and an unfailing recognition that there is a community of interest between employer and employee.

"Pending the growth of better relationships between employers and employees, the practical approach to the problem is to devise a method of preventing or retarding conflicts by providing machinery for the adjustment of differences. The conference believes that it is possible to set up a more effective series of tribunals for the adjustment of disputes than at present exists. To be successful, such tribunals must be so organized as to operate promptly as well as impartially. There must be full participation by employers and employees. There must be representation of the public to safeguard the public interest. The machinery should not be used to promote unfairly the interests of organizations, either of labor or of capital. The plain fact is that the public has long been uneasy about the power of great employers; it is becoming uneasy about the power of great labor organizations. The community must be assured against domination by either. On the other hand, there must be equal assurance that such machinery will not be used to discriminate against organizations of employees or of employers. Both should be protected. The right of association on either side should not be affected or denied as a result of the erection of such tribunals.

"The plan which follows does not propose to do away with the ultimate right to strike, to discharge, or to maintain the closed or the open shop. It is designed to bring about a frank meeting of the interested parties and cool and calm consideration of the questions involved, in association with other persons familiar with the industry.

"The plan is national in scope and operation, yet it is decentralized. It is different from anything in operation elsewhere. It is based upon American experience and is designed to meet American conditions. To facilitate discussion, the plan submitted, while entirely tentative, is expressed in positive form and made definite as to most details.

"II. Plan for boards of inquiry and adjustment.

"1. NATIONAL TRIBUNAL AND REGIONAL BOARDS.

"There shall be established a national industrial tribunal, and regional boards of inquiry and adjustment.

"2. NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL TRIBUNAL.

"The national industrial tribunal shall have its headquarters in Washington and shall be composed of nine members chosen by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Three shall represent the employers of the country and shall be appointed upon nomination of the Secretary of Commerce. Three shall represent employees and shall be appointed upon nomination of the Secretary of Labor. Three shall be representatives of the public interest. Not more than five of the members shall be of the same political party.

"The tribunal shall be, in general, a board of appeal. Its determinations on disputes coming to it upon an appeal shall be by unanimous vote. In case it is unable to reach a determination, it shall make and publish majority and minority reports, which shall be matters of public record.

"3. INDUSTRIAL REGIONS.

"The United States shall be divided into a specified number of industrial regions. The conference suggests 12 regions with boundaries similar to those established under the Federal Reserve System, with such modifications as the industrial situation may make desirable.

"4. REGIONAL CHAIRMEN AND VICE CHAIRMEN.

"In each region the President shall appoint a regional chairman. He shall be a representative of the public interest, shall be appointed for a term of three years, and be eligible for reappointment.

"Whenever in any industrial region, because of the multiplicity of disputes, prompt action by the regional board is impossible, or where the situation makes it desirable, the national industrial tribunal may, in its discretion, choose one or more vice chairmen and provide for the establishment under their chairmanship of additional regional boards.

"5. PANELS OF EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES FOR REGIONAL BOARDS.

"Panels of employers and employees for each region shall be prepared by the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Labor, respectively, after conference with the employers and employees, respectively, of the regions. The panels shall be approved by the President.

"At least 20 days before their submission to the President provisional lists for the panels in each region shall be published in such region.

"The panels of employers shall be classified by industries; the panels of employees shall be classified by industries and subclassified by crafts. The names of employers and employees selected shall be at first entered on their respective panels in an order determined by lot.

"The selection from the panels for service upon the regional boards shall be made in rotation by the regional chairman; after service the name of the one so chosen shall be transferred to the foot of his panel.

"6. REGIONAL BOARDS OF ADJUSTMENT.

"Whenever a dispute arises in a plant or group of plants which is not settled by agreement of the parties or by existing machinery, the chairman may on his motion, unless disapproved by the national industrial tribunal, and shall at the request of the Secretary of Commerce or the Secretary of Labor or the national industrial tribunal, request each side concerned in such dispute to submit it for adjustment to a regional board of adjustment. To this end each side shall, if willing to make such submission, select within not less than two nor more than seven days, at the discretion of the chairman, a representative. Such selection shall be made in accordance with the rules and regulations to be laid down by the national industrial tribunal for the purpose of insuring free and prompt choice of the representatives.

"When both sides shall have selected their representatives the chairman shall take from the top of the panels for the industry concerned, or in the case of employees for the craft or crafts concerned, names of employers and employees, respectively. The representatives selected by the two sides shall be entitled to a specified number of peremptory challenges of the names so taken from their respective panels. When two unchallenged names of employers and employees shall have been selected in this manner, they, with the chairman and the representatives selected by the two sides, shall constitute a regional board of adjustment.

"The appointment of representatives of both sides shall constitute an agreement to submit the issue for adjustment and further shall constitute an agreement by both sides that they will continue, or reestablish and continue, the status that existed at the time the dispute arose.

"The board of adjustment so constituted shall proceed at once to hear the two sides for the purpose of reaching a determination. Such determination must be by unanimous vote. In case the board is unable to reach a determination the question shall, unless referred to an umpire as provided in section 9, pass upon appeal to the national industrial tribunal.

"7. REGIONAL BOARDS OF INQUIRY.

"If either side to the dispute fails, within the period fixed by the chairman, to select its representative, the chairman shall proceed to organize a regional board of inquiry. Such regional board of inquiry shall consist of the regional chairman, two employers selected in the manner specified from the employers' panel, and two employees selected in like manner from the employees' panel and of the representative of either side that may have selected a representative and agreed to submit the dispute to the board. If neither side shall select a representative within the time fixed by the chairman, the board of inquiry shall consist of the chairman and the four panel members only.

"Upon the selection of a representative, within the specified time, the side concerned shall be entitled to the specified number of peremptory challenges as provided above. The representative shall have the right to sit on the board of inquiry and to take full part as a member of such board in the proceedings thereof.

"The board of inquiry as so constituted shall proceed to investigate the dispute and make and publish a report, or majority and minority reports, of the conclusions reached, within 5 days after the close of its hearings and within not more than 30 days from the date of issue of the original request by the chairman to the two sides to the dispute, unless extended on unanimous request of the board or the national industrial tribunal. It shall transmit copies of this report or reports to the Secretaries of Commerce and of Labor, respectively, and to the national industrial tribunal, where they shall be matters of public record.

"8. TRANSFORMATION OF THE REGIONAL BOARDS OF INQUIRY INTO REGIONAL BOARDS OF ADJUSTMENT.

"At any time during the progress of the inquiry at which both sides shall have selected representatives and agreed to submit the dispute for adjustment, the board of inquiry shall become a board of adjustment by the admission to membership on the board of such representatives. The side or sides which appoint representatives after the date fixed in the original request of the chairman shall, because of its delay, suffer a reduction in the number of peremptory challenges to which it otherwise would have been entitled.

"The board of adjustment so constituted shall proceed to the determination of the dispute as though it had been organized within the period originally fixed by the chairman.

"9. UMPIRE.

"When a regional board of adjustment is unable to reach a unanimous determination it may by unanimous vote select an umpire and refer the dispute to him with the provision that his determination shall be final and shall have the same force and effect as a unanimous determination of such regional board.

"10. COMBINATION OF REGIONS.

"Whenever the questions involved in a dispute extend beyond the boundaries of a single region, the regions to which the dispute extends shall, for the purpose of such dispute, be combined by order of the national industrial tribunal, which shall designate the chairman of one of the regions concerned to act as chairman in connection with the dispute in question.

"Two employer members and two employee members shall be chosen from the combined panels of the regions involved in the dispute under rules and regulations to be established by the national industrial tribunal. The members representing the two sides to the dispute shall be chosen as in the case of a dispute in a single region.

"A regional board of inquiry or of adjustment, constituted for a dispute extending beyond the boundaries of a single region, shall have the same rights and powers conferred upon a regional board for a single region.

"11. EFFECT OF DECISION.

"Whenever an agreement is reached by the parties to a dispute or a determination is announced by a regional board of adjustment or by an umpire or by the national industrial tribunal, the agreement or determination shall have the full force and effect of a trade agreement, which the parties to the dispute are bound to carry out.

"12. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

"In connection with their task of inquiry and adjustment, the regional boards and the national tribunal shall have the right to subpœna witnesses, to examine them under oath, to require the production of books and papers pertinent to the inquiry, and their assistance in all proper ways to enable the boards to ascertain the facts in reference to the causes of the dispute and the basis of a fair adjustment. Provision shall be made by law for the protection of witnesses and to prevent the misuse of any information so obtained.

"All members of the tribunal and boards heretofore described, including the chairman and vice chairman, shall be entitled to vote.

"The President shall have the power of removal of the members of the tribunal and boards.

"In the presentation of evidence to the tribunal and the boards each side shall have the right to present its position through representatives of its own choosing.

"The Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Labor, in making nominations for the national industrial tribunal and in preparing and revising the regional panels of employers and employees, shall from time to time develop suitable systems to insure their selections being truly representative.

"The national industrial tribunal, the regional boards of adjustment, and the umpires shall in each of their determinations specify the minimum period during which such determinations shall be effective and binding. In case of emergency a regional adjustment board or the national industrial tribunal may, after hearing both sides, alter its determination by abridging or extending the period specified.

"13. SPECIAL PROVISIONS.

"The terms of office of members of the national industrial board shall be six years; at the outset three members, including one from each group, shall be appointed for a term of two years, three members for a term of four years, and three members for a term of six years; thereafter three members, one from each group, shall retire at the end of each period of two years. Members shall be eligible for reappointment.

"The regional panels provided for in section 5 shall be revised annually by the Secretaries of Commerce and of Labor, respectively, in conference with the employers and employees, respectively, of each region.

"14. RELATION OF BOARDS TO EXISTING MACHINERY FOR CONCILIATION AND ADJUSTMENT.

"The establishment of the national industrial tribunal and the regional boards described shall not affect existing machinery of conciliation, adjustment, and arbitration established under the Federal Government, under the governments of the several States and Territories or subdivisions thereof, or under mutual agreements of employers and employees.

"Any industrial agreement made between employers and employees may, by consent of the parties, be filed with the national industrial tribunal. Such filing shall constitute agreement by the parties that in the event of a dispute they will maintain the status existing at the time the dispute originated until a final determination, and that any dispute not adjusted by means of the machinery provided through the agreement shall pass on appeal to the national industrial tribunal for determination, as in the case of a dispute submitted on appeal from a regional board.

"III. Objects of plan.

"The main objects of the above plan are to secure national coordination and to stimulate the formation of bodies for local adjustment. The requirement of unanimity of agreement has by experience in the United States proved remarkably successful and should assure such confidence that neither side can rightfully refuse to submit to adjustment. A precedent condition of such submission is that the interruption of production shall be delayed. The frank meeting of the parties in controversy together with other men skilled in questions at issue always gives promise of settlement. On the other hand, refusal to submit to the board not only inaugurates a legal inquiry but also prejudices the obstinate party or parties in public opinion. Moreover, the fact that membership on the board of inquiry is available to either party to the conflict singly would tend further to weaken the position of the other. When both parties join, the board at once becomes a board of adjustment, and conflict ceases by agreement until a determination is reached.

"IV. Statement as to public-utility industries.

"The plan here proposed presents greater difficulties in application to certain public utilities than to competitive industry. The continuous operation of public utilities is vital to public welfare. As the capital invested is employed in public use, so is the labor engaged in public service; and the withdrawal of either with the result of suspending service makes the people the real victim. While continuous operation of all utilities is conducive to the general convenience of the people that of some of them is essential to their very existence. Of the latter class the railways are a conspicuous example and bear the same relation to the body politic as do the arteries to the human body. Suspension produces practical social and economic anarchy and may impose hardship even to the point of starvation upon large sections of the community. The interruption in such essential public utilities is intolerable.

"The conference believes that a plan of tribunals or boards of adjustment and inquiry should be applied to public utilities, but in the adaptation of the plan two problems present themselves. First, governmental regulation of public utilities is now usually confined to rates and services. The conference considers that there must be some merging of responsibility for regulation of rates and services and the settlement of wages and conditions of labor. Such coordination would give greater security to the public, to employee, and to employer. Second, is the problem whether some method can be arrived at that will avert all danger of interruption to service. These matters require further consideration before concrete proposals are put forward.

"V. Statement as to Government employees.

"The Government is established in the interests of all the people. It can be conducted effectively only by those who give to its service an undivided allegiance. The terms and conditions of employment in the Government service are prescribed by law. Therefore no interference by any group of Government employees or others with the continuous operation of Government functions through concerted cessation of work or threats thereof can be permitted.

"The right of Government employees to associate for mutual protection, the advancement of their interests, or the presentation of grievances can not be denied, but no such employees who are connected with the administration of justice or the maintenance of public safety or public order should be permitted to join or retain membership in any organization which authorizes the use of the strike or which is affiliated with any organization which authorizes the strike.

"The conference is not now expressing an opinion upon the propriety of the affiliation of other classes of Government employees with organizations which authorize the use of the strike.

"The principles above stated are not to be construed as inconsistent with the right of employees individually to leave the public service. It is, further, an essential part of the application of these principles that tribunals shall be established for prompt hearing of requests and prompt remedy of grievances. The legislation of the Nation, the States, and the municipalities should be improved in such a way as to prevent delay in hearings and to enable speedy action when there are grievances.

"VI. Further work of the conference.

"On reconvening the conference will continue its consideration of tribunals for the furtherance of industrial peace in general industry in the light of whatever criticisms and suggestions the publication of its tentative plan may call forth. It will receive reports of investigations that are being made for it. On the basis of such reports and of further study of these and the other subjects within its field, the conference hopes that it may be able to contribute something more toward the better industrial relations described in the words addressed to it by the President when he called it into being—relations in which 'the workman will feel himself induced to put forth his best efforts, the employer will have an encouraging profit, and the public will not suffer at the hands of either class.' To this end it invites the cooperation of all citizens who have at heart the realization of this ideal of a better industrial civilization.

"(Signed) The President's Industrial Conference; W. B. Wilson, chairman; Herbert Hoover, vice chairman; Martin H. Glynn, Thomas W. Gregory, Richard Hooker, Stanley King, Samuel W. McCall, Henry M. Robinson, Julius Rosenwald, Oscar S. Straus, Henry C. Stuart, F. W. Taussig, William O. Thompson, Henry J. Waters, George W. Wickersham, Owen D. Young, members. Attested: Henry R. Seager, executive secretary.

"DECEMBER 19, 1919."

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, in my address to the Senate on October 11, just after the assembling of the first industrial conference, I mentioned Federal incorporation as a means of establishing the authority of trade agreements and contracts, and I have expressed the hope that—> the country might receive from the first conference constructive ideas as to the application of the principles of Federal incorporation to aggregations of both employers and employees, as a part of the machinery referred to by the Secretary of Labor by which rights may be safeguarded and justice secured—for I am among those who believe that it is even more important and practical to devote our thoughts to insuring the execution in letter and, if possible, in spirit, of agreements already made, than it is to devoting them to creating machinery for making additional agreements.

In reading the preliminary statement of the second industrial conference, which I have done with much interest, I have been a little disappointed in failing to note provisions establishing the authority of contract and the equal responsibility of the parties.

I have noted that the statement of the conference lays stress upon the concept that leadership must be substituted for mastership, but I am led to question whether the plan proposed in the statement, admirable as it may be in other respects, does not take away from the employer the element of leadership so vitally essential to increase the production of the country.

I feel free to draw attention to these matters of establishing the authority of contract and of maintaining leadership in industry, inasmuch as the preliminary statement of this conference was issued in the desire that its tentative proposals be given considerate study by interested individuals and organizations throughout the country so that this conference might receive constructive criticisms when it reassembles on January 12. On the basis of such criticisms and reports and on the basis of a further study, the conference expresses its hope that it may be able to contribute something toward better industrial relations in the words addressed to it by the President when he called it into being, relations in which—> the workman will feel himself induced to put forth his best efforts, the employer will have an encouraging profit, and the public will not suffer at the hands of either class.

To this end the conference has invited and is entitled to the cooperation of all citizens, and it is in this spirit of cooperation that I am directing my remarks, well realizing the difficulty of grasping, without having followed the committee's deliberations in detail, the full import of its preliminary statement.

I believe that public opinion does and should always rule this country. Public opinion must be founded on authentic facts; it should be accurately informed. I believe there are many controversies between employer and employee in which the issues are not understood by the public. There are some in which the public is vitally concerned, but there are many in which the public has no direct interest. If the machinery suggested by the conference could give a clear statement of the issues to the public in matters in which the public is vitally interested, without entangling the whole industry of the country and thus defeating the purpose of informing public opinion, it would be rendering a service of great value. Disputes that should logically be considered are those disputes in which the public as a whole has an interest. This means that the conference should clearly define which industries should be subject to action by the proposed tribunals.

I commend the statement of the conference that—

> * * * The Government is established in the interests of all the people. It can be conducted effectively only by those who give to its service an undivided allegiance.
>
> The right of Government employees to associate for mutual protection, the advancement of their interests, or the presentation of grievances can not be denied, but no such employees who are connected with the administration of justice or the maintenance of public safety or public order should be permitted to join or retain membership in any organization which authorizes the use of the strike or which is affiliated with any organization which authorizes the strike. * * *

While the conference holds that the continuous operation of some public utilities, notably railroads, is essential to the very existence of the people; that suspension produces social, political, and economic anarchy, and may impose hardship, even to the point of starvation, upon large sections of the community; and while it recognizes the problem of averting the danger of interruption of service, it believes that these matters require further consideration before concrete proposals are put forth. It seems to me that those public utilities the cessation of which might produce political, social, and economic anarchy and impose starvation on large sections of the community should be classed with Government service, and that the public will await these concrete proposals of the conference with vital interest.

If I understand the preliminary statement of the conference correctly, it proposes, without affecting the present Federal,

State, or private machinery of conciliation or adjustment, to set up a more effective series of tribunals for the settlement of disputes than at present exists, to consist of a national industrial tribunal, with regional boards of inquiry and adjustment, whose findings shall have the force and effect of a trade agreement between the parties. If a finding is not made, the majority and minority reports may be published and filed. But the tribunal and its subsidiaries may inaugurate legal inquiries, with the right to subpœna witnesses, examine them under oath, and require them to produce books and papers pertinent to the causes of the dispute and to the basis of its fair adjustment.

It might seem unfair to impose upon the employer the obligation of continuing to disclose his books and papers and the very good will of his business upon the complaint of possibly small groups of disgruntled employees, especially without having the assurance that the decision, if ultimately reached, would be kept in spirit or even in letter.

I find myself in grave doubt whether the proposed tribunals would not constitute a court of appeal, without adequate authority and without adequate responsibility, and would not take away from the employer the moral leadership now so necessary for the increase of production, placing the de facto industrial leadership in the hands of these tribunals rather than in the hands of the employer and placing the whole industry of the country "in leading strings, which may soon become hopelessly entangled."

It is only through the closest relationship between employer and employee in each individual undertaking adjusted to its own local needs that working conditions may be sufficiently elastic to meet the many circumstances arising throughout the Nation. These tribunals might form precedents in one part of the United States not adapted to another, and they might tend to nationalize rather than to localize disputes. Time and interest of both employer and employee, which should be devoted to productive work, may be diverted to the selection of the members of the proposed tribunals and to considerations of strategy, with the ultimate effect of a greater burden of cost upon the public.

The proposed tribunals appear to be more adaptable to those public utilities the cessation of which would not seriously interfere with public welfare than to private business.

In common with other legislators I have received inquiries as to my views on a new basis of compensation. If by a query as to a new basis it is inferred that the legislators are to invent a method by which the wage earner will get more than he produces, the legislators are being asked to create an economic perpetual-motion machine.

The Secretary of Labor, Hon. William B. Wilson, who is indeed a practical labor man, as well as an experienced legislator, in his address before the conference of mayors and governors last spring went as far as any practical man has yet been able to go when he stated:

> To my mind it is a truism that every man is entitled to the full social value of what his labor produces. The difficulty, however, is that human intelligence has not yet developed a method by which we can determine what the social value of anyone's labor is; so because of our inability to compute the value of labor we have been going on determining the social values of labor on a competitive basis, modified to a greater or lesser extent by the organizations of capital on the one side and the organizations of labor on the other.

And I might say modified to a greater or lesser extent by the law of supply and demand.

I may admit that I am among those who entertain grave doubts as to the national helpfulness of boards or tribunals which may chance to intervene between employer and employee in defiance of the laws of supply and demand.

While we may not be able to devise practical machinery for the equitable distribution of the production of labor, yet it is easily within our power to devise adequate legislation to preserve the capital value of the human machine through child and women labor laws through restricting the hours of work in dangerous occupations and through minimum wage, and so forth.

We may at least refrain from passing legislation tending to estrange the employer and the employee and which might nationalize rather than localize labor disputes.

We may encourage the present successful practice of settlement of disputes by local voluntary arbiters.

We may provide for the enforcement of trade agreements by Federal incorporation or other similar device.

We may enact legislation looking toward a wider distribution of real property through an adequate system of long-term banking and reverse the present tenantry drift to an ever-increasing percentage of home ownership. The work done by men to avoid hunger and necessity will not go far to increase production. It is the work inspired by the motive of possession that increases the Nation's production and that yields a larger satisfaction with life to the individual who through saving becomes independent.

We may eliminate special privilege in many of its phases. The wage earner asks for no philanthropy. He fully realizes that the law of supply and demand must eventually rule, but he wants a square deal, as Secretary Wilson has said so clearly:

> I do not believe that any country owes any man a living, but I do believe that every country owes every man an opportunity to earn a living.

The members of this conference have thought in the terms of common good, and it is my belief that something permanently helpful may come from their deliberations; but, as I stated in my address to the Senate on October 11 last:

> Temporary conditions in industry are not the real issues. Temporary remedies may do more harm than good, just as the policy of following the line of least resistance during the war aggravated the industrial controversies we have had since the armistice was signed.

If all unjust employers, disaffected employees, the I. W. W.'s, and the anarchists, and the Karl Marx professors of all the world were transported to Mars, never to return, their places would soon be filled by others, if the causes continued to obtain. These causes date back many generations. They are world wide, and this Nation is being affected by them as, through travel and communication, the distances between it and foreign countries are shortened.

As the knowledge of geography and navigation developed, the exploitation of the weaker races by the stronger swept around the globe and then the exploitation of the weaker groups by the stronger groups of the same race localized itself in each nation finally under the feudal systems, until the United States became the one star of hope to the oppressed peoples of the earth.

But as Herbert Hoover so aptly writes in the Saturday Evening Post of December 27:

> The United States has been for 150 years steadily developing a social philosophy of its own. This philosophy has stood this period of test in the fire of common sense; it is, in substance, that there should be an equality of opportunity—an equal chance—to every citizen. This view—that every individual should within his lifetime not be handicapped in securing that particular niche in the community to which his abilities and character entitled him—is itself the negation of class. Human beings are not equal in these qualities, but a society that is based upon a constant readjustment of the relative influence and rewards of individuals in the community, upon the basis of ability and character, is a moving, virile mass—it is not a stratification of classes. Its stimulus is competition.
>
> It is the essence of democracy that progress of the mass must rise from progress of the individual. It is the only road to a higher civilization. Its conception of the State is of one that, representative of all the citizens, will in the region of economic activities limit itself in the main to the prevention of economic domination of the few over the many.

Now, the United States is particularly suffering from the reaction of those who have been oppressed in foreign countries against those who migrated to this country years before and enjoyed opportunity of advancement, and it is but to be expected that these immigrants, smarting under conditions of injustice at home without full knowledge of the opportunities in this country, should react against the more fortunate who came before them as they might have reacted against their feudal or class masters had they remained in their own countries.

We can but eliminate those causes within the jurisdiction of the United States.

While our employers and employees have had periodic controversies, the normal condition in this country has been one of peace, of increasing productiveness, of development of better standards of living, as the resources of the country have been developed and the organization of its people has been perfected through self-control and through common justice.

This country can continue to prosper only through increased production in proportion to increased standards of living. This means work; this means improved tools of industry; this means investment in tools of industry rather than expenditures for consumable commodities; this means intelligent conservation of the resources of the individual as well as intelligent conservation of the resources of the Nation. By scientific use and conservation of our human and material resources we may lead the world in the increase of productive capacity.

Since the introduction of machinery during the past 150 years it is probable that the per capita productive capacity of the world has increased two hundred times, but unfortunately this productive capacity has not been conserved, but has been diverted to comparative nonessentials and has been handicapped by personal inefficiency, has been exploited by groups and governmental intervention in favor of one group or another or in conflict between nations.

During the past five years the productive capacity of the world has been checked and diverted to the needs of war. The production of millions of men has gone into the scrap heap.

Since the armistice such productive capacity as has remained has been largely directed toward consumable rather than toward capital commodities. As Pope Benedict said, on December 24, in his address to the cardinals:

To-day there is no limit to the dissipation of wealth and the drying up of the sources thereof.

The reaction of war strain has been shown in idleness and lack of initiative. Special privilege, at the expense of the public, is sought by the various groups in interest to offset governmental interference of war and prewar times. In Russia it is confiscation, in England it is subsidy, in the United States it is exemption—exemption from the normal application of laws and of taxation, exemption for the enjoyment of ill-advised franchises as well as for the enjoyment of the unearned increment of undeveloped natural resources.

Thought and leadership have unfortunately not been directed to the replenishment of exhausted capital, but to world-wide discussions over the division of the remaining capital depleted by five years of war and one year of comparative inaction.

The second industrial conference will do well if it brings home to the American people the concept that leadership must be substituted for mastership—that such leadership must be human, moral, practical, and scientific, for without such leadership there can be no adequate development in production. It will do well if it can bring home to the American people the concept of the validity of trade agreements—in honor and spirit, as well as in letter. It will do well if it can devise means for bringing the employer and employee in each small enterprise together and thus localize rather than nationalize disputes which otherwise might involve through sympathetic strikes the many people innocent of the original causes.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. NELSON. I ask that the unfinished business may be laid before the Senate.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3184) to create a Federal power commission and to define its powers and duties, to provide for the improvement of navigation, for the development of water power, for the use of lands of the United States in relation thereto, to repeal section 18 of "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce passed over will be stated.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. On page 17, after line 23, strike out:

(e) That the licensee shall pay to the United States reasonable annual charges in an amount to be fixed by the commission. When licenses are issued that contemplate the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States, in the discretion of the commission the charges to be paid by the licensee may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter, in a manner to be described in each license.

And in lieu thereof insert:

That the licensee shall pay for the license herein granted such reasonable annual charges as may be fixed by the commission, for the purpose of reimbursing the United States for the cost of administration of the act in relation to water powers developed under its jurisdiction, in the proportion that the water power developed by the project covered by said license bears to the total water power developed by all projects licensed under the act, and for that purpose such charges may be readjusted from time to time, not oftener than once in two years; the licensee shall also pay for the use and occupation of any public lands and lands in reservations, except tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations, necessary for the development of the project covered by the license such reasonable annual charges based upon the actual value of the Government lands used as may be fixed by the commission; but in no event shall the annual charge for the foregoing exceed 25 cents per developed horsepower: Provided, That when licenses are issued involving the use of Government dams or other structures ownd by the United States or tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations the commission shall fix a reasonable annual charge for the use thereof, and such charges may be readjusted at the end of 20 years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than 10 years thereafter in a manner to be described in each license.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 5 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, January 10, 1920, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 9, 1920.

UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD.

Thomas A. Scott to be a member of the United States Shipping Board. (Reappointment.)

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

John C. Stoner, of South Dakota, to be register of the land office at Lemmon, S. Dak.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

William H. Tompkins, of South Dakota, to be receiver of public moneys at Rapid City, S. Dak.

PROMOTIONS IN THE COAST GUARD.

Engineer in Chief Quincy B. Newman, United States Coast Guard, to have temporarily the rank of captain in the Navy and colonel in the Army:

Third Lieut. Frederick J. Birkett and Third Lieut. George R. Crosby to be second lieutenants in the Coast Guard.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY.

To be lieutenant colonels.

Maj. Dwight W. Ryther, Infantry, from December 24, 1919.
Maj. William F. Creary, Infantry, from December 27, 1919.

To be majors.

Capt. Gideon H. Williams, Infantry, from November 7, 1919.
Capt. Fred W. Bugbee, Infantry, from November 12, 1919.
Capt. William M. Goodale, Infantry, from November 20, 1919.
Capt. Leonard T. Baker, Infantry, from November 20, 1919.
Capt. Charles S. Frank, Infantry, from November 22, 1919.
Capt. Franklin S. Leisenring, Infantry (Quartermaster Corps), from November 22, 1919.
Capt. Charles F. Andrews, Infantry, from November 22, 1919.
Capt. Allan L. Brigss, Infantry, from November 25, 1919.
Capt. James M. Petty, Infantry, from December 1, 1919.
Capt. John B. Shuman, Infantry, from December 10, 1919.
Capt. Charles G. Lawrence, Infantry, from December 24, 1919.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Capt. Jeter R. Horton, assistant quartermaster, to be an assistant quartermaster in the Marine Corps, with the rank of major, from the 1st day of August, 1919.

Capt. Henry N. Manney, jr., to be a major in the Marine Corps from the 23d day of November, 1919.

Capt. Franklin B. Garrett to be a major in the Marine Corps from the 11th day of December, 1919.

Second Lieut. Robert S. Hunter to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 29th day of September, 1918.

First Lieut. Robert S. Hunter to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 30th day of September, 1918.

Maj. James K. Tracy to be a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps, for temporary service, from the 6th day of January, 1920.

Capt. George H. Osterhout, jr., to be a major in the Marine Corps, for temporary service, from the 18th day of December, 1919.

Capt. John Q. Adams to be a major in the Marine Corps, for temporary service, from the 6th day of January, 1920.

Sergt. Herman H. Hannekan to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, for temporary service, from the 23d day of December, 1919.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 9, 1920.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Carl A. Hatch to be collector of internal revenue for the district of New Mexico.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

CAVALRY ARM.

Second Lieut. James C. Styron, Coast Artillery Corps, to be second lieutenant of Cavalry.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

Second Lieut. Auston M. Wilson, jr., Cavalry, to be second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, January 9, 1920.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou Eternal One, life-giving, life-sustaining Potentate, infinite in all Thine attributes, boundless in Thy resources, let Thy spirit possess each Member of this legislative body, that all its enactments may be in consonance with the laws Thou hast ordained, to still unholy strife and the unrest prevalent throughout our land, that the genius of our Republic may come in all fullness, happiness enter every home, and all good obtain. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Dudley, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 3175) authorizing local drainage districts to drain certain public lands in the State of Arkansas, counties of Mississippi and Poinsett, and subjecting said lands to taxation.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following joint resolution:

H. J. Res. 263. Joint resolution extending the time for filing final report of the Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries, created by section 9, Public No. 314, Sixty-fifth Congress, approved March 1, 1919, to a date not later than March 12, 1920.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the letter written by the President to the representatives of democracy at the Jackson Day dinner last night.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the letter of the President referred to.

Mr. MADDEN. I would like to ask unanimous consent to couple with that the printing of Mr. Bryan's speech also.

Mr. GARNER. I have no objection, so far as I am concerned.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois couples with that request a request that the speech of Mr. Bryan be printed also. Is there objection?

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I object to both.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the address of Walker D. Hines, Director General of Railroads, before the Bar Association of the City of New York on January 7.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD the letter referred to. Is there objection?

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman from Ohio objected.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a communication from the secretary of state of Rhode Island, announcing the ratification by the legislature of that State of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, extending the right of suffrage to women.

CONDITION OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for a change of reference of Senate resolution 69, which was sent to the Committee on Insular Affairs, to the Committee on Rules.

It seems that this joint resolution appoints a commission to report upon conditions in the Virgin Islands, and under our precedents all bills or joint resolutions providing for the appointment of commissions are to be sent to the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to transfer from the Committee on Insular Affairs to the Committee on Rules Senate joint resolution No. 69. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE FIREMEN'S BILL.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the firemen's bill, disagree to the Senate amendment, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the firemen's bill, which the Clerk will report, disagree to the Senate amendment, and ask for a conference.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10137) to amend an act entitled "An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1916, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is the ranking minority member of the gentleman's committee aware of the fact that the gentleman from Michigan was to call this up and send the bill to conference?

Mr. MAPES. I think he has no objection to it, although I have not spoken to him about it. The ranking minority member, as the gentleman knows, is not here, on account of sickness. The bill was considered and reported originally by a subcommittee of which Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky and Mr. WOODS of Virginia were members on the minority side. I will say frankly that I have not spoken to Mr. WOODS of Virginia about it, but I do not think there is any question but that he would agree that this is the proper procedure.

Mr. GARNER. The reason why I make the suggestion to the gentleman is that it does seem to me that the practice of the House ought to be that when a gentleman gets up and asks unanimous consent to disagree to Senate amendments and send a bill to conference he ought at least consult with the probable conferee on the minority side in making the request. I shall not object now, but I make that suggestion now in the interest of the facilitation of the business of the House, that unless it is done there will probably be a policy adopted on the part of the House to object to requests of this kind.

Mr. MAPES. I believe in that policy, but I neglected to do it in this particular case.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker announced as the conferees on the part of the House Messrs. MAPES, GOULD, and WOODS of Virginia.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE SAVANNAH RIVER.

Mr. BRAND. Mr. Speaker, on last Monday, in my absence on account of the illness of a child, the bill H. R. 10922 was called up, and some objection was made at the time by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. I now ask unanimous consent to take it up.

Mr. WALSH. What is it?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10922) to grant the consent of Congress to the Alfords Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Savannah River.

Mr. DOMINICK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, in order to save time and to get back to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, now before the House, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to renew my request that I made a moment ago.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] will please take the chair.

Thereupon the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 11368, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill under the five-minute rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 18. For expenses of administration of the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, and the compensation of employees, $200,000: Provided, That a report shall be made to Congress by the superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes through the Secretary of the Interior, showing in detail the expenditure of all moneys appropriated by this provision: Provided further, That no part of said appropriation shall be used in forwarding the undisputed claims to be paid from individual moneys of restricted allottees, or their heirs, or in forwarding uncontested agricultural and mineral leases (excluding oil and gas leases) made by individual restricted Indian allottees, or their heirs, to the Secretary of the Interior for approval, but all such undisposed claims or uncontested leases (except oil and gas leases) now required to be approved under existing law by the Secretary of the Interior shall hereafter be paid, approved, rejected, or disapproved by the Superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma: Provided, however, That any party aggrieved by any decision or order of the Superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma may appeal from the same to the Secretary of the Interior within 30 days from the date of said decision or order.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves a point of order.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of making a short statement. We all know that the railroad legislation is in conference and that it is the most important legislation before Congress. The Director General of Railroads delivered an address before the Bar Association of New York on the 7th of January, of which I have a full copy. Only portions of it have been printed in the papers that I have seen, and in the interest of the public I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. SIMS. Do you want to commence objecting to a thing as important as this? This is no political speech or anything like that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa objects.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I did.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the Chair thinks the amendment is not in order until the point of order is disposed of.

Mr. CRAMTON. I ask to have my amendment read for information. Then I will make a statement about it.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the Clerk will report the amendment for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: Page 48, line 2, after the word "provision," strike out lines 2 to 18, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided further, That hereafter no undisputed claims to be paid from individual moneys of restricted allottees, or their heirs, or uncontested agricultural and mineral leases (excluding oil and gas leases) made by individual restricted Indian allottees, or their heirs, shall be forwarded to the Secretary of the Interior for approval, but all such undisputed claims or uncontested leases (except oil and gas leases) heretofore required to be approved under existing law by the Secretary of the Interior shall hereafter be paid, approved, rejected, or disapproved by the Superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma: Provided, however, That any party aggrieved by any decision or order of the Superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes of Oklahoma may appeal from the same to the Secretary of the Interior within 30 days from the date of said decision or order."

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, just a word of explanation. The language on page 48, from lines 2 to 18, inclusive, covers legislation for the purpose of changing the old practice of sending leases to the Interior Department for approval when they relate to the lands of the Five Civilized Tribes—leases other than oil and gas. There has been some controversy about this proposition for two or three years, but last year an agreement was reached by the parties who had been giving attention to it, and the language in this bill was placed in the bill a year ago as a result of that agreement. It was the intention at that time to put it in the form of permanent legislation. There seems to have been some misunderstanding with reference to what was the effect of the language. The Bureau of Indian Affairs did not apparently understand that it was permanent legislation, and so the language is repeated in the bill again this year. In my judgment the language that appears in the bill, and which was in the law last year, was permanent legislation in effect.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The gentleman will notice, however, that the very beginning of the proviso says—

Provided further, That no part of said appropriation shall be used—

Which makes it simply a limitation on the appropriation for the current year.

Mr. CRAMTON. That would be true as to the first part of the provision.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That is all that it does.

Mr. CRAMTON. That is as to the forwarding of undisputed claims.

Mr. SNYDER. I was unable to hear the remark of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This whole paragraph is dependent upon the proposition in the first part of it that no part of this appropriation shall be used. Under the decisions, that clearly determines that it is not permanent legislation, but only law for the current year.

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that the misunderstanding has come about by reason of that language, but there are two propositions in the provision; first, that no part of the appropriation shall be used in forwarding undisputed claims; and, second, which is independent of the first proposition, that such undisputed claims shall hereafter be paid, approved, rejected, or disapproved by the superintendent of the Five Civilized Tribes. But this misunderstanding has arisen, and in order to carry into effect the understanding that was arrived at last year, and to put it in such language that there can be no further question, and so that it will not be necessary to carry the language each year, I have offered this amendment, which cuts out the language that the gentleman from Illinois refers to, and makes it clearly and plainly permanent legislation.

Mr. HASTINGS. And the gentleman might add that the department has no objection to it.

Mr. CRAMTON. I have consulted with the gentlemen from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS and Mr. CARTER], who are interested in the matter.

Mr. HASTINGS. And the department has no objection to the legislation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The only effect of this is to make permanent law what otherwise would be law for the current year.

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes; and to remove any question about it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Is the gentleman so well satisfied on this subject that he thinks it ought to be practically removed from the control of Congress—not theoretically but practically?

Mr. CRAMTON. I fought the proposition for two or three years, but I was especially concerned about the oil and gas leases. Over my protest this language was put in the bill for one year and repeated last year, and there seem to have been no bad effects from it; and so long as it does not cover oil and gas leases I have no objection to accepting the proposition.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The gentleman from Michigan opposed this proposition originally, and I rather sympathized with him in his views. Now the gentleman says the provision has been in effect possibly a year and a half, and has as yet produced no bad results. Why not try it again experimentally for another year, without trying to make permanent law at this time?

Mr. HASTINGS. I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois that the word "hereafter," in line 11, page 48, makes it permanent law beyond any question, and that was the intent last year.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not think so.

Mr. HASTINGS. I invite the gentleman's attention to the word "hereafter," in line 11.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That does not make any difference. I have not had the authority that the Comptroller of the Treasury has had in determining such things, but I have had considerable experience on the question as to what was permanent law and what was a temporary limitation, and I think this provision is only law for the current year.

Mr. CRAMTON. I would like to say to the gentleman from Illinois that I made an inquiry at the office of the comptroller, and while I do not think it would bind the comptroller when it came up formally, I was advised after they had looked it up that they considered it permanent legislation by reason of the word "hereafter" being used where it is.

Mr. HASTINGS. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is a distinguished parliamentarian, and I hesitate very much to place my judgment against the judgment of the gentleman from Illinois, but there is not a particle of question but that the word "hereafter," in line 11, makes the last part, with reference to the forwarding of all leases except oil and gas, permanent law.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to see if we can not clear this up and move along. My understanding is that the gentleman from Illinois is satisfied that this law is sufficient for the coming year.

Mr. CRAMTON. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. HASTINGS. You have the word of the comptroller that it is continuing law, why not leave the section as it is, and take the chance on its being continuing law for another year?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I am not stubborn in the matter at all. While it is only current law, and while the gentleman from Michigan thinks it ought to be permanent law, if it is certain that the law will not work an injustice as a general thing, I have no objection to it, of course.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I have listened to this argument for four years in committee. It is my belief that this is an improvement on the old system, but I agree with the gentleman from Michigan, that I would not want to go any further than we propose now to go here. I would be willing that this should be made permanent law or leave it undecided, as it is in the minds of some.

Mr. CRAMTON. The only reason I offered the amendment was to clear up the question.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order that I made.

Mr. WALSH. I renew the reservation for the purpose of getting some information. Do I understand the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] to say that the Indian Bureau is now agreeable to having this made permanent law?

Mr. HASTINGS. Yes; they have no objection.

Mr. WALSH. What has removed their objection?

Mr. HASTINGS. The objection they had was to cutting out oil and gas leases. They wanted the oil and gas leases sent up. They had no objection to the local authorities approving these claims.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. WALSH. I have reserved the point of order, and I would like to get some information.

Mr. HASTINGS. I will say that there is no objection to this as written by the Interior Department.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were 44 ayes and 4 noes.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For fulfilling treaties with Choctaws, Oklahoma: For permanent annuity (art. 2, treaty of Nov. 16, 1805, and art. 13, treaty of June 22, 1855), $3,000; for permanent annuity for support of light horsemen (art. 13, treaty of Oct. 18, 1820, and art. 13, treaty of June 22, 1855), $600; for permanent annuity for support of blacksmith (art 6, treaty of Oct. 18, 1820, and art. 9, treaty of Jan. 20, 1825, and art. 13, treaty of June 22, 1855), $600; for permanent annuity for education (art. 2, treaty of Jan. 20, 1825, and art. 13, treaty of June 22, 1855), $6,000; for permanent annuity for iron and steel (art. 9, treaty of Jan. 20, 1825, and art. 13, treaty of June 22, 1855), $320; in all, $10,520.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask to go back and take up the unfinished amendment offered yesterday by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HOWARD], on page 46, line 16. My understanding was that the amendment was to be revised and reoffered this morning for consideration.

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman from New York allow me to make a request for unanimous consent?

Mr. SNYDER. I prefer to go on.

Mr. SIMS. I am not going to use any time.

Mr. SNYDER. Very well.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD, at the end of the day's proceedings, an address by Walker D. Hines, Director General of Railroads, before the Bar Association of the City of New York, in New York City, January 7, 1920.

Mr. WALSH. How many pages will it make?

Mr. SIMS. It is short.

Mr. CANNON. What is it about?

Mr. SIMS. It is on the question of legislation pertaining to the railroads.

Mr. WALSH. Recommending Government ownership?

Mr. SIMS. I do not know what it recommends nor what it does not recommend——

Mr. WALSH. Oh, then I object until the gentleman finds out.

Mr. SIMS. The gentleman did not let me finish. I have not read the whole address, only what was in the newspapers. If it advocates Government ownership, I do not know it, and if it does not I do not know it, but everybody knows that Mr. Hines knows more about railroads than almost anyone else.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts objects.

Mr. SIMS. Well, there will be several more objections. I have never, in the 23 years that I have been a Member of this House, objected to a unanimous-consent request.

Mr. KNUTSON. That is a laudable record.

Mr. SIMS. If a Member is forced to do such a thing in order to defend himself against being so treated, he will have to resort to it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is clearly out of order. He has not been recognized, and I ask that his words be taken down.

A MEMBER. Oh, withdraw it.

Mr. WALSH. Well, Mr. Chairman, in order to appease the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, I will make an exception in this case and withdraw my objection to his request.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, since the gentleman made reference to me——

Mr. SIMS. Oh, no; I did not.

Mr. SNYDER. I desire to say that there was no discourtesy intended on my part toward the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. SIMS. Oh, I had no reference to the gentleman from New York. I thank him for his courtesy.

Mr. KNUTSON. I do not think the gentleman intended to reflect upon the gentleman from New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object——

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. CARTER. Of course, I am not going to object, but this ought not to go into the middle of this discussion on this bill.

Mr. SIMS. I stated, as a part of the request, that it was not to be printed as part of the current proceedings.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, for the information of the chairman of the committee and the gentleman who reserved the point of order to my amendment on the Quapaw appropriation, on page 46, line 16, I want to say that we have not in any way revised the amendment as offered last night, for the reason that those of us who feel that this amendment in some form should be adopted are perfectly willing that the matter may be discussed here and ironed out in some way so as to prevent in the future such incidents as those referred to by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] yesterday afternoon.

Mr. SNYDER. Then, as I understand it, the amendment stands and is now in order, with a point of order reserved against it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have no doubt that many instances of injustice could be cited under any law that has been passed. I think many more are likely to arise under a provision of this sort, and I speak with very limited knowledge on the subject, than are likely to arise under existing conditions. At any rate, this matter ought to receive careful consideration from the proper committee; and therefore I make the point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and maintenance of day and industrial schools among the Sioux Indians, including the erection and repairs of school buildings, $200,000, in accordance with the provisions of article 5 of the agreement made and entered into September 26, 1876, and ratified February 28, 1877 (19 Stat., p. 254).

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph for the purpose of asking whether it is proposed to erect any additional school buildings under this appropriation; and if so, how much of the money is to be used for that purpose?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I can not say it is proposed to expend any money for new schools. I do not know that there is any thought in that direction in the minds of the bureau or the superintendent of that agency. The justification for the item makes no statement with regard to whether they intend to construct buildings or not.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does it use up the fund?

Mr. SNYDER. The total appropriation was used last year, every penny. There is no balance whatever.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I mean in the justification that they give for this item.

Mr. SNYDER. They state for construction of new buildings, $1,825.28. That is all.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order

The Clerk read as follows:

For subsistence and civilization of the Yankton Sioux, South Dakota, including pay of employees, $9,000.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to this paragraph to strike out the figures "$9,000" and to insert in lieu thereof the figures "$12,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON: Page 55, line 16, after the word "employees," strike out the figures "$9,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$12,000."

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Mr. Chairman, I am in entire accord with the spirit of economy that the committee has exhibited in the drafting of this bill, but they have reduced this item requested by the superintendent 25 per cent. I feel that this reduction should not have been made. The hearings show that there was expended last year under that head $13,896. Of that $6,530 was for salaries. The superintendent asked for $12,000. I do not believe that he can get along with a less amount, and I am afraid that the reduction will affect the efficiency of the school maintained at that agency. As long as you are going to maintain that agency and a school there, I think that you should grant the superintendent the amount asked for, so that he may continue the school facilities in the same manner in which he has in the past.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman will note that on page 426 of the hearings the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs states himself that that amount must be cut. I read:

Mr. MERITT. Mr. Chairman, we can take a small cut there on the appropriation. I suggest that it be cut to $9,000. During the last year we have issued patents in fee to a large number of those Indians, and our administrative duties will be reduced at that agency during the coming year.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that I am aware of that statement, and the large number of patents that were issued on that reservation were issued in 1916. I do not believe that the number of patents that have been issued will affect the needs of the school in any way. I would rather rely upon the judgment of the superintendent having charge of that school than the office here in Washington. I believe you will curtail the facilities of that school if you stand by this reduction.

Mr. CARTER. I will say to the gentleman that during my experience here—and I have had quite a bit with superintendents of schools—I have never yet seen one who would agree that a reduction in the amount appropriated for his school ought to be made.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. That is probably true; but you are reducing from $13,850, the amount expended this year, to $9,000 for the coming year. The superintendent himself consented to a reduction of $1,896.

Mr. CARTER. It is so seldom that our Indian Bureau suggests itself a reduction in the amount that the committee did not feel like having any controversy over it, when the commissioner himself said it should be reduced.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. No. I rather think he made a horizontal cut of $3,000 there upon the theory that the number of patents would reduce the expense, but I do not think the patents issued will necessarily reduce the expense.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. It is not shown in the hearings there is any school involved in this $9,000 appropriation. The $6,530 appropriated last year was expended for salaries and irregular labor for the year 1919, and $439 was expended for transportation due to the fact that they had to haul the merchandise 16 miles from the railroad. The balance of the appropriation would be required in the purchase of subsistence for issue to old and needy Indians, forage for agency stock, equipment and material for the agency, fuels and illuminants, medical supplies, telegraph and telephone service, traveling expenses, and so forth. The assistant commissioner suggested that we could cut the item $3,000, and naturally that is what the committee was looking for, and we accepted his suggestion, and I believe we did the right thing under the circumstances as they were before us. Mr. Chairman, the committee believes that in all of these matters it gave them careful consideration and has allowed sufficient money in all of them for the reasonable and careful operation of these schools and the various activities connected with the service. Therefore I hope the amendment will not prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States the sum of $25,000 of any funds to the credit of the Indians on the Pine Ridge Reservation, and to expend the same for the construction of roads and bridges within said reservation.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the paragraph. I wish to ask the gentleman from New York as to this road construction.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes, sir.

Mr. TILSON. The $25,000 provided for in this item for construction of roads and bridges in this reservation seems to be a new item. It is a small amount, to be sure, but what can be done with such a small amount of money in the construction of roads and bridges? While I am asking the question, let me make it comprehensive enough to cover all the information I wish to obtain. Is this appropriation for the benefit of the Indians; do they wish to have these roads and bridges constructed or is it principally for the benefit of the while people of the adjoining counties who wish to have roads connected up or bridges built?

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that all three of these items were presented to the committee by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. GANDY], a Member of this House, who gave us the information that they were entirely in the interest of the Indians. He gave us certain justifications. In reference to the first one, he said that this item is desired to provide for the opening of three unopened counties in the Pine Ridge Reservation by the construction of roads and bridges. These counties have no improvements of this character, and your committee is satisfied that the appropriation would be valuable to the Indians at this time. The Pine Ridge Indians had to their credit June 30, 1919, $561,790. In regard to the second item for the Cheyenne River, he justifies it by saying that they had $70,248 to their credit June 30, 1919, in the Treasury of the United States, which sum is applicable to this request, and it is further justified by the facts stated and the needs of the situation now existing. In regard to the third one, it is estimated the cost of the proposed bridge will be in the neighborhood of $100,000, and it is further estimated that the Indians' share of construction will be about $40,000. The river abuts on tribal lands and there is no bridge across the southern line of the reservation for more than 100 miles. Therefore your committee felt that both the welfare of the Indians and the accommodation of the public would be bettered by the granting of the request. The tribal funds of the Indians are sufficient to meet reimbursements for these various projects. Further, the white municipalities or State or county authorities pay two-thirds of this amount. No part can be expended until they put up their portion. Now, I would like, if the gentleman would permit, to read a telegram I received on the 6th of January from Mr. GANDY, who is out in that country now. This is addressed to me and he says:

I had expected to reach Washington by Wednesday, but now find I will be unable to leave here before Saturday of this week and will probably arrive in Washington about Tuesday, the 13th. If the Indian appropriation bill is considered by the House before I get there, I will deeply appreciate your attention to the amendments which I offered, for I am very anxious they remain in the bill. There should be no question about the Cheyenne River bridge and the Cheyenne Reservation road and Pine Ridge Reservation road items, for they are reimbursable and the Indians have plenty of money in the Treasury.

This is signed by HARRY L. GANDY.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman's explanation as to the third paragraph is more satisfactory to me than the first two. So far as the first two are concerned, they are small sums, they are new items, and they are for the construction of roads and bridges. How many roads and bridges will $10,000 construct on the Cheyenne River Reservation? I do not know, but it seems to me that is a small amount of money to be expended in the construction of roads and bridges, and will probably be entirely lost. This money seems not to be reimbursable, but to be taken out of the tribal funds, and should be expended for their benefit. It seems to me that a careful scrutiny of these items is justified, so as to disclose whether or not this is simply a scheme on the part of the citizens of the counties adjoining to use the Indians' money to build roads and bridges. This is the aspect of the question that has appealed to me.

Mr. SNYDER. So far as my information goes, I have given the gentleman all that we have. Mr. GANDY appeared before the committee and asked to have these items put in the bill, giving the justifications I have outlined, and I am unable to state whether the Indians themselves asked for this project.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. I will.

Mr. CARTER. To begin with the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. GANDY], as I recall, before the committee stated there were no roads, but they have only trails through this reservation. This is the Pine Ridge Reservation?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. As this especially was a reservation where the counties were unorganized or unopened, there are no county officers or government at all. There is no way to make roads through that part of the country except from the tribal funds, and this is a reservation occupied entirely by Indians, I believe; perhaps there may be some tenants and renters. As I recall, I looked through the hearings but did not find it. The gentleman from South Dakota stated that the Indians were building a road inside, as there were no roads they could get across the reservation to the town, and that this would simply consist in building dirt roads and cutting trees out of the way where there was timber, and so forth, and that the roads would not be very expensive.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. GANDY says further in his telegram, although the language of the bill does not say so, that the appropriation is reimbursable, and that the Indians have plenty of money in the Treasury.

Mr. TILSON. Of course, they have plenty of money. That fact, coupled with the suspicion that this appropriation might be the result of a desire to build some of these roads from that money without due regard to the interests of the Indian, was the cause of my inquiry.

Mr. CARTER. The Pine Ridge expenditure is taken from the tribal funds.

Mr. TILSON. They are all taken from the tribal funds.

Mr. CARTER. So far as the Federal Treasury is concerned, that is better than if they were reimbursable.

Mr. TILSON. That is true, but I am looking to the interests of the Indians themselves. All I wish is to be satisfied that these items are for their benefit.

Mr. CARTER. Even with the little information I have about that, I will take the responsibility of saying that the items are practically for the benefit of the Indians themselves, because the Pine Ridge Reservation and others are nothing but Indian reservations. The counties are absolutely unorganized, and the roads will be used for the Indians and for the white tenants on the reservation who take the Indians' crops to market.

Mr. TILSON. The statement of the gentleman from Oklahoma, corroborated by the reported statement of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. GANDY], carries great weight. Therefore I am willing to withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and civilization of the Makahs, including pay of employees, $2,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I have been receiving letters from time to time inquiring about certain Indian lands in the Papago country, in Pima County, Ariz., which are claimed by the heirs of Col. Robert M. Hunter, formerly of Washington, D. C. This claim is based upon 16 pretended deeds purported to have been made on December 8, 1880, by Luis, capitan of the Papago village of Santa Rosa, to Col. Hunter, conveying an undivided one-half interest in 2,600,000 acres of land.

Ten of these bogus deeds were placed of record in the county recorder's office at Tucson, Ariz., on June 2, 1917, by Robert M. Martin, of Los Angeles, Calif., who claims to have purchased three-fourths of Hunter's one-half interest in these lands in 1911. Martin is now engaged in selling an interest in these lands at 50 cents an acre, and I understand that he is having considerable success in deceiving people in and around Los Angeles as to the value of what they are purchasing from him. He has carefully avoided using the United States mails, however, in perpetrating this fraud.

The lands in question are now located within the Papago Indian Reservation created by Executive order on February 1, 1917, and the Indians are a unit in their opposition to the Hunter claim. All of the old Indians of Santa Rosa and the adjacent villages have been questioned and not one of them had ever heard of any such grant of land to Col. Hunter. Certainly these Indians received no consideration from him which would entitle him to one-half of their lands, for there is nothing to show that he ever did anything for their benefit.

Martin and the Hunter heirs are now basing their claim upon a decision of the United States Supreme Court rendered on March 3, 1919, which reversed the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the case of the Pueblo Santa Rosa against Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, and others, and ordered a new trial. This suit was filed by Alton M. Cates, who claims to represent the Indians through an alleged power of attorney given to Col. Hunter in 1880, to prevent the Secretary of the Interior from disposing of the lands of the Papago Indians of the pueblo of Santa Rosa. The Indians now living at Santa Rosa knew nothing about the filing of this suit and are opposed to it. The Supreme Court held that the Papago Indians had occupied these lands from time immemorial, and that the Secretary of the Interior should not be allowed to depose them under the public-land laws. The authority of Capitan Luis, in behalf of the tribe, to give a quitclaim deed to Col. Robert Hunter is not mentioned in this decision. That question has never been presented to any court. In view of the creation of a reservation for the Papagos, covering the lands claimed by the Hunter heirs, I am satisfied that the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia will soon dismiss the suit filed by Cates.

I make this statement so that all persons who are buying land from Martin may have notice that they can never get title to these Papago lands; that they are being swindled; and that the whole scheme is fraudulent. I mention this matter publicly on the floor of the House in order to discount the activities of these land grafters who are operating in and around Los Angeles, Calif.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the unexpended balance of approximately $17,025 of the $22,500 appropriated by the Indian appropriation act for the fiscal year 1919 (40 Stat. L., p. 588), for the construction of a road on the Quinlault Reservation, Wash., to be reimbursed from any tribal funds of said Indians on deposit in the Treasury of the United States, is hereby reappropriated for the same purposes and upon the same terms and conditions as provided in said act, and to be immediately available.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order upon the words "to be immediately available."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 275 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Tomah, Wis., including pay of superintendent, $63,875; for general repairs and improvements, $8,000; for tile draining, $1,600; for new laundry equipment, $4,000; in all, $77,475.

Mr. EVANS of Nevada. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have unanimous consent to return to page 38 for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nevada asks unanimous consent to return to page 38 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. SNYDER. Let the amendment be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EVANS of Nevada: Page 38, line 9, strike out the words "in all, $94,000," and insert in lieu thereof "new kitchen and dining room, $20,000; in all, $114,000."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. EVANS of Nevada. Mr. Chairman, "But the greatest of these is charity." Charity, when performed with proper purpose, is a noble act. It is fine to subscribe to the starving and despairing nations of Europe, but why neglect the Indians whose presence in America was in the way of our progress? In Nevada lives the offspring of a once brave people; samples of their craft and handiwork exist to-day, an example of artistic patience the equal of any race.

The early history of Nevada furnishes evidence of their bravery in warfare without compare. Seventy years ago the inevitable conflict was precipitated by our race; assassinations of from one to several Indians became of frequent occurrence. Finally a company of trained pioneers and Indian fighters was formed with the intention of exterminating the several hundred Indians living along the Truckee. With crude weapons, Indian clubs, bows and arrows, the Indians met the conflict some miles northwest of where Wadsworth now stands. The slaughter ended when the last white man of that expedition was dead. Subsequent time has brought subjugation to the natives and treaties which they sacredly kept. I hope to find good in all men. Your policies toward Indians are founded upon good intentions; your paternalism to them well meant. You intend to give them education, providing against cold and hunger. Nothing now stands between the pitiful remnant of a dying race in Nevada but charity. They will not steal, and your governmental policy only tantalizes them. They need food and shelter against a rigorous climate. Their soil will not produce without elaborate systems of irrigation. Paternalism of your bureau supplies positions of comfort to employees administering the lands of Indians, who should be given their own land, but Nevada Indians are very poor and decadent when they could be educated and restored. Do not economize too much. They are dying when proper quarters, food, and clothing would make them happy, and in time, some place, self-sustaining. Much as Europe needs charity, they can not need as does Nevada Indians living upon barren deserts with extreme rigors of winter, deprived of all means for sustenance. They do not comprehend advantages of education, which could be made attractive to them by surroundings of comfort and the opportunity for work, which they perform with gratitude, being very tractable. It is commendable that we retrench and economize upon appropriations, but there are boundary lines for economy. They begin at housing and food. If you built a highway 30 miles toward Richmond you could not economize with value to the project by leaving 10 impassable miles unfinished. At Carson (Nev.) Indian School there has been a lack of funds for buildings necessary to house and feed the children. Average attendance can be doubled and a genuine interest in work and study created by providing necessary equipment. As a business proposition, 25 per cent increase of the appropriation would stimulate interest, attendance, and results about four times. What business man would expend $15,000,000 annually without being in constant personal contact with his business? But this department relies entirely upon precedent, custom, and reports. The chairman and two others of the Committee on Indian Affairs should spend 90 days each year in the Indian country. When they do this we will see good results doubled and have something tangible for the enormous sums expended.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the support and civilization of those portions of the Wisconsin Band of Pottawatomie Indians residing in the States of Wisconsin and Michigan, and to aid said Indians in establishing homes on the lands purchased for them under the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 30, 1913, $6,899, or so much thereof as may be necessary, said sum to be reimbursed to the United States out of the appropriation, when made, of the principal due as the proportionate share of said Indians in annuities and moneys of the Pottawatomie Tribe in which they have not shared as set forth in House Document No. 830 (60th Cong., 1st sess.), and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to expend the said sum in the clearing of land and the purchase of houses, building material, seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, and other equipment and supplies necessary to enable said Indians to become self-supporting: Provided, That the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the fiscal year 1917 for said Indians, approximating $28,256.13, and the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the fiscal year 1918, approximating $55,057.37, are hereby reappropriated and made available until expended: Provided, however, That the above-mentioned sums shall be used only for the purposes set forth in section 25 of the act approved May 18, 1916 (39 Stat. L., pp. 156, 157), and section 24 of the act approved March 2, 1917 (39 Stat. L., p. 991).

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment on page 64, line 25, after the word "That," as follows:

Strike out all of line 25, and all of line 1, on page 65, and the word "and," on line 2, page 65.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The purpose of this amendment is simply to strike out the reappropriation of the balance of the appropriation for 1917?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. And for the simple reason that the money has been turned back into the Treasury, and, as I understand, it can not now be reappropriated without becoming an addition to the appropriations carried in the bill. That was not stated to us in the hearings on the section, and therefore I offer the amendment to strike out the amount.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Of course, all appropriations are covered back into the Treasury at the end of two years, except certain classes of them. This is one of those. The direct appropriation in this paragraph of $6,899, which is very close figuring, I should say, by the way, it is proposed to expend in the clearing of land and the purchase of houses, and so forth?

Mr. SNYDER. It is the balance of the money they claim to need for the finishing up of the project, in addition to the amounts which have already been appropriated, which they desire to have reappropriated.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does the gentleman from New York think that this will finish up the project?

Mr. SNYDER. Well, that was the information that we were given in the matter; that that would finish up the project, and there would be no further appropriation asked.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Very well. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The reservation of the point of order is withdrawn. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. SNYDER: Page 64, line 25, after the word "That," strike out the following language: "the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the fiscal year 1917 for said Indians, approximating $28,256.13, and."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the purchase of subsistence supplies in relieving cases of actual distress and suffering among those needy St. Croix Indians of Wisconsin whose cases are referred to in report of January 30, 1915, transmitted by the Secretary of the Interior to the House of Representatives March 3, 1915, pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress of August 1, 1914 (38 Stats. L., pp. 582–605), and printed as House Document No. 1663, Sixty-third Congress, third session, $1,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Of course, the sum appropriated here is only $1,000. Is that just an entering wedge for very large appropriations in the future?

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that a year ago, in addition to that $1,000, there was added to the bill by another branch of Congress an item for $140,000. We succeeded in cutting out the $140,000 item by leaving in the $1,000 item to take care of a few old indigent Indians up there whom nobody seemed to be looking after.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. See if I can refresh the gentleman's recollection about another matter. There is quite a good deal of verbiage here indicating that some commissioner or officer had reported in favor of the expenditure of this money.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And anyone reading that paragraph would suppose that that was true, but it is not.

Mr. SNYDER. I know that it is not true.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Now, this recommendation that is referred to here was for the appropriation of a small sum of money for the purpose of relieving cases of actual distress and suffering among these needy Indians in 1915. Here was a report submitted to Congress in 1915, urging that there be a small appropriation made to relieve cases then in existence of actual distress and suffering among these Indians. That report was made on January 30, 1915, transmitted to the House of Representatives March 3, 1915, and referred to here. Along comes a proposition now for an appropriation for the fiscal year 1921 to make this appropriation to relieve this actual distress and suffering, and the only purpose of the report before was to make a temporary appropriation to give these Indians a chance to do something. Now we propose to incorporate into this appropriation bill a provision not for this year, not to be expended probably in the calendar year 1920, but for the fiscal year of 1921. I would like to know whether we are going to follow the policy of supporting these Indians forever, and if so, we should strike out the hypocritical pretense—I do not mean that with offense to the Committee on Indian Affairs, mind you, because they did not prepare this language—but it is according to the report of somebody, apparently, when there is no such report in existence.

Mr. SNYDER. I agree with the gentleman that the reports he refers to, and with which we are familiar, say nothing whatever about this $1,000 appropriation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And it only refers to providing for the year 1915.

Mr. SNYDER. That only. But there is a bill before the House now that has been investigated. I have kept the items to which those reports refer out of this bill; we kept them out last year. The fact that the present chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs would not permit the item to go into the bill at midnight on March 4 last killed the Indian appropriation bill in the Senate. Now this is an aftermath of that. It has come out of those same reports, and it was carried in the bill last year as well as now. I am not tenacious about that.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not believe in agreeing to these items on the plea that we are following a report when there is no such recommendation in the report. It is a subterfuge on the part of whoever prepared this item.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will permit me, I would like to read a short statement here that I made in considering this item before the committee. I read:

The CHAIRMAN. Now, as I understand that, Mr. Meritt, that was an item of $1,000 put in to take care of these few Indians who are in distress up there, until such time as the items referred to here in the report might be enacted into law. Mr. LA FOLLETTE tried to put them in last year—that is, last December, and also again in the spring—and there is legislation in the House now which has been reported out by this committee to correct that situation, and this looks like a continuing proposition. Certainly $1,000 is not enough to do anything with, and I don't know that there is anybody up there to distribute the $1,000, and if there isn't it will cost the entire $1,000 to get ready to distribute it, and so I don't feel disposed to carry the appropriation, unless it is actually shown that there is some benefit accruing to some considerable number of indigent Indians.

Now, I took the same position then that the gentleman from Illinois takes now. I knew then about those reports, and we all knew about them. Probably this language is a subterfuge. I submit that I am not as familiar with the intricacies of legislative language as I ought to be. I am very glad to have the gentleman from Illinois cooperate with us in straightening this up.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I will say to the gentleman from New York that I think the House is to be congratulated that he is proving himself to be so efficient and able a chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. [Applause.] Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 25. That in addition to the Indian tribal and treaty funds, the expenditure of which is specifically authorized elsewhere in this act, and such sums as may be required for equalization of allotments, education of Indian children, per capita and other payments to Indians, reimbursement to the United States of the expenditures from reimbursable appropriations, and expenditures for the Five Civilized Tribes, in accordance with existing laws, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to expend not exceeding $1,436,604 from the funds held by the United States in trust for the respective tribes, for support and civilization of the Indians under the jurisdiction of the following agencies, to wit:

Arizona: Colorado River, $5,000; Fort Apache, $75,000; Fort Mojave, $2,700; Kaibab, $2,000; Leupp, $690; Pima, $335; San Carlos, $100,000; Truxton Canyon, $15,000; Western Navajo, $125.

California: Campo, $50; Fort Bidwell, $72; Fort Yuma, $1,727; Greenville, $500; Round Valley, $8,020; Tule River, $800.

Colorado: Southern Ute, $4,381.50; Ute Mountain, $10,906.30.

Idaho: Coeur d'Alene, $15,140; Fort Hall, $16,250; Fort Lapwai, $10,000.

Iowa: Sac and Fox, $3,630.

Kansas: Kickapoo, $800; Pottawatomie, $4,200.

Louisiana: Chettimanchi, $1,316.

Michigan: Mackinac, $800.

Minnesota: Fond du Lac, $250; Leech Lake, $850; Red Lake, $27,500; White Earth, $1,400.

Montana: Blackfeet, $24,200; Crow, $200,000; Flathead, $20,000; Fort Belknap, $50,000; Fort Peck, $11,827; Rocky Boy, $8,400; Tongue River, $25,000.

Nebraska: Omaha, $11,500; Winnebago, $5,200.

Nevada: Fort McDermitt, $337; Nevada, $7,275; Walker River, $4,300; Western Shoshone, $14,180.

New Mexico: Jicarilla, $50,000; Mescalero, $10,000; Navajo, $922; Pueblo Bonito, $1,118; San Juan, $5,600.

North Carolina: Eastern Cherokee, $15,464.

North Dakota: Devils Lake, $550; Fort Berthold, $24,350; Standing Rock, $100,000; Turtle Mountain, $850.

Oklahoma: Kiowa, $26,700; Wichita, $300; Cheyennes and Arapahoes, $6,689; Cantonment, $1,350; Seger, $150; Pawnee, $300; Ponca, $1,700; Otoe, $1,900; Seneca, $600; Sac and Fox, $8,000.

Oregon: Klamath, $50,000; Siletz, $680; Umatilla, $9,100; Warm Springs, $7,300.

South Dakota: Cheyenne River, $100,000; Crow Creek, $1,000; Lower Brule, $15,824; Pine Ridge, $2,800; Rosebud, $11,950; Sisseton, $15,000; Yankton, $5,000; Santee, $2,084.

Utah: Goshute, $6,264; Uintah, $26,937.20.

Washington: Colville, $71,000; Puyallup, $160; Quiniault, $1,000; Spokane, $4,800; Tulalip, $8,000; Yakima, $22,000.

Wisconsin: Lac du Flambeau, $20,000; La Pointe, $500; Keshena (Menominee), $37,000.

Wyoming: Shoshone, $70,000.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I feel that I am justified in calling the attention of the House to the fact that these items amount this year to $1,436,624, whereas for several years under a lump sum the bill has carried for the same objects approximately $2,500,000. During the very efficient management of the Committee on Indian Affairs by my colleague, Mr. CARTER, an arrangement was made with the Bureau of Indian Affairs to particularize under this item, and in the past two years we have been able by such particularization of expenditures of tribal funds to bring the total of the item in this bill down a million dollars. I do not want to let this opportunity go by without saying that it is our belief that next year, when they have given us a justification for each one of these items, they will be much more diminished than they are in this bill.

Mr. CARTER. After the gentleman's compliment to me, will he yield just a moment to me?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman's statement is correct, with one exception. No arrangement was made with the Indian Bureau. By the assistance of the gentleman and other members of the committee, as I recall, we incorporated an item in the Indian appropriation bill requiring the Indian Bureau to bring these estimates in in specific items.

Mr. SNYDER. I accept the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arizona offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. HAYDEN: Page 69, after line 13, insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 26. That no application for the exchange of private land over which an Indian reservation has been extended for public land, under the terms of the Indian appropriation act approved April 21, 1904 (33 Stats., p. 211), shall be hereafter received by the Secretary of the Interior, and all such applications now pending shall be disposed of on or before the 1st day of January, 1922, and thereafter no such exchange shall be made."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is clearly subject to the point of order. The Chair sustains the point of order.

On motion of Mr. SNYDER, the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 11368) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Anthony	Good	Magee	Rucker
Aswell	Goodall	Mann, S. C.	Sanders, Ind.
Ayres	Graham, Ill.	Mason	Sanders, La.
Bacharach	Hamill	Montague	Sanford
Barkley	Hamilton	Moon	Schall
Begg	Hardy, Colo.	Moore, Va.	Scully
Bell	Harreld	Morin	Sears
Bland, Mo.	Harrison	Mott	Siegel
Booher	Haugen	Mudd	Sisson
Bowers	Hill	Newton, Minn.	Slemp
Brand	Holland	Nicholls, S. C.	Smith, Idaho
Britten	Ireland	Nichols, Mich.	Smith, Ill.
Brooks, Pa.	Jefferis	O'Connor	Smith, N. Y.
Browning	Johnson, Ky.	Oliver	Steele
Brumbaugh	Johnson, Miss.	Parker	Strong, Kans.
Burroughs	Johnson, Wash.	Pell	Sullivan
Candler	Johnston, N. Y.	Peters	Taylor, Ark.
Carew	Jones, Pa.	Phelan	Thompson
Carss	Kahn	Rainey, Ala.	Vare
Crowther	Kennedy, Iowa	Rainey, J. W.	Volstead
Cullen	Kennedy, R. I.	Randall, Calif.	Ward
Dooling	Kincheloe	Rayburn	Weaver
Eagle	Kreider	Reber	Welty
Flood	Langley	Reed, N. Y.	Wilson, Ill.
Fuller, Mass.	McDuffie	Rhodes	Wilson, La.
Gallagher	McKeown	Riordan	Winslow
Gandy	McKinley	Robinson, N. C.	Woodyard
Garrett	McLane	Rouse	Wright
Glynn	McPherson	Rowan

The SPEAKER. On this call 313 Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the amendment proposing to strike from the bill the appropriation for the suppression of traffic in intoxicating liquors among the Indians.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that there is no such amendment.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I will ask to have the amendment specifically reported. It is found on page 7, under the head of "Suppression of the liquor traffic."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 7, strike out the paragraph consisting of lines 3, 4, and 5.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Was I not correct in stating the proposition?

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not remember the gentleman's precise statement.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I asked for a separate vote on the amendment striking out the appropriation for the suppression of traffic in intoxicating liquors.

The SPEAKER. The amendment has been reported. Is there any other amendment upon which a separate vote is desired?

There was no request for a separate vote on any other amendment.

The SPEAKER. If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The other amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the amendment on which the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS] desires a separate vote.

The question was being taken when Mr. BLANTON asked for a division.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 109, nays 200, not voting 119, as follows:

YEAS—109.

Ackerman	Focht	Lesher	Ramsey
Babka	Gallivan	Linthicum	Ricketts
Bee	Ganly	Lonergan	Rodenberg
Benson	Gard	Longworth	Sabath
Blackmon	Garland	Lufkin	Sanford
Bland, Ind.	Garner	McAndrews	Sherwood
Blanton	Goldfogle	McArthur	Snell
Buchanan	Goodykoontz	McFadden	Snyder
Burdick	Gould	McGlennon	Steenerson
Burke	Griffin	McKinley	Stephens, Miss.
Caldwell	Hardy, Tex.	MacCrate	Stephens, Ohio
Campbell, Pa.	Harreld	MacGregor	Tague
Christopherson	Hernandez	Magee	Tilson
Classon	Hersey	Maher	Tinkham
Cleary	Hicks	Mansfield	Treadway
Coady	Houghton	Martin	Voigt
Crago	Hull, Iowa	Mead	Walsh
Curry, Calif.	Hutchinson	Merritt	Ward
Dent	Igoe	Minahan, N. J.	Wason
Dewalt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Mooney	Watson
Donovan	Juul	Moores, Ind.	White, Me.
Dunbar	Keller	Newton, Mo.	Wilson, Ill.
Dunn	Kleczka	Nolan	Wood, Ind.
Dupré	Knutson	O'Connell	Young, Tex.
Eagan	Lampert	Ogden	Zihlman
Echols	Layton	Platt
Edmonds	Lea, Calif.	Quin
Evans, Nev.	Lehlbach	Radcliffe

NAYS—200.

Almon	Doremus	Kraus	Rowe
Anderson	Doughton	Lanham	Rubey
Andrews, Md.	Dowell	Lankford	Rucker
Andrews, Nebr.	Drane	Larsen	Sanders, N. Y.
Anthony	Elliott	Lee, Ga.	Saunders, Va.
Ashbrook	Ellsworth	Little	Scott
Baer	Elston	Luce	Sells
Bankhead	Emerson	Luhring	Shreve
Barbour	Evans, Mont.	McClintic	Sims
Benham	Evans, Nebr.	McCulloch	Sinclair
Black	Fairfield	McKenzie	Sinnott
Bland, Va.	Fess	McLaughlin, Mich.	Small
Box	Fields	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Smith, Mich.
Brand	Fisher	Madden	Smithwick
Briggs	Flood	Major	Steagall
Brinson	Fordney	Mann, Ill.	Stedman
Brooks, Ill.	Foster	Mann, S. C.	Stevenson
Browne	Frear	Mapes	Stiness
Butler	Freeman	Mays	Stoll
Byrnes, S. C.	French	Michener	Strong, Pa.
Byrns, Tenn.	Fuller, Ill.	Miller	Summers, Wash.
Campbell, Kans.	Goodwin, Ark.	Monahan, Wis.	Sumners, Tex.
Cannon	Greene, Mass.	Mondell	Sweet
Cantrill	Griest	Moore, Ohio	Swope
Caraway	Hadley	Morgan	Taylor, Colo.
Carss	Hastings	Murphy	Taylor, Tenn.
Carter	Hawley	Neely	Temple
Chindblom	Hayden	Nelson, Mo.	Thomas
Clark, Fla.	Hays	Nelson, Wis.	Tillman
Clark, Mo.	Heflin	Oldfield	Timberlake
Cole	Hersman	Olney	Tincher
Collier	Hickey	Osborne	Towner
Connally	Hoch	Overstreet	Upshaw
Cooper	Hoey	Padgett	Vaile
Copley	Howard	Paige	Venable
Costello	Hudspeth	Park	Vestal
Cramton	Hulings	Parrish	Vinson
Crisp	Humphreys	Pou	Volstead
Currie, Mich.	Jacoway	Purnell	Walters
Dale	James	Rainey, Ala.	Watkins
Dallinger	Jones, Tex.	Rainey, H. T.	Webster
Darrow	Kearns	Raker	Welling
Davey	Kelley, Mich.	Ramseyer	Whaley
Davis, Minn.	Kelly, Pa.	Randall, Wis.	Wheeler
Davis, Tenn.	Kendall	Reavis	White, Kans.
Dempsey	Kettner	Reed, W. Va.	Wingo
Denison	Kiess	Riddick	Wise
Dickinson, Mo.	King	Robsion, Ky.	Woods, Va.
Dickinson, Iowa	Kinkaid	Rogers	Yates
Dominick	Kitchin	Rose	Young, N. Dak.

NOT VOTING—119.

Aswell	Godwin, N. C.	Lazaro	Robinson, N. C.
Ayres	Good	McDuffie	Romjue
Bacharach	Goodall	McKeown	Rouse
Barkley	Graham, Pa.	McKinley	Rowan
Begg	Graham, Ill.	McLane	Sanders, Ind.
Bell	Green, Iowa	McPherson	Sanders, La.
Bland, Mo.	Greene, Vt.	Mason	Schall
Boies	Hamill	Montague	Scully
Booher	Hamilton	Moon	Sears
Bowers	Hardy, Colo.	Moore, Va.	Siegel
Britten	Harrison	Morin	Sisson
Brooks, Pa.	Haugen	Mott	Slemp
Browning	Hill	Mudd	Smith, Idaho
Brumbaugh	Holland	Newton, Minn.	Smith, Ill.
Burroughs	Huddleston	Nicholls, S. C.	Smith, N. Y.
Candler	Hull, Tenn.	Nichols, Mich.	Steele
Carew	Husted	O'Connor	Strong, Kans.
Casey	Ireland	Oliver	Sullivan
Crowther	Jefferis	Parker	Taylor, Ark.
Cullen	Johnson, Ky.	Pell	Thompson
Dooling	Johnson, Miss.	Peters	Vare
Dyer	Johnson, Wash.	Phelan	Weaver
Eagle	Johnston, N. Y.	Porter	Welty
Esch	Jones, Pa.	Rainey, J. W.	Williams
Ferris	Kahn	Randall, Calif.	Wilson, La.
Fuller, Mass.	Kennedy, Iowa	Rayburn	Wilson, Pa.
Gallagher	Kennedy, R. I.	Reber	Winslow
Gandy	Kincheloe	Reed, N. Y.	Woodyard
Garrett	Kreider	Rhodes	Wright
Glynn	Langley	Riordan

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. LAZARO (for) with Mr. SANDERS of Indiana (against).

Mr. HAMILL (for) with Mr. SEARS (against).

Mr. SCULLY (for) with Mr. MCKEOWN (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. MCKINLEY with Mr. DOOLING.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington with Mr. MONTAGUE.

Mr. HUSTED with Mr. NICHOLLS of South Carolina.

Mr. KAHN with Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi.

Mr. JONES of Pennsylvania with Mr. MCDUFFIE.

Mr. JEFFERIS with Mr. MOON.

Mr. IRELAND with Mr. MOORE of Virginia.

Mr. HILL with Mr. O'CONNOR.

Mr. LANGLEY with Mr. HUDDLESTON.

Mr. KREIDER with Mr. HULL of Tennessee.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island with Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky.

Mr. KENNEDY of Iowa with Mr. JOHNSTON of New York.

Mr. HAUGEN with Mr. OLIVER.

Mr. HARDY of Colorado with Mr. PELL.

Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. PHELAN.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont with Mr. JOHN W. RAINEY.

Mr. MUDD with Mr. GARRETT.

Mr. MORIN with Mr GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. MASON with Mr. HARRISON.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa with Mr. RANDALL of California.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. RAYBURN.

Mr. PARKER with Mr. FERRIS.

Mr. NICHOLS of Michigan with Mr. GALLAGHER.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. GOODALL with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.

Mr. PORTER with Mr. CASEY.

Mr. PETERS with Mr. EAGLE.

Mr. GOOD with Mr. ROMJUE.

Mr. GLYNN with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. ESCH with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.

Mr. RHODES with Mr. CANDLER.

Mr. REBER with Mr. CAREW.

Mr. DYER with Mr. SISSON.

Mr. CROWTHER with Mr. SMITH of New York.

Mr. BURROUGHS with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. BRITTEN with Mr. WEAVER.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho with Mr. BLAND of Missouri.

Mr. SLEMP with Mr. BOOHER.

Mr. SIEGEL with Mr. BRUMBAUGH.

Mr. BROWNING with Mr. SULLIVAN.

Mr. BROOKS of Pennsylvania with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas.

Mr. THOMPSON with Mr. BARKLEY.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois with Mr. BELL.

Mr. BOWERS with Mr. WELTY.

Mr. BOIES with Mr. WILSON of Louisiana.

Mr. WOODYARD with Mr. GANDY.

Mr. WINSLOW with Mr. MCLANE.

Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. ASWELL.

Mr. VARE with Mr. AYRES.

Mr. BEGG with Mr. WILSON of Pennsylvania.

Mr. BACHARACH with Mr. WRIGHT.

Mr. FULLER of Massachusetts with Mr. CULLEN.

Mr. MCPHERSON with Mr. HOLLAND.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RAKER) there were—ayes 186, noes 4.

So the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. SNYDER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

By unanimous consent, leave to extend and revise their remarks on the bill was granted to Mr. CARTER, Mr. SNYDER, Mr. HAYDEN, and Mr. HASTINGS.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for leave of absence until the 15th of the month for the gentleman from Utah, Mr. WELTY, on account of important business.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

PENSIONS.

Mr. SELLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider pension bills on the calendar in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to consider pension bills from his committee in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SELLS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 9281) granting pensions and increase of pension to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee calls up the bill H. R. 9281, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pensions laws—

The name of James Watson, late of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of David S. Williams, late of Troop M, Sixth Regiment United States Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Jason Adkins, late of Company D, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Joseph McClure, late of Company D, Fourth Regiment Kentucky Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John F. Campbell, late of Battery E, First Regiment United States Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jesse A. R. Forbes, late of Company L, Second Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Anna Kelley, widow of Edward Kelley, late of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Patrick H. Madigan, late of Company K, Two hundred and third Regiment New York Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Frank Shaw, late of Company K, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Pearl A. Hunsaker, widow of the late Orval Hunsaker, Company C, Fourth United States Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for soldier's minor child until he shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Otto M. Payton, late of Company M, Twenty-first Regiment Kansas Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Emma A. Hobbs, dependent mother of Spencer S. Hobbs, late of Company K, Eighth Regiment Massachusetts Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary A. Powers, widow of James A. Powers, late of Company H, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month each for soldier's minor children until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of John McGinley, late of Company M, One hundred and sixtieth Regiment Indiana Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Martha E. Waldsmith, widow of William A. Waldsmith, late of Twenty-first Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for each of soldier's minor children until they reach the age of 16 years.

The name of George W. Turner, late of Company L, First Regiment North Carolina Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George W. Oblisk, late of Company A, Thirty-eighth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary J. Pack, widow of Thomas J. Pack, late of Company F, Third Regiment Tennessee Volunteers, War with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of David M. Allen, late of Company C, Ninth Regiment Illinois Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Chester E. Green, late of Company M, First Regiment Nebraska Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Eddie E. Sterrett, late of Battery H, First Regiment United States Artillery, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Ruth McClay, widow of William McClay, late of Battery C, Third Regiment United States Artillery, War with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Bernard M. Stanton, late of the United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Ethel A. Kane, widow of William M. Kane, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month; also $2 per month additional for sailor's minor child until she shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Fanny Weill, widow of Julius Weill, late of Battery M, Fifth Regiment United States Artillery, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for each of soldier's minor children until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Orville G. Willett, late of Company G, First United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Horace G. Pope, late of Troop D, Second Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Annie M. Wood, widow of Sampson W. Wood, late of Company C, First Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, War with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Albert McManaman, late of Troop K, Thirteenth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Claude H. Dean, late of Company I, Forty-ninth Regiment Iowa Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John Coffey, late of the United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Edward S. Coffin, late of Company C, One hundred and fifty-eighth Regiment Indiana Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Irving Wohl, late of Fifth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Brother Buis, late of Company I, Forty-fourth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah E. Kiplinger, widow of John Kiplinger, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, Indian war, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Julia I. Zedaker, former widow of William D. Snow, alias William Dudley, late of Company D, Third Regiment United States Dragoons, War with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Louis B. Smith, late of Company B, Forty-fifth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Philip E. Hartman, late of Companies A and K, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Susan J. Purcell, widow of John J. Purcell, late of Company F, Twenty-first Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional on account of each of soldier's minor children until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Charles T. Durand, late of Company H, Third Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Charles P. Michener, late of Battery F, First Regiment United States Field Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James W. Duty, late of Company L, First Regiment West Virginia Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Isaac N. Troutman, late of Company F, First Regiment Idaho Infantry, and Hospital Corps, United States Army, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Elmer Wagar, late of Troop B, Third Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Eva L. Woollacott, widow of William W. Woollacott, late of Company H, First United States Mounted Rifles, Indian war, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George C. Hazeltine, late of Company K, Second Regiment Texas Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George Milams, late of the Sixty-sixth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Pleasant D. Cooper, late of Company D, Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of William Thornton Parker, late hospital steward, United States army, Indian war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of John Bleiweiss, late of Company C, First Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John H. Wynn, late of Company G, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Leonard P. Kehrmeyer, late of United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Emil J. Olsen, late of Company G, Third Regiment United States Infantry, Company G, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and Company E, United States Signal Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Lloyd Shaver, late of Company I, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and Company B, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of Michael Mulvey, late of Company E, Forty-first Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and Company A, First Regiment West Virginia Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Rufus F. Gibbs, late of Company I, Twenty-seventh Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary M. Canton, widow of Joseph Canton, late of Company L, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles Brubaker, late of the band, and Company M, Third Regiment Georgia Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John A. Kennepohl, late of Company K, First Regiment Missouri Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James F. Mitchell, late of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Clarence L. Wimer, late of Company A, Signal Corps, United States Army, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Howard H. Long, late of Company K, Sixth Regiment Ohio Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John W. Paulus, late of Company D, Thirty-fifth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Simon P. Kieffer, late of Company B, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Robert Goodman, late of Troop D, Ninth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charley Douthitt, late of Company H, One hundred and fifty-ninth Indiana Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Schuyler C. Pool, late of Company K, One hundred and fifty-eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Casey A. Cox, late of Company E, Fourth Regiment Kentucky Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James L. Doris, late of Company F, Forty-sixth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Frank A. Morton, late of Company H, Forty-ninth Regiment Iowa Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Anson B. Countryman, late of Company F, First Regiment Idaho Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Robert S. Parker, late second lieutenant of Company K, Twentieth Regiment Kansas Infantry, War with Spain, and private, Company H, Forty-fourth Iowa Infantry, Civil War, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Frank Vicha, late of Company D, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John Leishman, late of Company G, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Eugene E. Clark, late of Company L, First Regiment Montana Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harry Noel, late of Troop B, Tenth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Thomas H. Ivers, late of Company B, Sixty-ninth Regiment New York Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Robert A. Carnegie, late of Company F, Third Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Herman Alexander, late of Troop H, Tenth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Eugene Johnson, late of Company L, Twenty-fifth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James W. Mitchell, late of the United States Volunteer Signal Corps, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of August J. Griesbach, late of Company I, Forty-fifth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary S. Langston, mother of Omar Langston, late of Company E, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Walter E. Richards, late of the U. S. S. Maine, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Thomas L. Feyen, late of Company A, Forty-ninth Regiment Iowa Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Otto O. Yaap, late of the United States Marine Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Thomas D. O'Shea, late of Company L, Forty-seventh Regiment New York Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Martin Tepper, late of Company L, Thirty-sixth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Robert Noble, late of Company F, Seventeenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James Prosek, late of Company C, First Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of George H. Haverkate, late of Company C, Thirty-fourth Regiment Michigan Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Samuel M. Deets, late of Company E, Fourth Regiment Missouri Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George H. Bruckner, late of Troop I, Second United States Cavalry, and Company B, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Michael Long, late of Company I, Fourth Regiment Tennessee Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Henry Hazlett, late of the Third and Tenth Companies United States Coast Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Hannah Hasson, widow of John G. Hasson, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, Indian War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Marion E. Strunk, late of Companies C and K, Thirtieth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Nathaniel J. Stonecipher, late of Company C, Fourth Regiment Tennessee Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Eugenie Schottmueller, dependent mother of Gilbert L. Schottmueller, late of the Hospital Corps, United States Army, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Maria Louise Richardson, widow of Robert Richardson, late of Troop I (Marshall's), First Kentucky Cavalry, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Katherine G. Manning, widow of Michael Manning, late of the United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for each of sailor's minor children until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Charles M. Fink, late of Company C, Eighth United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Herbert E. Van Horn, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John E. Tingley, late of Company K, First Regiment Tennessee Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of Floyd B. Daugherty, late of the band, First Regiment District of Columbia Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of David U. Denind, late of Company G, Fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Edward Hinman, late of Company A, Twenty-third Regiment United States Infantry, Indian war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William E. Warren, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of William A. Waggoner, late of Company I, Sixth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Mary R. Adair, mother of Henry R. Adair, late first lieutenant, Tenth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles J. Gilbert, late of Company L, First Regiment Arkansas Infantry, National Guard, border defense, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of George W. Malin, late of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Stella A. Simson, widow of Edgar J. Simson, late of Company K, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for soldier's minor child until she shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Phebe Spencer, now Schonhoff, mother of Lawrence L. Spencer, late of Company B, Thirty-third Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of John Moloney, late of Company K, Seventeenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John T. Griggs, father of Jones A. Griggs, late of Company I, Fifth Regiment Georgia Infantry, National Guard, border defense, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Simeon D. Morrison, late of Company E, Seventh Regiment Ohio Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Sarah J. Holley, widow of Charles W. Holley, late of Tenth Company, United States Coast Artillery, and Company M, First Regiment United States Artillery, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for each of soldier's minor children until they reach the age of 16 years.

The name of James F. Romines, late of Companies D and M, Fourth Regiment Tennessee Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Jesse W. Beam, late of Company M, Second Regiment New Jersey Infantry, and Hospital Corps, United States Army, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harry Patterson, late of Battery H, Third Regiment United States Artillery, and Thirtieth Company, United States Coast Artillery, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Jane C. A. Porter, widow of Hugh Porter, late of Capt. Maddox's company, Fremont's California Volunteers, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month.

The name of James I. Sloan, late of Troop G, Third United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of June MacM. Ordway, mother of Eliot W. Ordway, late of Company H, Second Regiment Oregon Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of John H. Page, late of Company A, Sixth Regiment Illinois Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Kate B. Horan, widow of Jeremiah J. Horan, late of Troop F, Sixth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Leroy F. Moore, late of Company H, First Regiment Arkansas Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Isaac M. Conley, late of Company B, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James T. Brown, late of Troop K, Seventh Regiment United States Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Byrd W. Lasseter, late of United States Marine Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jesse A. Trent, late of Company E, Sixth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Lillie P. Hinman, late a nurse in the War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Adam E. Haughn, late of Company H, First Battalion Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Joseph W. Nolen, late of Company H, Fourth Regiment Kentucky Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Daniel J. Bresnahan, late of Company B, Fourth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Edward J. Davis, late of Company M, Twenty-sixth United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Alice F. Travis, widow of Charles T. Travis, late of United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional for each of soldier's minor children until they shall have reached the age of 16 years.

The name of Anna O'Brien, widow of Frank A. O'Brien, late of the United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Richard Williams, late of band, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William E. Gault, late unassigned and of Company E, Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Christine E. Geiger, widow of Austin Geiger, late of the Fortieth and Eighty-fifth Companies, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, and $2 per month additional for the soldier's minor child until she reaches the age of 16 years.

The name of Dalbert Gray, late of Company B, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James O'Brien, late of Company G, Third Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Annie E. Arnold, mother of Robert Edgar Arnold, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Edward E. Benton, late of Company I, Seventeenth Regiment, and Company E, Second Regiment, United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles W. Lanham, late of Hospital Corps, United States Army, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John J. Mitchell, late of Company H, Third Regiment Ohio Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Carl C. Dunham, late of Company I, Sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Andrew Kravets, late of Company C, Eleventh Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Robert H. Roberts, late of Company L, Forty-fourth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Daniel B. Yeaple, late of Company A, Eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Pierre L. Carmouche, late first lieutenant Company L, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John B. Peters, late of Company K, First Tennessee Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Emma S. Norton, widow of Lewis A. Norton, late first lieutenant Company I, Second Regiment Illinois Volunteers, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Tebitha E. Cummings, widow of Frederick Cummings, late of Troop C, Second Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of William D. Craft, late of Company G, First Regiment New York Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Thomas J. Reynolds, late of Troop D, First Regiment Ohio Cavalry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John H. Henry, late of Company C, Thirteenth Regiment Minnesota Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary Michel, widow of John N. Michel, late a private Company A, Twelfth United States Infantry, War with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional for soldier's minor child until she reaches the age of 16 years.

The name of John H. Warren, late of Eleventh Recruit Company, General Service, United States Army, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Rowena Fisher, widow of John Fisher, late of Company A, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional for each of soldier's minor children until they reach the age of 16 years.

